PROBLEMS IN FILM ENGINEERING

SMPE President Points to Revolutionary Changes Coming, from Studio Lot to Theatre Screen

By DR. ALFRED N. GOLDSMITH
President, Society of Motion Picture Engineers

Here is forecast and warning of technical revolutions, or evolutions, as you will, to come in the motion picture industry.

Dr. Alfred N. Goldsmith, president of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, author of this paper, has an editorial manner of saying devastating things so calmly that it is necessary to pay heed to his words rather than to his suave manner, if the meaning is to be had.

There is exciting prospect that he who goes to see a motion picture show a decade hence will see something and hear something very different indeed from what we call the best entertainment today—and there is also the prospect that the processes of production behind that film and screen of tomorrow will be vastly simpler and vastly more capable. —T. R.

The problems of any branch of engineering depend on the aims of that type of engineering. While it would be most difficult, if not impossible, briefly to define the aims of mechanical or electrical engineering, for example, it is fortunate that a reasonably acceptable definition can be contrived for motion picture engineering. It is the presentation of a real or imagined happening to the audience in such approach to perfection that a satisfactory illusion of actual presence at the corresponding event is created. Briefly, it is the production of an acceptable semblance of reality.

It might be objected that exact replicas of reality will not give a desired dramatic or comic effect, and that is quite true. On another occasion, I defined the motion picture industry as "vendors of illusion and sellers of glamour." This definition need not be changed.

However, the task of the engineer is to create the illusion of reality.

It is for the playwright, the director, the actor, and any other artists who are involved to provide the glamour by intensifying or subduing or otherwise modifying the reality to be recorded and reproduced so that the most satisfactory audience response shall be achieved. It is well for the industry to keep this point in mind.

If we desire in the theatre suppressed or heightened impressions, those who provide the raw material for the engineer to work upon must arrange for this and specify the desired effects clearly.

The engineer can help greatly, but it is not his function to control tempo, the aesthetics of lighting, the tone of the actors, and the multitude of other necessary artistic factors. Occasionally there will be found an engineer who is also an artist, but in general it is well, as a practical proposition, for the two groups of workers to "stick to their own last" and to become more nearly perfect in their respective tasks through specialization.

"... a plea for an open mind, willing effort, and resourcefulness on the part of the engineer."

System and Parts Engineering

In considering the further problems of motion picture engineering, there must not be assumed any implied criticism of the fine work which has been done in the past. The results already available are a convincing testimonial for what has been done by the technicians. Yet the motion picture industry cannot stop at this point. No industry which hopes to retain public patronage on so vast a scale can afford to be smug and self-satisfied. We have not yet reached our goal—and perhaps we never shall.

Motion picture engineering falls into the two broad divisions—system engineering and parts engineering. Historically the latter generally comes first. Individual parts of the complicated series of devices necessary for the final presentations to the public are invented; are built in crude form; are tested and found wanting in some respects; and are improved in a series of steps toward an acceptable performance. But parts engineering is not enough. By co-ordinating each device with the others, and by fuller appreciation of the way in which each part fits into the entire structure, greater effectiveness of operation, superior results, and marked economics generally result. We may safely assume that every device now used by motion picture engineers can be improved, that new devices for functions not yet filled can be contrived, and that the relation of each part of the system to the whole system of audio-visual recording and reproduction requires study and consequent technical development.

In the brief presentation which is the subject matter of this paper, only parts engineering can be conveniently considered. Even so, the subject matter is so vast that only a brief and partial summary can be given. It is obvious that present and possible future problems can be listed but that their solutions cannot be given—to do so would be to overleap human mental and time limitations.

Photographic Film Improvement

Considering first the raw material and very foundation of this branch of engineering, namely, the photographic film, we can fairly ask whether the present film materials are the best which can be expected. Are they as durable, as economical, as well adapted to high speed projection and intense heating, and as free from dimensional changes with time as may be desired? Has grain been reduced to a completely satisfactory minimum (even for such special applications as process shots), and has speed been raised to the point where the cameraman is practically untrammelled in his work even under such unfavorable conditions as frequently challenge the newsreel worker? Can we be said to have film which is suitable for color photography—that is, for the reproduction on the screen of the full colors of the photographed scenes? Has film susceptibility to other forms of energy than light been reduced to a minimum? Can we add to the already great accomplishments along these lines?

The engineer, contemplating the awkward structure of a blimped or sound-proofed camera (the camera itself being an object of considerable size and weight), wonders whether something more convenient cannot be contrived. Silence in operation, compactness, continual accessibility of all adjustments and simplification of such adjustments, and generally increased mobility present attractive possibilities.

Some workers are prepared to accept the theory that the optics of photographic lenses are not capable of basic improvement, but if some way to diminish the large number of lenses which are required in the studio for close-ups, medium, and long shots could be contrived, it would be a step forward. Zooming by more convenient and automatic means is desirable. And the present methods of obtaining angle shots, following shots, and the like leave room for improvement, as anyone must admit who has watched the operation of the mammoth cranes and dollies now in use.

It may also be fairly assumed that the last word has not been spoken in studio lighting. Could not studio lighting be so arranged that each set does not require inevitably the shifting of practically every lighting unit? Could not a semi-standardized lighting plan be adopted whereby control of lighting would be obtained by manipulation of a modern control board rather than by dragging tons of equipment around the studio? The control of the direction of incident light, its amount, its diffusion, and its color (where this factor is of importance) all present to the engineer matter for further consideration.

Closely associated with these problems are those of make-up, of set construction and finish, and of costuming. It is possible that new materials will be found for set construction which will present a more desirable combination of optical, mechanical, and acoustic characteristics than those now available.

The recording of sound is well done, considered as a young art. But the evolution of more compact and lighter recording equipment, the use of more economical recording methods, the development of more convenient and simple methods of editing and of re-recording or "dubbing," and methods of recording which enhance auditory perspective are desirable.

Aiding Precision and Uniformity

When the processing of film by the laboratory is considered, it seems clear that a family of methods will be evolved whereby the precision and uniformity of the product can be further increased. Automatic processes are entirely in order in dealing with the vast quantities of film which are handled by a laboratory, and one may look forward to the time when everything from exposure time and developer concentration and temperature to the condition and packing of the finished film will be handled and controlled automatically. The devices for this purpose may even be provided with "checking controls" which indicate when the control device in question has gotten out of order and then provide a corresponding alarm.

By a simple extension of this thought, one can imagine film exchanges wherein the inspection of film and the repair of at least some defects can be automatic or semi-automatic. Considering the way in which film is sometimes mistreated by the user, one might facetiously add that there is need for a device which automatically charges the delinquent user for the damage he has done and also collects the full amount promptly and relentlessly.

Closely related to some of the problems mentioned are those of the theatre. Present-day methods of monitoring both picture and sound leave something to be desired. Substantially complete silence in the projectionists' room is needed if convenient monitoring through large open ports is to be possible. In the meantime, a type of port which lets out light without absorption but not sound may be developed. Screen illumination remains inadequate in some cases, and no standardized method of checking the condition of screens as often as may be desirable has been worked out. A simple and automatic method of this kind would be a help to the exhibitor whose entire salable output passes through the proscenium arch. The color of the projector illuminant and its stability and economy are under active study and merit such attention. The reduction of film wear by appropriate construction of projectors and by automatic or semi-automatic supervisory methods presents a real problem. And, needless to say, film breakage during projection is, in the engineering sense, entirely inexcusable. The projection of color pictures will bring in a number of new problems of projector construction, of screen surfacing, and of theatre lighting, and other arrangements. If ever three-dimensional pictures are to be available, it is likely that a number of radical changes in theatre construction and equipment will be involved.

Problem of Sound Reproduction

The reproduction of sound in theatres has also steadily improved. Problems of increasing further the dynamic range of reproduction, of establishing and maintaining reproduction of improved fidelity, of obtaining stereosonic reproduction (that is, sound reproduction with auditory perspective), and of reproducing speech and sound with equal satisfaction assuredly exist and invite further effort. Closely associated with all the preceding is the general question of motion picture theatre construction. Some architects skilled in the related problems have plausibly maintained that the present forms of theatre design are not technically sound and have proposed other more or less plausible substitute constructions. Speaking for a moment as a theatre-goer, something is certainly to be desired whereby the blinking and half-blind patron, entering a darkened theatre from a sunlit street, can first accomplish the difficult feat of locating an unoccupied seat and can then reach it with minimum damage to the footwear, other impedimenta, and good nature of the seated occupants of that row. And, as has been clearly pointed out recently by a profound thinker in this field, there is need for a solution of the old problem of the theatre goer who enters in the middle of a picture and has the weird experience of "enjoying" a slice of life which begins with the death of a character and ends with his birth. Perhaps even this puzzle has a partly technical answer.

As you will have gathered, all of the preceding discussion is really more a plea for an open mind, willing effort, and resourcefulness on the part of the engineer than a complete technical summary of problems in this field. If you are satisfied that much has been accomplished and that much remains to be done, the purpose of this discussion will have been achieved. In that event, motion picture engineering will continue to be the loyal friend and tireless servant of the industry and the public and will always, as now, deserve to be fostered and encouraged by the industry and the public alike.

What Public Seeks Is "Humaneness," Says Gus McCarthy

Discussing the subject of "What People Think They Want in Screen Entertainment," Gus McCarthy, of the Hollywood office of MOTION PICTURE HERALD, who writes "Showmen's Reviews" from the studio previews, last week in a symposium of lectures sponsored by the Modern Forum of Los Angeles told an audience of 1,500 that the fundamental answer to the question of what people want in screen fare will probably always remain a mystery.

"If any of us here could answer what the public thinks it wants with any degree of accuracy we wouldn't be sitting here," Mr. McCarthy said. "In fact, I'm afraid that if we did know the answer the casualties resulting from the ensuing stampede to Hollywood and Culver City would be terrific. Certainly the reward in wealth and fame would be beyond the visions of the most fantastic day-dreamer."

Mr. McCarthy said that it must be acknowledged that a popular picture is the successful blending of many factors. In spite of this, he said, there is one element dominating everything else in all films proving to be the kind the "public thinks it wants"—the element of "understandable, believable humaneness."

"As it is applied here, that quality of humaneness merely means pictures in which every incident is faithful to fact and embellished with a wealth of interesting material. By no means does it imply a theatreful of heroics, a screen load of sugary sentiment or a cyclone of mirth.

"I like to think of the producers as modern magicians who have discovered the ancient alchemists' secrets. They can transmute ribbons of blank film into piles of gold. Too, I like to think of them as men riding an eternal merry-go-round without any very definite idea of where they are going. Occasionally one grabs the brass ring. The world acclaims him as a superman. His fellow producers turn green with envy. To his office comes everybody in the world who thinks he has a story to tell. Out of mountains of manuscript, he must guess what he thinks the public will think it wants on the screen. More often than not he guesses wrong. But while he is guessing, the public over a period of years has emphatically demonstrated not what it thinks it wants, but what it actually does want."

"With the evident answer always at hand," Mr. McCarthy declared, "the fundamental answer is still a mystery—the most baffling mystery with which Hollywood has ever dealt, maybe because, like all of us who scan far horizons, they fail to see the mountain directly before them."

Loew Boston Shows Profit

Loew's Boston Theatres Company last week reported a net income after depreciation and other charges of $93,185, equal to 60 cents per share on 155,249 shares for the year ended August 31. Last year the company reported a net loss of $14,970.

JOHAN D. ROCKEFELLER'S lieutenants at Rockefeller City have just stumbled across a whole floor, of some 10,000 square feet, that had been lost for two years. The story of the lost floor and its discovery is something that staggers even our well-exercised imagination of goings on at Radio City.

The floor is in the west wing of the RCA Building, the west wing being the 16-story extension running from the set back main tower to Sixth Avenue. The space had been walled in and would not be easily discovered. The regular passenger elevators were never connected up and the only way of getting up to it, on the second mezzanine level, is to climb an inconspicuously placed stairway.

The other day the operating department and the rental department were putting their heads together to try to figure out where they would place the forthcoming Fine Arts Exposition. Someone happened to mention the space occupied by the lost floor. It sounded incredible. Immediately duly accredited representatives were led by the hand into the uncharted realm, which, they discovered, looked just like all the other floors which are still unrented.

Even stranger was the subsequent experience of the rental department with a small and gray, mild and soft spoken gentleman who had come, he said, to lease all the remaining floor space in the RCA Building. They almost died of the shock.

"You see," purred the little man, "I have a big idea. I want to divide the floors up into small rooms. In each room I'll put a big glass tank filled with alcohol. Then I'll rent those rooms to millionaires, and when they die I'll put 'em in the tanks and charge 15 cents admission. Thus posterity will be able to see what the builders of our country—God bless it!—actually looked like."

Polly Moran relates that the dignity and aloofness Greta Garbo maintains on the MGM lot means nothing in her not-so-young life. Says Polly:

"When I arrive at the studio in the morning, I pass Garbo's dressing room, pause, take a deep breath, holler: 'Hello, you big Swede,' and then run like hell."

Cecil DeMille's recent goodwill lecture tour brought him to Boston, where, having some time on his hands before the scheduled engagement, he hired a taxicab to drive him to an old theatre on Beacon Street which had a sentimental attachment nurtured down through the years. A short drive from his hotel and the cab pulled up at the given address. There he found the theatre gone and in its place stood a showroom for bath tubs—nice, large, colored DeMilleish bath tubs.

A five-dollar bet made Harry O. Hoyt, director and writer, decide, while a student at Yale, that the motion picture held his future. Born in the land of the lakes and the transplanted Scandinavian, in Minneapolis, Harry accepted a school chum's challenge that he could not write a story which would be acceptable to the "new" movies of the time. He wrote it, Biograph bought it, David Wark Griffith produced it and Mary Pickford starred in it (two reels). Harry got $5 and an idea.

PAGING MR. PETTIJOHN, DEMON FOE OF TAXATION

A letter from our city desk containing an assignment to observe the tax situation in the Northwest as it relates to the business of the exhibitor, caused Fred Haskell, our alert correspondent in that trade area, to express the extent of the staggering burdens of taxation in this merry manner:

Tariff tax, income tax,
Tax on retail sales;
Club tax, school tax,
Tax on beer and ales.

City tax, county tax,
Tax on obligations;
War tax, wine tax,
Tax on corporations.

Brewer tax, sewer tax,
Tax on motor cars;
Bond tax, stock tax,
Tax on liquor bars.

Bridge tax, check tax,
Tax on drugs and pills;
Gas tax, ticket tax,
Tax on gifts in wills.

Poll tax, dog tax,
Tax on money loaned;
State tax, road tax,
Tax on all things owned.

Stamp tax, land tax,
Tax on wedding ring;
High tax, low tax,
Tax on everything.

On the wedding-gift table at Buckingham Palace, London, on Thanksgiving Day, will be an envelope containing a unique present for Bridegroom George, Duke of Kent, and Bride Princess Marina of Greece.

Ever ingenious in employing the Crown as a catchpenny for England's needy, able friends of the Royal Family set out a few days ago to round up "eminent Georges." Any George wishing to feel eminent may send money to a Committee of Georges on which sit Actor George Arliss (who has long had an eye to knighthood), and George, Duke of Sutherland, Footballer George Allison, Racehorse Owner George Lambton, Banker Georges, Butcher Georges, Baker Georges. Their object: To contribute as much money as possible "to buy Christmas treats for needy children as a wedding present" for the Royal Bride and the Royal Groom.

With sirens shrieking, traffic officers clearing the way with shrill whistles, and the police working in motor relays from station to station, town to town, a special serum was speeded 108 miles from New York to Cromwell, Connecticut, in two hours flat, to save the life of a man who was reported dying from rabies. It was a thrilling, spectacular and dangerous feat. When they arrived at Cromwell, out of breath, they found the patient had gone to the movies.

LATEST OF THE Samuel Goldwyn stories to reach Broadway's crossroad at Times Square concerns Miss Edith Fitzgerald, prolific screen writer and able production assistant, who was borrowed from Metro by Goldwyn for the Anna Sten picture. A few days later Hunt Stromberg discovered at Metro that retakes were necessary on "The Painted Veil," and for the retakes he had to have Miss Fitzgerald, because she was the only one who knew the picture from start to finish. Mr. Stromberg said he tried to communicate with Mr. Goldwyn but couldn't reach him, and so he called Edith directly at her home to report back at MGM the next morning.

Promptly the next day Miss Fitzgerald arrived at the Metro lot. Within a few minutes there followed a telephone call to Mr. Stromberg from Sam Goldwyn, a very angry Sam Goldwyn. After hurling a "good-natured" verbal bombardment at each other, Hunt finally said something about what a great producer Sam is and how he admires him and wouldn't do anything to hurt him. Mr. Goldwyn, somewhat mollified, backed down!

"You know, Hunt," he chirped, prettily, "there's a right way and a wrong way to go about these things. Now, what you should have done in this instance was to have told your secretary to tell the switchboard operator to call United Artists. She would have asked for Mr. Goldwyn and would have gotten my secretary, who would have called me. I'd have asked who was calling, and when she said 'Hunt Stromberg,' I'd have said, 'Put him on right away in a hurry.' Then you'd say, 'Sam, I'm in an awful spot. I've got a release date to meet on 'Painted Veil,' and I've got to make retakes. Now, the only person who knows this picture thoroughly and can help me out is Edith Fitzgerald, and I find she's been loaned to you. Sam, I'm in a terrible jam, this picture means a lot to me, and I need Edith Fitzgerald for a couple of days—may I have her?'"

Concluded Goldwyn, loudly:
"And I'd have said NO!"

Louis B. Mayer likes chicken, real chicken in his chicken soup. We have Mr. Read Kendall's word for it that, because Mr. Mayer, when a poor boy, could not always have chicken in his favorite soup, he resolved that if he ever became a rich man—which he is now, thanks to movies—he would have that chicken soup with plenty of chicken every day of his life.

Mr. Mayer doesn't go to that extreme, but he can have the kind of chicken soup he dreamed of as a youngster any time he wants it.

By his executive order, drawn, countersigned and notarized, the daily menu at the commissary of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio carries chicken soup—special chicken soup, costing 30 cents.

Out in the kitchen Mr. Mayer's own recipe for this chicken soup is engraved in gold and the plate is kept under glass. The soup consists of a rich broth, noodles or rice and chicken, large pieces of chicken and lots of 'em.

NEW CLEARANCE PLAN TO CODE AUTHORITY

Rosenblatt on Coast to Settle Difficulties of Producers and the Actors - Writers Group

The motion picture Code Authority and the distribution branch of the industry are determined to write into clearance and zoning schedules the principle of bargaining for protection, the exhibitor having the right to buy any run he is able to pay for, George J. Schaefer, general manager of Paramount Publix and Code Authority representative in the Kansas City clearance dispute, told exhibitors last week prior to his return to New York. Mr. Schaefer said that method would enable the exhibitor to protect himself against competition and would also establish the right of the distributor to sell to whomever he may choose.

"If the time comes when first-run revenue is not protected," he said, "and the flow from first-runs is not continuous, there will be a disastrous situation. Inferior product would result and the subsequent runs would also suffer.

Warns of Possible Abuses

"Neither the United States Government nor the Code Authority intends to deprive the buyer of his legitimate buying power," Mr. Schaefer continued. "While the present system of basing clearance on admission prices may continue in practice until it throws things higher than a kite, the Code Authority should not be expected to make it a law. If continued, the present clearance system will produce pronounced abuses."

Practically all recommendations laid down by Mr. Schaefer and Edward Golden were incorporated in a new draft of the Kansas City clearance and zoning schedule sent to New York. A delay was indicated this week, however, due to the Kansas City price war.

There will be no general reopening of the code but there will be individual hearings for revisions, W. P. Farnsworth, deputy administrator, said in New York Tuesday.

Rosenblatt on Coast

Compliance Director Sol A. Rosenblatt and John C. Flinn, executive secretary of the Code Authority, arrived in Hollywood Monday to attempt to settle the rift between producers, writers and actors in connection with the code.

Fourteen demands are made by the screen actors in the final draft of their code. All have been voted down by the producers.

Among the actors' demands are a new form of standard contract for day players; a basic eight-hour day with a 15-minute rest period each hour; one hour added for every hour overtime; abolition of the call bureau; curtailment of layoffs to one week for 40-week contract players, instead of single days throughout the year.

Rules proposed by the agency committee in September were rejected this week by the NRA as exceeding the committee's authority.

In New York, the Code Authority voted to establish a vaudeville complaints committee of six, one representing actors, one vaudeville producer, one agent, two theatre men and one representative of the public. The Code Authority approved changes in nine amendments of the vaudeville section of the code.

The amendments, sent to Mr. Rosenblatt, who probably will hold a public hearing shortly after his return from Hollywood, are as follows:

II. That Article IV, Part 2, Section 1 (a) of the Code defining "presentation and vaudeville," be amended to delete "rep shows, tab shows, tent shows, wagon shows, truck shows, medicine shows, show boat or burlesque, as these terms are understood in the theatre."

III. That Article IV, Part 2, Section 3 (a) of the code be amended to read as follows:

"Rehearsal periods for principals shall be limited to two weeks. In the event that the rehearsal period extends more than two (2) weeks, the principals shall be paid half salary during such extended period. This shall not apply, however, to principals owning their own acts."

IV. That Article IV, Part 2, Section 4 (3) be modified to read as follows:

"Minimum wage of performers employed on a 'per diem' basis and paid either directly or indirectly in any form of compensation, shall be $7.50 net per day for each theatre in which they appear."

V. That Article IV-B, Part 2, Section 4 (b) (6) be added:

"If layoff is required because of irregularity of bookings after first two (2) weeks of consecutive employment, a chorus person may be laid off without pay seven (7) days in any six (6) weeks' period. Such layoff may occur at any time after the first two weeks of consecutive employment. If additional layoff is required, the chorus person shall be paid for the period of such additional layoff at the rate of three ($3.00) dollars per day as long as the layoff continues."

VI. That Article IV-B, Part 2, Section 6 (b) shall be modified to read as follows:

"If individual notice of contract termination is given by the employer the chorus persons shall be paid in cash the amount of the cost of his or her transportation (including sleeper and the cost of transportation of his or her baggage) back to the point or origin whether the chorus returns immediately or not."

Note: The above should be read in connection with the following proposed amendment:

VII. That a new section to be known as Article IV-B, Part 2, Section 6 (c) be added as follows:

"If individual notice of contract termination is given by the chorus person, the employer is not required to provide transportation or sleeper."

VIII. The Vaudeville Committee recommends to the Code Authority that in certain classes of theatres an exemption from the provisions of Article IV, Section 4 (b) (working hours and layoff periods in resident presentation houses) be amended, giving the management the right of specifying one of two methods of rest periods from work with pay as follows:

Plan (1). A chorus person shall be given one day off per week with pay as at present provided in the Code in this Article, or Plan (2). A chorus person shall be given one full week layoff with pay in every seven weeks of employment. Plan Number 2 also to contain the special provisions which were outlined in your committee's report with respect to pro rata days off if employment is less than seven weeks and also the specified number of hours of rehearsal the week of layoff, namely, 10 hours, which same hours of rehearsal shall not be required the week prior to the layoff.

IX. That Article IV, Part 2, Section 4, last sentence, first paragraph, shall be amended to read:

"No chorus person shall be required to report at a theatre before 9 o'clock in the morning except upon one day in each week, which shall be the day of the opening of a new weekly program, on which day such chorus person shall not be required to report at a theatre before 8 o'clock in the morning."

Hiram S. Brown, former RKO president, was appointed special assistant to the NRA Administrative Officer to act on all matters pertaining to Code Authority budgets.

$235,712 Earned By Columbia in Thirteen Weeks

Columbia Pictures Corporation announced Monday that its net profits for the quarter ended Sept. 29, 1934, were $235,712, which, after charges and provisions for federal income tax is equal to $1.29 per share on 172,073 shares of common stock outstanding after deducting a preferred dividend, and which compares with $241,778, or $1.36 for the corresponding period last year on 167,885 common shares outstanding.

The company has declared a quarterly dividend of 25c per share on the common stock and voting trust certificates for common stock, payable January 2nd, 1935 to stockholders of record December 14th, 1934, and has also declared a semi-annual stock dividend on the common stock of 2½% payable in common stock on February 2nd, 1935 to common stockholders and voting trust certificate holders, of record, January 14th, 1935.

The consolidated balance sheet as of Sept. 29, 1934, shows current assets of $6,471,909.03, and total current liabilities of $1,393,155.21. Earned surplus increased to $3,329,852.25 and working capital increased to $5,078,753.82.

Consolidated statement of Columbia Pictures' operations and earned surplus account for the 13 weeks ended September 29th, 1934, both for domestic and foreign companies, follows:

FINAL PARAMOUNT PLAN PROVIDES FOR CLAIMS CUT TO 65 MILLIONS

Loss of Artists Through Extended Bankruptcy Has Begun to Affect Earnings, Says Report for the Court

The final plan of reorganization for the Paramount Publix Corporation made its appearance last week—only for a few hours, after which it was returned to Kuhn, Loeb & Co., for final consideration—and was scheduled to be submitted to the court of Federal Judge Alfred C. Coxé this Friday.

Formal resignation of the board of directors of the old Paramount company was scheduled to take place Wednesday in a procedure preliminary to submission of the new organization plan to the court Friday. The new board which will submit the plan is thus far composed of Adolph Zukor, Frank A. Vanderlip, Dr. Julius Klein, Percy B. Johnston, George W. Davison, Gerald Brooks and Maurice Newton.

Members of the old board, resigning Wednesday are Jules E. Brulatour, Emanuel Cohen, Walter B. Cokell, John Cecil Graham, Felix E. Kahn, Joseph W. Kahn, Austin Keough, Maurice Newton, George Schaefer, Sir William Wiseman, Adolph Zukor and Eugene Zukor.

At press time it was learned that every important bondholder, stockholder and creditor group was in support of the plan.

The plan is dated as of November 21 and embodies a number of important revisions in and additions to the November 14 printing. Among these, possibly the most important is a clause which provides for making the plan effective with the reduction of claims to $65,000,000, instead of $50,000,000 as formerly. Further, the new plan embodies a provision for eliminating the provisions for the effectiveness of the plan contingent upon issuance to creditors of a maximum of $32,500,000 of new debentures and stock, which was stipulated in the November 14 draft.

The proposal provides that a new company will be formed and that holders of old debentures and general creditors will receive for each $1,000 of their claim $500 of new 20-year 6 per cent debentures and five shares of new cumulative convertible 6 per cent preferred. Common stockholders will receive for each share one-quarter share of new common stock plus a warrant bearing the right to subscribe for a period of 60 days at $2 for one unit consisting of one-quarter share of new common stock and one-fiftieth share of new cumulative convertible 6 per cent second preferred.

The report states that "important artists have already been lost through prolongation of the bankruptcy" and that "these losses have already begun to affect earnings adversely."

Additional Support for New Plan

It is noted in the plan that whereas the November 14 draft had the support of only the Vanderlip debenture holders' committee, in addition to the support of the creditor bank group and the stockholders' protective committee, the new draft has added to this support both the merchandise creditors and the Paramount Broadway bondholders. The plan also provides that interest on the bank debt, debentures and coupons and general claims to January 1 has now been reduced to $6,500,000 from a former estimated $7,000,000. Administration and reorganization expenses will amount to $2,500,000, it is estimated.

The new plan also provides for holders of general claims which may establish priority over other general claims and the old debentures. Such claims under the plan will be paid in cash in the amount for which priority is established. Stock subscription rights are limited under the plan to only those shareholders who assent to the plan. New management provisions limit membership of the new company's board to a maximum of 16 directors. All references to a finance committee and its powers have been eliminated.

The new company's capitalization remains the same as in the November 14 draft, but a newly prepared consolidated balance sheet shows an increase in assets of approximately $10,000,000, resulting in an increase from $137,112,000 to more than $149,000,000. Assets prior to the proposed reorganization are listed at $138,572,705.

In addition, minor changes are reported to have been made in the plan of reorganization for Paramount Broadway, G-B Theatres Corporation, and in the settlement plan for the Paramount Properties bonds. Settlement plans for the Allied Owners claim and the bank debt are unchanged.

Adjournment to Dec. 3 Agreed

That the Paramount reorganization had reached its eleventh hour turning point was indicated last Wednesday when counsel for the Paramount trustees gave their consent to an adjournment until December 3 of their action against the $13,300,000 Paramount creditor bank group. Counsel for the trustees consistently had opposed adjournments of the action before Judge Coxé on the ground that the reorganization plan, embodying a settlement of the banks' claim, was too remote to relieve the trustees of their duty of contesting the claims.

Counsel for Paramount bondholders and stockholders' protective committees last week urged more liberal allowances for the Paramount trustees, their counsel, special counsel and accountants. Describing as "unjust" and "inadequate" the approximate $370,000 of fees recommended by Special Master John E. Joyce for payment to these groups, counsel for the protective committees laid the matter before Federal Judge Henry W. Goddard, who reserved decision.

Samuel Zirn, attorney for a minority bondholder group, was alone in his objection to an increase. The original petition aggregated $700,000, including an application for $100,000 each for the three trustees, and one of $350,000 for their counsel, Root, Clark, Buckner & Ballantine. Mr. Joyce's recommendations were for payments of $34,500 for Charles D. Hilles, $32,500 for Eugene W. Leake and $30,000 for Charles E. Richardson, and $225,000 for their counsel, exclusive of other reductions in minor fees sought by special counsel and accountants. The fees asked are for services rendered during the bankruptcy period, from March, 1933, to June, 1934.

Arthur A. Ballantine, of counsel to the trustees, asked the court to increase the allowances to trustees by fixing a fair and reasonable amount in the discretion of the court, rather than on the basis of 2 per cent of the moneys handled by the trustees as provided in the bankruptcy laws and followed by Mr. Joyce in making his report. It was Mr. Ballantine's contention that the 2 per cent stipulation is fair only when applied to estates which are liquidated. He said that a reorganization of the company warranted a higher fee and is authorized under the new Section 77-B.

Subsidiaries Net $538,000

Net earnings of approximately $538,000 were reported last week by the domestic and foreign film subsidiaries of Paramount for the quarter ended September 30. These compare with earnings of $918,000 the same period last year. Of the $538,000, however, $473,000 was realized in the month of September, as compared with $445,000 for September, 1933.

Net operating earnings of the film and foreign groups for the first half of 1934 were $3,474,000, while for the entire year of 1933 they amounted to $5,852,000. Third quarter earnings for the theatre and other companies are not yet available.

McGrann Quits Shuberts To Join Columbia Pictures

Frank McGrann, newspaperman and publicist, this week severed a ten-year association with the Shuberts to join the Columbia Pictures exploitation department under Herschel Stuart. He will make his headquarters in New York and assumes his new duties immediately as assistant to Ed Olmstead.

Columbia has appointed additional exploitation men to work on the key city openings of "Broadway Bill," new Frank Capra picture, following a two-day eastern managers' conference last week at the St. Moritz in New York.

Tri-Ergon Sues Trustees Of Paramount on Patent

American Tri-Ergon on Tuesday filed a "double-printing" patent suit against the Paramount Publix trustees, Charles D. Hilles, Eugene W. Leake and Charles Richardson. Tri-Ergon acted on authorization granted by Federal Judge Alfred W. Coxé.

Antitrust Suit Hue To Double Bill Case

Resumption of the Harry Perelman double feature action against major distributors in Philadelphia federal court Monday, before Judge George A. Welsh, took on the aspect of an antitrust suit when Judge Welsh declared he would "open the door wide" for an inquiry into whether the operations of the defendants, referred to during the taking of testimony as a "combine," affected the general public.

The suit is for an injunction against inclusion in new season contracts of a clause restricting the showing of double features.

"The public is the real beneficiary of the provisions of the anti-trust laws, so that this controversy may be more than a legal battle between two private parties," Judge Welsh said.

Witnesses for the plaintiff, including Columbus Stamper, Harry Freed and Mr. Perelman, exhibitors, testified that they had received product late from major companies and that in many cases independent product was as good if not better than that of the majors.

Last week the presence of Edward Golden, I. E. Chadwick, Jack Bellman and Irving Mandel, all independent sales managers and exchange men, who conferred with Mr. Perelman's counsel, Benjamin M. Golder, lent color to the theory that monopoly charges against the majors might feature the hearing.

Samuel Waldman, of Garden Amusement Company, declared it was necessary to use product of the major companies even though the features were "stale" by the time they played the neighborhoods.

In Cleveland common pleas court last week Judge Alva Corlett upheld a permanent injunction against double featuring by overruling a motion for a new trial in the case of the Family theatre vs. Center Woodland Amusement Company, involving the Halt-north theatre.

Pathe Exchange Session Approved

Supreme Court Justice Cotillo in New York Friday signed an order authorizing an extraordinary meeting of stockholders of Pathe Exchange, Inc., on March 4 next to pass on a resolution providing for reorganization of the company. The order, for which Pathe had applied, is the first to be made under the amendment to the new Stock Corporation law authorizing court action if the statutory two-thirds vote of stockholders cannot be obtained because of indifference rather than opposition to a plan.

The reorganization plan provides for issuance by the new Pathe company of collateral secured notes, of which $4,000,000 may be outstanding at any one time, and which will be convertible into new common stock. These notes may be issued from time to time by the Pathe directors.

This provision is designed to provide new working capital which may be applied to production financing and also to retire all or any part of the $2,027,500 of sinking fund debentures outstanding, maturing in 1937.

Heavy Re-employment Is Result of Installations

Widespread introduction of Chrysler-made air conditioning equipment into existing motion picture theatres will bring immediate employment to thousands in both organized and unorganized trades, F. B. Warren, head of Control Corporation of America, distributors for the equipment, said this week.

Control Corporation, Mr. Warren said, expects to make in excess of 400 theatre installations between December 15 and May 15, 1935. Concentration of this number of installations in the five months eliminates the possibility of utilizing the same labor forces and calls virtually for individual crews, he said.

Fight U.S. Tax on Sound Apparatus

A fight against the government's 5 per cent sales tax on "apparatus for amplification or reproduction of sound suitable for use in connection with or as a part of a radio receiving set or a combination of radio and phonograph set" is to be launched soon by Sales-On-Sound Corporation through J. A. Tanney, president. The Internal Revenue Bureau, Mr. Tanney said, claims that this tax is applicable to sound reproduction equipment. He revealed that the Bureau's agents are investigating the books of all sound equipment manufacturers with a view to assessing them for two years arrears in payments. The government's claim is based upon that portion of the Revenue Act of 1932, quoted above.

"The fight is primarily over the loud-speaker equipment," said Mr. Tanney. "We cannot contest their claims insofar as tubes are concerned, but it is ridiculous to suppose that the loudspeaker utilized in reproduction equipment is really suitable for radio or for phonographic sound."

"This tax is not only unfair to the manufacturer, but to the exhibitor as well. If the manufacturer doesn't pay it the exhibitor will have to, and if the manufacturer does pay it the equipment men will increase their sales or rental prices."

A meeting of independent sound equipment manufacturers will be held Saturday under Mr. Tanney's auspices.

Sarnoff Sees Home Television by Jan. 1

Home television sets will be ready for installation in homes by January 1, David Sarnoff, president of Radio Corporation of America, told a meeting of radio dealers in New York. Mr. Sarnoff did not go into details concerning price or size of images to be transmitted through the first sets.

Rie Hall Killed

Rie Hall, screen writer, was killed and Ann Livingston seriously injured in an automobile accident near Hollywood Sunday.

Sam Harris Dies; Western Exhibitor

Sam Harris, 60, former partner in the Ackerman & Harris circuit, which at its height had 100 theatres, died Monday in San Francisco after an illness of several months.

A testimonial benefit show was to have been held in Mr. Harris' honor December 8 at the Golden Gate theatre, with nearly 100 theatres in San Francisco represented. This has been temporarily canceled.

The Ackerman & Harris circuit included theatres from Portland, Ore., to Los Angeles, and from San Francisco to Chicago. Mr. Harris had entered the business in 1901 in Oakland, Cal., when he built the Bell theatre.

Trans-Lux Stockholders Ask Appointment of Master

Chancellor Josiah O. Wolcott last week issued a ruling at Wilmington, Del., returnable this week, on the Trans-Lux Daylight Picture Screen Corporation, directing its officers to show cause why a stockholders' petition for appointment of a master to hold a meeting of stockholders for an election of directors should not be granted.

Attorneys representing a group of stockholders contend officers of the corporation have failed to hold a stockholders' meeting this year. They ask that in the event a meeting is ordered by the court the management be enjoined from spending corporation funds in a contest for proxies to retain control. The company has set December 19 for the postponed meeting.

First Division Opens New Office in Detroit

Al Friedlander, vice-president of First Division Pictures, left for Detroit on Tuesday to open a branch office there, which will bring the company's total of exchanges to 14. Within the next two weeks, Friedlander will go to the Coast to open western offices. Before January 1 the company is expected to be represented in 20 key cities. Harry M. Thomas, president, returned to New York from Atlanta on Monday.

SHOWMEN'S REVIEWS

This department deals with new product from the point of view of the exhibitor who is to purvey it to his own public

The Mighty Barnum (United Artists-20th Century) Circus Story

This picture, with production license assuming many liberties, is the story of P. T. Barnum, generally acclaimed the god of all showmen. Quite unlike anything of its type heretofore seen on the screen, it actually is a colorful, highly theatricalized biography of Barnum. It takes him from his days, a hundred years ago, as a wishy-washy grocery store proprietor, a fabulous dreamer with a yen for collecting freaks, to association with Bailey Walsh as founders of the "greatest show on earth." All the way through, it is motivated by an atmosphere that should inspire great showmanship in its presentation. Fundamentally, as it unfolds upon the screen, it is a practical lesson in the art of ballyhoo. The reasons for exploitation being established, the methods applied are demonstrated and the results shown. Any exhibitor who wants to sell the product will have no difficulty in finding an infinite number of ideas with which to do it.

In the picture, it's Barnum, who, both with an abiding faith in Mr. Walsh (Bailey) and in fearsome awe of the fury of his wife, established the first museum with its weird collection of freaks, midgets, the Cardiff Giant, fat lady, bearded woman and strange collection of animals and quirks of nature; Barnum ballyhooing his curiosities into a goldmine; Barnum ruined when, upon the challenge of Horace Greeley, his prize bearded woman attraction, by the connivance of enemies, is revealed as a fakir, and the museum is wildly wrecked by an infuriated populace.

It's Barnum again, expecting Jumbo, the biggest elephant in the world, only to have Walsh deliver Jenny Lind. The manner in which he exploited the Swedish nightingale is still a showmanship byword. But falling in love with his prize attraction, he shamed his wife, insulted Jenny, made an enemy of Walsh, outraged New York, and wound up broke and disillusioned.

It's Barnum befriended by his original collection of curiosities again opening the museum, having his wife return to him only as Walsh secretly returns to have enemies again wreck his dreams by setting fire to the building. Barnum rescues Walsh. Walsh presents his old friend with Jumbo, a gift from Jenny Lind, and a stirring climax as Barnum and Walsh head a thrill packed parade, marvellously embellished by the musical accompaniment, from which "Barnum and Bailey—the greatest show on earth" evolved.

As an inkling to what this picture is as a showmanship's paradise, and its great opportunity for flamboyant circus, there is the now legendary fame of Barnum and Bailey, the collection of a thousand and one freaks—they're all there—General and Mrs. Tom Thumb, the original bearded lady, George Washington's Negress nurse, the Cardiff Giant, Fifi the Mermaid, Jumbo—all the freaks whose fame has become a household word. Too, there is the sword swallower, the fire eater, the animals, birds, fish and curios of every description.

The more patrons are led to believe that they will be legitimately amazed by the story of the man Barnum and his amazing career, the more they will be convinced that in the picture they will see something that departs from the stereotyped, the more one may expect the effort will enlarge box office returns.—McCARTHY, Hollywood.

Father Brown, Detective

(Paramount)

Drama

This is a different kind of crook-detective story. The subject matter is unusual and the manner of presentation equally so. Commonplace formula mystery stuff—murder, baffling situations and blood-and-thunder thrill—are entirely absent.

In their places there is a spiritual regeneration theme which gives the picture a wholesome and lightly enjoyable character throughout. Yet possessing all the attributes that interest patrons in crook-detective yarns, it also has the advantage, by being mildly exciting, of being a suitable average attraction for the younger element.

Actually the picture is a drama of man-to-man conflict, more mental than physical, between a priest and a daring, resourceful diamond thief. In it, as audiences are quickly made to understand, the crook is a menace only to himself. While light and understandable drama dominates the unique association, a considerable amount of conflict is attached. Drama, too, colors the romance between the crook and the girl. That quality also dominates the comedy chase sequence in which the oddly acting priest leaves a fun-packed trail for the officers to follow. Naturally, drama is the highlight of the crook's regeneration.

Fundamentally the yarn is an understandable exposition of the theological theory that the redemption of a man's soul is more to be desired than is physical or mental punishment. While such a factor is quite experimental as either a showmanship or an entertainment quality, it does, in this case, give the picture a character wholly new.

Announcing his intention to steal the famous "Flying Star" diamonds, Flambeau arrives in a little English village. Father Brown, who owns four, is asked by Scotland Yard to assist in the thief's apprehension. He refuses, but goes ahead in his own way. In their first encounter Father Brown, going to work on Flambeau to effect regeneration, succeeds in outwitting him. Flambeau falls in love with Evelyn, not knowing that her uncle, Sir Leopold, owns the other six "Flying Stars." Even though he later learns the relationship, Flambeau succeeds in getting the gems. Then he tries once more with the priest. Disguised in clerical robes, a makeup which both the Father and audiences readily discern, he is led on the chase. Although the priest trusts a higher power, he does, however, climb a lamp post to hide the gems.

When Flambeau is trapped in the churchyard, regeneration, born of Father Brown's influence and love of Evelyn, comes to him. Sir Leopold's diamonds are returned. Fully realizing the error of his ways, Flambeau goes to jail knowing that Evelyn will be awaiting him upon release and that in Father Brown he will always have a friend.

To support the unusual value of the picture, there are several good showmanship angles. The picture is adapted from a series of yarns by Gilbert K. Chesterton, an English author widely read on this side of the water. The cast boasts several better than ordinary names. While the locale is England, the atmosphere ordinarily associated with similarly spotted features is entirely unnoticeable.—McCARTHY, Hollywood.

Romance in Manhattan

(Radio)

Comedy-Drama

Here's a show that gives alert showmen plenty of opportunity to exercise their exploitation minds. The story is simple, interesting, but not so commonplace that it's too familiar. By reason of their most recent pictures, "Gay Divorcee" and "Pursuit of Happiness," the two leading players, Ginger Rogers and Francis Lederer, are currently prominent in the theatre-going public's mind. The drama being light and sometimes gay and the romantic love interest continually charming, the comedy which accentuates the sympathy inspiring human interest assumes an unusual significance by the manner in which action and dialogue are blended.

Presented in a manner that immediately intrigues and holds interest, there's light drama to the story of Karel Novak, Czech immigrant. Arriving in New York, his blissful dreams of fame and fortune in the land of opportunity are blasted when officers would deport him because he lacks sufficient funds to insure against his becoming a public charge. There's a thrill as he leaps overboard and swims away. Then he's on the streets, day-dreaming himself into fulfillment of all his ambitions. The pulse beats a little faster as he meets Sylvia Dennis, a show-girl just finding herself at liberty with no immediate prospects at work. The problem of befriending the forlorn immigrant becomes acute as it is added to Sylvia's other problem of keeping little brother Frank out of the clutches of the law.

However, Karel again goes on the streets peddling newspapers. Then comes a taxi driver's job, made eloquently funny inasmuch as the poor boy doesn't know the streets. A strike, and amazed Karel is in a familiar jam. It becomes more tense as the suspicious landlady can't see the logic of an unmarried man and woman living together in her apartments. Come the officers, who have finally caught up with the immigration-defying culprit. But the Sergeant and Officer Murphy are understanding and lovable characters, ready to lend a helping hand to those in difficulty. They take them to court; not to prosecute, but to set the stage for a hilariously funny finale in which he judge and minister combine to see that Karel and Sylvia are legitimately married and little Frankie's future welfare assured.

"Romance in Manhattan" has lots of the qualities that have made previous pictures popular successes. Primarily it tells of real people in familiar and understandable circumstances. It doesn't seek to smash any message home. Rather it solely aims to entertain. It does so through the merits of a good story, good acting, and by remaining simple and sincere all the way through.

Showmanship turns on assuring patrons of pleasant entertainment in which there is plenty to arouse the interest of adults and youngsters. —McCARThY, Hollywood.

A Wicked Woman

(MGM)
Drama

This picture is a character drama and naturally a human interest story, but the real potential showmanship accrues to its star, Mady Christians, a new personality making her real screen debut. Keyed to a somber pitch, the meager comedy only in one case seeming natural, the motivating story is quite complicated. For the most part, action is rather slow, but the sequence that establishes the reason for the woman's future action and the sequences surrounding her attempts to put her tempted-to-be-wayward daughter on the right path of life and the climax are tensely dramatic. While there is nothing to mar the picture's moral tone, the atmosphere in which it is portrayed indicates that the picture is almost exclusively adult in its appeal.

Early sequences are set in the Louisiana bayou country, and the characters of the Trice family are established as poor whites. Naomi kills her vicious husband. Not suspected of the crime, but with its mark on her conscience, she takes her little family, together with a new born baby, to another section of the South, where Rosanne continually threatens to be a revengeful black sheep. As the family matures, Naomi succeeds in turn as a mill worker, dressmaker and finally modiste. Love comes to her in the person of Naylor, local editor, who has given Curtis a reporter job. The story of motherly love and sacrifice approaches its climax as Naomi, assisted by Renton, brings Rosanne to her senses. As Naylor makes one more strenuous attempt to persuade Naomi to marry him, she disappears.

The picture moves back to a courtroom in the Bayou country. Naomi, having confessed her husband's murder, is on trial and conviction seems sure. Into the courtroom, headed by Naylor, comes the Trice family. Curtis, put on the stand, tells that on the night of the crime he was awake and saw it all, that his mother killed in self-defense. There is the expected happy ending.

While the theme is hardly of the quality that one would expect in a feature offering a possible new star, Miss Christians contributes an outstanding performance. There being nothing new or novel about the material with which she has to work, the picture's successful presentation therefore resolves itself into a question of how advantage can best be taken of her debut, coupled with the punch usually surrounding the sacrificing-mother idea.—McCARThY, Hollywood.

The Perfect Clue

(Majestic)
Dramatic Romance

From the viewpoint of story content, potential audience interest and showmanship possibilities, this fast moving dramatic romance promises much. Not a big picture, but nevertheless of appealing quality for general patronage, it rather is one in which drama, love interest, comedy, mystery, tragedy, suspense, action are intelligently combined.

No hint as to the eventful tone is evidenced. Mona Stewart, resenting her father's proposed marriage to Ursula, elopes with Ronnie. Because of his continued tipting, Mona deserts the happy would-be benedict as the train stops at a tank town. Seeking some one to take her on a midnight drive to Albany, she meets Mannering. On the way, announcing himself as an innocently incarcerated ex-Sing Sing convict, Mannering first robs the girl, deserts her, and then, experiencing a change of heart, comes back to her. In the meantime, she has sprained her ankle. Talking him out of his mental funk, she hires him to drive her around until her ankle is well again. Romance, which Mannering fears and Mona wants, develops in an idyllic fashion.

However, Mannering, who feels the only calling left open to him is that of a crook, makes a date with a big shot. Arriving in his office he finds the man dead. Fleeing with the girl, he only serves to identify himself as the killer. Caught after a wild, roaring auto chase, the two are jailed. Bailed out by Mr. Stewart, Mona finds the breach between herself and Mannering wider than ever. Returning to the scene of the crime to learn that others have preceded them, Mona and Ronnie call the police, who arrive as their lives are menaced. In a bowling pin Mona finds the clue that lays the crime to Barkley and Carter. Her romance with the now rejuvenated Mannering has its happy climax.

Aptly titled, the picture affords many opportunities for unique exploitation. A pin is the clue, but what kind of pin no one knows until the girl looks into the tenpin.—McCARThY, Hollywood.

Imitation of Life

(Universal)
Drama

A dramatic production of tear-jerking caliber, this contains strong entertainment. It is a problem play, a story of mother love and a negro girl brought up in a white home and the tragedy of the racial blockade.

That it is the adaptation of a novel by Fannie Hurst, which, as is true of most of her writings, has been widely read, is a definite asset in the selling. With good marquee names, a rather expert blending of drama, romance, pathos and comedy, the picture is one of definite drawing potentiality.

It is perhaps more nearly a woman's picture than a masculine attraction, but the posing of the problem may be of value in attracting the men. For the women, the exhibitor has at hand the dominating element of the age-old but always attracting theme of mother love. The tragic problem is that of the Negro girl who is brought up among whites, who is herself so nearly white as to carry no visible trace of her Negro origin, and consequently is thrown into a mental state which brings to her almost ceaseless torture. That is the more vital problem of the picture's theme, running parallel with the sacrificial effort of the other, white mother to prevent future unhappiness for her daughter.

The cast is headed by Claudette Colbert, supported most effectively by Warren William, Louise Beavers, the extremely capable Negro actress; Ned Sparks, popular and a strong name; Rochelle Hudson and Fredi Washington. Miss Beavers comes very near to being the actual star of the picture, partially because her problem, as the Negro mother, is the more poignant of the picture's dual theme.

Miss Colbert, young widow with a small daughter, the appealing Baby Jane, charitably hires Miss Beavers as servant, permitting her to bring her own small daughter to live with them. Attempting unsuccessfully to peddle a maple syrup, Miss Colbert discovers an unusual recipe for pancakes which is the prized possession of Miss Beavers. They open a boardwalk concession, and Ned Sparks, tasting the cakes, suggests boxing the flour. To Miss Beavers and Miss Colbert their respective daughters are the be-all and the end-all of life, but early the almost completely white daughter of Miss Beavers knows the gnawing terror of being neither black nor white.

The business which is founded with "Aunt Delilah's Pancake Flour" booms until Miss Colbert is a woman of great wealth, while Miss Beavers, refusing wealth and independence, chooses to retain her place as servant to Miss Colbert. Miss Washington, Miss Beaver's daughter, sees Miss Colbert's child, Miss Hudson, move forward in the lap of wealth and luxury, while she herself becomes more and more an outcast. Driven to desperation, finally, she leaves her mother, is found, declares she

(Columbia)

Action Drama

There is action plus in this romantic little yarn of the exciting life of an ambulance driver, with the kind of entertainment apt to be most appealing to the youngsters and the action-loving crowd among the patronage. It is popular stuff, developed with the maximum of movement, opportunity having been taken by the producers to combine comedy, romance and the more active sort of drama.

The police department, fire department and ambulance service of the large city have been brought into play to engender excitement. The gangster element injected into the plot is an essential development of the part played by the service organizations in helping the right to triumph. Interwoven in the story is the factor of sacrifice when the ambulance driver stands ready to stifle his ambitions and give up the girl he loves, in the interests of his best friend.

The names are at least familiar, with John Mack Brown, of the attractive physique, and Sally Blane, often in this type of action material. In support are Arthur Hohl, George Meeker and Bradley Page.

Brown and Meeker are driver and surgeon, respectively, on the ambulance of the city's largest hospital. Miss Blane is a nurse, with whom Brown is in love. It early becomes apparent that there is something troubling Meeker, son of the head of the hospital. Brown learns that Meeker had become involved with a gang headed by Page, to whom he is in debt for several thousand dollars as the result of gambling. Page holds him in check, since Meeker is useful for dressing gunshot wounds without the little formality of making the required police report. When Brown attempts to make love to Miss Blane, she tells him she is engaged to Meeker, and Brown determines to assist Meeker for the sake of the girl.

He gives to Meeker sufficient money to cover the debt to Page, the money being Brown's savings to carry him through medical school. Page refuses the money, needing Meeker for his own purposes. When Meeker realizes he is caught and unable to leave the racket into which he has blundered, he commits suicide in Page's office. Brown, coming with the ambulance, frames it so that it appears Meeker has been killed in an automobile accident. Brown then, with the assistance of another young doctor, and Arthur Hohl, a former henchman of Page, who had been shot by the gang leader, tricks Page into confessing the shooting of Hohl, and arranges the roundup of the gang. The way is cleared for the romance of Miss Blane and Brown.

The weekend action spot appears a likely position.—AARONSON, New York.

The Battle

(Ritchey)

Drama

There is dramatic strength in this importation from France, which is entirely in the English language, with the exception of a smattering of Japanese, since the locale is that Far Eastern country and on the high seas. Although two of the names may have some selling significance in this country, the chief strength of the picture here will lie in the story itself.

In that the film is concerned with the Japanese fleet, its prowess and the effort to build its power on the sea, the opportunity is open for selling. At the moment occupying headlines in newspapers the world over is the strained and difficult situation relative to naval parity now current in Europe, with the demands of Japan for equal strength with Great Britain and the United States being the key to the situation.

The theme involves the sacrifice of honor by a ranking officer of the Japanese navy, in the interests of his country. Clandestine romance has been injected into the structure of the story, which is interesting material, and enhanced definitely from the audience standpoint by the performances of Merle Oberon, as the wife of the Japanese officer, and Charles Boyer, as the officer. Both names should be familiar to an extent to audiences in this country. Incidental, but important to the result, are unusually good pictorial and technical values.

There is drama and lively action in the battle sequences, when the Japanese fleet meets the enemy somewhere in the Pacific. The nationality of the enemy is left undetermined, although there is the inferential assurance that it is not England.

Boyer returns from victory at sea, hailed as a hero, and greeted by his wife, Miss Oberon. Aboard his ship was John Loder, as a neutral observer representing the admiralty of England. Boyer feels that strategically the battle did not end in victory for his fleet, although the enemy has been routed, and, an intense patriot, thinking only of his country, seeks in every possible way to obtain the report which Loder, as an observer, will send to England, criticizing the handling of the Japanese fleet in action.

Loder is careful, but Boyer sees to it that his beautiful wife shall make herself attractive to Loder, despite the fact that he loves his wife, however much that love is hidden under a domineering and severe exterior. Miss Oberon begs her husband not to force her to be attentive to Loder, since she feels that, in view especially of Boyer's coldness, she will be too completely attracted to Loder. But Boyer is insistent.

When Boyer arranges that Loder take Miss Oberon to a dance, he enters Loder's apartment, copies the report. He is interrupted by Loder and Miss Oberon, and learns the two are in love. He does not blame his wife, realizing he is to blame, and the battle fleet goes out to sea. With the information gained, Boyer, victorious once more, is wounded in action, and Loder, whom he forces to assist him, is killed. Then, feeling he can be of no further service to his country, and having sacrificed his honor, Boyer commits hari-kari, a gruesomely graphic scene. Forcing himself and his wife to appear always western in the presence of Europeans, he was basically always of the East and Japan.—AARONSON, New York.

Waltz Time in Vienna

(Ufa)

Romance with Music

Against a background of the melodiously attractive music of Johann Strauss has been woven a story of young love in the gay Vienna of what may well be called the waltz era. It is a German film, with German dialogue, with occasional passages of dialogue clarified with superimposed translations.

For a German-speaking audience there are the assets of light, but melodious and attractive romantic entertainment, with more than a germ of comedy, assets equally serviceable to the theatre which plays to those elements of the so-called intelligentsia which follow the better foreign productions. The Strauss music is the film's strongest foundation, as the story of itself is not especially inspiring romantic drama, and the cast is generally unknown in this country.

Gustl, drummer in the beer garden orchestra of Joseph Lanner, is in love with Katy, daughter of Lanner. Lanner fancies himself a composer of waltzes, the while making every effort to prevent his first violin, Strauss, from taking any of the credit for the compositions which are, for the most part, the work of Strauss. Strauss has a happy faculty of composing with lightning-like speed, recording his scores on shirt cuffs, sleeves, handkerchiefs, or any available blank white space which will record the markings of a pencil.

There comes to Vienna the ballet master of the court of the young Queen Victoria of England, and a famous and blondely attractive dancer, to learn the waltz and bring back an orchestra for the court. It is the hope of the shy queen that the inspirationally sentimental music of the famed Viennese waltz will cause her retiring prince suitor to propose. There are amusing moments as Katy and Gustl, meeting at the English palace, try to teach the queen to dance the waltz. Katy is angry with Gustl, and nudgings and toe pounding, with Gustl the victim, are taken by the queen as the proper manner of the dance, which she and the entire court later duplicate.

Katy leads a girl's orchestra to the palace. They kidnap Strauss and jail him, Gustl taking his place. The difficult situation is cleared when Strauss finally appears, but in Vienna Lanner sues Strauss for "stealing" his waltz. The two settle their differences and together compose a new song in the courtroom, Katy and Gustl being reconciled.—AARONSON, New York.

Girl in Danger

(Columbia)

Police Drama

One deviation from the trodden path of the police-stolen emerald theme gives "Girl in Danger" a bit of freshness to add to an abundance of action. The detective policeman simulates a third-degree torturing of one criminal in order to extract a confession from his confederate as to the whereabouts of the kidnaped girl. A police squad takes the prisoner into a second room and in silhouette the others see through the door window a merciless pummeling administered to the figure in the chair. It's a dummy; the prisoner is out of sight, gagged. The ruse is explained after the confession.

Ralph Bellamy and Shirley Grey are the leads, Bellamy rather familiarly in this type of product, while J. Carrol Naish is well identified with villain roles. Charles Sabin and Arthur Hohl also are principals.

The pattern theme is compensated by busy movement, almost from the start, and a corresponding minimum of the dialogue so often heaped upon a mystery solution. Shirley Grey, tired of social butterflying, goes in search of adventure. Charles Sabin, gangster, entrusts a stolen emerald to her as he is murdered. Naish sends a henchman (Vincent Sherman) in florist messenger's uniform to her home, she to don the uniform and go in the stolen truck to Naish's hideout. The plan starts to go wrong when Bellamy captures Sherman, then trails the florist truck. A safe on the wall actually is a disguised exit. Naish escapes. Bellamy takes Miss Grey to her home. He already has found the emerald but is testing her honesty. Naish enters, shoots Bellamy, seizes the emerald and Miss Grey. The newspapers are full of the story of the murder.

Now enters Arthur Hohl, big-time racketeer operating behind an investment broker shingle. Naish shows him the emerald and they plot to get the insurance money. The insurance representative is to meet the Hohl-Naish group at an inn frequented by the gang. When Naish, Hohl and a third of the criminals (Francis McDonald) step into a side-room they find Bellamy awaiting them. The newspaper men have helped him by printing stories that he was killed. When the two threaten him the waiters draw pistols; they're policemen. At headquarters Naish discloses the fact that unless he is back at the second hideout by a given time Miss Grey is to be given over to two of the gangsters. The third-degree hoax brings from McDonald the necessary information and Bellamy and squad get there in time. To the newspapermen it's evident that there's more than a passing interest between Bellamy and Miss Grey.

The title is provocative, particularly coupled with the ideas provided by such words as stolen emerald and kidnapping.

It's for the weekend course in the theatre bill-of-fare.—ROVELSTAD, New York.

The Broken Melody

(Olympic Pictures)
Drama

Told largely in the manner of the flashback, combining a dramatic story with attractive music, this English production of Julius Hagen comes to this country with its several values handicapped for popular consumption because of the British accent of the players, a condition accentuated in that the locale is Paris and the players portray French characters.

The exhibitor will know best to what extent that circumstance will affect his selling of the picture. The cast names are for the most part unfamiliar to the American screen audience, although Merle Oberon, who played in "The Private Life of Henry VIII," and John Garrick, who has appeared in several English importations, have the leads and may be known. The Paris Symphony Orchestra performs much of the musical score in highly effective fashion, the music perhaps serving as a selling point.

Heavy spots here and there in the story retard the pace and the film to a certain extent falls short of the action which usually is found most appealing to the average American audience. It is, apparently, a film rather for the class audience.

At the opera in Paris, between the acts, two men are talking, one a former superintendent of the French penal colony at Devil's Island. The superintendent, reminded by the opera's plot, tells the story of a young man, convicted of murder, who had been in his charge.

Garrick, young, erratic composer, in love with and loved by the daughter of the owner of the lodging house where he lives in Paris, is unsuccessful. His sweetheart, Miss Oberon, finally persuades him to sing in a cafe in order to maintain a bare existence. There a prima donna hears him sing, and so fascinates him that he marries her. She leads him a dog's life about Europe, a child is born, and she carries on affairs with other men. Miss Oberon, meanwhile, has achieved a certain vocal fame of her own, and they meet again. Garrick finds his wife with another man, kills him, and is sentenced to Devil's Island. Attempting to escape, he is shot at, and thought dead. But he returns eventually to Paris, marries Miss Oberon, his wife having died in the interval, and composes the opera, based on his own experience.

The film returns to the two men talking. Slowly it dawns on the former prison chief that the leading player is the escaped convict. The couple win his sympathy and he leaves them secure.—AARONSON, New York.

Produced by Julius Hagen at Twickenham Film Studios. Distributed in the United States by Olympic Pictures. Story and adaptation by Vera Allison and Michael Kankinson. Directed by Bernard Vorhaus. Photographed by Sydney Blythe. Art director, James A. Carter. Musical director, W. L. Trytel. Running time, 68 minutes. Release date, October 30, 1934.

Three Cheers for Love

Entertaining

This so-called Young Romance comedy number features the pert and modern radio vocalist, Sylvia Froos, with Warren Hull in chief support. The result is rather entertaining comedy material, with an engaging touch of melody, including the title song. Miss Froos is the rage of the young men at the yacht club, and her mother to insure that her elder daughter shall have no difficulty catching Hull, wealthy young man, forces Miss Froos to dress in small girl's clothes. She double crosses mother and sister, however, to capture Hull, who sings one number in effective fashion.—Running time, 19 minutes.

Hollywood Trouble

(Universal)

Laughs for Any Bill

A good little comedy, this picture should get laughs on any bill. A novelty selling angle is the fact that it was produced by the Thaliens, organization of screen juveniles. This is the second of a series. The comedy starts off with a film set featuring a sappy prop man who loads guns at the wrong time and breaks up dramatic scenes by wandering in with a lighted birthday cake. The scene moves over to a dramatic school where the prop man becomes a histrionic professor, teaching his pupils to emulate Tarzan from loin cloth to sound effects. The villain ends the fun by shooting up the place and cheating the professor and accomplices out of five thousand bucks. The preview audience reacted well. It's good for both adults and the youngsters.—Running time, 20 minutes.—M. W.

Tom, Tom, the Piper's Son

Attractive

An attractive and entertaining cartoon of the Terry-Toons group, this has Tom doing his daily good deed with his flute. In turn he assists the kitten that fell in the well, Humpty-Dumpty who falls from his wall, Mistress Mary and her recalcitrant garden of other fairy tale heroes and heroines. The youngsters should find the subject entertaining.—Running time, 6 minutes.

Holland in Tulip Time

(MGM)

Excellent

One of the FitzPatrick travel subjects, this carries the audience into quaint and quiet Holland, where the cultivation of the tulip has grown to be one of the small kingdom's major industries. With the use of Technicolor throughout, the colorful tranquility of the country has been portrayed, the subject highlighted by several breath-taking scenes of the wide-spread tulip fields, a riot of magnificent color, stretching as far as the eye can see. Every imaginable color is there, the beds arranged in meticulous square pattern. A subject with unlimited appeal, and worth special billing.—Running time, 9 minutes.

Two Lame Ducks

Fair

There are a few moments of laugh provocation in this comedy, featuring Vince Barnett and Billy Gilbert, as the two bedeviled husbands who sneak out to go a-hunting. Their wives note their departure, take their hunting licenses and tip off the game warden. When they reach the duck hunting ground, their antics are amazing, and occasionally amusing. Arrested, they are given suspended sentences, in the custody of their wives, than which sentence they much prefer lengthy jail terms.—Running time 17 minutes.

Just Concentrate

(Vitaphone)

Weak

A concoction which is characterized chiefly by considerable noise, this subject features Lulu McConnell, as the matron who falls for anything that may be for sale. She is hooked for a "radio" which is supposed to play anything a person desires if he concentrates on the number. Her difficulties are multiplied when the machine double crosses her. A poor and unfunny subject.—Running time, 9 minutes.

The House Where I Was Born

Melodious

There is appealing melody in this number of the Song Hit Story series, featuring Sylvia Froos, the radio singer, and Frank Luther. As a young pair of song peddlers, they sing several numbers, together and in solo, concluding, as they start back for a visit home, with the title song, which is attractive and new.—Running time, 11 minutes.

The Hollywood Movie Parade

Stars in Action

This is along the lines of other series of snatches of the notables of Hollywood, more or less in action, but this differs to an extent in that a slight story is involved. A group of ambitious mothers apply at the studio with their infants, and one appealing child escapes from the parental grasp, meeting Jackie Cooper, falling on and off sets on which are Bela Lugosi, George O'Brien and others. Has fan interest.—Running time, 9 minutes.

THE COUNTY CHAIRMAN

Fox

In this picture, Will Rogers is cast as a character that should be right up his alley, a fact which promises both a showmanship and entertainment treat. He's a politician, not the efficient modern organizer, rather one of the oldtime fire-eating brand who knew the value of frenzied rallies, torch-light parades, free-for-all fights and the other media dear to the old political warhorses' hearts in the days before the radio. As the hero of George Ade's memorable book and play, "The County Chairman," the antics of the fiery, oratorical old campaigner are counterbalanced by situations that are uproariously humorous, plenty of exciting drama, a succession of hilarious complications which in the less flamboyant moments veer to a tender story of the old fashioned young love, to have the whole topped off by a spectacular, mirth-packed chase.

It will be noted that many in the cast have appeared in previous Rogers pictures. Seven of them were with him in "David Harum"—Evelyn Venable, Kent Taylor, Louis Dresser, Stepin Fetchit, Frank Melton, Robert McWade and Charles Middleton. Miss Venable and Taylor have similar roles as the young sweethearts, providing the story's romantic color. Others are Mickey Rooney, Berton Churchill, Russell Simpson, William V. Mong, Jan Duggan, who was seen in "The Drunkard" episode in "Old Fashioned Way," Gay Seabrook and Erville Alderson.

The screen play for Ade's play (that origin in itself being a showmanship asset) is by Sam Hellman, noted humorist, and Gladys Lehman. Direction is by John Blystone, who handled Rogers in "So This Is London" and recently completed "Hell in the Heavens."

Showmanship merited is along the lines of a landslide of laughs and making the most of Rogers drawing power.—Class "G."

THE GOOD FAIRY

Universal

For Margaret Sullavan's third starring picture Universal has chosen a rather appealing vehicle. Preceded by atmospheric situations which depict Miss Sullavan as a theatre usher and former inmate of an orphan's home where she had made herself a name by her talent for telling fairy stories, the story soon becomes realistic romance, full of exciting situations both dramatic and comic. To escape the amours of a wealthy admirer, she tells a fairy story that skyrockets a lawyer, unknown to her, to riches, involves herself in a thrilling romantic situation to bring about a surprising climax.

The vehicle is adapted from a stage play by Ferenc Molnar. The screen play is by Preston Sturges, who did "Zoo in Budapest," "Power and Glory" and "Thirty Day Princess." The story is being directed by William Wyler.

Located in Budapest, the time being the present, the value of story content is accentuated by the quality of the cast supporting Miss Sullavan. Herbert Marshall, currently in "The Painted Veil," has the role of the lawyer who is the beneficiary of the girl's vivid imagination. Frank Morgan, recently in "Affairs of Cellini," is the business tycoon to whom she tells the story. Alan Hale is a waiter, continually attempting to protect the girl. Others in Audience suitability, indicated at the end of the report on a production, is as follows: "G," General audience; "A," Adult audience.

the cast are Reginald Owen, the King in "Madame duBarry;" Beulah Bondi, featured in "The White Parade;" Cesar Romero, Al Bridges, Hugh O'Connell, June Clayworth, now in "Strange Wives;" Matt McHugh and Frank Moran.—Class "G."

RUMBA

Paramount

Pitched to a modern key this production, besides again teaming the "Bolero" stars George Raft and Carole Lombard, has several other interesting showmanship points. As the title and the star associates indicate, the feature is a dancing picture. However, there is an accompanying story which in itself not only promises possibilities for unique and potent showmanship, but will fit snugly into the modern mood. That's a yarn of two Cuban lottery tickets. One is legitimate, the other counterfeit, but they bring two young persons together for a colorfully hectic and conflicting romance which, culminating in a press agent's publicity seeking gag, smooths the way for real love.

Locales of the yarn are Havana and New York. Raft is the dancer; Miss Lombard the girl. To revenge himself when her legitimate ticket wins the prize, he makes her fall in love with him, only to jilt her. Later in New York, when Raft's life is supposed to be threatened and his dancing partner runs out, Miss Lombard dances the new Rumba with him.

The production, which is being mounted elaborately will feature the Rumba as a ballroom dance, and one of the qualities meriting showmanship attention is the accompanying Ralph Rainger musical score. Too, as in "Bolero," the settings are colorful.

With the story and its accompanying action promising much, the cast supporting the leads is worthy of more than usual attention. In it will be seen Margo, featured in "Crime Without Passion"; a promising-to-be starlet, Iris Adrian, who will make her screen debut; Lynne Overman, Monroe Owsley and Gail Patrick.

LITTLE MEN

Mascot

This story, second in the Louisa M. Alcott series, takes up with the Professor and Jo of "Little Women" after they had married and established a boys' school. As in "Little Women," the locale is rural New England and the time about 1871. The screen play is by Gertrude Orr, with Phil Rosen directing.

Jo is played by Erin O'Brien Moore, seen in several Radio pictures, and the Professor by Ralph Morgan, currently in "Girl of the Limberlost," but the real action is carried by juvenile actors. Included in the cast are Frankie Darro, Dickie Moore, Cora Sue Collins, David Durand, Buster Phelps, Ronnie Crosby, Tommy Bupp, Junior (Trent) Durkin, Phyllis Fraser, Tad Alexander, Bobby Cox and many other youngsters. Other adults are Hattie McDaniels, Irving Bacon, Charles Middleton and Rodney Hildebrandt.

The story deals with the tenderness and understanding which Jo and the Professor have for the boys in their school, Plumfield. Packed with scores of situations which faithfully portray every boyish hope and disappointment, it builds to a point where one boy (Darro), in whom Jo had great faith but whom the Professor believed a dangerous influence, lays himself open to suspicion of petty theft. But as evil will out and virtue triumph, the boy is proved innocent and welcomed back to Plumfield amid a spectacular Thanksgiving celebration.

As the feature is to be given a Holiday release, it appears to be well endowed with that human appealing quality which will reflect the popular spirit and mood of the season. With that as a guiding medium, the success of "Little Women" as a popular attraction is not to be overlooked in stimulating patron interest in "Little Men"—not as a companion piece, but rather as further happy moments with grown-up Jo and the children, for whom she strives to map the best life course.—Class "G."

DAVID COPPERFIELD

MGM

In bringing this, probably the best known Charles Dickens classic, to screen actuality, the producers are making available for commercial marketing practically every recognized showmanship asset.

The cast includes such outstanding names as Lionel Barrymore, Frank Lawton, W. C. Fields, Madge Evans, Edna Mae Oliver, Elizabeth Allen, Maureen O'Sullivan, Hugh Williams, Roland Young, Basil Rathbone, Una O'Connor, Jessie Ralph, Herbert Mundin, Lewis Stone, Harry Beresford, Hugh Walpole, Violet Kemble-Cooper, Florine McKinney, J. M. Kerrigan, Freddie Bartholomew, a promising child sensation, and hundreds of others.

That list taking care of name power, the picture is being directed by George Cukor who made "Little Women," "Dinner at Eight" and other important features. The screen play of Dickens' monumental work is by Hugh Walpole, noted British author and Howard Estabrook, who will be remembered as having done "The Bowery."

With the Dickens prestige naturally assuring a class appeal, the quality of the story brings it within mass understanding. As it has been termed Dickens' own life story, it is literary classic with a love story, full of romance, heart interest and tinged with pathos. Also it is amply endowed with comedy contrast, so that, while the original is more than a century old, its significance is unusually modern and topical.

For elaborate production, settings and costumes reflecting the spirit and atmosphere of its time were constructed and made only after the most diligent search for authenticity. Similarly, characters had exhaustive tests.

In quality of story content and its proved ability to please, the box office strength of cast names, the Dickens prestige made popular and timely by several recent pictures, and the producing company's avowed intention that this shall be one of the outstanding features on the year's program, showmen have a running start in their campaign.—Class "G."

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

By VICTOR M. SHAPIRO

Hollywood Correspondent

WALTER WANGER gave Hollywood eye and ear commotion last week as a premature report circulated that the Production Code Administration had refused to give him a seal for his latest production, "The President Vanishes." Shortly after the shouting was over, with many reasons bandied about for the banning, Joseph I. Breen gave the picture a final review, and by the elimination of trivial parts of dialogue, a seal was given. Cuts affected only 35 feet of the film, which in no way detracted from the value.

The changes ordered by Mr. Breen were elimination of a line referring to "capitalistic blood suckers" in a Union Square talk; elimination of a speech referring to coercion of the vice-president; and several closeups showing persons striking policemen, shots formerly used in newsreels.

Actors and writers also got on their high horse as rumblings about a strike were bruited about unless Sol A. Rosenblatt makes an appearance to bring concord between producers, actors and writers, on the proposed code of fair practice.

The writers have not as yet presented their final code draft to the producers' five-five committee, but experience of the actors' five-five committee with the producers, when the producers rejected all fourteen points of the code proposed, leads them to anticipate a similar ordeal. Before a similar showdown, they want Mr. Rosenblatt here on the ground to adjudicate. Unless this is done it now appears the Screen Guild will attempt to force recognition of their demands through the American Federation of Labor, with which the actors are now seeking affiliation. All the Labor link needs is ratification from the Guild members.

Breaking Precedent

Two daring film ventures, "Sequoia" and "Imitation of Life," were previewed this week to acclaim of the colony. Both break precedent, both defy tradition.

"Sequoia," produced by John Considine, Jr., for MGM, and "Imitation of Life," directed by John Stahl for Universal, are well off the beaten path.

"Sequoia" stars a deer and a puma, natural enemies of the forest. Humans, too, play parts, particularly Jean Parker.

"Imitation of Life" spans a subject heretofore taboo in films, but does it so tenderly that subject matter is subservient to the human drama unfolded. Here is told the tragedy of a colored girl, part white, but who would be entirely white, to enjoy the social prestige of her paler faced sisters.

Hollywood, needing encouragement to do the out-of-the-ordinary, is awaiting showmen's verdict on these productions.

European Showmanship

visit theatre circuits. His wife, Alice Joyce, accompanied him on his European trip.

"If and when European film theatres adapt American ideas of showmanship," said Mr. Brown, "exhibitors abroad will automatically raise their standard of presentation, as bigger audiences demand finer shows to match showmanship."

Outside of London and Paris, he said, a stranger must inquire where the theatres are, as they are usually stuck up an alley, around the corner.

Audience tastes in Italy tally exactly with those of American theatre-goers, the director was surprised to note.

Vienna and Budapest, he said, are excelling in carrying on the traditions of the European musical show and are beginning to affect the pattern of American pictures.

Hollywood's Heart

The true "heart" of Hollywood, often alluded to as calloused, or non-existent, was in magnified evidence at the Mary Blackford benefit supper-dance, held at the Cocoanut Grove. Miss Blackford, young actress who appeared with Will Rogers in his stage appearance of "Ah, Wilderness," had been severely injured in an automobile accident several weeks ago, and doctors had recommended a delicate spine operation, which would cost a sum fabulous to a girl of her means. Hollywood turned out en masse to give tribute to a courageous trouser and the necessary $5,000 was easily raised, through the efforts of Helen Mack, Tom Brown, William Janney, Pete Lucid and others.

Benny Rubin was master of ceremonies, with Will Rogers, Dick Powell, Veloz and Yolanda, Carmel Myers, Fred Keating, El Brendel and his wife offering their services as entertainers.

Rogers, incidentally, had maintained all hospital expenses. Now Joan Crawford is in charge. The humorist's talk was climaxed by a few words to Miss Blackford, who had tuned in from her hospital room.

Only Four Pictures Start

New production sagged this week as only four features were started. Of these, two are Monograms, the others being credited to MGM and Paramount. At the same time, but six features were finished. Columbia and MGM each account for a pair; the fifth is a Radio and the sixth a Warner.

At Columbia, "The Depths Below" was finished. Edmund Lowe, Jack Holt and Bela Lugosi are featured, with Florence Rice, Forester Harvey, Frank Sheridan, Harry Holman and Mitchell Lewis among the support. Similarly "Feud," a Tim McCoy with Billie Seward, was moved to the cutting room.

The more important of the two from MGM is "The Night Is Young." A new type musical, it stars Ramon Novarro and Evelyn Laye. The cast features Edward Everett Horton, Charles Butterworth, Rosalind Russell, Una Merkel, Donald Cook, Cecelia Parker, Henry Stephenson, Christian Rub and Herman Bing. The other feature is the tentatively titled "Backfield," with Robert Young, Ted Healy, Leo Carrillo, Stuart Erwin and Preston Foster.

Radio's contribution "Enchanted April," features Ann Harding and Frank Morgan. In the supporting cast are Katherine Alexander, Reg-

STRAIGHT FROM THE HEART

Universal

Because of its atmosphere and the situations against which it is told, this story is of more than ordinary topical significance. Currently timed, and fundamentally a dramatic romance, it deals with present day life conditions with which untold numbers are intimately familiar.

With millions living on governmental charity and everyone suspecting that unscrupulous grafters are diverting much of the funds to their own pockets, "Straight from the Heart" is a dramatized bit of imagination that might have come true in any city. It's the story of a woman who, by the beneficence of a politician, is lifted out of the bread line and given a job in the municipal nursery. Loving all children and one in particular, she becomes a valuable asset in the politician's mayoralty campaign. Learning that he is a grafter, she turns on him, concocts an amazing situation that turns the campaign into a hurricane of mud-slinging, in which the politician contemplates his victory to find it only an empty thing if life is to be without the woman he loves despite all she has done to embarrass him. Whereupon all is straightened out to complete the romance.

Aiming at dynamic punch, but at the same time heart-interest, the story features Mary Astor, currently in "Case of the Howling Dog" and "I Am a Thief;" Roger Pryor, leading man in "Belle of the Nineties" and remembered for "Moonlight and Pretzels;" Baby Jane, Universal's child prodigy who will be seen in "Imitations of Life," and Carol Coombe, a new coming British actress. Also included in the cast are Andy Devine, Grant Mitchell, Robert McWade, Doris Lloyd, Clar Blandick, now in "Mrs Wiggs," Henry Armetta, Douglas Fowley and Willard Robertson.

The original story and screen play are by Doris Anderson, author of "Uncertain Lady" and scenarist of "Glamour." Direction is by Scott R. Beal, formerly an assistant who is handling his first assignment in directing a picture alone.—Class "G."

WOMEN MUST DRESS

Monogram

With the title giving definite hint as to its exploitation possibilities, this picture makes available any number of channels through which that form of showmanship may be achieved. In it will be presented the winners of the recent Agfa-Ansco-Monogram photograph contest, including Harriet deBusman, the grand prize winner; Fay Hammer, chosen by the Allied Exhibitors of the Northwest, Anne Johnston, Nell Rhoads, Madelyn Earle, Anne Kasper and Sandra Breau. They have been the subject of much publicity in their various communities, and there is considerable color for tie-ups with stores and that will be strengthened by a nationwide campaign sponsored by Celanese Corporation.

Essentially the story is a domestic drama, telling of a woman who sees her husband's love cooling but through the medium of smart clothes and style changes herself into an amazing creature who has no difficulty in again charming her errant spouse and making him see the error of his ways.

The original story is by Frank Farnsworth, the screen play by Ed Joseph. Reginald Barker is directing with Mrs. Wallace Reid acting as supervisor. Principal players are Minna Gombell, currently in "The White Cockatoo," Gavin Gordon, Hardie Albright, Lenita Lane, a newcomer; Suzanne Kaaren and Robert Light. Supporting players, in addition to the contest winners mentioned, include Zeffie Tilbury, Allan Edward, Paul Ellis and Gerald Young.—Class "G."

Two Join Monogram Coast Publicity Staff

Monogram has added Anita Alston and Mart Bushnell, on press books and as planter, respectively, to the Coast publicity department, assisting Lindsley Parsons, following the resignation of Nate Krevitz. Jess Robbins and Norman S. Hall have been assigned to write an original screenplay for the next Robert Armstrong vehicle for Monogram. Robert E. Welsh is executive producer.

IN HOLLYWOOD

inald Owen, Ralph Forbes, Eric Blore, Jane Baxter, Doris Lloyd, Henry Armetta, and Raffaelo Ottiano.

Warner completed active shooting on "Sweet Music." A musical with a radio broadcast and show world background, this picture will present Rudy Vallee, Ann Dvorak, Ned Sparks, Joseph Cawthorne, Allen Jenkins, Alice White, Robert Armstrong, Al Shean and Helen Morgan.

To head the list of new activities Monogram started "Women Must Dress," featuring the girl winners of the recent Agfa-Ansco camera contest, with Minna Gombell, Gavin Gordon, Hardie Albright, Suzanne Kaaren, Robert Light and Arthur Lake. Also placed before the cameras was "Nut Farm." The cast of this includes Wallace Ford, Joan Gale, Bradley Page, Oscar Apfel, Spencer Charters and Florence Roberts.

The new MGM activity, "Copy Cats," teams Constance Bennett with Clark Gable, supported by Henry Travers, Stuart Erwin and Harvey Stephens. At Paramount work began on "Be Careful, Young Lady," formerly "All the King's Horses." This will be the second picture for Carl Brisson in which he will be seen with Mary Ellis, Katherine DeMille and Edward Everett Horton.

Walter Wanger to Remain At General Service Studio

Walter Wanger, producing independently for Paramount release, has announced a new arrangement with Erpi which will keep him at the General Service studios at the Coast until he completes his current schedule of six features for Paramount.

Of the six, one, "The President Vanishes," has been completed, and preparations have been finished for four others, "Private Worlds," "Clipper Ship," "Vogue of 1935" and "Peacock Feather."

Helen Jepson, Metropolitan Singer, Signed by Paramount

Paramount has signed Helen Jepson, Metropolitan Opera Company star, who will appear with Lawrence Tibbett at the Metropolitan in January. She will report at the Paramount Coast studio in April. Miss Jepson is also under contract to appear with Paul Whiteman on his radio broadcast. She will be permitted to broadcast from Hollywood during her screen work there.

RKO Appoints Armour

Reginald Armour has been named general manager for RKO in India and the middle East. He was formerly in charge of RKO operations in India, Burma and Ceylon.

Loew Meeting Date Changed

The date of the annual meeting of Loew's, Inc., has been changed from December 11 to the second Tuesday in December, effective in 1935. Stockholders of record on November 17 may vote.

Film Legislation Is Seen in 43 State Sessions

Legislation affecting the motion picture industry is anticipated early next year, with the legislatures of 43 states and the national Congress going into session during the month of January.

Practically all states are expected to be seriously in need of new revenue to finance relief measures of various sorts and to replenish definitely depleted treasuries. The introduction of revenue-raising legislation, aimed at the motion picture industry, appears a certainty in many states. Other measures which will be of a regulatory nature are expected as well, chiefly as a result of the wide publicity which was attendant upon the recent drive for cleaner motion pictures conducted by the churches over the country.

The Internal Revenue Bureau at Washington late last week issued a sharp warning that the government expects admission taxes to be paid on the basis of the established price of admission as printed on the ticket, instead of that resulting from cuts in scales. The warning came as a result of the publication, in New York and Philadelphia, of articles which said the bureau had ruled that cut price tickets are subject to tax only in the amount actually paid.

It was pointed out in Washington that the revenue law involved specifically provides for the collection of taxes on the basis of established price from any person, other than employees, municipal officers, or children under 12 who are admitted at reduced price at a time when other patrons are required to pay the established rate.

Parsons, Theatre Owner for Quarter of a Century, Dies

Herbert C. Parsons, owner and manager of Parsons theatre at Hartford, Conn., which opened in 1896, died last weekend and was buried Monday in East Windsor Hill, Conn. He was 81 years old.

The Parsons theatre, which opened with De Wolf Hopper and Edna Wallace, in "Doctor Syntax," some 38 years ago, was sold in 1920 to the Shuberts, but Mr. Parsons did not retire until 1927, serving as manager in the meantime.

Crouch, Eastman Cashier, Dies in Rochester at 70

Frank M. Crouch, cashier of the Eastman Kodak Company, died in Rochester last week at the age of 70 after a week's illness. He was a pioneer in the Eastman business, having been engaged by the late George Eastman in 1888 to care for the finances of the small company then being formed.

Talley, Stallings, Thomas To Address Town Criers

Truman Talley, in charge of Fox Movie-tons, Laurence Stallings, editor, and Lowell Thomas, narrator, will address the Town Criers of Rhode Island on December 7, at Providence. The addresses will be put on the air.

R. M. Clark, Executive of Griffith Amusement, Dead

R. M. (Ish) Clark, general manager of the Griffith Amusement Company, died recently in Oklahoma City. Mr. Clark was well known in theatrical circles in the southwest. He was only 36 years old. Mr. Clark began his motion picture career with the old Mutual Film Company, going to Pathe as chief booker. Then followed association with Southern Enterprises, and with Griffith Brothers as booker and office manager in Oklahoma City, in 1922. In 1926, when the Griffith Amusement Company was organized, he became manager of the Liberty Specialty Film Company, remaining in that post until 1929, when he was named assistant general manager of the Griffith company. In 1931 he became general manager. He is survived by his wife, Verna May Clark; a son, Robert, 14, and his mother.

Fox West Coast Conferences Open

Final details of operation of Fox West Coast Theatres Corporation, under the plan of reorganization approved two weeks ago by the United States district court in Los Angeles, were to be completed this week between Charles Skouras and Chase National Bank. Mr. Skouras, accompanied by his secretary, Edward Zabel; James Davidson, statistician, and Ralph S. Harris, of Hughes, Schurman and Dwight, arrived in New York from the Coast Friday for the conferences, expected to last two weeks.

The first meeting was held Monday with Herman G. Place, a Chase vice-president. Charles Skouras will sign the joint 10-year contract with his brother, Spyros, as the other signatory. Spyros also will participate in the discussions.

Skouras Theatre Corporation does not intend to change its name to National Theatres Corporation, said Louis Weber, attorney for Skouras Theatres.

The new Fox West Coast group is expected to be ready to function January 1. Hughes, Schurman and Dwight, the FWC attorneys, last week filed papers in Albany incorporating National Theatres Corporation, New York City, with a state capital of 1,000 shares at $1 each. The corporation is authorized to issue stocks, bonds and other securities and to give such stock and bonds in exchange for securities of other corporations, and generally to act as a holding company, to engage in and carry on the business of theatrical properties covering all forms of amusement, to finance, exhibit, display, produce, promote, record, release and distribute films of every kind and character. The corporation may establish other offices, agencies or branches outside of New York State in any part of the world.

Raymond J. Gorman, David H. Jackman, Edward S. Williams of the U. S. Corp., New York City, are the incorporators.

On November 1, National Theatres Corporation was formed in Dover. This corporation increased the outstanding stock of Wesco from 1,000 no par shares to 1,800,000.

Greene Is Dickinson Booker

Joe Greene, circuit booker and former exhibitor, has been named booker of the Dickinson circuit, with headquarters at Lawrence, Kan.

Few Cuts Made In British Films, Says V. G. Hart

The average British-made feature picture passing through the eastern division of the Production Code Administration suffers only relatively minor deletions, according to Vincent G. Hart, who is in charge of production code activities in the east and supervisor over all foreign films imported into the United States.

Mr. Hart said this week that "Evensong" and "Evergreen," two of the most recently submitted British films, were passed with no major cuts and that this has been the case with other British films approved earlier, despite the fact that British producers are not consciously guided by the production code in effect in this country.

Submission of stories by independent producers in New York is becoming more and more a general practice, Mr. Hart said.

Scenario writers now must display greater ingenuity in getting around difficult situations and better pictures are resulting, Joseph L. Mankiewicz, scenarist, said last week on his arrival in New York from Hollywood.

The Maryland Congress of Parents and Teachers pledged itself to work for federal legislation forcing producers to "furnish us with more desirable entertainment."

Texas Allied Hits Code, Elects Cole

Col. H. A. Cole's Allied of Texas, meeting in Dallas and reelecting him president, sent to President Roosevelt resolutions condemning the entire motion picture code in its present set-up. The Texas group's discontent is not only with the written code itself but with the operation and methods of local grievance and clearance and zoning boards and with the Code Authority.

"The independents have been forced to drop out during the past year by ones and twos under this code," said Col. Cole.

Other Texas Allied officers named were: vice-presidents, Rubin Frels, Martha McSpadden, R. N. Smith, L. M. Threet and R. Z. Glass; secretary-treasurer, A. W. Lilly, and directors Homer Mulkey, P. V. Williams, Thomas Donnell, F. W. Zimmerman, Howard Bland, Paul Scott, Leaman Marshall, Mart Cole, Walter Steppelman, I. B. Idelman, Will Dorbandt, T. W. Lewis.

The Independent Exhibitors' Protective Association of Philadelphia this week placed itself on record as opposed to any clearance set-up in which it has no voice and in the formation of which it is not consulted.

Allied of Vermont has elected Andrew Tegu of St. Johnsbury as president; Charles Ross, Windsor, vice-president; Clark Ray Kiniry, Bellows Falls, secretary; Al Graves, White River Junction, treasurer.

Leon Rosenblatt, of the New York Independent Theatre Owners Association, conferred Monday with Sidney E. Samuelson, Allied's national president, on affiliation.

THE CODE QUESTION BOX

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

NO. 90—SALARY OF OPERATORS AND THEIR RIGHT TO UNIONIZE

QUESTION—I would like to know what minimum salary an operator (non-union) should receive in a town of.....population: (population omitted for obvious reasons). This is the only theatre in this city. The nearest union is not far away and it would accept me as a member, but I am afraid that the theatre owner would never consent and would lay me off. Would you advise me to join the union? What protection would I have if I did join the union? At the present time I am receiving $15 a week.—WISCONSIN.

ANSWER—One of the basic rights given employees by the National Recovery Act, and by all of the various trade codes which emanated therefrom, is to unionize or to join any union, if they so desire. In every code drafted appears this clause (Article III, Section 1-b): "No employee and no one seeking employment shall be required as a condition of employment . . . to refrain from joining, organizing, or assisting a labor organization of his own choosing. . . ."

And, any motion picture theatre owner who dismisses an employee because the employee joined a union is to be liable to charges of violating the motion picture code.

We cannot advise any employee to join any union, nor to refrain from joining. However, if the employee does join, the exhibitor, as previously stated, can be restrained from interfering with his employee's participation in unionism. If the employer does interfere or discharge the worker because he did become a member of a union, then the employee is entitled to file charges against the employer with either the NRA's local Compliance Board, or the NRA's Regional Labor Board, either of which, if the complaint is justified, will act accordingly against the employer.

The motion picture code (Article IV—C, Part 1, Section 6 (a and b)), says that a projectionist who is directly and regularly employed by an exhibitor shall receive not less than the minimum wage and work no longer than the maximum number of hours which were in force as of August 23rd, 1933 with respect to his class of work in a particular community. If the employer refuses to comply with this code regulation, then the operator should seek the advice of the NRA local Compliance Board or the Regional Labor Board.

The code does provide machinery for arbitrating a dispute between the employer and the employee as to what constituted the minimum wage scale and maximum working schedule on August 23rd, 1933, but, regardless, it is believed that the complaining employee should first talk with either of the two boards mentioned above to ascertain his rights in the matter.

The address of the NRA Compliance Board and/or the NRA Regional Labor Board in any territory or city may be obtained from the National Recovery Administration at Washington.

NO. 91—SUBSTITUTIONS AND CANCELLATIONS UNDER THE CODE

QUESTION—Under the code I have the privilege to cancel any substitutions but my contracts with RKO and Paramount do not list the pictures which are to be released during the 1934-35 season, they merely read:

4 Photoplays—Class A.....$.....
8 Photoplays—Class B.....$.....
12 Photoplays—Class C.....$.....

15 Photoplays—Class D.....$.....
Balance —Class E.....$.....

How am I to know which pictures are substitutions? I have no worksheet, either, as the applications were made on the contracts.

I have also contracted with United Artists. Each picture is made on a separate contract, but all are dated the same. Have I the 10 per cent cancellation privilege on any one of these pictures, and do I have to play productions which were made in a foreign country and which are distributed through United Artists?

On my Paramount contract I would like to cancel "Scarlet Empress." If I get a minister to disapprove of it would Paramount cancel it under agreement with the Will H. Hays organization?—WISCONSIN.

ANSWER—Disposing of the last question first, all of the large distributors agreed in July to permit their exhibitor clients to cancel any of their pictures released prior to July 15th, against which picture there had been lodged in the exhibitor's own community a bona fide public protest upon moral grounds and which public protest was made in good faith. The protest must actually exist among the residents in the community in which the exhibitor's theatre is located. A public protest against a certain picture in one community has no bearing on the same picture in another community.

The exchange reserves the right to investigate the source and the nature of the protest in order to determine its good faith.

In case of a dispute between the exchange manager and the exhibitor as to whether or not there exists a genuine objection to the picture in the particular community in which the theatre is located, the distributor will consent to refer the question of fact to the Local Grievance Board for determination, and further agrees to abide by the decision of such board.

This offer, made voluntarily on the part of distributors, applies to all pictures actually released prior to July 15th. Pictures released after that date are required to meet the standards of good taste in production established by the Production Code Administration in Hollywood, supervised by Joseph I. Breen, and must bear the seal of the Production Code Administration next to the main title.

Lists of all pictures carrying the Production Code Administration's certificate of approval number may be obtained from Mr. Breen, at 5514 Hollywood Boulevard, Hollywood, Cal.

The complete text of the rules and regulations governing cancellation of pictures released prior to July 15th under the agreement of the distributors as set forth above, appeared in MOTION PICTURE HERALD on July 14th.

The inquiring exhibitor mentions five classes of pictures which are listed in his contract, together with the numbers of each class which were contracted for. He asked: "How am I to know which pictures are substitutions?" How can there be any substitutions when specific titles of pictures, or descriptions of pictures—such as a picture with a certain star, or a picture based on the work of a specific author—if no such titles, or names of stars or authors appear in the contract? The contract provides for the delivery by the distributor, according to the inquiry, of numerical groups. Therefore, the distributor is obligated to supply the exhibitor with the same number of pictures corresponding to the number set down in the groups stipulated in the contract.

There is a clause in the motion picture code

Immediate reply is being made direct to the many letters which Motion Picture Herald is receiving from exhibitors and distributors in the field, and from others, in which various questions are asked concerning certain doubtful phases of the Motion Picture Code. In addition, such code questions and the answers submitted are published as a regular service.

For obvious reasons, the letters will appear anonymously. However, the originals will remain on file.

Answers to questions about the Code are submitted only after consultation with authorities familiar with the technicalities of the document.

This service is available to everyone. Send questions to the Code Editor, Motion Picture Herald, 1790 Broadway, New York City.

which gives the right to an exhibitor to eliminate 10 per cent of the number of pictures contracted for, under certain conditions, in the manner prescribed below:

An exhibitor is entitled to eliminate from a single contract 10 per cent of all pictures released after December 7th, 1933, even though such pictures were contracted for prior to that date; provided, however, that the exhibitor's specific contract under which he seeks the elimination is in good standing; and, provided further, that the average rental for each picture of the group contracted for is not more than $250 per picture; and, provided, further, that the exhibitor purchased at the one time all of the feature motion pictures offered to him at the same time by the distributor.

If the distributor offered to the exhibitor, say, 50 motion pictures, and the exhibitor contracted for 40 pictures and rejected the others, then the exhibitor is not entitled to the 10 per cent elimination privilege in accordance with this clause. All of the pictures offered by the distributor to the exhibitor at one time must be contracted for, otherwise the elimination clause would not become effective.

If the distributor, who has, say, 50 pictures on his schedule, offers the exhibitor 30 pictures and the exhibitor contracts for that number, then the clause would be effective just the same, because the exhibitor purchased all of the pictures actually offered to him by the distributor.

Regarding that phase of the inquiry involving United Artists and the relation of the 10 per cent elimination clause to that company and its individual contracts, Sol A. Rosenblatt, Division Administrator of the NRA, in charge of amusement codes, ruled that if pictures are sold to exhibitors on individual contracts at one and the same time—as is the practice followed by United Artists—then the deal constitutes a group sale and the 10 per cent elimination clause may be made applicable on the conditions set forth above.

Another question asked was: "Do I have to play productions which were made in a foreign country and which are distributed through United Artists?" Answer: Yes, if those pictures were contracted for.

Company Formed For Music Hall

The Radio City Music Hall Corporation, chartered at Albany late last week, has been formed to operate the Music Hall in New York, with employees of the theatre having representation. The corporation is headed by W. G. Van Schmus, who will continue as managing director of the theatre, and take the post of president of the corporation.

Elected vice-presidents of the company are Webster B. Todd, who is a member of the board of managers of Rockefeller Center, and Leon Leonidoff, senior producer of the Music Hall stage shows. G. S. Eysell, also an employee, is secretary, and Russell V. Downing, former comptroller, is treasurer.

The board of directors is composed of Merlin Hall Aylesworth, president of the National Broadcasting Company, chairman; David Sarnoff, president of RCA; Francis T. Christie, executive vice-president of Rockefeller Center, Mr. Todd and Mr. Van Schmus. RCA and Rockefeller Center each have a half interest in the new Music Hall company.

Rosenblatt to Hear Operator Pay Issue

Sol A. Rosenblatt, NRA compliance director, this week accepted an invitation of members of the exhibitor labor committee, appointed by him in September to investigate projectionists' wage scales in metropolitan New York, to discuss the situation. The committee, appointed with a view to developing a standard pay and hour schedule, reported to Mr. Rosenblatt that it had gone as far as it could. He advised them he would go to New York as soon as possible after his return to Washington from Los Angeles, probably late next week, and would be prepared to spend an entire day discussing the problem.

Unions having no direct connection with a specific controversy cannot claim any rights under Section 7-A of the National Industrial Recovery Act in New York under the terms of a ruling of the court of appeals in the Local 306-Independent Theatre Owners' Association suit just decided in Albany.

The ITOA of Southern California is marshaling exhibitors for a campaign against operators' wage scales upheld by the local NRA compliance board.

In Omaha the three first-run A. H. Blank houses last week signed an agreement with the operators' union calling for increases of $15 a booth for one year and an additional increase of $10 for the year following.

Kent Discusses G-B Stock Sale

Sidney R. Kent, president of Fox, is discussing, in London, the sale of Fox Films' 49 per cent interest in Gaumont-British with Lord Beaverbrook, and no longer with John Maxwell of British International, it was indicated from London late last week. Lord Beaverbrook was important in the original holding company, selling the Provincial Cinematograph Theatres, Ltd., large circuit, to Gaumont-British, thus forming the hub of the widespread British circuit. If the negotiations are closed Beaverbrook would become owner of virtually a half interest in Gaumont-British.

Jeffrey Bernerd, general manager, will not leave for the United States until sometime in January, he declared in London late last week. The National Geographic Society is sponsoring the Washington, D. C., premiere of Gaumont's "Man of Aran," produced off the Irish coast by Robert Flaherty, on Friday of this week at the Society's auditorium, with an invited audience. Dr. Robert Cushman Murphy, of the American Museum of Natural History, is to deliver an accompanying lecture.

Kenneth Hodkinson has been named sales manager for Gaumont in San Francisco. The company has signed Maurice Sigler, Al Hoffman and Albert Goodheart, song writers, to write special numbers for Less Allen, Gaumont star.

Kent Holds Fox Sales Meeting in London

Sidney R. Kent, president of Fox, late last week in London held a two-day sales meeting with Walter Hutchinson and J. C. Bavetta, as well as other foreign executives of the company.

Subject Used in Safety Campaign

Through the cooperation of theatre owners of New York, including major circuits and independents, the animated short subject in three-color Technicolor, "Once Upon A Time," produced by Audio Productions for the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company as a safety promotion measure, has been shown in almost all Broadway houses, as part of the safety campaign sponsored by the New York police department, headed by Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine. (Subject reviewed, November 24, page 46, MOTION PICTURE HERALD.)

The film is available to exhibitors free of charge from the Welfare Division, Metropolitan Life Insurance Company. A full line of accessories has been prepared. The film was directed by F. Lyle Goldman, with the musical score written by Edwin Ludig.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

BLIND DATE: Ann Sothern—Fair little program picture. Played Nov. 10.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

BLIND DATE: Ann Sothern, Neil Hamilton, Paul Kelly, Mickey Rooney—A very good program picture. Played on a double bill and gave satisfaction. The acting very good, and story average with the picture stories of today.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

FIGHTING RANGER, THE: Buck Jones—A good western that pleased a better than usual week end crowd. Played Oct. 12-13.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

IT HAPPENED ONE NIGHT: Clark Gable, Claudette Colbert—The first good crowd we've had in some time. Everyone knew about this picture and came out. Don't know where from, but they were there just the same and they didn't fail to praise us for showing this type of entertainment. Running time, 105 minutes. Played Nov. 17-18.—B. A. McConnell, Emerson Theatre, Hartford, Ark. Mining town patronage.

LADY BY CHOICE: May Robson, Carole Lombard—If "Lady for a Day" meant anything to you, then you want to grab this picture quick and put it on your best playing time. Walter Connolly is great, Carole Lombard is at her very best, but it is May Robson's picture first and last. She is grand. Played Nov. 14-15.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

LINE-UP, THE: William Gargan, Marian Nixon—A program picture that did less than average business on bargain nights. Running time, 65 minutes. Played Nov. 13-14.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

NAME THE WOMAN: Arline Judge, Richard Cromwell—Fair little newspaper story, of a none too bright reporter, who gets brighter as the film ends. However, the folks seemed to like it. Played Nov. 13-14.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

NO GREATER GLORY: Frankie Darro, Lois Wilson—Although we played this picture late, we had a satisfactory run on this picture. Played under auspices of local PTA and they put it over for us. Properly sold, this picture will produce business. Wrong selling of this picture will result in a total flop. A perfectly grand picture. Running time, 78 minutes. Played Nov. 8-9.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

ONCE TO EVERY WOMAN: Fay Wray, Walter Connolly, Ralph Bellamy—Not much comedy in this one. A story of the hospital, nurses and doctors, but drew better than I thought it would. Played Nov. 7-8.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

STRAIGHTAWAY: Tim McCoy—An action picture that drew better than average crowd. Favorably received by the Saturday crowd. Running time, 60 minutes. Played Nov. 3.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

WHIRLPOOL: Jack Holt—Average program picture that failed to draw on bargain nights. Business below average. Running time, 74 minutes. Played Oct. 30-31.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

WHIRLPOOL: Jack Holt, Lila Lee—The customers voted unanimously that this was an exceptionally good presentation. Jack Holt and Lila Lee were both excellent. Business normal. Played Nov. 17.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

WHOM THE GODS DESTROY: Walter Connolly—Very unrealistic story with Connolly, as usual, doing a nice piece of acting. But it pleased the customers and that's that. Played Nov. 17.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

First National

BRITISH AGENT: Kay Francis, Leslie Howard—A finely produced picture that did not do more than average business at the box-office. Drew some that are not regular patrons but kept away many of the regulars. Picture is produced in the special class and finely mounted but will draw only program business. Running time, 77 minutes. Played Nov. 15-16.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

BRITISH AGENT: Kay Francis, Leslie Howard—A good spy picture that failed miserably at the box office.—A. L. Lighter, Orpheum Theatre, Mellen, Wis. Small town patronage.

GOODBYE AGAIN: Warren William, Joan Blondell—Rather poor. A few laughs, but on the whole very silly. But people seemed to like it. Played Nov. 13-15.—Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Racine, Ideal Theatre, Burns, Ore. Small town patronage.

MIDNIGHT ALIBI: Richard Barthelmess, Ann Dvorak—A good picture of its kind but it did not mean much in this town.—A. L. Lighter, Orpheum Theatre, Mellen, Wis. Small town patronage.

TWENTY MILLION SWEETHEARTS: Dick Powell, Ginger Rogers—Picked this one up when I bought Warner this year and it grossed more business than any in several weeks. Everyone pleased.—C. M. Hartman, Liberty Theatre, Carnegie, Okla. Small town patronage.

Fox

CARAVAN: Loretta Young, Charles Boyer—A pain in the neck for small towns. A couple of swell tunes wasted. It takes more than a tune to make a picture. Audience reaction: lots of action—walking out.—C. M. Hartman, Liberty Theatre, Carnegie, Okla. Small town patronage.

CARAVAN: Charles Boyer, Jean Parker, Loretta Young—Played Sunday for three-day run. Poor picture for small town patronage.—Martin S. Lane, Logan Theatre, Noblesville, Ind. General patronage.

CAT'S PAW, THE: Harold Lloyd—Seemed to please those that saw it, but didn't have any great draw at the box office. The musical background seemed too loud when Lloyd was speaking. The last few scenes were good. Played Nov. 10-11.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

CAT'S PAW, THE: Harold Lloyd, Una Merkel—It pleased only average business. However, not as many hearty laughs as expected from Lloyd. Picture has a good story and they go away satisfied.—C. M. Hartman, Liberty Theatre, Carnegie, Okla. Small town patronage.

CHANGE OF HEART: Janet Gaynor, Charles Farrell—A very fine picture, liked by everyone. Running time, 76 minutes. Played Oct. 14-15.—A. W. Fitzgerald, Princess Theatre, Miller, S. D. Small town patronage.

CHANGE OF HEART: Janet Gaynor, Charles Farrell—We thought this one of the best from this pair. James Dunn is splendid and furnishes lots of laughs. This pleased our patrons. Played Nov. 4-5.—Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Racine, Ideal Theatre, Burns, Ore. Small town patronage.

CHANGE OF HEART: Janet Gaynor, Charles Farrell, James Dunn, Ginger Rogers—Played this old, but am not sorry. A nice little down-to-earth story that pleased everyone that saw it. Played Nov. 11.—B. J. Vanderby, Palace Theatre, Doland, S. Dak. Small town and rural patronage.

DAVID HARUM: Will Rogers, Louise Dresser, Evelyn Venable, Kent Taylor, Stepin Fetchit, Noah Beery—A show that will draw them in in any man's town. It brings in the whole family because, like all Rogers pictures, he knows enough about what the public wants to keep his pictures down to earth. Keep him off the air and out of the papers and I think he would last forever. As it is, the public is soon going to tire of him. Running time, 80 minutes.

Played Oct. 25.—B. J. Vanderby, Palace Theatre, Doland, S. D. Small town and rural patronage.

DOCTOR BULL: Will Rogers, Marian Nixon, Louise Dresser—We thought Doctor Bull would be just another Will Rogers picture but to our amazement it turned out to be a swell picture. We played it for a Friday and Saturday picture and we had a wonderful turnout. This one pleased our patrons 100 per cent. All the kids went for this one in a big way. Doctor Bull is truly a great family picture. Played Oct. 12-13.—Ivan Ashcraft, Midway Theatre, Protection, Kan. General patronage.

GRAND CANARY: Warner Baxter—This fell flat, although Baxter is one of this town's favorite stars. They didn't come out to see this picture. Slow moving English story.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

HANDY ANDY: Will Rogers—A very good Will Rogers picture. Sure to please everyone. Running time, 81 minutes.—A. W. Fitzgerald, Princess Theatre, Miller, S. D. Small town patronage.

HANDY ANDY: Will Rogers—When Will Rogers is the star you know it is a good production. This one is rather funnier than the ordinary Rogers picture. Pleased everybody, young and old. Played Nov. 3.—George Lodge, Green Lantern Theatre, Claymont, Del. Small town patronage.

HANDY ANDY: Will Rogers, Peggy Wood—This is a very good picture that will please everyone. It is a typical Will Rogers picture, and he is the whole show. It is a comedy, well acted and directed, and is good entertainment for the entire family. The closing situation in which Rogers plays Tarzan is the best part of the show and full of laughs. We played this two days to very good business and pleased 100 per cent. Running time, 81 minutes. Played Nov. 12-13.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

JUDGE PRIEST: Will Rogers—It's a honey, and there is plenty in it besides Will Rogers. Not that we don't like Bill, because we do, but he is one actor that says put in all the support you have and if they can take the picture it's OK. Personally think this his best since "They Had to See Paris." Played Nov. 15-16.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

JUDGE PRIEST: Will Rogers—His best in a long time. You Southern exhibitors should break your house record for years. Rogers is a Kentucky judge, and Stepin Fetchit helps plenty in the fun in the best part he ever had. Running time, 80 minutes. Played Nov. 11-13.—M. P. Foster, New Granada Theatre, Monte Vista, Col. General patronage.

JUDGE PRIEST: Will Rogers—Will always does right by us. A good small town picture. Pleased all. Better than average business.—C. M. Hartman, Liberty Theatre, Carnegie, Okla. Small town patronage.

JUDGE PRIEST: Will Rogers—Opened on Sunday and held strong for six days instead of the usual three. Highly acclaimed as all Rogers' pictures are. Not as much Will as usual, but good casting made up for the loss.—Martin S. Lane, Logan Theatre, Noblesville, Ind. General patronage.

MARIE GALANTE: Ketti Gallian, Spencer Tracy—And still we say, whenever a producer says he has a big one, just forget it. Were expecting something out of the ordinary in this one and received one of the slowest pictures in days. Ketti shows promise, but the one bright spot was the singing of some fellow—name can't be located in the press sheet. Played Nov. 11-12.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

NOW I'LL TELL: Spencer Tracy—A dandy program picture. Spencer Tracy doesn't draw for us, but he is good in this show. Patrons liked this show. It isn't big but it is good. It has thrills, and a good story. Played Oct. 26-27.—Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Racine, Ideal Theatre, Burns, Ore. Small town patronage.

PECK'S BAD BOY: Jackie Cooper, Thomas Meighan—Kids and grandparents accompanied by four non-paying kids under six packed the house, but after the Sunday afternoon jam was over, it hit bottom. Just can't get them in on the kid stuff any more, and this picture was in the highest price classification, too. Am afraid they're overdoing this "classic thing." They're clean, but haven't the modern kick for those between 16 and 40. Running time, 70 minutes.—M. P. Foster, New Granada Theatre, Monte Vista, Col. General patronage.

SHE LEARNED ABOUT SAILORS: Alice Faye, Lew Ayres—Went over to good business and had a lot of good comments on it. Made an ideal Friday-Saturday attraction.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

SHE LEARNED ABOUT SAILORS: Lew Ayres, Alice Faye—Good entertainment with lots of laughs. Drew well and pleased everyone. Played Oct. 19-20.—Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Racine, Ideal Theatre, Burns, Ore. Small town patronage.

365 NIGHTS IN HOLLYWOOD: James Dunn, Alice Faye, Mitchell and Durant—Two nights was too long for this one. Jimmy Dunn miscast again and this Mitchell and Durant are another pair of radio stars that when seen on the screen are very unfunny. In fact, they are worse than that. They are an acute pain in the neck to every part of the anatomy that I know of. When will the producers learn that it is easy to turn off what you don't like on radio, but on the screen it is impossible to get out from under the punishment of two comedians that are not funny in a picture. Jimmy Durante, Ed Wynn are another pair that have been inflicted on us from time to time that don't add a thing to the picture. This Metro learned in "The Crier." It is a "cluck" of the first water.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

WORLD MOVES ON, THE: Madeleine Carroll, Franchot Tone—No good for small towns. Liked by a few but most of them were dissatisfied. Business nose-dived after the first day.—C. M. Hartman, Liberty Theatre, Carnegie, Okla. Small town patronage.

MGM

CHAINED: Joan Crawford, Clark Gable, Stuart Erwin, Otto Kruger—Of course, they come for this pair and Clark goes ga-ga about Joan and, of course, there is a husband in the way, but Gable and Crawford in some scenes are so ga-ga that they are plain silly. The great he-man lover and his flame will be through if they don't get something better than this one. Joan parts one man from his wife and then Gable takes her from him. That is the story, with all the accompanying business that goes with these tales of the great love for each other. How many times has it been done, I ask you. "Stu" Erwin furnishes what little comedy there is. Kruger is the self-sacrificing husband who realizes the great love that was theirs. I could write the scenario myself.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

CHAINED: Joan Crawford, Clark Gable—Picture pleased and did above average business. Well acted and directed. Pleased the fans so we're pleased. Running time, 74 minutes. Played Oct. 21-22.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

GIRL FROM MISSOURI: Jean Harlow—Although we played this one late it drew fairly well and pleased the patrons. Business average and favorable comment. Running time, 74 minutes. Played Nov. 1-2.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

HIDEOUT: Robert Montgomery, Maureen O'Sullivan—One of the sweetest pictures we have run in a long time. Cleverly directed and excellent story material. Although Montgomery has not been a drawing attraction in the past, he certainly scored in this picture. You can shoot the works on this picture and they will come and go away pleased. Business average. Running time, 82 minutes. Played Nov. 4-5.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

HIDEOUT: Robert Montgomery, Maureen O'Sullivan—A very good program picture. Good story and well acted. Gave good satisfaction but did not draw any extra business. But a splendid entertainment and clean. Running time, 82 minutes. Played November 13-14.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

MANHATTAN MELODRAMA: Clark Gable, William Powell, Myrna Loy—Exceptionally fine production. The kind of a story and acting that will bring a lump to your throat. Too sad for some of the women, but we had many good comments. Drew well and pleased the majority. Good enough for your best dates. Played Nov. 9-10.—Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Racine, Ideal Theatre, Burns, Ore. Small town patronage.

MANHATTAN MELODRAMA: Clark Gable, William Powell, Myrna Loy—A very good production. Fine work by all three stars. Running time, 95 minutes.—A. W. Fitzgerald, Princess Theatre, Miller, S. D. Small town patronage.

MEN IN WHITE: Clark Gable—Good. Patrons disagreed on this. Some liked it extremely well but some didn't. Said it was too real. But we believe it pleased the majority. Played Oct. 14-15.—Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Racine, Ideal Theatre, Burns, Ore. Small town patronage.

OPERATOR 13: Marion Davies, Gary Cooper—Another swell picture from Metro that clicked with the patrons. Business not anything to rave about, but the customers liked the picture. A nice pair to work together. Running time, 86 minutes. Played Oct. 31.—B. A. McConnell, Emerson Theatre, Hartford, Ark. Mining town patronage.

PARIS INTERLUDE: Otto Kruger, Madge Evans—No good. Just a picture. The box-office said poor.—A. L. Lighter, Orpheum Theatre, Mellen, Wis. Small town patronage.

STAMBOUL QUEST: Myrna Loy, George Brent—

Very good. A spy story that pleased. It failed, however, to draw average audience.—A. L. Lighter, Orpheum Theatre, Mellen, Wis. Small town patronage.

STRAIGHT IS THE WAY: Franchot Tone, May Robson—A very weak picture that didn't draw and didn't please. No interest whatever in this picture. Very disappointing as I expected Franchot Tone to draw. Running time, 57 minutes. Played Oct. 25-26.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

TARZAN AND HIS MATE: Johnny Weismuller, Maureen O'Sullivan—A dandy thrill picture. Our patrons liked this and told us so. Appeals especially to children and men. Had some walkouts. Played Oct. 21-22.—Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Racine, Ideal Theatre, Burns, Ore. Small town patronage.

THIN MAN, THE: William Powell, Myrna Loy—Played this one late but did average Sunday-Monday business. Picture created exceptionally fine comment. Pleased 100 per cent. Running time, 91 minutes. Played Nov. 11-12.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

VIVA VILLA! Wallace Beery—A fine historical picture, with a big cast, well produced. Running time, 116 minutes.—A. W. Fitzgerald, Princess Theatre, Miller, S. D. Small town patronage.

VIVA VILLA! Wallace Beery—A great production. It is real and Wallace Beery lives his role. Patrons disagreed on this, but all the men liked it and most of them thought it was the best show ever. Women as a rule didn't like it. Thought it was too brutal. Many women stayed away during this showing, while the men came, so business wasn't as good as it should have been. Played Oct. 28-29.—Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Racine, Ideal Theatre, Burns, Ore. Small town patronage.

YOU CAN'T BUY EVERYTHING: May Robson, Jean Parker—A peach of a picture, that pleased 100 per cent. Running time, 85 minutes. Played Nov. 7.—B. A. McConnell, Emerson Theatre, Hartford, Ark. Mining town patronage.

Monogram

DIAMOND TRAIL, THE: Rex Bell—This semi-western sure pleased my patrons; received good print.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

GIRL OF THE LIMBERLOST: Marian Marsh, Louise Dresser—"Girl of the Limberlost," a story of Indiana marshlands, was translated from Gene Stratton Porter's most notable literary achievement into the finest, upstanding portrayal of heart throbbing drama to receive such an array of praise from all types of audiences in attendance. Such complimentary, true to life performances were rendered by various members in the cast that it would be exceedingly difficult to pronounce the most outstanding performer. The screen adaptation is perfect with comedy included in the most strategic portion to relieve any undue tension that may occur. Considered as one of Monogram's best releases. Monogram is climbing to the front with the foremost, utterly excluding that well-known telltale word "perhaps." Fair business against heavy opposition. Running time, 83 minutes. Played Nov. 11-13.—William Dabb, Lyric Theatre, Shenandoah, Pa. Small town patronage.

GIRL OF THE LIMBERLOST: Marian Marsh—Here is a picture that is a natural for the small town. Monogram has put a lot of excellent work into this picture and the result is a picture that is worthy of any producer. Business above average with a lot of favorable comment and also a lot of people who haven't been in the theatre in months. Running time, 76 minutes. Played Oct. 14-15.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

GIRL OF THE LIMBERLOST: Marian Marsh, Ralph Morgan, Louise Dresser, H. B. Walthall—This is a 100 per cent picture for us guys out in the sticks. Drew people that had quit going to picture shows and pleased them, too. Very clean and entertaining; satisfied them all. Very good acting by the whole cast. All stars in this picture, as none of the parts were overdone, but well done. Give us more of this kind. Played Nov. 18-19.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

JANE EYRE: Colin Clive, Virginia Bruce—Hats off to Monogram for one of the best pictures of the season. This is a dramatic romance, based on the book of the same name. The locale is rural England and it is a costume picture. It is the story of a woman, her life from childhood to maturity, and offers good entertainment for the entire family. The directing and acting are perfect. Played one day to very good business. Running time, 64 minutes. Played Nov. 14.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

JANE EYRE: Virginia Bruce, Colin Clive, Aileen Pringle—A splendid picture, clean and entertaining. Story old-fashioned, but just what the picture business needs to bring the picture show business out of the mud it has been forced into and ruined by demoralizing pictures. Everyone satisfied and told us so as they went out.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

business. Pleased the Saturday crowd 100 per cent. Running time, 55 minutes. Played Nov. 17.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

Paramount

BELLE OF THE NINETIES: Mae West—An OK Mae West film. It will please the West following. Played Nov. 4-5.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

BELLE OF THE NINETIES: Mae West—A good Mae West picture, liked by everyone. Running time, 75 minutes.—A. W. Fitzgerald, Princes Theatre, Miller, S. D. Small town patronage.

BELLE OF THE NINETIES: Mae West—This expurgated edition of "It Ain't No Sin" did a very satisfactory business. While some were disappointed, the majority were satisfied. The funny thing about the Mae West pictures is that the people who claim they don't like her always come to see the picture. Running time, 75 minutes. Played Oct. 18-19.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

CRIME WITHOUT PASSION: Claude Rains—A picture that I personally liked because it is different from anything I have seen on the screen. However, the patrons did not like it. Did better than average business the first day, but the second day was nil. Pleased about 10 per cent of the patrons; the rest panned it. Over the heads of the average movie fan. Below average business on bargain nights. Running time, 70 minutes. Played Nov. 6-7.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

DEATH TAKES A HOLIDAY: Fredric March—Splendid acting and an absorbing and unusual story. Patrons disagreed on this. Some thought it was the finest show they had seen for a long time, but others didn't like it at all. Morbid and unreal but personally thought it was great. Those that did like it were loud in their praise. Played Oct. 16-18.—Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Racine, Ideal Theatre, Burns, Ore. Small town patronage.

GOLDEN HARVEST: Chester Morris—A little old, but still a swell small town picture with a swell title for this time of the year. Good business and a lot of good comments, which is what we like to hear. Running time, 69 minutes. Played Oct. 19-20.—W. F. Diestelmeier and C. M. Ross, Lena Theatre, Lena, Ill. Small town patronage.

GREAT FLIRTATION, THE: Adolphe Menjou—Rather poor. Did not draw and people did not like it. Lots of walkouts. Played Nov. 6-8.—Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Racine, Ideal Theatre, Burns, Ore. Small town patronage.

KISS AND MAKE UP: Cary Grant, Genevieve Tobin—Played two-day run on midweek bill. Light, fast moving comedy. Edward Everett Horton and Helen Mack top the cast. Should be worth a try on any mid-week program.—Martin S. Lane, Logan Theatre, Noblesville, Ind. General patronage.

LADIES SHOULD LISTEN: Cary Grant, Frances Drake—A very clever light comedy that brought favorable comment. Nothing to get out and rave about, but nothing to be ashamed of. Played on bargain nights to average business. Running time, 60 minutes. Played Oct. 23-24.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

LADIES SHOULD LISTEN: Cary Grant, Frances Drake—Very satisfactory performance, but our business was hit by rain and sleet. Played Nov. 7-8.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

LITTLE MISS MARKER: Shirley Temple, Adolphe Menjou—Marvelous entertainment for anyone. Shirley tops the cast with her best performance to date. Hats off to Doman Runyon stories. Gave photos at matinee.—Martin S. Lane, Logan Theatre, Noblesville, Ind. General patronage.

LITTLE MISS MARKER: Shirley Temple, Adolphe Menjou—This surely came up to expectations. It is real entertainment. Had an average crowd, however, due to the fact that so many of our patrons were out of town over the holiday. Played Nov. 11-12.—Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Racine, Ideal Theatre, Burns, Ore. Small town patronage.

LITTLE MISS MARKER: Shirley Temple, Adolphe Menjou, Charles Bickford, Warren Hymer—One swell show. This Temple kid will put money in any box office. She has everything needed to bring the whole family in. I suppose now they will make so many of her they will run her to death. Everyone liked it. Played Sept. 30.—B. J. Vanderby, Palace Theatre, Doland, S. D. Small town and rural patronage.

LONE COWBOY: Jackie Cooper—Played this very old, but it's still good for any small town. Pleased both young and old and I did not hear a single kick on it. Played Nov. 1.—B. J. Vanderby, Palace Theatre, Doland, S. D. Small town and rural patronage.

It's pretty tough for film salesmen to keep their minds on their business when Constance Clare Miller, 16 months, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Miller of the Lyric theatre at Atkinson, Neb., invades the theatre office. It's even said that when the HERALD arrives, Constance Clare turns first to the pages of "What the Picture Did for Me", to which Mr. Miller is a regular contributor.

MANY HAPPY RETURNS: Gracie Allen, George Burns, George Barbier, Joan Marsh, Veloz and Yolanda, Guy Lombardo and his Royal Canadians—A good show as Burns and Allen go. If your fans go for them, it will please. Played Oct. 4.—B. J. Vanderby, Palace Theatre, Doland, S. D. Small town and rural patronage.

NO MORE WOMEN: Edmund Lowe, Victor McLaglen—Just a fair program picture. Played Oct. 24.—A. W. Fitzgerald, Princess Theatre, Miller, S. D. Small town patronage.

OLD FASHIONED WAY: W. C. Fields—One of Fields' best pictures. Running time, 71 minutes.—A. W. Fitzgerald, Princess Theatre, Miller, S. D. Small town patronage.

OLD-FASHIONED WAY, THE: W. C. Fields, Baby LeRoy, Judith Allen—The best Fields picture yet. If they go for slap stick comedy, they will eat this one up. Of course, it's the usual Fields stuff, but still makes good small town fare. Played Oct. 21.—B. J. Vanderby, Palace Theatre, Doland, S. D. Small town and rural patronage.

PRIVATE SCANDAL: Mary Brian, Phillips Holmes, Zasu Pitts, Ned Sparks—A fair program picture; comedy drama. Running time, 65 minutes.—A. W. Fitzgerald, Princess Theatre, Miller, S. D. Small town patronage.

PRIVATE SCANDAL: Zasu Pitts, Mary Brian, Phillips Holmes—Fair. Some good laughs but parts of it are very silly. Drew well. We played it on a bargain night, so it got by. Played Oct. 30-31-Nov. 1.—Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Racine, Ideal Theatre, Burns, Ore. Small town patronage.

SCARLET EMPRESS, THE: Marlene Dietrich—What a picture, what direction and what a musical score. But in spite of all the time and money that has been spent on this picture it didn't do the business. Started off fair but by the time the word had gotten around, the second night was bad. Not the fault of the picture, however; just that it is over the heads of 85 per cent of the fans. Those who liked it raved about it, but the other 85 per cent said things that can't be printed. Business below average. Running time, 100 minutes. Played Nov. 18-19.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

SHE LOVES ME NOT: Bing Crosby, Miriam Hopkins—A very acceptable film fare for our audiences. Favorable comment and business above average. Best acting that Crosby has done so far. Running time, 85 minutes. Played Oct. 28-29.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

SHOOT THE WORKS: Ben Bernie, Jack Oakie—A fine musical comedy. Pleased everyone.—A. W. Fitzgerald, Princess Theatre, Miller, S. D. Small town patronage.

SHOOT THE WORKS: Jack Oakie, Ben Bernie, Dorothy Dell, Arline Judge, Alison Skipworth—A good show as program pictures go, but it's a good thing that Bernie was not expected to carry the show or it would have flopped. Played Oct. 14.—B. J. Vanderby, Palace Theatre, Doland, S. D. Small town and rural patronage.

THIRTY DAY PRINCESS: Sylvia Sidney, Cary Grant—Good entertainment. Some good laughs. A light but entertaining story. Pleased here. Played Oct. 23-25.—Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Racine, Ideal Theatre, Burns, Ore. Small town patronage.

THIRTY DAY PRINCESS: Sylvia Sidney, Cary Grant, Edward Arnold—A nice little program picture that seemed to please all who saw it. Played Oct. 7.—B. J. Vanderby, Palace Theatre, Doland, S. D. Small town and rural patronage.

TILLIE AND GUS: W. C. Fields—Here is a comedy that will go over in any community. At any rate it sure went over big here. The audience was laughing at every speech of Fields. His type of humor seems to please our patrons. Went over OK at box-office, too. Running time, 59 minutes. Played Nov. 2-3.—W. F. Diestelmeier and C. M. Ross, Lena Theatre, Lena, Ill. Small town patronage.

TO THE LAST MAN: Randolph Scott, Esther Ralston, Noah Beery, "Buster" Crabbe—A darn good action picture that will please all because it is not of the usual "shoot 'em up type." Book it with confidence and tell 'em it's better. Played Oct. 11.—B. J. Vanderby, Palace Theatre, Doland, S. D. Small town and rural patronage.

YOU'RE TELLING ME: W. C. Fields—This is good. Patrons laughing so much, think they missed some of the gags. Anyway, they caught enough of them to please 100 per cent. Business was slightly above average.—A. L. Lighter, Orpheum Theatre, Mellen, Wis. Small town patronage.

RKO

BACHELOR BAIT: Stuart Erwin, Pert Kelton—Nothing big, but gave general satisfaction. However, it did not draw for some unaccountable reason. Played Nov. 14-15.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

COCKEYED CAVALIERS: Wheeler and Woolsey—We used to play these comedians on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, but had to give them mid-week. It's funny, but not their funniest. Add these comments to what you've already read, and the total will be no better. Running time, 75 minutes. Played Nov. 15-16.—M. P. Foster, New Granada Theatre, Monte Vista, Col. General patronage.

DOWN TO THEIR LAST YACHT: Mary Boland, Polly Moran, Ned Sparks, Sidney Fox, Sidney Blackmer—Foey! Good acting on the part of the actors, but it must have had fifteen or twenty writers and directors, as just a few men could not have made that many mistakes. I would suggest that they all take up plumbing (my apologies to plumbers) and my congratulations to the artists who made the paper on it. I felt like standing in the lobby as they came out and saying, "Aha, we fooled you." Played Nov. 4.—B. J. Vanderby, Palace Theatre, Doland, S. D. Small town and rural patronage.

FLYING DOWN TO RIO: Dolores Del Rio, Ginger Rogers, Fred Astaire—We played this picture old, but it was liked just the same. Musical comedies have always gone over here—when there's any business to be had. Running time, 89 minutes. Played November 2.—B. A. McConnell, Emerson Theatre, Hartford, Ark. Mining town patronage.

FOUNTAIN, THE: Ann Harding—Boys, here is one that will have all the kids running to the toilet, all the men out smoking, all the women (the three of them) talking about the weather. Really one of the worst pictures for a small town that I've seen in a long time. Beware. Played November 12.—B. Levy, Central Theatre, Manville, R. I. Mill town patronage.

GAY DIVORCEE, THE: Ginger Rogers, Fred Astaire—The best musical I've ever played. Not a dull moment from start to finish. Will send your patrons out smiling. Give us more of Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers. Both will go a long way.—Jake Jones, Ritz Theatre, Shawnee, Okla. General patronage.

GRIDIRON FLASH: Eddie Quillan—Nothing big, but dandy program picture. Will do well Friday and Saturday.—Jake Jones, Ritz Theatre, Shawnee, Okla. General patronage.

GRIDIRON FLASH: Eddie Quillan, Betty Furness—A fairly good football picture that pleased a good Saturday crowd. Played November 16-17.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

LIFE OF VERGIE WINTERS, THE: Ann Harding, John Boles—A three-day run on this did not amount to a great deal. It's a good "sob" story.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

STINGAREE: Richard Dix, Irene Dunne—A fine picture, received many favorable comments. One fellow asked me to play it on a return engagement, said he saw it twice and wanted to see it again.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

THEIR BIG MOMENT: Zasu Pitts, Slim Summerville, Kay Johnson, Bruce Cabot—The best picture yet by Pitts-Summerville in the fact that it gets away from their usual tiresome brand of thin comedy and in its place has a really good story. A good program picture. Played November 8.—B. J. Vanderby, Palace Theatre, Doland, S. D. Small town and rural patronage.

THIS MAN IS MINE: Irene Dunne—Ninety-nine per cent talking, but a clever, sophisticated comedy drama. However, one day is plenty. Give 'em plenty of snappy shorts, as the only action in this is when the characters walk from chair to chair or go to the door, to let another one of the cast in to help with the talking. Running time, 72 minutes. Played November 14.—M. P. Foster, New Granada Theatre, Monte Vista, Col. General patronage.

WEDNESDAY'S CHILD: Karen Morley, Edward Arnold—Fine picture. Pleases the adults, if you can get them in. Used "La Cucaracha" with it and made fine program.—Jake Jones, Ritz Theatre, Shawnee, Okla. General patronage.

WE'RE RICH AGAIN: Marian Nixon, Billie Burke—This one was just a fair picture, and seemed to be well received by our patrons. Nothing big, but just a good, entertaining production of average drawing power. Played November 10.—George Lodge, Green Lantern Theatre, Claymont, Del. Small town patronage.

United Artists

AFFAIRS OF CELLINI, THE: Fredric March, Constance Bennett—This one did not please too well. If it had not been for Frank Morgan there would not have been a show at all. This one to me was just a mass of jumbled up film. This one ought to be put on the shelf to prevent more flops upon the exhibitors who play it. We really expected a picture that would draw a crowd and make a little money when we booked it. Fredric March and Constance Bennett did not come up to par in this one. Played October 14-15.—Ivan Ashcraft, Midway Theatre, Protection, Kan. General patronage.

BULLDOG DRUMMOND STRIKES BACK: Ronald Colman, Loretta Young—A very good mystery picture. We received the comment that it was the best mystery picture that we have shown for a long time. Ronald Colman did a swell job of acting in this one. We hope to have more like it soon. Played October 9-11.—Ivan Ashcraft, Midway Theatre, Protection, Kan. General patronage.

BULLDOG DRUMMOND STRIKES BACK: Ronald Colman, Loretta Young—The picture is gay, delightful comedy-mystery, but it didn't rouse any enthusiasm here. Business fell off to nothing the second night. Played November 11-13.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

HOUSE OF ROTHSCHILD, THE: George Arliss—This did better at the box office than we expected, and it pleased very much. The last reel in color helped to make this picture stand out in every one's mind.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

LOOKING FOR TROUBLE: Jack Oakie, Spencer Tracy—This is a very good picture that pleased all my patrons. It is a comedy with plenty of action, romance, comedy, drama and thrills. It is a story of two trouble-shooters in a large telephone exchange and will make good entertainment for the whole family. It is a little old, but we played one day to good business. Running time, 77 minutes. Played November 10.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

Universal

I'LL TELL THE WORLD: Lee Tracy—Lee Tracy is back again in this one wisecracking as usual. The same type of picture he has appeared in again and again, but that must be the way people want him to be. Went over at the box office and patrons thought it was all right. Everybody satisfied. Running time, 75 minutes. Played November 9-10.—W. F. Diestelmeier and C. M. Rose, Lena Theatre, Lena, Ill. Small town patronage.

LITTLE MAN, WHAT NOW?: Margaret Sullavan, Douglass Montgomery—This one was not up to our expectations. We expected a good picture, one that would really draw a big crowd. The best dates for this one is the middle of the week. It pleased about 75 per cent of the few who saw it. This one will not draw the crowd that is expected. The acting of Douglass Montgomery and Margaret Sullavan is only average. Played October 16-18.—Ivan Ashcraft, Midway Theatre, Protection, Kan. General patronage.

MILLION DOLLAR RANSOM: Phillips Holmes, Edward Arnold—Fair programmer. We used it on Saturday instead of regular western, and got by okay with serial and shorts. Running time, 60 minutes.—M. P. Foster, New Granada Theatre, Monte Vista, Col. General patronage.

MILLION DOLLAR RANSOM: Edward Arnold, Phillips Holmes—While this drew a little less than our normal Saturday night business, our patrons were well satisfied with the offering. Played November 10.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

POOR RICH, THE: Edna May Oliver, Edward Everett Horton—A real comedy that kept our patrons laughing all the way through. One of the best slapstick comedies we have shown this year. Played November 17.—George Lodge, Green Lantern Theatre, Claymont, Del. Small town patronage.

ROMANCE IN THE RAIN: Roger Pryor, Heather Angel—Fair little light entertainment that has a few moments. Played November 6-7.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

SMOKING GUNS: Ken Maynard—A good western. Plenty of action. Running time, 65 minutes.—R. W. Fitzgerald, Princess Theatre, Miller, S. D. Small town patronage.

STRAWBERRY ROAN: Ken Maynard—More good comments by the patrons than we ever got before. It is a real "horse opera" with plenty of interest maintained throughout, without half of the cast being shot up. It's a little old, but any exhibitor who has not played it would not regret showing it. Running time, 61 minutes. Played October 26-27.—W. F. Diestelmeier and C. R. Ross, Lena Theatre, Lena, Ill. Small town patronage.

THERE'S ALWAYS TOMORROW: Ralph Morgan, Binnie Barnes—A good domestic type picture. Clean, although there is another woman. Binnie Barnes is nice to look at and she does well in her first Universal picture. Played November 8-9.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

Warner Brothers

DAMES: Dick Powell, Ruby Keeler—While this is a very good production, it is far from Warner's musical standard. Had patrons tell us that Powell's singing tired them. Too much of it. Business was very ordinary.—A. L. Lighter, Orpheum Theatre, Mellen, Wis. Small town patronage.

DESIRABLE: Jean Muir, George Brent—Average program picture.—C. M. Hartman, Liberty Theatre, Carnegie, Okla. Small town patronage.

DESIRABLE: Jean Muir, George Brent—This is a very entertaining show and should please every patron. It is a comedy drama and is good entertainment for the family. It is expertly directed and the settings are excellent. The entire cast play their parts well and add much to the entertainment of the show. The trailer sold this one for us and we played on late Saturday show to good business. Running time, 68 minutes. Played November 10.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

DR. MONICA: Kay Francis, Warren William, Jean Muir, Verree Teasdale—A very fine picture interesting story and wonderful acting by the whole cast.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

FRIENDS OF MR. SWEENEY: Charles Ruggles—Very good. An evening of fun.—A. L. Lighter, Orpheum Theatre, Mellen, Wis. Small town patronage.

HERE COMES THE NAVY: James Cagney—Play this and watch results. It pleases and it draws.—A. L. Lighter, Orpheum Theatre, Mellen, Wis. Small town patronage.

HE WAS HER MAN: James Cagney, Joan Blondell—A very weak vehicle for these two popular stars. Played to average business on bargain nights. Running time, 70 minutes. Played October 16-17.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

LADY KILLER: James Cagney—Very good program picture. Some good laughs and enough action to make it suitable for Friday and Saturday. Played November 2-3.—Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Racine, Ideal Theatre, Burns, Ore. Small town patronage.

Short Features Columbia

LIFE'S LAST LAUGHS: 1934-35—These are very good one-reelers showing many unique and funny epitaphs inscribed on tombstones. This is something different and is presented in a way so as not to make it objectionable. Running time, eight minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

MARCH OF THE YEARS: Here is a series of one-reelers that please here.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin Mich. Small town patronage.

MICKEY'S TOUCHDOWN: Mickey McGuire—This is all right. The grown folks enjoyed it and all the kids stayed to see it twice. Running time, two reels.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

SCARPPY'S TOY SHOP: Scarppy Cartoon—Snap bang-up good cartoon. Good music and recording perfect. The kiddies all stayed to see it the second time. It has to be good for them to do that on an adult picture. Running time, 7 minutes.—B. A. McConnell, Emerson Theatre, Hartford, Ark. Mining town patronage.

STABLE MATES: Broadway Comedies—A real comedy filled with lots of laughs.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

BIG BUSINESS: Musical Comedies—Way past my idea of something funny.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

DOMESTIC BLISS-TERS: Marriage Wows Series—This is only fair entertainment of the slapstick variety. The laughs are few in the two reels and many of my customers walked out before the first reel was over. Educational should produce better shorts than these if they continue in business. Running time, 18 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

DREAM HOUSE: Bing Crosby—It doesn't do Bing any good.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

GOOD SCOUT, A: Tom Howard—The best Tom Howard comedy. If laughing spells anything, my audience like this one. Running time, 19 minutes.—Harold Hauben, Cozy Theatre, Lockwood, Mo. General patronage.

MOUNTAIN MELODY: Song Hit Stories—This is so good that lots of people wished it had lasted two reels. Running time, one reel.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

WHY MULES LEAVE HOME: Terry-Toons—Good cartoon. Running time, one reel.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

MGM

FALLEN ARCHES: Charlie Chase—The usual Charley Chase comedy. Some liked it and some didn't. Running time, 19 minutes.—B. A. McConnell, Emerson Theatre, Hartford, Ark. Mining town patronage.

GOOD SCOUT: Willie Whopper—Another cartoon.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

HOLLAND IN TULIP TIME: FitzPatrick Travel-talk—This color short is one of the most beautiful ever on our screen.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

MIKE FRIGHT: Our Gang—The most entertaining Our Gang in some time. Glad to see them improving.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

ONE HORSE FARMERS: Todd and Kelly—The female Laurel and Hardy doing a little slapstick out in the sand country. Okay.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

Paramount

BETTY IN BLUNDERLAND: Betty Boop Cartoons—This is a very good comedy with music. It is a burlesque on "Alice in Wonderland" and pleased my patrons very much. The kids are sure to like this and many of the adults also. Running time, eight minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

KEEPS RAININ' ALL THE TIME: Screen Song—Nothing extra, only fair.—Sammie Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

ONE AWFUL NIGHT: Pallette-Catlett—Here is a fair comedy, but not as good as these stars could do. Merely satisfactory. Running time, 21 minutes.—W. F. Diestelmeier and C. M. Ross, Lena Theatre, Lena, Ill. Small town patronage.

ON ICE: Harry Langdon—Harry Langdon usually gets a laugh out of every one if he is not played too often. Satisfactory. Running time, 21 minutes.—W. F. Diestelmeier and C. M. Ross, Lena Theatre, Lena, Ill. Small town patronage.

POPEYE, THE SAILOR: These cartoons are very good. My people like them.—Sammie Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

WHERE'S THAT TIGER?: Borrah Minnevit—Any short from the Headliner series is a natural. Good stars and numbers are presented in them all. This harmonica novelty is plenty good. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. F. Diestelmeier and C. M. Ross, Lena Theatre, Lena, Ill. Small town patronage.

RKO

GRANDFATHER'S CLOCK: Toddle Tale Cartoons—Something slightly different in cartoons and extra good. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

MICKEY'S GOLDEN RULE: Mickey McGuire Comedies are always good. It's a pleasure to show them. Running time, 18 minutes.—B. A. McConnell, Emerson Theatre, Hartford, Ark. Mining town patronage.

PASTRYTOWN WEDDING: Rainbow Parade Cartoons—A cartoon in color that is very enjoyable. Running time, one reel.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

PATHE REVIEW: No. 1—Some cowboy songs, optical illusions, and scenes of where the great composer Richard Wagner spent his life shown to the music of some of his better known compositions, make this a most interesting number. Running time, one reel.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

PATHE NEWS: 31—This time instead of the "Man on the Street" it's the "gals" on the street, telling just what they think of the Vanderbilt case. Very enlightening. If there is anything we like in a news-reel, it's this man-on-the-street idea. . . . Oh, Yeah? And we don't like that expression, either.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

PATHE TOPICS: The first of the "Pathe Topics" and it turned out to be the Pathe Review under another name, that's all. Scraps of this and that. Running time, 11 minutes.—M. P. Foster, New Granada Theatre, Monte Vista, Col. General patronage.

Universal

DEMI TASSE: Mentone—The way we like 'em. No attempt at plot. Just a straight bunch of extra good vaudeville acts that click with our crowd every time. We use this sort of material every Sunday and advertise Film Vaudeville and it helps the box office. Running time, 20 minutes.—M. P. Foster, New Granada Theatre, Monte Vista, Col. General patronage.

GOING PLACES: Lowell Thomas—First of the series, and good. Varied subjects in one reel, which is preferable to 10 minutes of one subject, unless outstanding and worth it. Running time, 10 minutes.—M. P. Foster, New Granada Theatre, Monte Vista, Col. General patronage.

HEARTBURN: Sterling Holloway—A fair comedy that has a few laughs. Absurd plot for even a comedy. Running time, 20 minutes.—W. F. Diestelmeier and C. M. Ross, Lena Theatre, Lena, Ill. Small town patronage.

KINGS UP: Oswald Cartoon—Good cartoon.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

VAUDEVILLE DAYS: Mentone—These vaudeville shorts in the Mentone series are okay with a lot of good acts that are only seen on the best stages. Will help build up any program. Running time, 20 minutes.—W. F. Diestelmeier and C. M. Ross, Lena Theatre, Lena, Ill. Small town patronage.

WILLIAM TELL: Oswald Cartoon—We have usually found Oswald cartoons to be good, but this one is not up to par with the others in our estimation. Running time, 9 minutes.—W. F. Diestelmeier and C. M. Ross, Lena Theatre, Lena, Ill. Small town patronage.

Warner-Vitaphone

JUST CONCENTRATE: Lulu McConnell—Luke-warm husband and wife act centering around a trick radio the wife bought. Just a few laughs. Running time, 10 minutes.—M. P. Foster, New Granada Theatre, Monte Vista, Col. General patronage.

MILLER'S DAUGHTER, THE: Merrie Melodies—Here is a cartoon comedy that should please every patron. This is just the type of entertainment that my patrons like and Vitaphone always gives the public what they want. Will make an excellent filler on any program. Running time, eight minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

MIRRORS: Freddy Rich and Orchestra—Entertaining musical act.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

MIRRORS: Melody Masters—This is a very good one-reel musical featuring Freddy Rich and his orchestra playing several popular selections. Vera Van sings two popular songs that pleased every one. This is good entertainment and this series always pleases our patrons. Running time, 11 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

MR. AND MRS. JESSE CRAWFORD: Pepper Pot—Good subject. Hope all of this new series will be as good. Don't let them revert to last year's standard. Running time, 10 minutes.—Don Kelsey, Lyric Theatre, Blacksburg, Va. College and small town patronage.

MR. AND MRS. JESSE CRAWFORD: Pepper Pot—Organ short that is pleasing, especially the photography of the trees.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

MOROCCO NIGHTS: Broadway Brevities Series—Technicolor musical comedy that is more comedy than music, but O. K. anywhere and they'll like it. Running time, 18 minutes.—M. P. Foster, Granada Theatre, Monte Vista, Colo. General patronage.

NOT TONIGHT, JOSEPHINE: Frank McHugh, Kitty Kelly—An excellent two-reel short in color. Comedy, dancing and singing. Coloring is beautiful. One of Vitaphone's best. Running time, two reels.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

OFF THE BEAT: Broadway Brevities—Entertaining musical.—J. G. Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

PAREE PAREE: Dorothy Stone—Fair little musical. J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

PHIL SPITALNY AND HIS MUSICAL QUEENS: Melody Masters—Extremely good musical reel. The Melody Master Series has always pleased. Patrons applauded, which is unusual here. Running time, 10 minutes.—Don Kelsey, Lyric Theatre, Blacksburg, Va. College and small town patronage.

PRIZE SAP, THE: Ben Blue—Very good two-reel short that got a lot of laughs. Running time, 20 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

RAMBLING 'ROUND RADIO ROW: Entertaining musical short.—J. G. Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

SONG OF FAME, THE: Ruth Etting—Extra good. Classy, too, with swell stair dancing and a rural Arkansas song act that is a scream. Running time, 20 minutes.—M. P. Foster, New Granada Theatre, Monte Vista, Col. General patronage.

TIM HAT HARMONY: Abe Lyman—This would have been ideal for Armistice Day as it is a splendid presentation of war songs. I'm sorry I did not have it November 11, but it is good any time. Running time, one reel.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

WINNAH, THE: Broadway Brevity. Collegiate musical comedy centering around basketball. Okay, but not extra good. Running time, 21 minutes.—M. P. Foster, New Granada Theatre, Monte Vista, Col. General patronage.

WINNAH, THE: Florence and Arthur Lake—A good comedy of college life, with good tap dancing and a pretty song or two.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

Serials
Principal

TARZAN, THE FEARLESS: Buster Crabbe—Have just completed this serial. The serial, in regard to production, acting and story, is very weak, but as a drawing card it's very strong. If you have not played it, by all means get it at once because it will make you a little extra money, at least it did for me. Running time, two reels each.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

J. C. JENKINS--His COLYUM

Claremore, Okla.

DEAR HERALD:

This is the home town of Will Rogers. When Will was born they started to build the town and today it is a right smart town. Just why Will was born there instead of Neligh, Nebraska, we don't know, but it doesn't matter, just so he was born somewhere. Claremore has two things she can be proud of, Will Rogers and F. H. Jackson, who manages the Yale theatre, and say Will, if you ever come back to Claremore don't fail to look up F. H. Jackson and if you don't say that he is one of the swellest fellows you ever met then we will buy you an all-day sucker and you can have your choice of the pups.

We met Mr. and Mrs. Jackson and another Jackson who is only about two weeks old, and listen, Ezra, we'd sooner have a baby like that than to have all of Oklahoma and part of Nebraska, including Lincoln, Kansas.

Medford is surrounded by wheatfields on the north, wheatfields on the east, wheatfields on the south and wheatfields on the west and a lot of cows. She also has W. T. Henderson, who operates the Alvo theatre, which are assets aplenty for one town. Medford reminds one very much of Chicago, Illinois, or Neligh, Nebraska, except that it isn't as large.

At Ponca City we met Jack McCollum, who operates the Roxy theatre. Ponca City has two very prominent gentlemen, Jack McCollum and a guy by the name of Marlan who recently was elected governor of Oklahoma by a majority that inclines one to think that Oklahoma is Democratic. Oh, yes, this is the town where Fred Pickrel lives, and Fred, you know, has been an officer in the Theatremen's Association for a long time, and that's because they couldn't find a better one to take his place. When we called, Fred was in bed. We stayed there and visited Jack for about an hour and Fred was still in bed. When we left, Fred was in bed, and there's no darn sense in a fellow putting in all of his life in bed when his friends come to see him. This is a week later and we hope Fred has got up.

Tough Job for Indian Chief

Pawhuska is an Indian name of a mighty good town. Ki-He-Kah is the name of a theatre operated by A. M. Abbott, and if you can pronounce the name of this theatre correctly the first time, Mr. Abbott will give you a free admission to his show (which is a good one). In case you don't know where "Ki-He-Kah" comes from we will tell you that it is the name of an Indian chief. We'll bet that chief never stood up under that name very long.

F. W. Lyman operates both the Lyric and Grand theatres at Vinita. They came very near being Missourians in this town. You can almost throw a rock over into Joplin. Maybe that's what makes Vinita such a good town, even if she is in Oklahoma.

Anyhow she has a swell manager of her theatres and that's all that is necessary.

If the Government is going to issue stock in that "Shelterbelt" project, which they are figuring on, we'd like to swap some Reliance Oil stock we hold for some of it. Of course, the Reliance Oil company is but a memory but the stock is beautiful, and one pipe dream is as good as another.

Ralph Talbot at Tulsa is all set for the winter. He has three theatres, and they are all first-run houses and they are all run in first-class shape. Maybe that's partly due to Mr. J. C. Hunter, who is his assistant operator, and maybe it's due to the lady in the office who handles the books. (Gosh, we wish we had her name.) Mr. Talbot needs no further recommendation when we tell you that he renewed his subscription to the HERALD for all of his houses. That goes to show that he stood at the head of his classes all through his school life.

At Tulsa we met Roy Avey. Some would call him a "film hound," but we will call him a gentleman, as that's the way he impressed us. He is a salesman for MGM and that's recommendation enough.

A Warning to Stettmund

Chandler is still one of the prominent towns of the state. That's largely due to Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Stettmund, who operate the H. & S. theatres. If Gerald writes to the HERALD and tell the boys that we got drunk and stole a lotta chickens while we were there we are going to go back and poison his dog Bluch. Gerald is always kicking about little things like that. Gerald is having "Bank Night" and he says his theatres won't hold 'em; that the crowd filled up the city auditorium and they overflowed into a cotton gin plant. When Gerald went to school his teacher failed to teach him that "truth crushed to earth will rise again." Gerald is connected with the Griffith boys in Oklahoma City, and whenever we find a man connected with these boys we don't need any further recommendation, for we have always found them ace high. The Griffith boys certainly know how to pick 'em.

Didja ever meet Al Powell of the Melba theatre at Guthrie? If you haven't, oh boy, you hain't never met nuthin' yet. Al also manages a Griffith house. When you meet Al you have met about the best there is, then after you have met Al you ought to go over to Cushing and meet Claude F. Motley, who also manages a Griffith house. In talking with Mr. Motley we were satisfied that he was never within gunshot of the penitentiary and never has been accused of being a bootlegger. No sir, not him. He gave us the impression of being a first-class gentleman. While you are in Cushing you should visit Mr. Hiram Duncan, who manages the Duncan theatre. You will find him "one of the boys" also. He was re-decorating his house when we called but he stopped long enough to renew his subscription to the HERALD.

We are not what you would call "a spring chicken," but do you know that we had missed half of our life by not meeting Mr. and Mrs. Enloe of the Criterion theatre at El Reno. We met them a few days ago and we have set that date down alongside Christmas and the Fourth of July as another day to be celebrated with turkey and firecrackers. El Reno is on highway 81, which runs from Winnipeg, Canada, to Mexico City, and when you are driving that highway you should make it a point to stop and visit these delightful folks. You will find it well worth your while. They invited us to stay to dinner with them, but we couldn't. Thanks, folks, for your kindness.

H. H. Holman and John A. Crawford manage the State at Weatherford, and when we say "manage" that's just what we mean. They know how to do it. From their action we judge that they are both Sooners.

If you are looking for people who are worthwhile when you get to Clinton, drop around to the Ritz theatre and meet Mr. and Mrs. Guthrie and you will send us your thanks for calling your attention to them. And don't forget C. C. Stanfield of the Rex theatre at Elk City. This is another Griffith house managed by an excellent manager who knows how.

Yes, It's a Big State

Then after you jump into Texas. (Gosh, but this is a big state.) Then when you get to McLean you should stop and get gas and meet Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Adams, who operate the American theatre. If all Texas folks are like these two we are glad we are over here and we will dislike to leave. They kicked because we hadn't called on 'em sooner. So we did. We hope we will not miss 'em next time.

Roy McAmos operates the Princess at Sayre and another theatre at Erick. It keeps him busy. He wanted us to go duck hunting with him when we were there before. Duck hunting to us is like eating huckleberry pie is to a tramp.

Amarillo, Texas

NOTE. Some boy in western Oklahoma wrote us a letter some time ago and jumped all over us for not calling on him. We wrote and said we would do so the next time we were in Oklahoma, but we have forgotten his name and the town. Listen, kid, we'd like to call on you but how can we if we can't even remember the town?

Raydon Completes First

Raydon Productions has just completed "Feud," a three-reeler, produced in the Ozark Mountains of Missouri and Arkansas with an entire cast of mountain natives. This is the first of series of adventure-story featurettes. Musical score is by the Reeves Sound Studios, N. Y.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

*An international association of showmen meeting weekly
in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress*

PERTINENT QUESTIONS

As interesting as are the conclusions of the United States Bureau of Census report of 1933 theatre grosses and payrolls, analyzed admirably in last week's MOTION PICTURE HERALD, the compilation could go further were the figures available in Washington. Important these findings are, no doubt, but they provoke a number of pertinent queries. For instance:

1. Of the $496,240,000 grossed in 1933 by 12,500 motion picture theatres, how much of this total was amassed by the circuits and how much by the independents?
2. What part of the $496,240,000 grossed in 1933 by the 12,500 motion picture theatres was spent on all forms of theatre advertising?
3. Of the $102,000,000 spent in wages, what percentage went to those employees having to do with the advertising and publicizing of programs?
4. Was the percentage of theatre advertising expenditure in the 15 cities, listed as the principal money-makers, higher proportionately than in those spots making a lesser showing?
5. What percentages of the advertising appropriations were spent on newspapers, on radio, on outdoor advertising, on displays, on exploitations?

The right answers to the above questions should provide further profitable reading.

PENALIZING THE BOX OFFICE

Whether or not the monies expended on exploitation return 100 cents on the dollar, the fact remains that exhibitors who argue agin this method of advertising are kidding themselves and hampering their grosses. Granted that every manager is not a showman, that men who should know better are not entirely conscientious or practical in the budgeting of exploitation appropriations. But the defections of this small minority should not be allowed to penalize the efforts of countless showmen entirely familiar with and highly skilled in the operation of basic exploitation processes.

Unfortunately, there is a trend in certain quarters that is doing untold harm at the box office. Strongly opinionated exhibitor-employers have turned definite thumbs down on what they alone deem unnecessary advertising expenditures. The results speak for themselves.

REASONS FOR OPTIMISM

Authoritative reports have it that there is a distinct increase in the fluidity of ready funds available for the current Christmas spending, in some spots as much as 65 per cent over last year. The rising flood of new hard cash means a lot to the average manager who for too many Decembers has had only husks to sustain life in the anemic body of his box office.

It is quite fitting, therefore, at this time that we offer for the consideration of our readers the "Christmas Tree" business-building suggestions contributed entirely by members and set down on the three following pages.

With these scores of tested ideas, plus the opportunity of diverting sizable slices of the extra money in circulation to the theatre till, there is reason for the theatremen to be more optimistic of what the immediate future holds.

AGAIN THE PRESS BOOK

It may be noted that in the discussions of press book virtues and weaknesses, the home office side has not come off half-bad. By that we mean the forthright statements by ad heads Bob Gillham, of Paramount, and Herschel Stuart, of Columbia, answering our request for an expression on the press book article published in the issue of November 10. These executives have declared themselves in accord with the showmen.

The press book has always been a bone of contention and in the past more than a slight annoyance to the makers for the most part inexperienced in the theatre and unfamiliar with advertising and publicity needs. The inclusion of experienced theatremen on home office advertising staffs has helped considerably, but continued improvement cannot be expected unless managers make known, as Gillham states, "what they wish eliminated or what they wish added".

In "What the Picture Did For Me" section a few weeks back, commenting on Mae West, Herman J. Brown, able Nampa, Idaho, contributor waxed enthusiastic over the showmanship of the ebullient Mae, stating—"I would like to have her tell me her ideas of running a theatre."

Pu-leeze, Mr. Brown.

HOLIDAY IDEAS

A New Year's Eve Gag

Herman Bamberger, Paramount, North Adams, Mass., some years ago had house artist letter back side of old drop "Happy New Year," lettering fluttered. At ten seconds to midnight, house lights were put out, drop lowered and "Auld Lang Syne" put on non-synch. At exactly midnight, as operator threw flood on drop, record was started full volume.

New Year's Eve Show

Fred C. Souttar, Lincoln, Belleville, Ill., is planning wedding of colored couple on stage, which he has successfully used before. On same bill will be old time movie show with silent film, song and ad slides, usual film breaks, piano and drums in pit. Fred says this combination is a good draw and gives audience chance to let off plenty of steam.

Dancing School Revue

For the Sunday opening Christmas week and matinees daily up to day before Christmas, Souttar is planning a "Fairy Book" idea, talent to be supplied by local dancing school. "Old Woman in the Shoe" and other fairy characters will be presented.

Free Show for Poor

Howard Waugh, Warner Southern division manager, is arranging with local paper to entertain unfortunates living at Memphis Transient Bureau. Series of matinee shows are planned in conjunction with daily, which will publicize the idea. Besides being a good-will builder, shows are intended to help morale of charity cases.

Business Men's Association Tieup

Rudy Kuehn has just put over a successful Thanksgiving morning free show for local poor children at the Fabian, Hoboken, N. J., in connection with local business men's association which paid for all expenses including printing of special tickets distributed through Mayor's office to schools. In addition, each child was given small gift basket donated by local merchants. Special police and firemen details escorted children to and from theatre.

Broken Toy Matinee

J. M. Schoepel, Midwest, Oklahoma City, is working on special show, admission to which will be broken toys to be repaired

THEATREMEN INVITED TO SUGGEST SLANTS

Some weeks ago it was decided to inaugurate the Yuletide season in this issue with a "Christmas Tree" section to which managers would be invited to contribute various box office helps. Quite a number of the boys responded, submitting ideas that already have been used and others intended for early execution. These have been listed for information of showmen seeking ways and means to bolster grosses.

by fire department in time for Christmas distribution. Advertising of various kinds, including newspaper publicity, has built this event up to local importance.

Newspaper Toy Tiein

Frank LaFalce reports special matinee in all Washington, D. C., Warner theatres on Saturday before Christmas in conjunction with local paper, children being admitted for a new toy, or for article of wearing apparel. These are turned over to Community Chest agencies for distribution. Event is tremendous good will and publicity builder, last year nearly 30,000 toys having been collected.

House Staff Cooperates

Morris Rosenthal, Majestic, Bridgeport, Conn., suggests theatre employees volunteer to take care of a number of needy families with baskets of food, which usually rates news story and photo. Rosie also outlines matinee for children on welfare lists and broken toy-fire department tieup.

Percentage Benefit

Julius Lamm, Uptown, Cleveland, is working with progressive civic club for third year to arrange big stage show, talent to be promoted, club to receive 30 per cent of receipts and theatre paying all expenses. Club sells tickets to members, theatre staff also cooperating, Julius giving prizes for most tickets sold by club members and house employees.

In addition to this Julius is also putting on canned goods matinee, food to be turned over to same club for distribution.

Serial Club Show

E. C. Grady, Hoosier, Whiting, Ind., gives 50 free admissions on lucky number gag to children at Saturday shows and on Saturday, Dec. 22, will vary this with free presents from theatre Christmas tree instead. This will be held in conjunction with kid club Christmas party.

Holiday and Fashion Revue

Harry Black, Rialto and Empire, Glens Falls, N. Y., endorses local revues at Christmas and Easter and fashion shows in season, having found these very profitable. For inexpensive staging, Harry makes these suggestions:

Cloth drops can be enhanced by fluttered cover designs cut out by poster artist, stage ornamentations made the same way. Baby spots and ordinary store window floods can be borrowed, colored gelatins in same spotted in foots and overhead borders, added to standard equipment result in a pleasant lighting change.

Florist and Store Tieup

Louis Lamm, Capitol, Elyria, Ohio, is also planning his annual party for Saturday afternoon before Christmas with talent from dancing school and bag of promoted candy to each child. Tree in lobby will be supplied by florist and decorations donated.

Newspaper "Santa" Slant

Francis Deering, State, Memphis, Tenn., has arranged with local paper to take pictures of arrival of Santa Claus via plane, and annual Christmas parade, film to be shown at theatre, daily to pay all expenses and to carry strong publicity plugging the showing.

Francis has also arranged with another paper to sponsor a huge tree in lobby inviting public to deposit gifts for needy families. Stunt was used last year.

Smart Christmas Lobby

Francis Deering has planted a large cut-out Christmas tree of compo board in his lobby, beneath which is planted large boxes wrapped as holiday gifts, with titles of the coming pictures lettered on the boxes. Caption for the whole display along the lines of "Our Christmas Gift to You."

In addition to these Holiday Ideas contributed by the members in the past few weeks, it might be advisable to include various highlights on some of the angles suggested last year. These are credited largely to Round Tablers LaFalce, Copelan, Zimbalist, Feldman, Waugh, Stein, Smakwitz, Katz, Dannenburg, Hendricks, Orlove, Moss and Henger.

"Why I Shop Early"

To stimulate Christmas buying early in the month, a number of papers in different spots tied in with theatres on essay contests, passes given for the best 100-word or less answers to "Why I Shop Early."

Greeting Suggestions

Seasonal greeting cards to mailing list is another Botwick idea, as is night letters delivered on Christmas Day to prominent city officials and leading citizens.

Package Service

Invitations were extended by theatres via trailers and ads asking patrons to check Christmas packages while enjoying the show. This service was further announced on classified page and also put over via co-op pages. In some instances, theatremen have been able to plant government substation in lobby to sell stamps and accept packages for mailing. Special packaging service was also featured in other spots.

Tie-in Advertising

The drive made by toy departments everywhere last year on the cartoon comics such as Mickey Mouse, Popeye, Betty Boop, etc., continues this year. Many managers are tying in with stores to furnish life-sized cut-outs and animated figures of these cartoons for display and plugging theatre dates on these shorts in ads and windows.

Theatres ran "Shop Early" trailers for benefit of local stores in exchange for mention of attractions in ads. Space on back of heralds was also sold to stores. Also utilized were florist tie-ins wherein displays of plants, hollies, wreaths, etc., were exhibited in lobby for general Christmas decorations in exchange for florist credits.

Sticker Advertising

Stickers containing message from stars on "Shop Early" copy and tie-in on theatre dates were used by merchants on all outgoing packages and mailing lists. Imprinted sticker tape was another device utilized, theatre copy being carried as well as store plug.

Shorts and Trailers

Producers are putting out a nice line of Christmas shorts which should be considered in making up the holiday week programs. The various trailer services are also on deck with different offerings in the form of greetings from the manager for the new year and thanks for past patronage.

Santa Claus—In Person

Tieups were made with stores for toy exhibits in lobby or foyer presided over by Santa. He was present at many Christmas party matinees, distributing toys and candy. In one spot, manager had children list their desired Christmas gifts on prepared cards signed with their names and addresses which were gathered by Santa and mailed to parents with appropriate good will letter.

Rose's Stills in Star Lettering

ANGLES NOT LIMITED TO HOLIDAY SEASON

As can be noted, the aids set down are not confined to the Christmas period or entirely to any certain attractions. Many of the suggestions can be utilized for various occasions in the coming year. The stunts in most cases have the virtue of being tested and are roughly classified, contributors' names appearing more than once where they have forwarded more than one slant. Additional ideas will be run next week.

Shopping Days Poster

The "23 more shopping days to Christmas" idea was also in favor for windows and other store locations, theatres furnishing posters with copy at top and bottom, store ad in center. Posters are constructed so that each card designating number of days can be changed daily. Theatre copy is handled in the same manner.

Transportation Tieups

An instance is recorded of hookin with transportation company wherein free street car tokens were given to patrons presenting street car transfer issued that day at box office. Theatre paid $100 for $300 of tokens and ran screen ad for the car line, which was reported satisfied with results as many patrons used street cars to obtain gift tokens.

Pre-Xmas Festival

Some managers working on the idea that most theatres would lay off the bigger attractions in December, announced a pre-Xmas festival booking in the best bets available to sell the idea to shoppers. Theatremen also went to the other extreme by running a revival week just before Christmas re-running the year's biggest pictures.

Group Nights

In spots where there are corporations employing many workers, managers arranged special nights the week before Christmas, admissions paid by the company heads in the nature of a Yuletide gesture. Group nights were also reported with fraternal organizations, lunch clubs, etc., membership attending in a body, extra entertainment supplied by the various organizations.

Lobby Information Booth

Harry Botwick suggests girl and phone in lobby with bus and train schedules, department store ads, etc., to answer inquiries. Advertise that appointments can be made at booth and messages left. Phone might be promoted on tieup, and services of transportation employee arranged likewise. Otherwise usherette or relief cashier might be available.

Tea or Coffee Service

Irving Blumberg of the Stanton, Philadelphia, reported a lot of success with free coffee service in the mezzanine, special hostess in charge. Managers are going strong for this slant stressing the comfort and relaxation of the theatre after shopping.

Lobby and House Displays

Christmas color scheme of red and white was very popular in conjunction with Santa Claus and tree cutouts. Trees were planted atop marquee, holly wreaths and red bells also favored. Inside the house, trimmed trees were set in front of stage spotted with green and magenta lights brought up full during intermissions. Christmas carol records were played between shows.

"Candle Week" Stunt

While in Cleveland, Boston district Loew head H. M. Addison put on a "Candle Week" in cooperation with 150 local merchants, the topper being that special sales were built around the candle idea with window displays of burning tallows and similar illustrations in ads. Theatre further tied in by burning huge candles in lobby with prizes for those guessing nearest the time they expire.

CONTESTS

Airplane Modeling

On "Tailspin Tommy" serial, Jack D. Braunagel, Granada, Boise, Idaho, is now in the midst of a model airplane contest open to all, started the first week in November, finishing December 22, passes awarded weekly and grand prize free promoted air trip to West Coast, second prize $10 cash given by theatre in addition to passes.

Jack has built miniature landing field in foyer on long table on which entries are displayed, spotlight placed to give night landing effect. Newspaper tie-in supplies publicity for duration of contest. Entries are to be given to local orphans' home for Christmas presents and in return for trip air line is mentioned in all advertising.

"Double Truck" Contest

H. J. Arnold, Indiana, Terre Haute, Ind., recently put over two smart double page co-op ads on "Treasure Island" and "Belle of the Nineties." In each merchant's ad, single word was set in italics in parenthesis, $25 in cash and passes given as prizes to those arranging italicized words in one or more sentences most artistically and neatly. Arnold states requests for tear sheets came from newspapers all over the country.

A FAIRYLAND TECHNICOLOR CARTOON HIGHLY AMUSING AND ENTERTAINING

This one-reel "short", with music, is packed with laughs at the antics of two goblins who get loose in fairyland. These cause much havoc with familiar characters such as Cinderella and the Prince, the Mad Hatter, Jack Sprat and his wife, and Simple Simon. With all its fun, the picture teaches many good lessons in street safety.

Showmen and critics who have viewed the production have praised it in the highest terms. It is an added attraction on the best programs, and has recently been shown in the leading theatres on Broadway.

The picture was produced by Audio Productions, Inc., under the direction of F. Lyle Goldman, famed for his work in animation. The backgrounds were drawn by Lewis Jambor, who has a national reputation in this field, and the music is the work of the well-known composer, Edwin Ludig. The orchestra providing the music was composed largely of instrumentalists from the New York Philharmonic Society.

The film contains no advertising and is available without booking charge. The Metropolitan Life Insurance Company presents the picture as part of its program in the interest of life preservation. For booking write or wire to:

Movie Opinion Contest

Raymond Laurie, Grand, Cape May Court House, N. J., reports a tiein with local paper on a movie opinion contest in which ten tickets were given each week to the five persons sending in the most interesting opinion in 200 words or less discussing, praising or criticizing favorably or unfavorably an entire picture or any portion or phase of a picture shown at Cape May theatres.

Paper carried page one stories announcing titles of all forthcoming productions shown at various houses and carried free display ads for further publicity.

Waltz Contest

Louie Lamm, Capitol, Elyria, Ohio, put over a waltz contest on "Merry Widow" in a tieup with local dance spot, six pairs of passes given to winning couples. Where possible, this slant also may be worked on stage and to interest older folks, old-fashioned waltz idea is suggested.

Title Writing Stunt

George D. Irwin, Lyceum, Duluth, Minn., sends along a few of the entries he received on the stunt of inviting patrons to write "The Catspaw" as many times as possible on a mailing size card distributed at theatre. One side contained copy on picture and rules with space for names and addresses, other side blank for the writing. Five guest tickets to winners, next 10, two each. Besides plugging date, names were added to mailing list.

Children's Stamp Club

To stimulate juvenile attendance at Saturday matinees, Stein arranged with local jeweler to sponsor stamp club, giving latter privilege of underwriting all costs in exchange for store ad imprinted on stamped envelopes. Each youngster attending received free package of stamps, different assortment being given weekly. Six envelopes when presented at store of sponsor entitled child to free stamp album. Louis credits this stunt with jumping juvenile attendance from 300 to 1,200.

Stein contacted stamp company and obtained special rates of a penny for each stamp package and six cents for each album. Envelopes contained minimum of 10 different stamps. On stamp guessing contest, first prize of 1,000 different stamps and two seconds of 500 each were given for best guess nearest number of stamps displayed in mounted collection.

SCHOOL TIEUPS

"Sampler" Sewing Idea

On "Pursuit of Happiness," Herman Bamberger, is working with local school superintendents to supply sufficient samples to be used in every local school as part of the regular class room work in sewing and art needle work. It is expected that 2,000 girls will participate, thus carrying the plug into their homes. Best from each school will be displayed in local downtown windows prior to the opening. Prizes awarded for most expert.

Rewards for Deportment

Jack Wright, Palace, Taylor, Tex., gives courtesy tickets to principals of grade schools who, taking one grade each week, give each child making 100 per cent in deportment for that week one of the courtesy tickets good for one admission to the next Saturday performance. Jack states that most of the time child brings another admission along and suggests it be applied to lower grades only.

Graduation Night

Harold S. Knudsen, Fox Paradise, Westall, Wis., reports actual cash results on a special night in which high school graduating class was the guest of theatre. Glee Club and high school band also invited. Each graduate received inexpensive gift in addition to comic novelties appropriate to both sexes. Special gifts were also awarded from stage to outstanding students, most popular boy and girl, best football player, most bashful boy, prettiest girl, etc., etc. Local M. C. should be on stage with class president to insure smooth running. Stunt worked well for this member, who intends to put it on again.

Special School Matinees

L. W. Bevel, Princess, Harriman, Tenn., on "Treasure Island" arranged with local school authorities to dismiss classes 45 minutes earlier to attend special showing for children. Bevel states that this should work on any appropriate picture as children will attend to get out of school.

MISCELLANEOUS

Sponsored Ford Week

Knudsen further suggests a Ford Week put on by dealers where theatre lobby is big enough to display new model. Reel of new car in action is also shown, Harold stating that this can be obtained from advertising department of company. Auto salesman in lobby can distribute literature and talk about car.

In exchange, dealer or dealers should purchase not less than $100 in tickets at regular prices good only during week, to be given prospective buyers. Dealer advertises this in papers and heralds. Knudsen advises this as tieup with any agency.

E. C. Grady keeps files of birthdays of all members of his Kid Club, and in addition to having members as guests at theatre on birthdays, accepts care of parties arranged by mothers who, instead of being bothered at home, take this means of sending groups of youngsters to theatre as guests of their children. Grady states this can be worked up by selling mothers the idea far enough in advance of individual birthdays, dates, of course, obtained from club files.

Novelty Comedy Card

On "Big Hearted Herbert," Merle R. Blair, Regent, Cedar Falls, Iowa, put out a card marked "Free Ticket," admitting bearer to free use of public parks and benches, free drinks at public fountains, and free admittance to City Hall and Post Office. Copy stated this was made possible by generosity of "Big Hearted Herbert"—theatre and date included. Merle recommends similar slant on other comedy pictures.

Effective Title Display

Walter B. Rose, Strand, Holyoke, Mass., for short picture title or star name, uses giant compo board cutout letters covered with stills from the picture and outlined in bright colors. He did this recently on "The Catspaw," using the Lloyd in star's name for this treatment against false front.

Magazine Distributor's Tieup

Dick Walsh, New Lafayette, Buffalo, N. Y., has worked out a permanent tieup with local news company distributing popular magazines of various kinds, and details various angles used as follows: Distributor displays posters on delivery trucks with tiein copy, theatre making up posters. Where distributor does not have board for posting on trucks, Dick suggests theatre make up same for use each week.

From list of magazines distributor handles, material can be selected to tie in with picture. Cutout from one sheet is also suggested on poster in addition to lettering.

Boy magazine carriers will hand out heralds and carry tiein cards on magazine bags in return for free admission. Dick says card should be attached to bag and removed by doorman at theatre on designated day.

Sample Copy Distribution

Walsh also makes effective use of unsold magazines dealer is allowed to return to distributor. Quantities of the returns of one publication are secured before they are junked and distributed at theatre as sample copies. Insert is placed in each sample copy advertising next issue of magazine and theatre's coming attractions, Dick stating that this is one piece of theatre advertising that positively gets into the home.

For newsstand tacking regular exchange window cards have brought returns for this member, magazine tiein copy inserted in the space allowed for theatre imprint. He states that all the stunts have been tried and proven and that the magazine distributor usually is more than willing to cooperate.

"Do Not Open" Envelope

Morris Rosenthal likes the envelope gag, outside of which is printed "do not open until Christmas," and inside announcement of the picture to play at that time.

Milking Contest on Stage

Milk Drive Tied in To 'Mrs. Wiggs' Date

Some weeks back in these pages were reported the details of the milking contest stunt to be held in conjunction with local organizations. Reported now is this idea put over with the county 4-H Clubs by Charlie Smakwitz, head publicist of Lou Lazar's Warner Albany zone for the date on "Mrs. Wiggs" at the Strand in Albany, N. Y. The stunt was part of the campaign executed in a tie-in with the State "Drink More Milk" drive, street parade on "Milk Day" being another highlight.

The street procession was headed by Senator Byrne, officials of other city and state departments and Boy Scout troops also participating. Ushers from the various Warner theatres carried banners, as did 4-H Club boys advertising the milking contest in which they were to take part and for which they were dressed in white. Other trucks carried cows to be milked.

Comic ballys were also employed, such as tall and short men—"I do (I don't) drink milk," blind man and jackass bally, etc. Local school bands furnished music, bannered dairy delivery trucks were in line, as was old bannered spring wagon carrying "Mrs. Wiggs" and the Wiggies.

At the Strand, the Senator introduced the milking contest in which nine entrants from the 4-H Clubs participated (see photo), prizes being promoted from local merchants. The event was widely advertised in conjunction with the picture.

Elaborate milk display was exhibited in foyer, milk bottle hangers distributed by dairy and heralds stuffed in all store packages. Letters were addressed to Farm Bureau and 4-H Club members and half-page ad further sold the idea, all of this advertising paid for by milk dealers. Newspapers ran cuts and stories of the event.

All this was in addition to other direct tieups on the picture with cooperation obtained from libraries and schools in addition to further exploitations.

Quigley Award Flashes—

Deadline for November campaigns is midnight of Thursday, December 6. All entries must be at Headquarters by that time to receive consideration.

November judges are as follows: Harry Arthur, vice-president, Fanchon and Marco; Gordon S. White, advertising director, Educational Pictures; Edward A. Golden, general sales manager, Monogram Pictures.

Carter Barron, Loew Theatres eastern division director, offers the largest turkey available to any Loew manager in his district winning either the November or December Award.

At this writing, arrangements are now going forward to signalize the first Loew triumph. Fitting ceremonies are planned by Mr. Barron for presentation of the October Award to winner Bob Suits, manager of the Colonial Theatre, Reading, Pa.

Official home office approval has resulted in a flood of entries from Loew theatremen in every sector. Harry Shaw's ad head, Erle Wright, has sent out memo urging every man in the Loew-Poli sector to get aboard. Lionel H. Keene reports plenty of enthusiasm down South, and W. A. Finney's lads are coming great guns.

M. A. Lightman, president, Malco Circuit, is writing personal letters to all his managers on Quigley Awards. . . . City Manager E. E. Whitaker, Atlanta, Ga., is showing the way for Lucas and Jenkins showmen. . . . Wheeling district manager, Mars Taylor, in Harry Kalmine's Pittsburgh Warner division, is still offering that cash prize to any Quigley winner in his district.

Harman Plugs Appearance Of Local Girl in "Gay"

From St. Louis is Betty Grable, who made her first screen appearance in "Gay Divorcee," and this was seized upon by Manager Homer H. Harman to build up the date at the Rialto, in that spot. Special front display was featured and papers of course carried full publicity, especially since family of girl still resides locally.

Prominent ballroom went for the prize dance idea, theatre donating cups to best couple. Ballroom printed heralds, put up large banners and displayed one sheet boards of stars in dance pose. Radio announcements on this and the date were included.

Inaugural fall style show put on by exclusive women's chain stores included Ginger Rogers hat, dress and shoe styles. Harman reports tieup on this wherein merchant will use other styles featured by women stars in pictures appearing at Rialto.

Morgan Uses Auto Bally

J. Nathan Morgan, State Theatre, Dothan, Ala., for his "Old Fashioned Way" showing used a street bally of an "antique" bannered auto driven by girl. Car always managed to come to a dead stop whenever it reached a green light, and would move on only after gathered crowds had read theatre plug. Another gag Morgan used was a little card with copy "no doubt you'll burst a button off laughing at, etc.," safety pin was attached.

Newspaper Ad Sells All Program Units

Manager C. H. Schreiber, Palace, Columbus, Ohio, turned out a tasty display on a recent show in which the shorts as well as the feature were given some strong selling. As illustrated, each unit was spotlighted, lead stating, "The Ultimate in Entertainment" and copy following—"each unit perfect in itself and blended to make the entire show an outstanding achievement."

Main attraction was "Richest Girl in the World," but the whole-show idea was reported to have clicked.

"Old Fashioned" Comedy Parade Staged by Hart

Out in Plainfield, N. J., City Manager Ed Hart, for Reade Theatres put over an old fashioned comedy parade on "Old Fashioned Way" in which everybody in Plainfield was invited to participate by joining in the procession with the oldest automobile, bicycle or horse drawn vehicle available.

Ed managed to cop extra publicity due to a driving rain that fell on day of parade. Undaunted the entrants started out with cheering crowds spurring them on, but after wading through streets and gasping along, most of them were towed back and, as Ed states, "placed in camphor for another hundred years."

Professional cowboys were hired to see that the bull dogging, trick riding, roping and squaw race contests were run off properly. Prizes for the best efforts in each contest autographed Buck Jones sombreros.

Ballroom Goes for McManus "Merry Widow" Dance Contest

A "Merry Widow" waltz contest was staged by J. J. McManus, Loew's Midland, Kansas City, in leading ballroom with Jeanette MacDonald cup to winners and five pairs of tickets to next best. Ballroom used their p. a. to announce feature and play date and also distributed theatre literature including song sheet heralds.

Hosiery tieups arranged in which Johnnie gave two passes to salesperson in each store selling largest number of "Widow" stockings. Store ran two column tieup ad including cuts of MacDonald and Chevalier.

Through assistance of John Sandusky of Robbins Music Co., McManus made music store tieups including insertion of heralds in all record envelopes. Kresge's featured a "Merry Widow" sundae and during peak hours the theatre's p. a. system, rigged up on marquee, played hit tunes.

Old Fashioned Parade Sells "Circus Clown" for Reed

A good old-fashioned parade was staged by Jimmy Reed, New Fruitdale, Oakland, Cal., on "Circus Clown," some of the laugh-builders being car with wheels off center to make it rock, comic stilt walker, bicycles of all shapes and makes, caliope and seven performing clowns.

Tieups effected by Reed included one with a local brewery, hangers being hung on every bottle of brew. Cookie company placed circulars in every can leaving factory, and a nut tie-up brought cards to which peanuts were glued, copy reading "It's nutty. . . . Joe Brown in," etc. These cards were passed out at wrestling and boxing matches.

Clowns performed in front of theatre, and lobby carried out tent atmosphere with sawdust and other trimmings. Schools were covered by clowns and stilt walkers doing their act at recess period.

Torchlight Parade New Slant on "Navy"

There have been parades and processions of all kinds during the day on "Navy," but to shake up this slant a bit, George Laby staged a torchlight parade on "Navy" at the Victory, Holyoke, Mass. The stunt went over big, so much so that the papers stated one quarter of the town's population lined the streets along the route of the march. Paraders were in uniform, led by giant float and brass band.

George used novel marquee shadow box in which behind cutout stars, heads of four

"Wise Crack" Title Contest Engineered by Milt Harris

Milt Harris, publicist at the State, Cleveland, Ohio, and C. C. Deardourff, M-G-M exploiter on "Merry Widow," planted a three-day newspaper contest, each day still of MacDonald and Chevalier was published without caption and readers invited to supply "Merry Widow" Wise Crack titles.

For street bally, two girls carrying imprinted hat boxes visited hotel lobbies, shops, boarded street cars, busses, etc. Leading milliner featured the "Merry Widow" window display (see photo) and theatre supplied 30 by 40 enlargements of stills showing Jeanette MacDonald wearing featured hats.

Beauty salon plugged "Merry Widow" swirl and paid for colored photographic enlargements for windows. Music store pushed song hits and gummed streamers were placed in all cocktail bars selling the "Widow" drink.

Call Smith tomorrow and get him to return my Motion Picture Almanac. Got important campaign to lay out for next week and need it right away. Look up biogs. of MacDonald and Chevalier for me when you get it. Think with stars like that I can make that overdue tieup with fashion dept. of Hall & Kimball and be all set on Merry Widow when it gets here. Chevalier is perfect name for that radio tieup Stiller phoned me about yesterday. Send Almanac to Reed, Evening Standard, on Monday. He wants to look up coming product, titles and casts for feature yarn on Saturday. See that we get a break in it. Tell Goldberg he can have it about Wednesday. Wish these fellows would invest five bucks and get it if they need it so badly. And don't forget to have my file of Motion Picture Herald on my desk early tomorrow morning. Checked off some fine exploitation ideas in Mike Vogel's department particularly that fellow's who got the last Quigley Award. We can use some of his stunts right here.

The BLUEBOOK School

By F. H. RICHARDSON

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 250.—(A) Will distortion of objects on a screen be increased as viewing angle is increased? Explain. (B) Explain why increase of projection angle increases distortion. (We have dealt with this matter, but not just in this way.) (C) Why do objects on the screen seem abnormally tall when viewed at a large angle? (D) Wherein does the real evil in picture distortion lie?

Answer to Question No. 244

Bluebook School Question No. 244 was: (A) Is inefficiency in a motor-generator set necessarily or even usually the fault of the machine itself? (B) Where should a motor-generator set be installed? (C) For what reasons is a basement or other location removed from the projection room objectionable? (D) Tell us just what points you would consider as of prime importance in installing a motor-generator set.

We have many excellent replies to this one. (Incidentally, credit on Question No. 243 should have been given to A. F. Sprafke; J. L. Tomlinson; D. R. Haddon and B. I. Sheldon.) Those answering Question No. 244 are D. Danielson; C. Rau and S. Evans; G. E. Doe; C. Oldham; A. F. Sprafke; D. Ferguson; R. J. Arntson; G. A. Artley; Bill Doe; H. Edwards; T. Van Vaulkenburg; R. and K. Wells; J. Wentworth; J. Lansing and R. D. Oberleigh; D. Breaston and D. Haber; D. Johnson; O. L. Daris and F. Simms; L. B. and D. T. Palmer; B. R. Walker; F. L. Dodson and F. L. Benton; E. Hodson and S. Johnson; R. Geddings and L. Grant; F. L. Saylor and G. N. Guidotti; T. Turk, G. Lathrop and N. L. Tomlinson; M. and J. DeVoy; P. and L. Felt; F. Ferguson and D. Lally; O. Allbright; B. H. Thaller and S. Spooner; F. H., S. and P. Dalbey; G. Harrison and F. Harlor; R. K. Kent, C. Davis and H. T. Bailey; D. D. Davis and L. Thomas; N. L. Haynes and A. Richardson; F. H. and L. Klar; T. R. Rosche; C. Umphrey; M. F. Fallon; H. N. Hoffman; L. N. Guiding; D. L. Sinklow; D. L. Danielson and T. Morris; L. Henderson, B. I. Henderson and D. Nallor; N. N. Boyd; R. G. Crews and T. T. Davidson; H. Hughes and T. E. Mantol; L. Grant and R. Geddings; G. E. Osborn, C. B. Murray, D. T. Bennett and R. Crawford; L. Howell and W. R. Greiver; P. L. McIntosh; T. N. Onby; N. L. Simms; L. M. and C. B. Traxler; B. L. Patterson.

(A) D. Danielson says, "Lack of efficiency usually is not the fault of the motor-generator set. Present standards of manufacture make all such machines more or less comparable as to efficiency. Inequalities are mostly due to failure to keep them in proper condition and adjustment; also to age.

F. H., S. and P. Dalbey answer thus: "While it is true that different makes of motor-generator sets may show some small difference in efficiency when installed, the fact remains that whatever the initial efficiency may be, it will to all intents and purposes continue until the machine is worn out, provided it has proper, intelligent care and attention.

"However, a set won't work efficiently if, for the example, the commutator or the brushes are dirty and make poor contact; if the brushes do not have sufficient pressure; or the commutator is grooved or the mica is too high, or there are poor connections, or—well, 'Dad,' I could go on for quite a spell enumerating faults that would cut down the efficiency of a set, but such faults are not properly chargeable against the set. They are the fault of the projectionist, or of the manager if he has refused supplies necessary to keep the set in proper condition.

"Broadly, therefore, our answer is an emphatic no! Low efficiency is not usually, if ever, the fault of the motor-generator set, but due entirely to faulty care, attention and lack of needed repairs."

(B) Messrs. Rau and Evans say, "A motor-generator used for projection work should preferably be installed in a room adjoining the projection room, in which location it is likely to receive very much better attention than if located elsewhere, possibly in a more or less inconvenient place."

With all of which I heartily agree.

(C) G. E. Doe says, "First, a basement location would mean that the projectionist would be far removed from the set, therefore it would probably receive scant attention. Certainly it would not receive the care and attention it would were it more accessible, which of course would in turn mean a falling off in efficiency and very probably increased upkeep expense. Second, basements are very likely to be more or less moist, which would mean increased tendency of insulation to deteriorate, also possible short circuits due to that cause. Third, if anything went haywire with the set in the middle of the show it would just be too bad. Fourth, as a matter of ordinary common sense, it is poor policy to locate such machinery where the man responsible for it and its performance will only see it once or twice a day—very possibly, in the case of some men, not even that often. Fifth (this ties into fourth), such sets should be at least looked at, their bearings felt of and commutator and brushes scrutinized at least three or four times daily in a ten-hour theatre. Try and get it done if the set is located way off somewhere in the general direction of China!"

(D) R. and K. Wells say, "First I would consider the reputation of the manufacturer for turning out reliable machines. Second, capacity. Third, location. Fourth, suitability of set for the work. Fifth, dimensions and weight (under some conditions). Sixth, price—which, I suppose, I should have located further front. Seventh, efficiency, which also should be closer to the head of the assortment. Eighth, a solid support. Ninth, insulation of set from floor so that no sound will be transmitted from set to building structure."

Ferretti Named an Executive of Carrier

Carrier Engineering Corporation has appointed J. J. Ferretti, air conditioning engineer, as assistant to A. C. Buensod, in charge of the company's theatre division. The company has announced a new conditioning system designed for smaller theatres.

Willis H. Carrier, head of the company which bears his name, last week was awarded the medal of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers for 1934 for his work in the air conditioning field. Mr. Ferretti will have headquarters at the New York office.

Bigelow Quits Carpet Firm; Kelly Joiner Promoted

C. E. Bigelow resigned this week from the Bigelow-Sanford Carpet Company, which furnishes carpets and rugs to motion picture theatres and to other businesses.

Kelly Joiner, manager of the Los Angeles branch, was appointed Pacific Coast manager, in charge of San Francisco, Los Angeles and Seattle.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Running times are those supplied by the companies. Asterisk indicates running time as made known by West Coast studio before announcement by home office in New York. Variations also may be due to local censorship deletions. Dates are 1934, unless otherwise specified. Letter in parentheses after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers.

WHAT A DEFENDER!

THE question—more interesting than important—remains despite some evasions in print, why various New York newspapers have permitted the use of their columns in behalf of Moscow and the Third Internationale under the guise of motion picture criticism.

Mr. Richard Watts, Jr., in his "Sight and Sound" column in the New York Herald Tribune, says:

... It is the Hollywood producers, however, whose ingratitude pains me chiefly. Here I was defending them in the columns of the hostile "New Theatre" against the charge of carrying on a sniping campaign against unorthodox social and economic ideas, when they come along and tell their obedient back, the editor of the trade publication "The Motion Picture Herald", to destroy all of my convincing arguments. . . .

And so—we have Mr. Watts as the "defender" of the motion picture industry of the United States against the desperate charge of wanting to continue the United States. That, of course, is the reason that Mr. Watts wrote for the radical New Theatre under the title of "Hollywood Sees Pink", to indicate a tinted leaning to the red flag.

Mr. Watts, Junior, in a lightsome manner took exception to the structure of a HERALD editorial sentence. It seems, however, that he was able to read it. But since the subject is up, we might repeat that he has yet to explain the meaning of his sentence in the New Theatre beginning:

The most frank and vicious anti-radical propaganda I have found in the films for several years. . . .

Also he has not yet explained with clarity how he sits at a desk of that great capitalistic organ, the New York Herald Tribune, while he writes for New Theatre that he feels that the California producers are "heartily if sometimes furtively on the side of the established order," but that it is because of instinct rather than of "intentional malice."

That's "defending", too, one is to suppose.

It is to be observed that while Mr. Watts has set about a lukewarm alibi, for the purposes of the Herald Tribune, he has been at pains—or is it just "instinct"—to avoid a declaration that could offend the exponents of the Third Internationale.

And Mr. Watts thinks Hollywood is ungrateful for his exercise of diligence. As much as it pains us to say so, Hollywood had hardly heard the name of Mr. Watts, and of New Theatre nothing, until we mentioned them.

Speaking of "obedient hacking", Mr. Watts might make it clear as to where he stands between the Herald Tribune and New Theatre, for if one is a vehicle of art and social justice the other is assuredly a hack—unless indeed the Herald Tribune also "sees pink".

Mr. Watts works for, believes in, whom and what?

AND THAT'S "PUBLICITY"

WE have already taken notice of the Campbell soup "Hollywood Hotel" radio program which takes the air at the best show hour of the week on a national hook-up presided over by Louella O. Parsons, film chatelaine of the Hearst newspapers, competitively presenting imposing motion picture "names".

Stumbling across the spot on the dial the other night, we were entertained by Miss Parsons' discourse in which in the keyhole manner she announced that a famous feminine star and a young man were off together to spend Christmas in Sweden, that another pair of "names", equally unmarried, were having a weekend at Palm Springs, and that a famous star had gone abroad to stay there, while his wife remains on this side.

Thus in about three minutes we had some intensive goodwill building and polishing of the lustre of six box-office personalities—right from Hollywood, with studio cooperation.

PRINTERS' INK, trade publication of the advertising craft, has a piece speaking handsomely of current motion picture advertising and the internal disciplines of the industry with respect to its advertising under the attentions of Mr. J. J. McCarthy of the Hays office.

It would seem that there is a deal of debating in the big wide world of advertising in general about various practices and methods and there are indications of a reform. It is also just possible that this once the motion picture industry may yet be credited with a bit of leadership.

And incidentally, it is worth while making emphatic that the clean-up and improvement of motion picture copy have come strictly from internal disciplines, accepted as just that. The advertising men have set an example that several of our Hollywood producers could emulate with profit.

"FOR two and a half hours each day 40,000,000 people are busy at their dials and while thus engaged they can not walk down the shop lined streets, wear out their shoes or their wearing apparel; nor can they ride the highways in their automobiles with the attendant consumption of gasoline, tires and wear on engine."

In those despairing words, Mr. Irving Caesar, song writer, has told the Federal Communications Commission, at hearings on the subject of program administration, that the radio is retarding recovery and doing business no good.

Possibly Mr. Caesar is right about the shoes and the tires, but what about the wear and tear on the pants of the man who sits twiddling the dial? What about the increased wear on the home? Doubtless a survey will show that what is saved on the coat and vest will be spent for carpets and chairs.

THIS WEEK ---

THEATRE SUBSIDY

"Neither wise nor sufficient," was the reaction of Eddie Dowling, Broadway producer, to the recent plan of Hermann Gantvoort, proposed to President Roosevelt, for a $1,000,000 government loan to bring the drama to "every city in the land." "The theatre does not want subsidy, nor does it want the Government as a partner," Mr. Dowling said, but proposed that the Government influence the underwriting of expenses in smaller cities by agencies which would profit by revival of road showings. . . .

UNION RULING

The National Labor Board at Washington last week affirmed the ruling of an original board that Consolidated Film Industries shall establish a preferential reinstatement list for striking employees, and that both company and employees submit to an impartial arbitrator all problems found impossible of agreement. A wage scale dispute had caused the strike last April. . . .

BETTER FILMS

Unofficially it is agreed in the Virginia censor board, headed by Edwin S. Reid, that better pictures are now being shown in Virginia, a great deal of the credit having been given to the efforts of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, and especially to Joseph I. Breen, production code administrator in Hollywood. . . .

NATIONAL ARTS

Senator-elect Joe Guffey, personal friend and supporter of Paul Specht, nationally known orchestra leader, plans to introduce in the Senate a Specht-sponsored bill for the establishment of a National Department of Arts, which would also provide for a National Music Conservatory. . . .

KEATON FAMILY

Buster Keaton's new comedy short subject for Educational is to feature his father, mother and sister, the first appearance of the Keaton family in toto in one film. In vaudeville, years ago, the act of Mr. and Mrs. and three-year-old Buster Keaton was known as the Three Keatons. . . .

BLANK ACQUISITION

The A. H. Blank Tri-States Theatre Corporation, Omaha, has acquired the 99-year lease on the local World theatre, which Blank has been operating on a rental basis for several years. Ralph Goldberg's World Realty Company was former owner. Redecorated, re-equipped, the house will be reopened on Christmas Day.

PUBLIC SUPPORT

Pointing out the interest of the public in the problems of the independent exhibitor, the "Film Bulletin," published for the Independent Exhibitors of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware, last week declared that the efforts of four Philadelphia first runs, via pamphlet and trailer, to enlist public support in its fight against Warner's alleged delaying of films at the independent houses, has resulted in wide and active co-operation. . . .

NEWSREELS FAVORED

Newsreels are the favorite of children, it was ascertained recently after 49 boys and girls from New York public schools, representing the Young Reviewers of the National Board of Review, had seen a variety of short subjects and discussed them. "Popeye, the Sailor" was the favorite cartoon character, while the Silly Symphonies were favored by the girls. . . .

OPERA TO SCREEN

Gladys Swarthout, Metropolitan opera star soprano and leading voice on two radio programs, has been signed to a long term contract by Paramount. The American born singer, with opera and radio engagements, will not leave for the Coast until about May 1. No picture assignments have been made as yet. . . .

TRI-ERGO SUITS

Six companies—Columbia, MGM, Reliance, 20th Century, Universal and Warner—filed motions last week in New York federal court to require American Tri-Ergon to furnish bills of particulars in its patent infringement suit against the companies. The motions are set for argument this week. Du-Art Film Laboratories, sued by Tri-Ergon, in connection with double print patents, filed general denials last week in federal court. . . .

THE FAN PRESS

Simultaneously with the announcement of the appointment by Macfadden Publications of Kathryn Dougherty as publisher of Photoplay Magazine, recently acquired by Macfadden, Ray Long, former editor of Cosmopolitan Magazine, was appointed editor of Photoplay and Shadoplay. Mr. Long will divide his time between New York and the Coast. . . .

W. A. JOHNSTON

William A. Johnston, veteran trade paper publisher, and founder of the Motion Picture News, merged into Motion Picture Herald, has joined the writing staff of Monogram Pictures on the Coast, to work on the script of "The Mystery Man," which Ray McCarey will direct. . . .

ROY TURK DIES

Roy Turk, writer of many popular songs over a long period, died in Hollywood late last week after a lengthy illness. Born in New York, Mr. Turk went to the Coast to write songs for motion pictures. Among his most popular compositions were "When the Blue of the Night Meets the Gold of the Day," "Love, You Funny Thing," and others. . . .

PATENT SUIT

Leon F. Douglass, San Francisco inventor, won the first round in his color photography patent suit against Fox Film last week when he obtained a default judgment in federal court. Fox officials on the Coast said the action had been referred to the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America in New York. . . .

RADIO GAINS

Improved business is indicated in an increase in broadcast advertising during September, when total time sales amounted to $4,576,223, a gain of 16.5 per cent over August. The September gain over August was considerably greater than in 1933, when the monthly gain was only 6.9 per cent. . . .

PARAMOUNT COMPLETES REORGANIZATION PLAN

Nine Members of New Board Proposed to Court; Claims Are Expected to Be Reduced to Around 55 Million Mark

The Paramount Publix plan of reorganization through which the corporation will emerge from bankruptcy at the turn of the new year, was finally completed last weekend and submitted on Monday afternoon by the management to Judge Alfred Conklin Coxe for the approval of the federal court of the Southern District of New York. Judge Coxe immediately called for a hearing Thursday morning, December 27, at 10 o'clock, in the old Postoffice Building overlooking City Hall in New York to show cause why the plan should not be adopted.

In view of the inclusion in the plan of the principles which have been agreed to in negotiations with the various creditors' groups during the past six months of reorganization procedure, it is unlikely that any serious obstacles will appear to interfere with the confirmation and adoption of the plan as it is now constructed. It appears then, that Paramount Publix will be returned within six weeks to its former position and corporate status as one of the most profitable enterprises in the industry. The principal highlights of the plan as it took form in a printed document of some 15,000 words, were as follows:

Nine members of a reconstituted board of directors to manage the new company were suggested in the persons of Gerald Brooks, Duncan Harris, Percy N. Johnston, Julius Klein, Henry R. Luce, Charles A. McCulloch, Maurice Newton, Frank Vanderlip and Adolph Zukor.

Claims requiring the issuance of new securities are expected to be reduced to $55,000,000.

All Paramount properties are to be vested in the new company.

Provision is made for the bank claims and for Paramount Broadway Corporation claims and for those of Allied Owners Corporation and others.

Paramount's net worth available to creditors and stockholders, after reorganization expenses, approximates $75,000,000, after suggested new reserves of $14,000,000.

Debenture holders and general creditors receive 50 per cent in new six per cent 20-year debentures and 50 per cent in new 6 per cent cumulative convertible first preferred stock.

Holders of the 3,220,902 shares of common stock outstanding will receive for each one-quarter share of new stock and a warrant to subscribe to an additional one-quarter share and also $2 face amount of six per cent cumulative convertible second preferred stock at a price of $2 the unit.

The plan of reorganization of Paramount Publix Corporation, as submitted by the management to the federal court in New York on Monday, appears in full starting on page 78.

Following approval of the plan by the United States District Court, the approval of two-thirds of the creditors and a majority of stockholders will be required.

Total assets are worth $148,769,919, of which $35,245,000 are working assets, including $15,456,000 cash.

Paramount still has an interest in 1,100 theatres—the interest being of varying character.

Profit of $4,530,000 was reported for the first nine months of 1934, and $5,692,000 for 1933.

The plan was presented to Judge Coxe by Alfred A. Cook, of Cook, Nathan and Lehman, New York attorneys, who were authorized to represent the corporation in proposing the plan, at a board meeting on Sunday. Mr. Cook's firm are also attorneys for the stockholders' committee.

Judge Coxe signed an order to show cause why the plan, as it affects both Paramount Publix and Paramount Broadway corporations, should not be accepted by the creditor groups and the corporations.

Earlier on Monday Judge Coxe granted the petition of Charles D. Hilles, Eugene W. Leake and Charles E. Richardson, Paramount trustees in bankruptcy, authorizing and directing the trustees to institute suits against 24 former officers and directors of the corporation to compel them to account for any unreasonable compensation paid by Paramount during 1927 to 1930, to account for the issuance and delivery of certain shares of Paramount stock to certain officers, who were also directors, under an "Employees' Stock Purchase Plan," and to account for any loss incurred by Paramount from the purchase and sale by the company of shares of its own stock in 1929 and 1930.

In another complaint, members, officers and associates of the important Wall Street firm of Kuhn, Loeb and Company, former Paramount bankers, are to be sued for an accounting as to actual and potential profits and any losses incurred by Paramount in respect to the receipt by Kuhn, Loeb, from certain Paramount officers and directors, of shares of stock issued in connection with the employees' stock purchase plan. Said to be involved in the Kuhn Loeb matters are blocks of 250,000 shares of Paramount stock which were set aside in 1930 for purchase by employees at $52. The market value of the stock at the time was much higher and Kuhn, Loeb allegedly purchased some of the stock.

The proceedings as they involved Kuhn, Loeb brought forth rumblings of potential sensational developments, if and when the suit comes to trial.

Members and associates of the Kuhn, Loeb firm who were named are: Felix M. Warburg, Jerome J. Hanauer, Gordon Leith, George W. Bovenizer, Lewis L. Strauss, Sir William Wiseman, Roger W. Kahn and Gilbert W. Kahn, (as executors for Otto H. Kahn), and John Mortimer Schiff, Casimir I. Stralem and Mr. Warburg (as executors for Mortimer Schiff).

Present and former directors and officers of Paramount who were named in the various complaints are: Frank A. Bailey, Jules E. Brulatour, Gayer G. Dominick, Harold B. Franklin, Arthur S. Friend, Daniel Frohman, Felix Kahn, Sam Katz, Sidney R. Kent, Ralph Kohn, Jesse Lasky, Elek John Ludvig, Maurice Newton, Maurice Wertheim, Theodore F. Whitmarsh, Sir William Wiseman, Herman Wobber and Eugene and Adolph Zukor.

The petition set forth that the trustees' attorneys investigated three phases of Paramount's activities. These were:

The legality of the amounts of compensation paid to the principal executives of Paramount prior to the corporation's receivership, which began on January 26, 1933.

The issue and delivery of 139,800 shares of common stock to the principal officers and directors of Paramount "under a so-called employees' stock purchase plan"; the transfer by certain officers and directors of such shares issued to them, and the delivery of certain shares to others.

The legality of the action of certain officers and directors in causing Paramount to conduct trading operations in its own stock from October, 1929, to January, 1930, and from June, 1930, to January, 1931.

Paramount Publix, in an official announcement from headquarters on Broadway, said: "The petition sets forth that the trustees' counsel, Root, Clark, Buckner and Ballantine, have advised that probable causes of action exist and that the trustees are of the opinion that court determination of the matters set forth in the petition through the institution of a suit or suits is required." Reported to be involved is some $12,000,000.

Seven Complaints

The plan of reorganization of Paramount makes provision for the carrying on of these suits, subject to the orders of the court in the reorganization procedure, for the benefit of the new company.

Suits will be brought under seven complaints, the first against officers, directors and executives alone, to fix responsibility and recover damages for alleged overpayments of compensation made to themselves or others with their approval during the years 1927 to 1930, inclusive.

In the second complaint the trustees will seek to recover from Zukor, Lasky, Kent, Katz and Ralph Kohn all compensation received by them in excess of the value of services rendered during the aforementioned years.

The third and fourth causes for complaint are the recovery from officers, executive and directors of Paramount who received shares of common stock in the employees' stock purchase plan, of the amount of any actual or potential profits.

The fifth complaint mentions Kuhn, Loeb and its members and associates.

Trustees are authorized under the sixth complaint to sue Robert Montgomery for an accounting of profits realized from stock issued to him under the stock purchase plan for employees. Mr. Montgomery was named as an associate of Cravath, de Gersdorf, Swaine and Wood, special counsel for Paramount.

Judge Coxe authorized the seventh complaint against Frank A. Bailey, Katz, Kent and some others for an accounting to determine losses allegedly incurred by Paramount through the purchase and sale by the corporation of its own stock between October, 1929 and January, 1930, and between June, 1930, and January, 1931.

Seven Creditor Groups Participated

Reconstruction of the corporate structure of Paramount Publix Corporation commenced Jan. 26, 1933, when the company was placed in equity receivership, which was followed by a voluntary petition in bankruptcy, filed on March 14th, 1933. Consolidated reorganization proceedings actually started on June 7, 1934, and were participated in by:

The Paramount corporate management, Adolph Zukor, president.

Trustees Charles D. Hilles, Eugene W. Leake and Charles E. Richardson, acting as administrators for the federal court.

Bank Creditor's Committee, Percy H. Johnston, chairman, representing notes aggregating $13,368,932 issued by Film Production Corporation in 1932.

Vanderlip Debenture Committee, Frank A. Vanderlip, chairman, representing a group of bondholders of Paramount 20-year six per cent sinking fund gold debentures, due December 1st, 1947, and now outstanding in the amount of $11,918,000; and some holders of Paramount 20-year 5½ per cent sinking fund gold debentures, due August 1st, 1950, and now outstanding in the amount of $13,259,000.

Munger Debenture Committee, Lloyd A. Munger, chairman, representing certain other holders of the debentures described in the paragraph next above.

Merchandise Creditors' Committee, R. Earle Anderson, chairman, representing general creditors other than priority claims, the bank debt and bondholders.

Broadway Bondholders' Committee, Peter Grimm, chairman, representing holders of Paramount Broadway first mortgage 5½ per cent 20-year sinking fund gold loan certificates, due January 1st, 1951, issued upon the Paramount Building at Times Square and now outstanding in the amount of $8,875,000.

Schenck Broadway Committee, Henry Schenck, chairman, representing certain other holders of the certificates described in the paragraph next above.

Stockholders Committee, Duncan Holmes, chairman, representing stockholders.

The plan of reorganization sets forth that Paramount today has interests, of varying character, in 1,100 theatres, through complete or partial ownership, and operating agreements and the like. The company was reputed to hold varied interests in 1,600 houses before the industry adopted a policy of wholesale decentralization of circuit structures, in 1931 and 1932. It appears then that the company entirely divested its circuit holdings of some 500 properties and, besides, reduced its interest in many others.

The reorganization plan said that a number of theatre subsidiaries are still in receivership or bankruptcy. Several have been reorganized and others are now in the process of reorganization.

Profit of $4,530,000 for 9 Months

Verification of the general opinion that Paramount has been operating for some time on a paying basis is contained in the plan, which reveals that net operating earnings for the first nine months of 1934 were $4,530,000, of which $4,048,000 was earned by the picture companies and $482,000 by theatre companies. The earning power of Paramount for the past six years was outlined as follows:

YEAR	PROFIT OR LOSS
1928	$8,713,063 Profit
1929	15,544,544 Profit
1930	18,381,178 Profit
1931	6,345,487 Profit
1932	21,000,000 Loss
1933	5,692,000 Profit
1934	4,530,000 Profit

No audited statement for 1932 was ever prepared, and, therefore, the $21,000,000 loss was only estimated. Some $9,600,000 of this loss was attributed to deflated operations of the picture companies, which would mean a loss of $11,400,000 incurred by theatre subsidiaries and miscellaneous operations during 1932.

Since 1932, however, the picture companies have operated profitably. Theatre operations were responsible for a loss of $160,000 in 1932, but these, too, are now on a paying basis.

The plan added that picture company earnings for the fourth quarter of 1934 will be less than the profit earned in the same period in 1933. Some $1,579,000 was earned from foreign exchange in 1933, compared with $8,000 for the first nine months of 1934.

Paramount Broadway Corporation lost $720,000 in 1933, and $530,000 in the first three-quarter period of 1934. Losses are expected to be substantially reduced after the plan becomes effective.

$297,702,000 Claims Filed Originally

Compared with actual operating profits for 1933 and 1934 were approximate net capital losses—excluded in the above operating earnings—amounting to $1,695,000 in 1933 and $86,000 for the first nine months of 1934 in respect to active companies, and to $9,621,000 in 1933 and $911,000 in the first nine months of 1934 in respect to inactive companies and to companies whose future status is uncertain. Upon the elimination of certain companies and the completion of pending subsidiary reorganizations, a substantial portion of such losses will be eliminated.

Some $297,702,162 in claims were filed during the bankruptcy and reorganization proceedings, exclusive of duplications and claims for indeterminate amounts. In their final form, priority claims, general claims, bond issues, the bank debt and other claims will probably not exceed $55,000,000. In any event, the proposal provides that the plan shall not be carried out unless and until such aggregate claims, (including interest, estimated at $6,500,000), shall be reduced to not more than $65,000,000. Reductions are being effected by outright settlement, by litigation and the like.

Some $25,000,000 out of $26,152,611 in general claims have not been finally allowed or conceded by the trustees.

An original claim of $178,543,653 was represented by the claim filed in respect of the $8,875,000 principal amount of Paramount Broadway bonds, and $23,644,255 was represented by a claim filed by Allied Owners Corporation. Upon consummation of settlements heretofore negotiated, which become a part of the plan, the Paramount Broadway claim will be eliminated and the Allied Owners claim will be reduced to $5,000,000. Such deductions and contemplated elimination reduce the total claims to $100,514,253.

In addition, up to November 28, 1934 trustees eliminated or effected reductions by negotiations or litigation of claims in the amount of $16,891,400.

Of the remaining $83,622,853 of claims, $5,720,412 as represented by claims of wholly-owned subsidiaries, are proposed to be released or otherwise dealt with under the plan. Deducting this amount leaves claims of $77,902,439, which, with further deductions of $7,000,000 in respect to claims of theatre leases and property agreements, would reduce total claims to $70,902,000. There is a $13,500,000 claim filed by the banks. Other reductions are also provided for.

On September 29, 1934, there was embraced $17,071,145 in cash on hand of which the trustees held some $3,969,855, and $13,101,290 was widely distributed among various subsidiaries.

For purposes of effecting the reorganization, for expenses of administering the estate, and for costs of reorganization of subsidiaries now pending, the plan recommends that $6,500,000 of new money should be provided, in addition to the $3,969,855 now held by the trustees. Estimated expenses of administration of the bankrupt estate were fixed at $2,500,000, including unpaid compensation and expenses of trustees and counsel, accountants and assistants employed by them, as allowed by the court, and also including reorganization expenses of committees, counsel, depositaries and accountants, as allowed by the court.

In connection with the cash item of $3,969,855 held by the trustees, and especially, the $13,101,290 in cash spread over the books of subsidiaries, the plan pointed out that certain amounts are annually required for capital renewals. On September 29th, 1934, mortgages, bonds, purchase money obligations and other capital liabilities of subsidiaries amounted to $46,910,616. In the main these obligations are spread over a large number of years or the amounts which the respective subsidiaries are expected to have available as the result of charges for depreciation are now substantially sufficient to take care of their maturing capital commitments.

Early Reorganization Advised

"It is believed that an early reorganization, and the consequent removal of the handicap of the plan should increase the efficiency of the enterprise and result, under comparable conditions in the industry, in increased net operating earnings," said the reorganization proposal. Earnings for 1933 and 1934 appear to be at an annual rate sufficient to provide a substantial return upon, and substantial amortization of, the estimated amount of claims entitled to participate in the reorganization proceeding, it was said. "Under these circumstances," the proposal continued, "it would seem that a reorganization should promptly be effected."

Paramount said that while nine of the creditors' or debenture holders' groups have officially approved of the plan, it believes that the principles, which have been agreed to in negotiations with the various committees, are embodied in the plan.

It was said that net earnings, eliminating the losses of 1932, averaged over $12,000,000 per year since 1927.

It is intended to reinvest the entire assets of the corporation in Paramount Publix, or to vest them in a new corporation organized for the purpose.

However, claims, as filed by the trustees, against officers and directors of the corporation arising out of acts or conduct prior to the bankruptcy, are to remain in the trustees for future disposition for the benefit of the new company, subject to the approval of the court.

Holders of Paramount's $11,918,000 20-year six per cent gold bonds, and holders of the $13,259,000 20-year 5½ per cent gold bonds, will receive, for each $1,000, including interest to January 1st, 1935, five shares of new cumulative convertible six per cent first preferred stock (par value $100 per share) and $500 of new 20 year six per cent sinking fund debentures.

Stockholders will receive, for each share of stock, one-fourth of a share of new common stock and a warrant evidencing the right for a period of 60 days to subscribe at $2, for one unit consisting of one-fourth of a share of new common stock and one-fifth of a share of new cumulative convertible six per cent second preferred stock (par value $10 per share). There are 3,220,902 common shares now outstanding.

The Bank Debt and Broadway Bonds

The plan proposes that the dispute with the banks over the legality of the banks' claim of $13,368,932 of Film Production notes shall be compromised by the payment of $4,618,932 in cash, plus interest and the payment of the remaining $8,750,000 on the same basis pari passu with old debentures and general claims.

In the matter involving the Paramount Broadway Corporation, the reorganization report points out that $8,875,000 of bonds of the corporation are now outstanding, secured by a mortgage upon the Paramount Building at Times Square. Paramount leased the entire property and a claim was filed in the bankruptcy for $178,543,653 of Paramount Broadway bonds. Participating in this large claim were the Paramount parent corporation and film subsidiaries and the Paramount Broadway Corporation itself, and bondholders. The new plan provides for a new bond issue, due to mature February 15, 1955, at three per cent fixed interest.

Seven theatre properties are involved in the Allied Owners claims. The plan provides for the issuance of $5,000,000 of new securities and the adoption of new agreements covering leasing and/or acquisition of four theatres of the seven. Loew's, Inc., acquiring the remaining three.

While the time for filing of claims expired on September 15, 1934, additional claims may hereafter be filed by approval of the court.

The new company will assume any contracts of Paramount which are executed in whole or in part, including unexpired leases, as shall have been affirmed or adopted by the trustees prior to the date of actual court approval and confirmation of the plan, and also shall assume all executory contracts of the trustees and other obligations and liabilities incurred by the trustees in the administration of the bankrupt estate. All other executory contracts of Paramount shall be deemed by the new company to have been rejected and disaffirmed by the plan.

In the second half of Part III of the plan, provision is made for the settlement of the following claims: $2,750,000 Paramount Properties bonds, involving California theatre and studio properties; $816,666 Paramount Land Corporation notes; $561,750 first mortgage on the Florida theatre property at Jacksonville, Fla.; $465,000 first mortgage on the Florida theatre property at St. Petersburg, Fla.; $930,000 first mortgage on studio, laboratory and film depot at Long Island City; $574,100 first and

HERALD POLL IS ANALYZED BY CRITIC

Results of MOTION PICTURE HERALD's poll determining the ten biggest money-making stars proves that New York critics are poor judges of the type of entertainment that appeals to the American public, declares John C. Moffitt, motion picture editor of the Kansas City Star.

In the course of a column and a half of analysis and comment, Moffitt says: "In the entire list of the first ten there is not one star who is not panned more than praised by the New York reviewers and the scribes for the high-brow magazines. It is not until we come down to Miss Hepburn (in eleventh place) that we encounter one of their favorites. This offers additional proof that these commentators, who like to consider themselves the major arbiters in screen affairs, have slight insight into the national audience of the motion picture."

refunding mortgage bonds and $615,200 debentures on G. B. Theatres circuit in Massachusetts.

Holders of old debentures and of general claims will be entitled to participate in the reorganization upon the basis of the amount of their respective claims as finally established and allowed in the reorganization proceeding (or in such other manner as may be determined by the board of directors with the approval of the court in the reorganization proceeding), with interest at the rate of six per cent from the date when such claim shall have been allowed for interest—if any—to January 1st, 1935.

Holders of such claims thus established and allowed will be entitled to receive for each $1,000 of such claims, including interest, five shares of new cumulative convertible six per cent first preferred stock (par value $100 per share) and $500 of new 20 year six per cent sinking fund debentures.

Priority claims shall be paid in cash to the extent that the asserted right to priority shall be finally established in the reorganization.

In its final form, the capitalization of the new reorganized company will be constructed as follows:

20 Year 6% Sinking Fund Debentures—$27,500,000
Cumulative Convertible 6% 1st Pfd. Stock (Par Value $100 per Share)—$27,500,000
Cumulative Convertible 6% 2nd Pfd. Stock (Par Value $10 per Share)—$6,441,806
Common Stock—1,610,452 Shares.

The new securities will be distributed as follows: Bank debt, $4,906,548 in new debentures and a like amount of first preferred stock; Allied Owners Corporation, $2,500,000 in new debentures and a like amount of first preferred stock; Paramount Land Corporation note-holders, $390,000 in new debentures and $390,000 of first preferred stock; bondholders, $14,310,655 in new bonds and a like amount of first preferred stock; general claims, $5,392,797 of new debentures and $5,392,797 of first preferred stock; common stockholders (including shares issuable under warrants), $6,441,806 in second preferred stock and 1,610,452 shares of common stock.

First preferred stockholders shall be entitled to 20 votes for each share of first preferred stock held, while the holders of second preferred and common stock shall be entitled to one vote for each share.

Nine Directors Named

The new company will have a board of directors of not less than 12 nor more than 20 members, so classified that one-fourth shall be elected annually for terms of four years. The board of the new company, as described in the plan, already includes: Gerald Brooks, a representative of stockholders and bondholders; Duncan G. Harris, a representative of bondholders; Percy H. Johnston, a representative of the banking group; Julius Klein, representing bondholders, Henry R. Luce, representing the general creditors' committee and consultant on production material; Charles A. McCulloch, representative of banks; Maurice Newton, representing stockholders; Frank A. Vanderlip, a representative of bondholders, and Adolph Zukor, president of Paramount Publix.

Claims aggregating $5,720,412 of wholly owned subsidiaries which it is proposed to release or otherwise deal with on a basis not involving the issuance of new securities, include, among others: Paramount Pictures Distributing Company, $314,979; Paramount Properties, $2,098,308; Paramount International, $483,524.

Attached to the reorganization plan is an estimated consolidated pro forma balance sheet giving effect to the consummation of the plan, based on financial statements as of September 29, 1934, and reflecting suggested new reserves.

Total assets are listed at $148,769,919, of which $35,245,599 are current working assets, including $15,456,787 cash, $893,533 in marketable securities, at cost; and $3,826,275 in notes and accounts receivable. Other working assets, "largely convertible into cash within one year," were said to be worth $14,612,579.

Investments in and advances to affiliated companies were worth $33,148,300, less reserves of $19,536,311, leaving a value of $13,611,988.

Fixed assets included, land, leases and equipment, book value $61,804,967; land, leases and equipment, which are involved in process of reorganization, book value $24,336,750.

Current liabilities were $10,338,614, with mortgages, bonds, stock issues and the like totaling $148,769,919.

Reorganization of Circuit Subsidiaries Progressing

A plan for reorganizing Saenger theatres in the South was submitted last Friday to Special Master John E. Joyce in New York, and he set December 13 for a hearing. E. V. Richards would continue as head of the reorganized companies.

Trustees of the estate of the Stanley Company expunged their claim for $1,513,604.

Mr. Joyce on Monday postponed until December 18 a hearing on Allied Owners' claim against Paramount on theatre leases.

Trustees of Paramount and the Comerford circuit interests completed a new agreement altering the original terms in the deal for the sale in 1930 to Paramount of some 60 Comerford theatres in Pennsylvania and Comerford theatres. Special Master Joyce took the agreement under advisement.

PERELMAN DOUBLE FEATURE CASE SPREADS INTO ANTITRUST HEARING

Federal Judge in Philadelphia Says He'll 'Open Door Wide' for Inquiry as to Whether Operations Affect Public

By HENRY T. MURDOCK
Philadelphia Correspondent

The Harry Perelman double feature suit—which started more or less inconspicuously in Philadelphia last summer as a simple test of the validity of a clause in major distributors' 1934-35 contracts prohibiting double billing—this week took on national significance as sales executives of many of the defendant companies and leading theatre men testified to the harm caused the industry by continued double featuring. In addition, there was every indication, as the case entered its final phases in Philadelphia federal court, that Judge George A. Welsh would make no immediate decision because of the complex and far-reaching developments.

Last week Judge Welsh gave local distribution and exhibition circles a jolt when he said that the Perelman case had all the aspects of a legitimate anti-trust suit and that he would "open the door wide" for an inquiry into whether the operations of the defendants affect the general public.

The testimony of the past week has been veering around to angles of alleged conspiracy and possible infringement of anti-trust laws on the part of the defendants—Warner Bros., First National, Vitagraph, RKO Distributing Corp., Paramount Publix, Paramount Pictures Distributing Co., Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Fox Films and United Artists.

Not Limited to Technicalities

Testimony was resumed Wednesday with officials of women's organizations testifying for the defense, led by Mrs. James Looman, International Federation of Catholic Alumnae; Mrs. Mary Owen, General Federation of Women's Clubs, and others. A. W. Smith, Warner sales executive, declared his company produces short subjects which are better than the second grade features of many companies. Edmund Grainger, Fox, said his company left the matter of dual bills to the discretion of local exchange managers.

On the second day of the hearing, Judge Welsh said he did not intend to limit the hearing to the technical issues in the pleadings because "the public has a most vital interest in this industry and if it suffers in any way, or the talents of artists are suppressed or retarded by this particular clause, it might have an important bearing on the bona fides of such a clause."

He has allowed wide latitude in the taking of testimony, frequently quering the witnesses on independent film making and distributing.

Defense Attorney Morris Wolf has countered with innumerable objections, at one point saying he would save frequent interruptions by inserting a "blanket objection" to the entire case. His action indicates that if the case goes adversely for the defendants, an appeal will be immediately launched.

Double-features are a rare practice in Philadelphia.

Attempting to clarify the matter legally, a

84.5 PER CENT FAVOR DOUBLE FEATURING

By BRUCE ALLAN
London Correspondent

With the issue of double bills stirring in the American courts, there will be interest in the returns available this week on a questionnaire addressed to 250,000 patrons of the box offices of the British theatres operated by Sidney L. Bernstein, including the Granadas at Tooting and Walthamstow, the Elite at Wimbledon, the Regal at Watford, and the Plaza and Regent at Rugby, in which the vote on programs was:

For two big pictures (features) 84.5%
For one feature and shorts... 15.5%

On the question "How long do you like a program to last?" the voting was as follows:

3 hour program	50.2%
3 1/2 hour program	33.5%
4 hour program	9.2%
2 1/2 hour program	6.1%
2 hour program	1.0%

number of independent exhibitors, with Harry Perelman, owner of the Allegheny Theatre in northwestern Philadelphia as the named plaintiff, came before Judge Welsh in U. S. district court to ask a preliminary injunction against the double-features clause in the defendants' contracts. Former Congressman Benjamin M. Golder, just elected president of the newly formed Independent Exhibitors Protective Association, was plaintiff's counsel, declaring that he was ready to submit to the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice, evidence that the "trust" is "engaged in a gigantic conspiracy in this district to drive independent motion picture producers and exhibitors out of business so that it can gain complete monopoly of the industry."

After taking the case under advisement for a fortnight, Judge Welsh refused the preliminary injunction, declaring that the case should be brought into open court with witnesses summoned and testimony taken.

Many Independents Attend

Hearing for the permanent injunction began November 22 with numerous independent distributors in attendance. Eddie Golden, I. E. Chadwick, Jack Belman, Irving Mandell and others prominent in the independent film world were in frequent counsel with Attorney Golder.

First fireworks started over a hypothetical question asked by Golder of Charles Stieffel, South Philadelphia exhibitor, whether he would build a new first-run theatre if he had the money. Over defense Attorney Wolf's objection, Stieffel said "No," because he couldn't get the product. Samuel Waldman testified that he was obliged to close a theatre because of insufficient product. He sounded off the typical complaint of the independent exhibitor against the major—"We can't get along with them and we can't get along without them." He explained that it was necessary for exhibitors to get the pictures of the major companies even though they were "stale" by the time they arrived in the neighborhoods. He also said that when these features were too old, or not attractive, it was necessary to bolster up the program with independent features.

Another exhibitor, Irving Phillips, testified that when feature pictures of the "trust" reached him they were seventh-run, the Warner houses getting them first.

After Judge Welsh's statement that the case would not be limited to technical points, the testimony the second day followed much the same order. Columbus Stamper, Plaintiff Perelman and Harry Freed testified to lateness of major pictures in reaching the neighborhoods. Ed Boreth, exchange manager for Masterpiece here, said that while independents were placing more films this year than before, the anti-doubles clause was hampering their business.

On the third day, I. E. Chadwick, independent producer, was allowed the status of "expert witness" by Judge Welsh, again over Wolf's protest, and for two hours Mr. Chadwick reviewed the history of independent production and the growth of the double feature situation, stressing the Fox West Coast attempt to eliminate doubles and the objections of Louis B. Mayer.

He told the court that independent product was made mainly for the family trade and that the independents had made valuable contributions of stars and directors as well as artistic advancement of cinema. He said that while the majority of exhibitors might not favor double features, it was his opinion that the minority should have the right to show them if they desired.

Eddie Golden, of the Monogram exchange, testified as to the double features situation in Chicago and Boston. He said that sales had been checked by the ban, though Defense Attorney Wolf countered by mentioning the recent first-run downtown showings of "Jane Eyre" and "The Girl of the Limberlost," both Monogram features.

Mr. Perelman was recalled to the stand and showed checkbooks indicating his partnership arrangement in the theatre. Mr. Wolf cited a court ruling which indicated that in the case of such a partnership arrangement, no citizen with property rights was involved in the hearing. He also asked dismissal on the grounds that no testimony has been shown to indicate conspiracy. Judge Welsh refused the dismissal.

Vincent Calls Dual a Menace

The first defense witnesses, heard on Wednesday of last week, were led by Walter Vincent, an exhibitor with extensive interests in the territory. Mr. Vincent declared that the double features and the 10-cent theatre were menaces to the business, saying: "It isn't fair to an exhibitor, who has to pay a high price for a good picture and whose overhead is high, that the owner of a 10-cent theatre can show it later on. The producers can't make a good picture that can be shown for 10 cents on a first-run, and if the 10-cent houses prevail, there won't be any first, second, third or fourth-run houses and the industry will be doomed."

"As a matter of fact," Mr. Vincent continued, "The industry is even now tending toward disintegration because too many films, and too many poor films, are being made, and it is my opinion that everyone would be much better off

EARNINGS LARGEST IN SEVERAL YEARS INDICATED BY END OF YEAR

Warner Betters Earning Position by $3,761,235; Universal Shows Net of $77,077 for 39 Weeks Compared with Loss Last Year

The motion picture industry is ending 1934 with earnings that will be larger than any in several years and with definite signs of encouragement which indicate that grosses for exhibitors and producers and distributors will continue to gain through 1935.

Reflecting the unofficial opinion of the financial world, Wall Street Journal observed excellent chances of continued gains, reporting gross income for the industry running ahead of last year, with box office receipts averaging 10 per cent higher and costs now showing the beneficial results of operating economies effected during the deflation.

Warner Brothers Pictures reported that it had bettered its earning position during the year by some $3,761,235, reducing 1933 losses of $6,291,748 to $2,530,513 in 1934, and, at the same time, doubling its cash position to $4,664,138, which is better than any year of the depression era.

Paramount's reorganization plan, submitted on Monday to the courts for approval (see page 9), indicated that the company will earn in excess of $5,000,000 from actual operations in 1934.

Universal, too, reported financial progress, announcing a net of $77,077 for 39 weeks, compared with a loss of $728,747 for the same 1933 period.

An optimistic note was voiced by Wall Street Journal after investigating the financial structure of the large companies, pointing out that the two companies in receivership—Paramount and Radio-Keith-Orpheum—are likely to find some of their problems solved by improving business, together with rising profits, and that Fox Film, which went through a capital reorganization last year, thereby wiping out most of its funded debt, is currently showing substantial earnings as against losses a year ago.

"Business has been best in those states which have had the most benefit from government spending, notably the Middle West and in the South. New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania are still lagging somewhat behind other sections," Wall Street Journal said.

Cites Loew's $7,479,897 Net

"Loew's, Inc., which has remained the strongest of the big companies through the depression, has just reported a net profit of $7,479,897, or $4.50 a share on 1,464,205 shares of common, after preferred dividends," continued the financial publication. "With cash and government securities totaling $12,527,649, it is probable that directors will consider increasing the present $1 dividend rate, or declare an extra within the next month. Loew's formerly paid

THE BOX OFFICE CHAMPIONS FOR OCTOBER

● October's race for the month's top honors at the nation's key theatre box offices brought a neck-and-neck finish. Seven productions led the field. Of these, two ran a "dead heat" to share first place, while just a step behind was the picture that "placed". One other tie paired two productions in fifth position. In October's list is "One Night of Love," which was also a Champion in September. Drama dominates the group, claiming four of the productions.

IMPROVED PROFITS SEEN

$3 regularly, but reduced the distribution when profits fell off in 1933 which seems to have been the low year for the industry. Now that business is on the mend, however, a start toward restoring dividends toward their former level will probably be made.

$3,500,000 Net Operating Earnings

"Net operating earnings of Paramount in the first six months of this year were approximately $3,500,000, and there is apparently a good chance that profit for the year will be in the neighborhood of $6,000,000, although how this estimate may be changed by final auditing and possible write-downs, cannot be determined at the moment. As of June 30, Paramount had total cash of $16,630,000, of which about $4,000,000 is in the hands of the receivers. It has been estimated that total cash on hand will be around $20,000,000 at the end of the year.

"This obviously furnishes an excellent basis for the reorganization of the company along the lines already published," Wall Street Journal said.

"The company may be set on its feet again by the first of February or perhaps before.

"No plans have yet been formulated for reorganizing Radio-Keith-Orpheum, but it is probable that steps to this end will be taken early in 1935," it was said.

"Radio-Keith reported a net profit of $423,131 after taxes in the quarter ended March 31, 1934, the last available figures, against a loss of $1,098,447 in the corresponding 1933 period.

Fox Position Strengthened

"Fox Film Co., which was reorganized in 1933 by scaling down the common stock and conversion of bonds (held by banking interest) into additional common, now has no substantial funded debt. Fox earned a net profit of $1,506,212, or 61 cents a share, on 2,436,409 shares of Class A and Class B common stock in the 39 weeks ended September 29. This compares with a net loss of $226,346 in the 1933 period.

"Fox has lost its direct ownership in the various theatre chains it formerly controlled through subsidiaries or affiliated companies, but still controls an adequate box office outlet, although now primarily only a producing company. Negotiations for the sale of its 49 per cent ownership in Gaumont British, Ltd., have been renewed and if completed will mean a substantial cash payment to Fox estimated at from $3,000,000 to $7,000,000 according to what terms may be agreed upon," concluded the Wall Street Journal.

Eastman Kodak this week declared an extra dividend of 75 cents, payable January 2nd to stockholders of record on December 5th. The regular dividend is $1 per share.

Gains Confirmed

Reports made during the week by the managements of both Warner Brothers Pictures and Universal confirmed the reports of gains in motion picture income.

Reflecting gains in theatre income was the annual report of the Wilmer and Vincent circuit, which indicated a net loss of $278,000 for the year ending July 31st, as compared with a loss of some $400,000 in the preceding year.

Universal Pictures Company, Inc., and subsidiaries, announced a net profit of $77,077 for nine months ended July 28, 1934, after deducting taxes and making provisions for depreciation and for a non-recurring loss of $158,608, which was in settlement of notes receivable from a theatre company in receivership and $10,000 for estimated loss on funds in closed banks.

The Universal net, which compared with a net loss of $728,747 in the same nine-month period of 1933, was equal to $4.31 a share (par $100) on 17,864 shares of 8 per cent cumulative first preferred stock on which there is an accumulation of unpaid dividends.

388 Theatres in 21 States

Current assets of Warner Brothers on August 25, 1934, when the company reported losses for the fiscal year totaling some $2,530,513, compared with a loss of $6,291,748, were $17,551,031 and current liabilities were $11,704,293.

Disclosing that the company now operates 388 theatres in 21 states, the Warner annual financial statement for the year ended August 25, 1934, pointed out that 1934 losses were the lowest in years—and which were topped by a record loss of $14,095,054 in 1932.

The operating deficit was credited with $5,099,789, arising principally from the settling of disputes with Electrical Research Products, Inc., over royalties claimed due on sound. Under this settlement the company received from Erpi $2,500,000 cash, notes aggregating $1,300,000 and other benefits worth $1,899,789. This credit considerably strengthened the company's financial position, aiding in the reduction of accumulated deficit from $19,547,005 to $16,346,563.

Warner gained $1,155,172 profit from the redemption of six per cent convertible debentures and preferred stocks and bonds of subsidiaries.

Net before charges was $26,828,737, which compared with earnings of $23,000,000 in 1933 and a like income for 1932. Charged against this were $18,160,000 for amortization of film, film costs and the like; amortization and depreciation of properties, $6,174,278; interest and miscellaneous charges, $5,303,508.

Mortgages and funded debt on August 25, 1934, totaled $86,487,734, compared with $90,627,930 in 1933; $96,922,500 in 1932 and $104,898,926 in 1931, representing a scaling down of such indebtedness by some $18,000,000 during the worst years of the depression.

Funded indebtedness due within one year aggregated $15,121,200, including $2,943,200 sinking fund and mortgage installment payments. It is expected the company will be successful in renewing mortgages as they mature and that bonds for sinking fund and installment payments may be purchased at cash discounts. Since August, 1934, more than $2,000,000 of mortgages due within one year have been renewed.

The company announced a new scale of amortization of the costs of positive prints whereby they are written off in 30 weeks instead of 52. Under the new schedule a film is devalued 74 per cent at the end of 13 weeks; 96 per cent at the end of 26 weeks and 100 per cent at the end of 30 weeks.

Double Featuring Suit Is Expanded

if fewer but much better films were made and double featuring eliminated."

Judge Welsh questioned Mr. Vincent as to the advisability of scaling down the high salaries of some of the "so-called" stars. "That is a moot question," Mr. Vincent replied, "and it is a question of how far the government should go in that matter. Would it be right?"—the witness turned the tables by querying the judge—"for the Government to say that Eugene Grace, president of the Bethlehem Steel Company, could not take the salary his company wanted to pay him?"

"I don't think that Ann Harding, for instance," said Mr. Vincent, "is overpaid, but I do think that some players who get $500 to $1,000 a week are not worth more than $100, $150 or $200."

Mr. Golder, plaintiff counsel, at this point brought up an echo of the recent split between the MPTO and the Independent Exhibitors' Association in the territory, by asking Mr. Vincent, who is treasurer of the MPTO, if it was not subsidized by the alleged "trust." This brought an indignant denial from Mr. Vincent. "I wouldn't allow myself to be subsidized by any one," he heatedly exclaimed.

Edward Jeffries, of Roxborough, testified that having put the double features question to his patrons, he had received a vote against them. He also said he had been commended by local school authorities for retaining single feature programs, which allowed room for educational shorts. Fred Leopold also testified to the probable elimination of good short subjects by widespread double-features.

The defense presented a long list of local exhibitors, by consent with the plaintiffs, taking depositions from them as being against the double feature.

Plaintiff's cross-examination to all this testimony rested mainly on two points: whether double features would mean more production, evidently seeking to prove a business stimulation, and whether each neighborhood had its own individual problem, seeking to establish a minority right to the practice.

Short Subjects Hurt

With the resumption of defense testimony Monday, witnesses wandered through a maze of subjects, cancellation privileges, church boycotts, exhibitors' organizations, short product, block booking all being mentioned.

In attendance is a group of New York home office executives and legal talent, including Al Lichtman, Ed Kuykendall, William Rodgers, E. W. Hammons, Ned Depinet, Harold Bareford, E. C. Granger, A. W. Smith, Jr., and J. Robert Rubin. Local exchanges were represented by Robert Lynch, Sam Gross, Earl Sweigart, Frank McNamee, William Mansell, Herb Given, S. E. Applegate and Harry Bodkin.

The defense testimony hammered at the disastrous effects of double featuring on short subjects. Mr. Lichtman testified to a slump of Mickey Mouse and Silly Symphony sales in double feature spots. Mr. Hammons told of a 66 per cent loss in revenue on short product due to double featuring in Detroit. Mr. Lichtman also traced the entrance of Fox, Metro, RKO and First National into the production end of the business. He denied that producers were wedging into the exhibition end of the industry by showing how exhibitors turned producers. Ed Depinet said that double features could lead to one of two things, increased admissions or poorer product.

Ed Kuykendall, president of the MPTOA, warned of the possibilities of poorer product from double featuring and an attendant lowering of moral and educational values. Mr. Golder refuted this by pointing out from Chicago lists that major product also had fallen under the ban of the Legion of Decency. This situation led into a wide open discussion of cancellation privileges and procedure.

In Washington this week, A. Julian Brylawski, president of the Washington Motion Picture Theatre Owners, told a luncheon meeting of the committee on photoplay appreciation of the National Council of Teachers of English—in convention at the nation's capital—that double featuring is "just bad business."

Short subjects, he said, have in part paid the penalty for double bills. He pointed out that in 1929 there were 1,262 shorts made, while in 1934 only 741 were produced.

The National Council adopted a resolution urging immediate abolition of double featuring.

In Cleveland, an injunction suit to restrain the Alhambra from showing duals was filed last week by Max Lefkovich, operator of the University theatre, in common pleas court. Mr. Lefkovich said the Alhambra is violating the Cleveland exhibitor agreement banning double featuring.

70 STORIES AND PLAYS BOUGHT IN NOVEMBER

Forty-one Original Stories Head Month's Purchase; 20 Books and 9 Plays Also Are Acquired

Original stories made further progress during November as a story source for Hollywood production, large distributors and some of the independent companies having purchased some 41 originals, 20 books, and nine plays during the month, a total of 70 purchases, as compared with 51 properties acquired in October and 75 in September.

Metro, as usual, was the most active buyer of story properties in November, acquiring 18 out of 70, with Paramount taking 12 and Fox, eight. Story purchases last month and comparisons with the two previous months were as follows:

Stories and plays purchased in recent weeks will, for the most part, be adapted to 1934-35 release schedules for the delivery of product contracted for by exhibitors. Virtually all companies, following custom, announced at the beginning of the season only partial lists of product in order to include timely subjects as they develop during the season.

Outstanding Purchases

Outstanding among November purchases—all having possibilities for good box office material—were Elizabeth Russell's book, "Enchanted April," Ring Lardner's "Alibi Ike" and "Haircut" stories, the former having been purchased by Radio for Ann Harding, and the Lardner material going to Warners.

Universal bought Ursula Parrott's "Good-bye Again," to star Margaret Sullivan; Metro took Edgar Selwyn's "Love While You May," assigned to Ramon Novarro and Evelyn Laye, and Paramount signed for J. P. McEvoy's "Man Alive!" which will probably feature Charles Laughton.

Dashiell Hammett was one of the most successful sellers of original material during the month.

Kathleen Norris's "Beauty's Daughter" went to Fox, Hugh Walpole's "Captain Nicholas" was taken by Metro, which also acquired John Van Druten's play, "Dis-taff Side."

Other Purchases

Other outstanding properties which were disposed of during the month for motion picture purposes included: parts of Rudyard Kipling's works, bought by Reliance; Anne Fellows' "Little Colonel" stories, taken by Fox; Arthur Somers Roche's "Shadow of Doubt," bought by Metro; sound rights to "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea," the Jules Verne piece, acquired by Metro, and Ferenc Molnar's play, "Girl from Trieste," another Metro acquisition.

Ben Hecht and Rose Caylor sold their "Man Eating Tiger" play to Fox; J. P. McEvoy disposed of his original, "One Big Family," to Paramount, and young Jesse L. Lasky, Jr., collaborating with Gladys Unger, negotiated the sale of his first play, "Private Beach," to Fox.

Radio acquired Phil Strong's "The Village," the Elser-Connelly play, "Farmer Takes a Wife" went to Fox, and Basil Woon's biography of Sarah Bernhardt was bought by Paramount.

MGM Accedes To Breen Dictum

Word from Culver City on Monday indicated that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will make all cuts ordered by Joseph I. Breen, Production Code Administrator, on the company's all-star production of "Forsaking All Others." Mr. Breen will review the film a second time.

It had been reported that there was some slight disagreement between Mr. Breen and Louis B. Mayer on what was to be deleted and what could remain in the original form, with Mr. Mayer refusing to make any changes until the matter had been satisfactorily explained to him.

Estimated Roxy Net Better Than $100,000

The net operating profit for the Roxy theatre in New York for the six months from July 1, 1934, to January 1, 1935, will be between $100,000 and $110,000, according to executives of the theatre. This is after interest on receiver's certificates, taxes, lobby rent and physical improvement, but before fixed charges on outstanding bonds. The figure compares with $2,600 for the same period one year ago. At least two re-organization plans are being considered by the bondholders' committee.

Exhibitor Names Texas Circuit in Restraint Action

R. Z. Glass, Dallas exhibitor, has filed suit in Dallas court against Karl Hoblitzelle, Robert J. O'Donnell, Interstate Circuit, Inc., Texas Consolidated Theatres, Inc., Southern Enterprises, Inc., Paschall-Texas Theatres, Inc., and Dent Theatres, Inc., charging the defendants with monopoly and restraint of trade, claiming that he is unable to bargain for product for his two theatres at admission prices determined by him by reason of the interference of the defendants. Mr. Glass's two theatres are the Knox and the Fair, both in Dallas. The suit went to trial Wednesday.

The plaintiff contends that Mr. O'Donnell is a member of the local zoning and clearance board and that Mr. Hoblitzelle is a member of the local grievance board, with the consequence that the defendants are able to control and dominate the rulings of the boards, which are dictated by Mr. O'Donnell and Mr. Hoblitzelle. He claims further that the defendants control the first run situation in Dallas, and in the complaint declares they are associated with Paramount-Publix Corporation, that association with major distribution permitting them to negotiate preferences without endangering an ample supply for their theatres.

The complaint further charges the defendants with exercising a monopoly of motion picture exhibition in the territory concerned, and acting in a restraining conspiracy with distributors. The plaintiff charges the defendants with seeking to destroy his business.

In order to insure himself sufficient product to maintain operation, the plaintiff asks a temporary injunction against the defendants, pending completion of the suit.

Vermont Showmen Seek Sunday Films

The Vermont Exhibitors' Association has inaugurated a state-wide movement for permission to operate motion picture theatres on Sunday evenings. The question will be placed before the Vermont legislature in January, according to R. A. Kiniry, secretary of the association.

The board of aldermen of Hartford, Conn., are to hold another public hearing this week to determine whether theatres shall be permitted to open after 2 p. m. on Sundays. The board is expected to act on the matter on December 10. A proposal for Sunday opening was tabled at a meeting on November 12.

The city council of Melrose, Mass., last week denied a petition to re-submit the question of Sunday motion pictures to the electorate on the ground that the city voted on the matter once this year, at a special election in April, and that they should not again in the same year be called upon to vote on the same question. The petition had asked that the question be submitted again at the local election this month.

CIRCUITS PROTEST STANDARD OIL'S PLAN FOR WHOLESALE FREE SHOWS

Socony Establishes Touring Troupe of Variety Entertainers, with Free Stage Plays, Radio and Vaudeville Shows

The Standard Oil Company of New York, embarked upon an unprecedented plan to blanket the nation with free entertainment of every type and description—except the motion picture—this week was jolted out of its ignoring of the possible damage to the film industry when national circuit leaders met in New York at the offices of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America to map plans to combat the Socony project.

In complete accord, theatre men agreed that Socony's exploitation shows are of sufficiently high caliber to make serious inroads on motion picture box offices on nights they are staged in cities of small and medium size and seriously to curtail patronage in others.

Socony has established a regular touring troupe of entertainers, headed by Guy Lombardo's orchestra, Cross and Dunn, film, stage and radio headliners, Jane Roberts and others billed as feature acts. Pat Barnes, popular Chicago radio announcer, is the troupe's master of ceremonies.

The meeting in the MPPDA offices last week marked the beginning of the first concerted drive of the film industry against the menace of free radio shows in theatres and against the new form of free entertainment, variety entertainment as sponsored by Socony for advertising purposes.

The situation came to a head on Saturday, although Socony's plans had been known for some time and the industry had been warned four weeks ago by Harry M. Warner, president of Warner Bros., to take some action in the matter before it was too late. But on Saturday the first "stand" of the Socony troupe was made at New Haven, Conn., in the New Haven theatre, a 2,000-seat legitimate house owned by the Shubert interests. At the New Haven opening the theatre was packed, with several hundred turned away. The show lasted two hours and was reported to have been unusually well received.

Protest Made to Rosenblatt

The exact line of motion picture opposition to Socony's great ballyhoo was not made known at the meeting in New York, but it is known that Warner Bros. previously had registered a protest with Compliance Director Sol A. Rosenblatt, and it is expected that the other circuits will follow suit, with hundreds of independent exhibitors cooperating with affiliated theatremen.

Any other methods of protest and retaliation suggested at last week's meeting will, it is understood, be held in abeyance until attempts have been made by industry leaders to arrive at some understanding with Socony officials. It is thought this may involve a request that admissions comparable to

WEDDING PICTURES CAUSE IRISH RIOTS

Young "fighting Irishmen," with a grudge against the English royal family, are keeping Dublin police alert and active, and the young men are "taking it out" on the theatres and screens showing pictures of the recent wedding of the Duke of Kent and Princess Marina of Greece. Young men booed and sang "The Soldiers' Song" at one theatre, and at another a group of about 100 men rushed into the theatre, demanding withdrawal of the film. When the management refused, the men went into action, mounting the stage and hacking the screen to pieces, then disappearing. Police protection is in order for other theatres showing the picture.

Neither Standard Oil officials nor representatives of any of the artists comprising the troupe would reveal the itinerary of the show. It is known, however, that Socony plans to send the group throughout the country, playing in theatres, hotel ballrooms or auditoriums of large seating capacity, with many of the programs to be broadcast nationally through local broadcasting facilities.

Itinerary Kept Secret

Music Corporation of America, Guy Lombardo's representative, declined this week to reveal the company's route, declaring that no publicity for it was desired, except locally.

At the New Haven opening, the sole admission requirement was an automobile driving license or a certificate of ownership—a fact which indicated that persons were expected to drive from miles around and the theatre was filled.

Socony this week was reported to have approached Paramount Publix—through an agency—with the suggestion that the company lease closed Paramount theatres in key localities for the oil company's performances. The proposition was reported to have been turned down.

Those executives attending the meeting Saturday in the MPPDA offices included Will H. Hays, Harry M. Warner, Charles C. Moskowitz and Louis K. Sidney, both of Loew's; Joseph Bernhardt, Warner; Edward Alperson, Skouras; and J. J. McCarthy and David Palfreyman of the MPPDA. Also present were representatives of the oil company and of Music Corporation of America.

Chicago Tribune Radio Theatre

Standard Oil is not alone among "big business" enterprises moving in on the motion picture through free entertainment. In Chicago last week the Chicago Tribune announced completion of a free radio theatre adjoining the Tribune building. The house, built after the best tradition of motion picture first-runs, will seat upward of 600, and the public will be invited gratis.

Standard Oil's entrance into the amusement field took another turn early this week when it was reported the oil company is financially interested in "The O'Flynn's," an operetta being brought to Broadway soon by Russell Janney. Standard Oil now plans to bring the musical to the air waves before its legitimate opening. The plan is to have the players currently rehearsing in the stage production also work in the broadcast.

Ed Kuykendall, MPTOA president, said his code committee on unfair competition is handicapped by absence of enforceable code provisions covering that type of entertainment and the refusal of its sponsors to cooperate with exhibitors.

German Pictures Hit by Goebbels

German motion picture production has come virtually to a standstill, and the production forces are in a state of bewilderment, reports from Berlin indicate, as a result of the unexpected and drastic attacks to which it has recently been subjected by Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, minister of propaganda.

He charged that the German output was without quality and recently suppressed two films after they had been approved by the German censor, on the ground that they were trash. It is pointed out that since the films banned were showing at Berlin theatres two weeks before they incurred the displeasure of the Minister, there may possibly have been other motives beside a regard for quality which led to the action. It is said that one of the suppressed films was financed by British interests, and that considerable foreign capital and credit is still at the disposal of German producers.

It is suggested that these foreign interests involved, however indirectly, in German production, may have led to the action, and a consequent overhauling of production plans by German producers. The Berliner Tageblatt issued a sharp editorial warning, pleading for greater latitude for producers.

TAX RULE NOW ADMITS COST TO INSTALL SOUND

Exhibitor May Also Include Transportation Expense, U.S. Board Holds; Five-Year Amortization

Expenses incurred by theatres for the transportation and installation of sound equipment—an item which affects exhibitors throughout the country—properly may be included by the exhibitor in the cost of the equipment, it was held last week by the United States Board of Tax Appeals.

Coincidentally, a test suit to determine the right of the Department of Internal Revenue to collect a 5 per cent sales tax on sound reproducing equipment will be inaugurated within two weeks by a group of 15 independent equipment manufacturers who met in New York Saturday.

Rendering its first decision in a case involving this point, brought before it in the appeal of Century Circuit, Inc., Delaware, the board not only held that such expenses may be considered part of the price paid for the license to use the equipment, but that the entire cost may be amortized over a period of five years, even though the commissioner of internal revenue had determined it had a useful life of ten years.

The Century company also was given relief from adverse determinations of the commissioner with respect to its treatment of previous-year losses, the board ruling that corporations having net losses in 1927 and 1928, and income in 1929 and 1930, may apply the 1927 net loss to 1929 income before resorting to the 1928 net loss for that purpose, and where the 1927 net loss is sufficient entirely to offset the 1929 income, the full amount of the 1928 net loss may be carried over to 1930. However, it was held, dividends received by a corporation from its affiliates may not be deducted from gross income for the purpose of computing net loss.

Contracts for 10 Years

The company, in 1928 and 1929, entered into contracts with Electrical Research Products, Inc., and RCA Photophone, Inc., for the installation and use of sound equipment in theatres operated by three of its affiliates. These contracts, the board pointed out in its opinion, granted the company in each case a "non-exclusive non-assignable license to use" the equipment to be installed. The contracts were to run for 10 years, but after the first two years the company could terminate them upon six months' notice. The company was required by the contracts to pay the cost of transportation of the equipment and to pay installation costs in amounts specified, and was required to pay, for the use of the equipment, specified amounts weekly or monthly during the first two years of the contracts and thereafter to pay according to the "then current schedules" of the licensors' charges for the use of such equipment, and was also to pay for additional equipment or renewal parts and for services rendered by the licensors during the life of the contract.

In its returns for 1929 and 1930 the company made deductions for installation charges and the weekly or monthly payments under the contracts, which were disallowed by the commissioner of internal revenue who, however, allowed deductions for amortization of the licenses at the rate of 20 per cent a year, and also allowed deductions, as expenses, for service charges in connection with the use of the equipment.

At the hearing before the board, the commissioner moved to increase the deficiency on the ground that amortization should be allowed at the rate of 10 per cent. by reason of the licenses having a 10-year life.

"The evidence of both parties in support of their claims is insufficient to warrant our disturbing the respondent's determination, which is presumptively correct," the board held. "All that we have is the contracts. The fact that certain payments are designated transportation or installation cost does not establish error in the respondent's requiring them to be capitalized.

Disagrees with Commissioner

"Considering the contracts in their entirety, it appears that under them the petitioner acquired a license, the cost of which may be said to be the amount expended in installation of the equipment it was licensed to use. The contracts alone do not establish affirmatively that exhaustion should be spread over 10 years rather than the five-year period used in determining the deficiency."

The forthcoming test suit against the Department of Internal Revenue by 15 independent sound equipment manufacturers is sponsored by J. A. Tanney, head of Sales-On-Sound Corporation. The suit is designed to determine whether or not the department legally can impose a 5 per cent tax on sound reproducing equipment, especially the loudspeaker, under a luxury tax passed in 1932. Assessments will be levied against the 15 manufacturers to finance the federal court action. Names of the manufacturers, with the exception of SOS, were withheld.

Sarnoff Denies Reported Prediction on Television

David Sarnoff, president of the Radio Corporation of America, late last week denied published reports that he had said earlier in the week that home television sets would be ready for installation on January 1. He reiterated his statement, made in the annual report to RCA stockholders last February, when he declared that the work of the year under review, which was 1933, "has brought us much nearer the goal, when transmission of sight will supplement transmission of sound."

U. S. WAR FILMS NEED PROTECTION

Extremely valuable film, negative and positive, totaling nearly 1,500,000 feet, and concerned with the World War, may be lost unless immediate steps are taken to duplicate it. The rapidly aging stock is in the possession of the United States Army Signal Corps and is stocked in its heat-controlled, fireproof vaults at Washington. Some of the material has been shown to the public as part of features of various producers, but other portions of it have never been screened. The Budget Bureau has been apprised of the need for an appropriation of $35,000 for the protection of the invaluable film. It is hoped the amount will be appropriated in the next War Department appropriation.

Allied Survey Shows MGM Leads in Percentage

MGM leads on percentage contracts in the local New York territory, according to a survey made last week among members of Allied of New Jersey at the regular meeting at the Hotel Lincoln in New York. Following in order are Fox, Warner, Paramount, Columbia, RKO, Universal and United Artists.

Voting on the basis of 24 members present, 20 declared they had bought MGM product on percentage. None listed the company on a flat rental contract. Thirteen companies, major and independent, were listed. On flat rental deals, Universal was first, with Hollywood and Capitol Exchange tied for second ranking.

MPPDA Officials To Attend Crime Conference

Carl E. Milliken, Charles C. Pettijohn and Gabriel Hess of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America will be among those attending the conference on crime, called by Attorney General Cummings at Washington, December 10 to 13. Represented will be the three national broadcasting organizations, the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, National Educational Association, a number of religious groups and newspapers and press associations, among others.

Universal Club Holds Annual Affair at Astor

ASIDES & INTERLUDES

By JAMES CUNNINGHAM

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S "Relieve Unemployment" agencies will be glad to learn that Howard Hughes, tool-and-oil wealthy Texan, and, at one time a producer, is coming back to the business of making pictures. Mr. Hughes has been quiet since "Scarface" (Paul Muni, United Artists, 1932). Another Howard Hughes "Hell's Angels" would solve Hollywood's unemployment problems in a jiffy.

At 20, Howard Hughes, nephew of writer Rupert Hughes, who was a brother to Howard's father, deceased, took in hand the active management of the vast and profitable Hughes tool manufacturing and oil properties in Texas—some job.

At 26, up-and-coming Howard went west to Hollywood and spent some $4,000,000 and two-and-a-half years making one (1) motion picture—"Hell's Angels," a flying trapeze in celluloid.

Into the production Mr. Hughes poured regiments of actors, carloads of cameramen, technicians, aviators and electricians, and at least one vanload of directors. It was a sensation, cleaning Hollywood of all unemployed Hamlets, Edisons and Eastmans. It out-DeMilled Cecil Blount in its lavishness of production and out-lengthed von Stroheim with one sweep, which established a record at the start.

Production ran from days (quickies) into weeks (independents) into months (majors), and, finally into years ("Ben Hur"), until, tired of being cut off from Hollywood, many people withdrew on the grounds that their careers would suffer because, if they continued in "Hell's Angels," they would lose their identities.

Out of "Hell's Angels" came: (1) Jean Harlow and her platinum hair; (2) Hollywood's first real "Angel"; (3) the first honest-to-goodness double opening on Broadway on the same night—with arc lights, real mink and sable coats, top hats and policemen to hold back the curious crowds; (4) the longest press party ever held in this industry (an enviable record), running continuously through three days at the Hotel Astor, 1930. (Mr. Hughes bought out a whole Times Square speakeasy and transferred the speakeasies and their liquid assets to the second floor, right, of the Astor). Also out of "Hell's Angels" came the all-time record for motion picture cost—and, a profit.

Most people picture a dance director as a fluttery, lisping, artistic fellow in a tinted turtleneck sweater, a pair of wide-bottom trousers and a chain bracelet—a kind of terpsichorean. Not so with Paramount's Le Roy Prinz, a stocky, belligerent, stunt-flying, duel-fighting, ex-war ace, whose major fault, Paramount says, "seems to be that he just can't keep out of trouble." The Los Angeles police recently had him on the carpet to explain a series of fresh blade cuts that streaked across his arms and chest. The coppers said he had been in a duel. Prinz challenged them to prove it. He's a tough hombre.

Seldom does such a remarkable gathering of notables assemble in one room as that which came together the other day at the Department of Agriculture in Washington. Present were: Herbert Hoover, Mary Pickford, Grace Coolidge, David Lloyd George, Betsy Ross, Admiral Beatty, Henry Wallace, and others. The room was a greenhouse of the Agriculture Department. The "notables" were carefully cultured chrysanthemums, on display in the department's annual "mum" show.

Prints of new motion pictures revealing certain United States naval aircraft devices which other countries do not possess have been acquired in some secret manner by foreign powers who will adopt the new tactics. Rigid instructions governing future motion picture production of naval activities on the inside are expected to be issued momentarily by Washington. "Here Comes the Navy."

Warner Brothers are given credit for "finding" Ethel Merman, songstress and comedienne, then struggling as an entertainer at a 57th Street New York Russian restaurant. Fox is getting ready to produce "In Old Kentucky," that hardy perennial that was written in 1882 by Charles T. Dazey, who is eighty years young and is still writing stories for the screen. Mr. Dazey has sold the film rights to his "Kentucky" number three times (First National, 1919, for $144,000; Metro, 1927, now Fox). The stage has been paying him royalties for nearly forty years.

One year ago last Monday the President affixed his signature and a Blue Eagle to a document which some persons were pleased to call: "The National Recovery Administration's Code of Fair Competition for the Motion Picture Industry." There are a few pronounced optimists who still believe that it will work.

Fiery blasts against the ol' red debbil are flashing forth nightly from a pulpit in Kansas City's Gospel Center, where Sister Edith Mae Pennington is preaching the gospel as guest evangelist.

Sister Ann arrived in town the other day to the tunes of a brass band and the lusty voices of the brethren raised high in the strains of "Hallelujah." Brother O'Guin, the shepherd of the Gospel Center flock, bought space in the newspapers to tell the townsfolk that Sister "was miraculously converted" from a Hollywood screen career.

Though the frost is on the "punkin" and the snow is on the ground, the marquee of the Publix Newman theatre in Kansas City still maintains that the house is "closed for the summer."

Was it Sam Goldwyn who said: "What good is a verbal contract, tell me! It ain't worth the paper it's written on!"

Schoolboy chums of Will Rogers who attended Willie Halsell college, at Vinta, Oklahoma, with him, called him "Rabbit" in their 'teens, partly because he could run so fast and partly because his ears stuck out so far. Returning to the old Indian territory recently, for a school reunion, Will told the townsfolk that he stopped his education "just in time or I would have been a senator." He offered to take some of the old timers back to Hollywood with him "to prove I attended Willie Halsell, because out there, they don't believe I ever went to school."

HOLLYWOOD, no stranger to strange people, has "The Reverend" in its midst again.

"The Reverend" is a young fellow, ambitious, if not eccentric, who applied some time ago to the Hollywood branch of the Hays organization for credentials which would permit him to pass the closely guarded gates to the studios. Loud repercussions accompanied the refusal. Regardless, he subsequently visited all of the production places, without passes, got the generally-unknown home addresses of some of our most retiring stars, serenading nearly-forty Zasu Pitts in the old fashioned way.

"The Reverend" always carried with him a brief case, empty, an umbrella and a baby attired in long dresses suggestive of the nineties. He climbed balconies, rang doorbells and telegraphed freely. Alienists examined him one morning and promptly procured train reservations for a free trip eastward, destination unknown.

Now he's back again with letters from some fan magazine editors who apparently have been led to believe that he has an inside track—which he has, leading toward the exit. While waiting for studio credentials, he's fiddling away on his violin on Hollywood's boulevards, standing in the rain and looking for the moon—and Joe Breen.

P. S.: Walter Wanger has just engaged Dr. Samuel Marcus, eminent mental scientist, to show the cast of "Private Worlds," which is about an insane asylum, how to act mentally unbalanced. Mr. Wanger is actually paying the Doctor for the lessons. And in Hollywood.

The motion picture code has raised Sol Rosenblatt from the obscurity of a Broadway law office to the position of importance in the National Recovery Administration that rates inclusion, for the first time, in "Who's Who in America," that very exclusive biographical text containing the life-sketches of only 31,000 "notable living men and women" of this country's 120,000,000 inhabitants. "Who's Who" describes Mr. Rosenblatt thusly:

ROSENBLATT, Sol. A(riah), lawyer; born Omaha, Neb., Dec. 11, 1900; son of Morris M. and Mollie Rosenblatt. We note that Cecil Blount De Mille, evangel of the bath, has decided that the English language is just about on its last and has written to some 30 English professors asking what can be done about it. If Cecil B. is able to do half as much for English as he did for bathtubs, a conversation between a film salesman and an exhibitor in the future will sound something like this:

Salesman: "It is reahllly a most excellent bahgain, old chappie. You cawn't possibly go wrong."

Exhibitor: "Tell me, my good fellow, is this a restricted sale? I simply cawn't have any other theatah ownah in the tedditody impinging on my rights."

Theatre Fights Paper's Reviews

The reduction of advertising lineage to a minimum, together with a joint protest by the management and two exchanges, recently marked the first definite action taken against newspapers in New Orleans by a theatre protesting the method of reviewing pictures employed.

The St. Charles is the theatre chiefly involved. The manager of the house, together with the representatives of Bromberg Attractions and First Division, planned to call upon the publisher of the Item, and attempt to show that the reviews on "Redhead" and "Cheaters" by Herman B. Deutsch were unnecessarily harsh and were at odds with the preponderance of opinion of leading writers. Trade paper reviews will be used to prove the point.

Although other local theatres are not involved in this particular situation, they have frequently protested the method of reviewing, especially with respect to the star rating system.

Time Reel in January As First Division Release

The "March of Time" was officially announced on Wednesday as a First Division release, starting in January, to appear as a two-reel subject once each month.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD, in the issue of November 17, published details of the proposed production of the "Time" reel and the method of distribution.

Bamberger Made Sales Promotion Manager of RKO

With the broadening of his duties to take in additional phases of sales promotion, Leon J. Bamberger was officially appointed sales promotion manager of RKO Distributing Corporation this week by Ned E. Depinet, president.

Bamberger has been engaged in sales promotion work for some time without title.

Plan Amusement Center For Charleston, W. Va.

Plans are being completed for the construction of a miniature Madison Square Garden, an amusement center, in Charleston, W. Va., owned by Charles A. Midelburg, who also operates the local Capitol theatre. D. A. Carmichael is the architect. The auditorium planned will have a seating capacity of from 3,000 to 3,500, providing accommodation for numerous indoor sporting events, as well as vaudeville, circuses and motion pictures. Western Electric sound and amplifying systems are to be installed. Remodeling, sound equipment and construction is to cost about $75,000, with more than 16,000 square feet of floor space available. Equipping the building is expected to cost $20,000.

Sol A. Rosenblatt, in his new governmental post as compliance director, has approximately 1,600 persons on his staff, with a monthly payroll of $340,000.

CLEAN FILMS AID SALE ABROAD, SAYS BARKER

Hollywood's response to the clean picture demand crystallized in the Legion of Decency movement is making the American motion picture vastly better international merchandise in the opinion of J. H. Barker, Jr., managing director of Western Electric Company, Australia, Ltd., who arrived in New York from Sydney this week.

"The reaction of the motion picture industry of Australia and related territories has been most favorable," remarks Mr. Barker. "It is perhaps not realized here how close the motion picture industry is to the government in Australia and how readily complaints aimed at quota restrictions and the like can get bearing in important places. Material not adjusted to the standards of conduct and viewpoints of the whole public can all too easily afford talking points that can grow into commercial obstacles and problems."

"Australia now expects, and doubtless is to get, a flow of product which will be found much more generally acceptable and which will conduce to vastly better business."

New York Meeting Set To Name Wage Scales

Sol A. Rosenblatt, NRA compliance director, is expecting to call a meeting for Friday of this week at which union circuit and independent heads would attempt to set up a basic wage scale for the New York territory. Mr. Rosenblatt is expected in New York Thursday to attend the regular Code Authority session, the union conference following the next day.

About two weeks ago a fact finding committee reported its findings to Washington, on the basis of which a wage scale is to be set up. It is expected that small houses may have to pay about $80 weekly for operation of the projection booth. It has been indicated that Mr. Rosenblatt may demand a truce between the rival New York unions.

Vocafilm Petition in Trust Suit Is Argued

A motion to prevent American Telephone and Telegraph Company, Western Electric and Electrical Research Products from filing an amended answer in the $65,000,000 anti-trust suit of Vocafilm Corporation of America was argued early this week before Federal Judge John C. Knox. The matter is being held under advisement by the court.

The Wall Street Journal has inaugurated a motion picture preview department, and has named Harold Barham, son of Dr. Frank Barham, part owner of the Herald-Express, Coast daily, to the position of reviewer from Hollywood.

French Quota To Extend 6 Months

By PIERRE AUTRE
Paris Correspondent

The existing French quota, which was to have expired on December 31, was extended for an additional six months by the government at Paris last week.

Under the present quota, 94 foreign films may be imported but all the dubbing on them must be done in France. This does not affect American product, but is aimed at other quota countries.

American motion pictures, however, will continue to be restricted to exhibition in only 15 theatres in the entire country, as has been true in the past.

Gaumont Film Has Charity Opening in New York City

"Jack Ahoy," Gaumont-British musical film, starring Jack Hulbert, had its New York premiere Monday evening at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel with a $10-per-ticket admission, the proceeds going to the Travelers' Aid Society. "The Iron Duke," of the same company and starring George Arliss, opened last week at the Tivoli in London. The Prince of Wales was the honored guest.

New appointments to the Gaumont sales staff include: Jack Erickson, San Francisco; Tony Hartford, Seattle; Gene Spear, Seattle; David McElhinney, Salt Lake City; E. E. Andreason, Denver; Milton J. Hill, Boston.

Decency Move Spreads Into Western Canada

The Legion of Decency movement, recently begun in Ontario, Canada, has spread to western Canada, according to reports from Toronto. Archbishop O'Leary, at Edmonton, Alberta, has requested members of his diocese to sign appropriate pledges. Churchmen of other denominations have also entered the campaign. In the Maritime Provinces, however, the church there is reported disinterested, with the indication that "there is no need" of the Legion of Decency.

Annual Amateur Awards Made by "Movie Makers"

Movie Makers, magazine of the Amateur Cinema League, New York, has announced its fifth annual selection of the 10 best amateur motion pictures of the year. A definite improvement in the quality of the work was pointed out by the publication. All winners are members of the league, an international organization of amateurs, of which the president is Hiram Percy Maxim, Hartford, Conn. Among the winners were members from all sections and from abroad.

Kent, on Return, Denies Reports Of Gaumont Deal

Denying that Fox Film Corporation had received an offer to sell its 49 per cent interest in Gaumont British, as reported three weeks ago, and asserting there will not be any such offer, Sidney R. Kent, Fox president, arrived in New York on Tuesday after a six-weeks trip abroad. Mr. Kent had spent the majority of his time in England and was particularly enthusiastic about business conditions throughout the British Isles.

"I did not go over to negotiate a deal for the sale of the stock," he said, referring to the reported Gaumont deal, "and reports that Fox would sell are a lot of publicity inspired by some one. My trip to England was to hold a sales convention and handle some other routine business."

Mr. Kent said that while English business conditions are very good, "the rest of the countries are spotty."

Prior to his departure from England for the United States, Mr. Kent told the Daily Film Renter, British trade publication, that European film business for American companies, outside of England, is practically worthless at present and future prospects are not good.

Great Britain, he told the Film Renter, is yielding 25 per cent or more of the export revenue. The German decision to impose a tax of approximately $5,000 per feature on imported films virtually rules Germany out of the field, Mr. Kent said.

In Czechoslovakia, Mr. Kent told the British journal, the position had until lately been an impossible one, as the contingent only permitted import of so many pictures for each one produced in that country. The difficulty of that ruling, he emphasized, was that the country was absolutely barren of the means of production, so that, even if they wished, importers could not conform to the regulations.

The Spanish situation at present is naturally uncertain, in view of the recent disturbances, while in France and Italy the desire to nurse the home industry had led to difficulties for the importers, he said.

"South America, too, has its domestic troubles as a bar to development in that market," he said.

"In brief, the whole foreign field bristles with these problems and it is a relief to turn to Great Britain, which continues to progress smoothly and to yield a satisfactory return."

Discuss Formation Of Film Institute

Representatives of a number of educational organizations met behind closed doors in Washington Tuesday with officials of the United States Department of Education, for discussion of a proposed new organization to be known as the American Film Institute. This organization, it is said, plans to function along the same lines as the British Film Institute.

The institute will have as its aim the improvement of programs and the development of a program of educational feature production which will permit greater use of films for school work.

SUITABILITY LICENSE FOR FILMS PROPOSED

Separate Grants for Adult and Children's Films Asked for New York City Territory

Separate licensing of motion pictures for adults and for minors, and national regulation of the industry, "as a last resort," were recommended by John S. Roberts, associate superintendent of schools of New York City, in a report this week made public by Superintendent Harold G. Campbell. Mr. Campbell forwarded copies of the report to Will H. Hays and to the motion picture division of the Department of Education at Albany.

Official listing of films recommended for children and adolescents, and those not approved by the State Board of Education, which is the parent of the New York State Censor Board, also was proposed.

Chief Recommendations

The chief recommendations made by Dr. Roberts in his report include the following:

1. That the attitude of educators toward the motion picture industry be one of cooperation and assistance, rather than of hostility and repression, and that educators continue their vigilance in the movement for improved films.
2. That the schools continue to strive to raise the standard of taste among their pupils by leading them to appreciate and love good literature, good plays, good films, good speech and good music.
3. That society meet the motion picture industry on its own ground and provide additional means for community enjoyment and the use of leisure time far beyond the point to which these means are provided today.

Opposes Sensational Films

4. That the film industry discontinue the production of films that are sensational and appeal to low motives and passions, as being unworthy of their attention, and encourage the production of films that will make their industry a worthy ally of the forces in the community that are working for the improvement and ennoblement of youth, the removal of temptations and of incentives of crime, and the development in young people of high ideals of conduct and service.

5. That the industry produce some of the great masterpieces of literature; that the industry reissue from time to time those pictures that experience has shown possess a permanent appeal.

6. That good pictures be not withdrawn from circulation so quickly as at present.

7. That parents and teachers keep themselves informed on the suitability for children of new pictures.

Separate Licensing

8. That the present (New York State) law with respect to the licensing of motion pictures be amended so as to provide for the separate licensing of films for adults and films for minors.

9. That the law, with respect to the admission of children to motion picture theatres, be more strictly enforced.

10. That the schools be supplied with sufficient money to purchase equipment and films for the showing of good pictures as part of the regular visual instruction program.

If what Dr. Roberts described as the present unsatisfactory condition in the motion picture industry continues, he suggested that "society may be forced to consider the advisability of applying to this industry, at least as far as pictures which affect children and adolescents, a system of national planning and regulation of its practices and output.

"This, however, should be done only as a last resort," said Dr. Roberts.

"Fundamentally," the report stated, "the problem confronting the schools and the public generally is the problem of improving the tastes and standards of the public. It is the same problem which is met in questions relating to the improvement of the stage, books, civic standards and ideals and all other improvements for better living."

"The public has the remedy in its own hands. If it likes good pictures it will refuse to patronize the poor ones. If poor pictures are not patronized they will not be produced."

Production Under Father's Name Aim Of Selznick's Sons

A motion picture producing company of their own is understood to be the ambition of the brothers David O. and Myron Selznick, who would revive the old trade name of "Lewis J. Selznick Productions," in memory of their father.

David Selznick in Hollywood on Tuesday declined to comment on his plans, because, he said, "they are too indefinite."

Materialization of the Selznicks' reported plans for independent production would, it is assumed, necessitate his resignation from the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio at Culver City, where he has been an executive producer since early 1933, having produced for that company "Dinner at Eight," "Night Flight," "Meet the Baron," "Viva Villa" and "David Copperfield."

Myron Selznick has been active in the Hollywood agency business, managing talent, for some five years, lately in association with Frank Joyce.

Four years younger than David, who is 32, Myron was general manager in charge of production of the old Lewis J. Selznick company.

Robert Roden, Film Editor, Song Writer, Dies Suddenly

Representatives of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Fox, RKO Radio, Universal and the Marks Music Corp., this week attended the funeral of Robert F. Roden, film editor and song writer, who died of apoplexy last week.

Mr. Roden adapted many works for the films, his outstanding achievement being "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," produced by Universal with the late Lon Chaney.

Disney Sues on Infringement

Infringement of Disney characters is charged against J. Schein and Company by Walt Disney in a suit filed in federal court in New York on Tuesday. Mr. Disney charged the defendant with either printing or lithographing his characters on cards.

MAXWELL APPROVES RESTRICTED BUILDING

Exhibitors' Proposal That Local Licensing Officials Decide Is Endorsed by Renters' Head

By BRUCE ALLAN
London Correspondent

Even more important than publication by the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association of its pamphlet, "Are There Too Many Cinemas?" is the fact that the expressed policy has received the approval of the president of the Kinematograph Renters Society, John Maxwell.

"Redundancy" became a vital trade problem after Mr. Sam Eckman, Jr., had read a paper on the subject at the CEA Summer Conference at Blackpool, in which he advocated formation of a joint exhibitor-renter committee to pass on all new plans for cinema erection. Activities in defiance of such body's decisions would have entailed refusal of film supplies.

Statement of Trade Principle

To this method of meeting the problem strong opposition was offered by Mr. Maxwell, and so busily was the controversy waged in the trade press that an agreed policy seemed almost impossible. This danger appears to be removed by Mr. Maxwell's declaration that the policy laid down in "Are There Too Many Cinemas?" has his approval by reason of its dependence on action through the local licensing authorities. Therefore the conclusions may be regarded as a statement of principle to which the whole trade subscribes.

The most important feature is the legal opinion of Tyldesley Jones, K.C., that a local licensing body have "an absolute discretion to refuse to grant a license for a building not yet erected."

Furthermore, says this authority, "they may consider the number of cinemas already in the district and whether it is in the public interest that a license for a new cinema should be granted . . . they must do this from the point of view . . . of the public interest, not of the effects of the new cinema on existing cinemas by reducing their profits. The power to refuse a license must not be exercised for the purpose of benefiting the existing licensees, though a refusal . . . is not invalidated because it enures for the benefit of the existing licensees."

Speculators' Hunting Ground

In a foreword, W. E. Fuller, general secretary of the CEA, makes plain that the association policy is designed to provide a remedy for the fact that "the exhibiting side of the industry remains the happy hunting ground of the building speculator. . . . With local money a cinema is built and then sold or leased to someone who is impressionable enough to take it over. The promoters take their profit and then look for another site. The financial effect upon the existing cinemas is not their concern."

A postscript by Mr. Eckman to his Blackpool paper, which is reprinted in full in the CEA pamphlet, is another significant feature. Combating the suggestion that he is opposed to all new theatre erections, Mr. Eckman says: "There are, as we all know, neighborhoods which definitely need new cinemas, because the old ones, or some of them, are either out of date or else do not supply the amount of luxury seating which modern needs demand. To oppose building in such neighborhoods would be . . . very like opposing the pulling down of slum property and the substitution of modern and comfortable homes."

It will be seen that "Are There Too Many Cinemas?" provides very valuable aid to the exhibitor by its authoritative statement of opinion that opposition to new licenses may be based on sound legal grounds. Apart from this the propaganda value of the publication is likely to be considerable. It will be brought prominently before the notice of licensing authorities, and there is no doubt that it will create an atmosphere in which all requests for endorsement of new enterprises will be regarded critically. This is not, on paper, so striking as a booking boycott but within its limits it will be effective and it will also be impartial.

Another Bernstein Deluxer

Sidney Bernstein has made a very big purchase in taking over the Manchester Hippodrome from Sir Oswald Stoll. This is one of the most famous theatrical buildings in the provinces. It was a "last word" in its day, but Mr. Bernstein is going to make the phrase applicable in another way. He is pulling the whole place down to make room for a 2,750-seat film house, with a basement restaurant seating 350 and foyer accommodations on the grand scale. Demolition begins early in the new year.

Four to Direct RKO Radio

A committee of management, composed of E. D. Leishman, as chairman; Ralph Hanbury, Frank Tilley and C. Dawson, in the future will operate Radio Pictures, Ltd., thus abolishing the post of managing director formerly occupied by Sol G. Newman, and left vacant at his death last month. Mr. Hanbury has been named general manager. The appointments confirm the declaration in New York recently by Ned Depinet, president of RKO Distributing, that promotions would be made from within the ranks.

Pay, Pay, Pay!

It is now official that the new levy on Sunday receipts in London will be 14 per cent of the certified net takings, less Entertainment Duty. This is one per cent less than was feared and just 100 per cent more than film men feel is equitable, but the British exhibitor is so used to demands for payment that the general feeling is one of relief that it is no worse.

Of the sum realized, 95 per cent goes to charities approved by the authorities and 5 per cent to the Cinematograph Fund which subsidizes the British Film Institute.

Fairbanks Out of London

The dis-association of Douglas Fairbanks and London Film Productions goes a great deal farther than the cabled reports of American statements appear to suggest. Alexander Korda, as stated, has taken over the Fairbanks share holdings in London, but there has also been a complete cancellation of the arrangements by which Fairbanks seemed likely to make a series of films for London. He is out as a star as well as a shareholder, and Alexander Korda's hope that he will return to make another British picture "one day" reads less like a prophecy than a desire to underline the "perfectly friendly" nature of the parting.

Million Dollar Fire at Warner Studio on Coast

Flames menaced the entire 80-acre studio of Warner Brothers at Burbank, Cal., late Tuesday night, and before being brought under control destroyed shops and equipment variously valued upon rough estimation at between $500,000 and $1,000,000. There will be no interference in the release schedule.

Albert Rounder, 65, chief of the studio fire department, was overcome by smoke and died later.

Entire fire departments of Los Angeles, Burbank, Hollywood and nearby communities were rushed to the scene to check the blaze, which, for a time, was reported to be out of control.

The fire, starting on the west side of the Burbank studio, in the carpenter shop, was of unknown origin. It quickly spread to period and property structures, devouring furniture and "props" accumulated over a period of years. Several street scenes were lost as the blaze ravaged the property.

The blaze was discovered about 1:30 o'clock Wednesday morning by Michael Curtiz, director of Paul Muni's new picture, "Black Fury," and by Muni, who gave the alarm and assisted in fighting the flames.

Harry M. Warner, president of the company, said on Wednesday: "The fire at our Burbank studio was confined to the south end of the lot and fortunately did not reach the sound stages or the administration building. Therefore the production of the pictures which we now have in work will not be impeded and our release schedule will not be interfered with. My brother, J. L. Warner, vice-president in charge of production on the coast, has assured me by telephone that the blaze on the back lot has not affected any of these productions in any way. All the damage is covered by insurance."

Trans-Lux Officers Answer Show Cause Order

Officers of Trans-Lux Daylight Picture Screen Corporation this week in Wilmington, Del., filed an answer in chancery court to the recent ruling of Chancellor Josiah O. Wolcott directing them to show cause why a stockholders' petition for appointment of a master to conduct a stockholders' meeting for election of officers should not be granted.

The officers claim the charges against them were not made in good faith and that these stockholders are seeking to control the board, "to set aside or disastrously change" a contract merger with News Projection Corporation in order that News Projection may be released from judgment of the supreme court of New York. Dismissal of the petition is asked.

Warners Annual Meeting And Election Is Set

Having obtained from stockholders the necessary number of proxies to conduct business, Warner Brothers annual corporate meeting will be held at Wilmington, Del., on December 10 as scheduled.

Five vacancies will occur in the board of directors, but to date no nominees have been selected for balloting. Elections will follow in New York on December 18. No changes in the executive setup are expected.

New Independent Group Is Proposed

A new national exhibitor organization, restricted to independents, with local units according to Congressional districts, and an exhibitor leader in each state for every congressman, is being discussed in New York by independent theatre men. Crystallization of the plan will depend largely, they say, on cooperation from theatre men in the field.

Both the Independent Theatre Owners Association and Allied of New Jersey have been approached on the plan. It is understood Allied is in favor of the proposal. Leon Rosenblatt, independent New York circuit operator, conferred Tuesday with Sidney E. Samuelson, Allied head, on the plan.

In Iowa, climaxing a campaign for organized action in release of pictures for the betterment of society, which are said to have been held up in many cases through producer-distributor and affiliated contacts in certain territories of the Middlewest, exhibitor leaders last week organized the Society for the Protection and Advancement of the Motion Picture Screen.

The primary aim of the group is said to be to institute an immediate investigation of the industry in its operation in Iowa. The organization charged that the MPPDA is not cooperating with code requirements.

Members of Allied last week were warned by Abram F. Myers, general counsel, not to "get panicky" over the Tri-Ergon patents situation and not to take title to their sound equipment pending further developments. A directors' meeting is scheduled for December 11-12 in New Orleans.

In Des Moines this week, Leo F. Wolcott, of Eldora, was elected president of the Allied unit in that state, succeeding E. O. Ellsworth. Lester F. Martin was named business manager.

Among those expected to attend the convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina at Charlotte Sunday and Monday are W. Ray Johnston, Ed Kuykendall, Fred Wehrenberg and John C. Flinn.

CONTRACT RULING TO SUPREME COURT

Highest Tribunal To Interpret Minnesota Ruling That Arbitration Clause Nullified Contract

An interpretation of the scope and effect of the consent decree rendered in 1930 by Federal Judge Thacher, a decision affecting the legality of thousands of contracts between exhibitors and distributors and holding the arbitration provisions of the uniform contract illegal, is to be handed down early next year by the United States supreme court, which on Monday agreed to review a decision of the Minnesota supreme court in which it was held that the illegality of the arbitration clause had so permeated the entire contract as to make it void.

The court's consideration of the license agreement, ordered on an appeal of Fox Film Company, is expected to follow its decision on the Tri-Ergon patent case, on which oral argument probably will be heard about January 14.

The contract case originated in an action by Fox Film to enforce payment under contracts with A. B. Mueller, Minnesota exhibitor, for 46 pictures for $1,837. Mr. Mueller refused to accept the pictures, or play or pay, and at his request Fox shipped five additional pictures to him, which he also refused and for which he would not pay the fee or the $8.92 transportation charges.

State Court Accepts View

The exhibitor successfully pleaded that the contracts were the result of combination and conspiracy in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law; and in restraint of trade.

Declaring that unless the court clarify its decision in the Paramount case in which Judge Thacher made his ruling outlawing the arbitration clause, "the fourth largest industry and more than 22,000 theatre owners will be swamped with litigation for years," the Fox company asked that four questions be decided, as follows:

1. Whether it was the intent of the supreme court in the Paramount case to hold the entire standard exhibition contract illegal and void by reason that its arbitration provision was in violation of the anti-trust laws;
2. Whether it was the intent of the court to determine that under that decision and decree the illegality of the arbitration provisions permeated or tainted or infected the entire contract and made it illegal and void;
3. Whether, under the decree, the court intended to save to distributors and exhibitors certain rights under said contract, it being pointed out that the decree held that "nothing contained in this decree shall be construed as prohibiting any defendant or any member of any defendant film board of trade from performing and/or continuing to enforce, by any lawful means, any contractual obligation the performance or enforcement of which is consistent with the provisions of this decree";
4. Whether it was the intent of the court to deprive both parties of all further rights and obligations.

In its brief, Fox Film explained that the Minnesota supreme court, after admitting that only the arbitration clause is illegal and that the valid remainder is enforceable, subsequently held that "the illegal arbitration clause taints the whole contract with illegality." The effect of such a decision, it was argued, is to deprive the company of the title, right, privilege and immunity guaranteed by the Constitution. Further, it was held, four state courts of last resort and three federal courts have held that the illegal arbitration provision did not make the entire contract void.

"If the correct interpretation of the Paramount case is that there was nothing illegal in the standard exhibition contract except the arbitration clause and that it did not permeate and make illegal the remainder of the contract, it would seem to be true that such a decision would extend to and so affect every other identical standard exhibition contract containing such illegal arbitration clauses, that such arbitration as a remedy would be abolished in all such contracts," it was asserted.

"An illegal consideration is no consideration. No court could thereafter legally admit in evidence the illegal arbitration clauses in a standard exhibition contract."

Creditors' Meeting Is Called by Fulton Referee

Edmund D. Adcock, referee, has called a meeting of the creditors of the E. E. Fulton Company, bankrupt, in Chicago on December 10. The meeting will be for the purpose of the allowance of creditors' claims, examination of the officers of the bankrupt corporation, and to act upon any offer to unsecured creditors which the bankrupt may make after the examination.

'IMITATION OF LIFE' SETS NEW RECORDS AT ROXY BOX OFFICE

By REGINA CREWE,
Motion Picture Editor N. Y. American.

Looks as though records are falling at the Roxy Theatre this week, where "Imitation of Life," the Claudette Colbert, Warren William, Louise Beavers, Freddi Washington, Fannie Hurst—Universal Picture has lined up a column of fours at its doors in a lengthier queue than the town has seen in some time. It was almost as exciting as election night to see the "re-turns" come in. And what an imposing list of figures the checkers compiled! Nearly 5,000 patrons for the first show, more for the second, close to 10,000 another. That's the way the film is selling, and more than once the doors of the world's largest motion picture theatre have been closed by the police with every nook and cranny crowded with paying guests and a sidewalk full awaiting their turn. On Friday the deluge began, and with one exception, the day's receipts topped any in the past two years. Up to date the crowds have kept coming.

Strange Wives

Comedy

Hectic farce comedy is the tune played here. Entirely lively nonsense, the picture is clean, and while it hardly is of the type that will arouse much enthusiasm among the intelligentsia and sophisticates, it is one in which the hoi-polloi should find much to enjoy. For its real entertainment the picture adapts the too-many-relatives trouble, which in menacing the domestic bliss of a young couple builds a semi-episodic series of amusing scenes. Rather slow in getting under way, the picture, once started, moves with a speed that saw many gags lost in the laughter resulting from previous situations.

Jimmy King, despite the warnings of pessimistic Warren, falls for and marries the Russian refugee Nadja, who has posed as a princess. Immediately her family moves in and Jimmy's troubles begin. Olga is an ambitious interpretative dancer; Paul an embryonic and equally ambitious violinist; Boris is just a plain loafer; Mauna is fishing for a wealthy husband, and father-in-law Kourajine dreams only of a revolution that will upset the Red Revolution.

Amid all his other troubles, Jimmy has to contend with competition for his wife's affection.

Comedy is the element to sell this attraction with. There are plenty of laughs for those who want to laugh and don't have to pause to think out the reason why they do so. There are several good names included in the cast, and June Clayworth's personality and talents as displayed here indicate that she'll have her day.—McCARTHY, Hollywood.

Produced and distributed by Universal. A Stanley Bergerman production. Directed by Richard Thorpe. From the story "Bread Upon the Waters," by Edith Wharton. Adapted by Gladys Unger. Screen play by Gladys Unger and James Mulhauser. Sound supervision, Gilbert Kurland. Photographed by George Robinson. Film editor, Edward Curtiss. Art director, Alberts D'Agostino. Editorial supervision, Maurice Pivar. P. C. A. Certificate No. 400. Running time, when seen in Hollywood, 73 minutes. Release date, Dec. 10, 1934. General audience classification.

Here Is My Heart

(Paramount)
Romantic Comedy

This is hokum romantic comedy plus specialized Bing Crosby vocalizing. Light and gay in story and content and manner of presentation, the pictures assumes an amusing semi-farical atmosphere. While the cast is lengthy, the major action of the show is carried by Crosby, who is in almost every scene, and Kitty Carlisle, Roland Young, Alison Skipworth and Reginald Owen. Five or six song numbers are featured. In one of them, Crosby kids his own recording, and "It's June in January" seems to be the song audiences are most likely to remember.

Locales of the story are the mid-Atlantic, prologue sequence, and a Parisian hotel, and the time is the present. With the story told in an episodic fashion, comedy dominates, in characters and situations, pepped up sometimes by sparkling comedy and made topical by solo music. In the finale, suspense is given an odd twist. On the whole, action is rather slow, a shortcoming compensated, however, by the manner in which each sequence is climaxed.

J. Paul Jones, chasing the rainbow of boyhood ambitions, hits the trail of a pair of ancient Admiral John Paul Jones pistols which he would present to the U. S. Naval Academy. The trail leads him to a queer series of romantic love interest situations with an impoverished but proud Russian Princess Alexandra, and into hectic toil with her nutty retinue, Nicholas, the Countess and Vladimir.

To be near his love light, Jones purchases a hotel and establishes himself as the Princess' waiter. Much exciting fun ensuing, his crooning plays funny tricks with the austere Alexandra's heart. Eventually she finds out who he actually is and believes that his love making is only an American way to come into possession of the pistols. The others, however, consider him a gift from the gods, through whom, even though he puts them to detested work, they can at least eat and sleep in security. Alexandra, who has disappeared to set herself as proprietress of a bird-pet shop, is found and made to realize that Jones' ardor is real love.

From a showmanship viewpoint, the teaming of Crosby and Kitty Carlisle as a follow-up for "She Loves Me Not" looms as the outstanding commercializing quality. Their name values having a definite significance, both in the large and smaller theatres, this quality may be supported by references to Roland Young, Alison Skipworth and Reginald Owen. Theme, title and story gag amplifications, particularly the crooning features, suggest many unique exploitation angles.—McCARTHY, Hollywood.

Forsaking All Others

(MGM)
Dramatic Romance

Naturally the triple star value lead names and the strength of the featured support, are the predominant commercial assets of this picture. But they alone, are not the only interest-creating qualities. The story is what one would expect from such a cast. Clever and smart, packing a lot of comedy in action, situation and dialogue, it's a unique light triangular dramatic romance.

Tastefully produced, with the settings, costumes and air reflecting the class of the cast, the picture comes within the all grownup audience category. Contrary to presumption, sophistication is at a minimum. While there is a continuous drawing room flavor, comedy which sometimes borders on the slapstick variety is the element embellishing the premise.

The basic story carries an intriguing ring. Jeff arrives from Spain to lay siege to the heart of childhood playmate Mary, who always has seemed to favor Dill. He arrives just in time to be chosen by Aunt Paula as the one to give the bride away. But Dill leaves Mary at the altar for Connie, whom he fears more than he desires.

A year of not much happiness for anyone and a cocktail party brings Mary and Dill together again. Sequences which capitalize heavily on comedy find the two who never can forget their old love in a storm-drenched clandestine Adirondacks Mountain rendezvous. Again Jeff takes a back seat as the Mary-Dill ceremonies again are arranged. Before the ceremonies, however, Mary finds out it was Jeff who did the many nice things for which she had credited Dill. But Jeff, disappointed and disillusioned, is going back to Spain.

This time it's Mary who leaves Dill at the altar, to scamper aboard ship, where, found by Jeff, she pledges her troth and undying affection.

Surrounding the adventures of the trio, are the comedy situations in which they involve themselves—all of which is made more poignant by the jittery affectation of Paula and Shep. One of the highlights graphically identifying the picture's comedy savor is a bicycle-riding sequence which culminates in Montgomery and Miss Crawford being catapulted into a pig sty.—McCARTHY, Hollywood.

Produced and distributed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Producer, Bernard H. Hyman. Assistant to the producer, Frank Davis. Directed by W. S. Van Dyke. Screen play by Joseph L. Mankiewicz. Gowns by Adrian. Photographers, Gregg Toland, George Folsey. Film editor, Tom Held. Running time, when seen in Hollywood, 84 minutes. Release date, Dec. 28, 1934.

Action Drama

A lively yarn of the police department of a large city, this offers the type of entertainment which run-of-the-mill audiences often look for and appreciate in the weekend, or action position on the weekly bill-of-screen fare. Heading the cast are the personable and popular Bruce Cabot, in the role of a hard-boiled and woman-distrusting lieutenant of detectives, and Judith Allen, as the girl who eventually changes his mind. The only other familiar name is that of Ward Bond, as Cabot's right-hand man.

It is a story of the relentless pursuit of gangsters and thieves by the police, with an intermingling of romance and comedy. There are automobile pursuits, gun play, thrill and chase.

In that it concerns the police and their activity in preservation of the law and the roundup of the criminal element there may be an opportunity for tieup, but in general the film is straight action material, to be sold in much the same way as others of its kind, making the most of names and the intriguing if somewhat misleading title. Much of the action centering about an open-air automobile sandwich shop, the possibility of exploitation in that direction is apparent.

Cabot and Bond, having frustrated a gas station holdup, are the objects of police approbation and criminal hatred. Cabot is promoted to a lieutenancy and given a free hand in rounding up a gang of thieves preying upon wealthy women who have a habit of exhibiting their jewelry in public. With Bond, he concentrates on an open-air sandwich stand, where the gems of wealth often are too openly displayed. Trailed by gangsters, he is warned by an attendant, Miss Allen, and feels the necessity of revising to a slight extent his firm conviction that women are not to be trusted.

From that point begins a rapid series of events, as Cabot and Bond go after the gang. When a prisoner they are transporting is taken from them by his friends, Cabot accuses Miss Allen of tipping off the time and place, and they quarrel. She takes a job with the gang leader in his cafe, to prove to Cabot her good intentions and to assist him in uncovering the gang. Hiding when they plan a robbery, she is found and forced to accompany the gang. But the police are ready, and a hectic chase results in their capture.

Cabot sends Miss Allen back to her home in Iowa, whence she had come to gain fame in the films, but changes his mind, wires her on her train, and follows.—AARONSON, New York.

Madame Bovary

(John Tapernoux)

Drama

The tragically dramatic story of Emma Bovary, as recorded in the famous novel, "Madame Bovary," by Gustave Flaubert, is here brought to the screen, a French production with an all-French cast and French dialogue. Superimposed translations of some of the dialogue permits of ready understanding of the story for those familiar with the language. Cast names are of no general value in this country, of course.

The theme, of an unhappily married girl, who turns elsewhere for the glamour and romance which she cannot find at home, further limits the exhibition field, since it is strictly for adults.

The logical place for showing the picture is the large city theatre which draws those persons who are interested in foreign productions, as well as any community preponderantly French.

The story is probably familiar to most. Dr. Bovary, village health officer, married to a wealthy but unattractive woman, attends a farmer, and meets his well educated and pretty daughter. When his wife dies, Bovary marries the girl, and Emma Bovary begins her life of subservience to the conventions and lifeless activity of the community. She becomes a mother, but is dissatisfied with her lot, being desperately unhappy.

They move to a larger town, are invited to a grand ball, and there, introduced to the dance and the glitter of wealth, Emma meets and falls in love with the romantic and suave Rodolphe. She becomes his mistress, and later that of Leon. When Rodolphe eventually leaves her, she falls ill, but recovers and again meets Leon, resuming her former intimate relations with him. To maintain the pace which Leon sets, she signs many notes, until the creditor forecloses and threatens to sell the home of Dr. Bovary, unaware of his wife's action and still the dull and stolid country doctor. She goes to Leon and Rodolphe, pleads with them to help her, and when they refuse she steals poison from an apothecary and commits suicide in agony.

It is a tragic story, tragically told. Technically the film cannot be said to equal the average of Hollywood product. The performances are good, but the character of the story and the foreign makeup of the film definitely limit the appeal of the picture.—AARONSON, New York.

Produced in the Parish Studios of NSF. Presented by John S. Tapernoux. Directed by Jean Renoir. Music by Darius Milhaud. From the classic by Gustave Flaubert. Running time, 100 minutes. Release date, Nov. 17, 1934. Adult audience classification.

The Man Who Reclaimed His Head

Drama

This is intelligent, serious drama. Utilizing a unique subject and departing radically from any current production trend, it is gripping entertainment. Because of its provocative premise, Claude Rains' outstanding characterization, the performances of the principal supports, Joan Bennett and Lionel Atwill, together with story significance, it potentially is to be one of the season's most talked about productions. Its major appeal undoubtedly will be to the more seriously inclined. Not that a blueprint is necessary for understanding; rather that in avoiding formula folderol, it is understandably and realistically impressive in entertainment that is semi-educational in the hidden things it exposes.

The story is powerful yet simple. Verin, happily married to Adele, to the exclusion of material gain, has devoted his life to the cause of peace. Upon the persuasion of Dumont, strongly seconded by Adele, who desires some of life's good things, he becomes ghost writer for that politically ambitious publisher. Verin's editorials make Dumont the greatest advocate of peace in France.

The World War breaks out. Dumont sacrifices his ideals and traitorously succumbs to the blandishments of the "munitions makers," to whom the horror of war makes no difference as long as the swollen dividends are secure. Disillusioned, Verin is conscripted, while at home the mind-stealing Dumont now attempts to steal Verin's wife. Transferred to the Verdun front, Verin is en route when he overhears conversation scandalously connecting his wife's name with Dumont. Going AWOL, he arrives in Paris to hear the importuning Dumont being castigated by Adele. An enemy air raid begins as Dumont and Verin whirl in mortal combat. Then the story, which up to this point has been told in retrospect, reverts to attorney De Marnay's study, the writer-soldier's family and friends gathered as the advocate consents to take the case, confident that no court or jury will convict of murder when the evidence and motive are explained.

This picture affords unusual opportunity for showmanship which has for its goal the stimulation of emotional interest. As a revelation of the part which munitions-makers have in the causing and fostering of war and the power of a controlled press to foster nationalistic patriotism, it can be made the subject of discussion that as a commercial asset can be carried into many places. The most important thing probably will be to create advance interest, this probably most effectively by a special preview showing for select groups of opinion influencing personalities and organizations and then requesting permission to publish their reactions.—McCARTHY, Hollywood.

The Silver Streak

(RKO Radio)

Drama

With a full quota of the sort of thrill and suspense and speed which is so important a part of action pictures, RKO has made an entertaining picture of the much publicized Burlington Railroad's Zephyr, new streamlined speed train. The film is in itself another grand publicizing gesture for the train, known in this story as the Silver Streak, and the Burlington cooperation in the production is obvious.

As far as the exhibitor is concerned, he has the advantage of a considerable portion of ready-made advertising on this picture and its subject. The cooperation of local railroad organizations may be readily obtainable, and the contents of the picture lend themselves to a street ballyhoo, using a replica of the Silver Streak, moving under its own power.

Into the story has been woven romance, comedy of a rather insignificant sort, but above all the excitement of punch-laden action, melodramatic as it may be, fitting it for the weekend position on the bill, where action is the chief interest of the patrons. The highlight of the picture is the wild dash of the Silver Streak over 2,000 miles of track, from Chicago to Boulder Dam, on an errand of mercy.

The cast is not outstanding, although several names will be familiar. In the lead are Charles Starrett and Sally Blane, the support featuring William Farnum and Irving Pichel.

Starrett, a young mechanical engineer employed by a railroad, cannot interest the moss-backed directors in his streamlined train principle, and he quits, much to the annoyance of Hardie Albright, son of Farnum, president of the road. Miss Blane, Farnum's daughter, and Starrett make up the romantic combination. Albright, disgusted with the reactionary tendencies of his father, takes a job on Boulder Dam, while Starrett, finding an open mind, builds his train for the company headed by Theodore Von Eltz. In its trial run it is unsuccessful, and when Farnum, company director, refuses to give Starrett more time, Starrett berates him and loses the friendship of Miss Blane. The train is sent to the World's Fair, where Starrett unexpectedly locates the trouble.

Miss Blane, en route west, stops off at Boulder Dam and learns her brother and many others have been stricken with infantile paralysis. To save his life an "iron lung" is necessary in a hurry. A train would be too slow, an airplane unable to carry the load, and Starrett gets his chance. The breakneck race is on, packed with the thrill of near collision, narrowly averting wreck, a fight in the control room of the train, terminating in the arrival at Boulder City in time, and the reconciliation of Starrett and Miss Blane.

Woman in the Dark

(RKO Radio)

Drama

Somewhat melodramatic, this is an adaptation of a story by the popular and prolific Dashiell Hammett, whose name in connection with the picture may be of value. Concerning the inability of a young man to remain out of trouble following a jail term, it emerges as fair entertainment, combining a measure of action with its dominating romance theme.

There would seem to be comparatively small opportunity for unusual selling or exploitation, the story itself perhaps being the best hinge on which to swing the attraction. With Fay Wray and Ralph Bellamy sharing the lead and Roscoe Ates and Melvyn Douglas in chief support, the cast names are fairly effective drawing material.

As lightweight entertainment, the film appears equally acceptable to masculine and feminine patrons. Attracting them is the exhibitor's problem.

Bellamy is paroled from prison following a sentence for manslaughter when a man he had struck in a fight died of his injuries. Released, he seeks seclusion in a small town, where he has a small house in the woods, but is visited by Nell O'Day, daughter of the county sheriff, who had been the cause of the previous brawl and who protests that she still loves him. He gives her to understand that he is not interested, when out of the night comes Miss Wray, with a wrenched ankle, torn evening dress and a story of a hasty escape from the neighboring home of Douglas. When Douglas and his friend, Reed Brown, Jr., come after her, she refuses to leave, determining to stay with Bellamy until she can get a train for New York. Douglas leaves but returns shortly, intoxicated, and in the resulting fight Brown discovers the end of Bellamy's fist, and falls, striking his head. Recovered, he and Douglas leave. The sheriff, learning from Douglas that his daughter was at Bellamy's house, goes after her. Douglas calls for Bellamy's arrest, and he and Miss Wray flee to the New York home of Ates, prison mate of Bellamy. The police follow, and Bellamy is shot in an attempted escape.

While in the hospital he learns that Miss Wray has returned to Douglas' home, and escapes to see for himself, Ates going with him. They arrive just in time, as Miss Wray is attempting to prevent Douglas from strangling Brown, who reveals that it was Douglas himself, trying to pin a murder on Bellamy, who had struck him after the two had left Bellamy's house. The police hear the statement, and Bellamy is free, to pursue his almost disrupted romance with Miss Wray, completely revising his opinion that women are the cause of all his trouble.

It's a weekend attraction.—AARONSON, New York.

One Hour Late

(Paramount)

Comedy-Drama

With nothing other than tried and proved entertainment and showmanship ingredients utilized in its makeup, this picture effectively assumes the status of a better than average general audience attraction. Fundamentally the story is drama tinged comedy romance plus specialized solo music. It's clean, wholesome, and while not entirely novel the feature combines understandable realism with theatrical hokum. Moving in a familiar atmosphere and not attempting to preach a moral the show aims at light, enjoyable amusement and succeeds, judging from the preview audience reaction.

From a commercial viewpoint, the outstanding among several marketable qualities is Joe Morrison. Previously seen in a minor role in "Old Fashioned Way," this newcomer apparently has the essentials in personality, vocal and acting ability that make for potential stardom. "One Hour Late" affords him many opportunities to demonstrate his abilities. He acts and sings in a way that made a definite audience impression.

The picture, modernly paced, is located in a metropolitan city. Working in the same office, Eddie is very much in love with Bessie. She, living with a married sister, her bunch of kids and no-good husband, knows that married life is no bed of roses. Eddie's visions, to the contrary, are those of eternal bliss.

The swain's crooning ambitions being comically wet-blanketed, a situation is created whereby it appears that Bessie is going away for a weekend rendezvous with boss Barclay. Then the reason for the title is established in the anticlimax. Dramatically it affects four lives. Listening to Eddie and Bessie, Mrs. Barclay realizes the folly of her temptation to philander. The elevator stalled, the situation laden with thrill and suspense, Eddie climbs out over and under the car when a dying woman needs medical attention. He has been singing "The Last Round Up" to strengthen his courage. His heroism makes a terrific impression upon Bessie; his singing has a similar effect on radio station manager Zeller. Eddie attains his ambition as a high-salaried radio star, and there's romance and happiness.

The picture, in addition to personalities and story content, makes available many unique exploitation angles. In order to realize the commercial value of this attraction it is suggested that an earnest effort be made toward getting a larger than usual audience for the opening performance, to get the full benefit of word-of-mouth advertising, supplementing straight-away constructive business building.—MCCARTHY, Hollywood.

Produced and distributed by Paramount. Producer, Bayard Veiller. Directed by Ralph Murphy. Original, Libbie Block. Screen play by Kathryn Scola and Paul Gerard Smith. Music and lyrics by Sam Coslow, Lewis Gensler and Leo Robin. Sound, P. G. Wisdom. Art directors, Hans Dreier and John Goodman. Photographer, Benjamin Reynolds. P. C. A. Certificate No. 373. Running time, when seen in Hollywood, 72 minutes. Release date, Dec. 21, 1934. General audience classification.

L'Agonie des Aigles

(DuWorld)

Drama

In an all-French adaptation of the French novel, "Demi-Soldes," the producer, Roger Richebe, has made a strongly dramatic motion picture of men desperately gripped by a fierce loyalty to a lost cause and a dead man, but by reason chiefly of the origin of the picture and its entirely unfamiliar language in almost all sections of this country, a picture which the average exhibitor would have difficulty in presenting profitably to his regular patrons.

On the other hand, in those localities where the theatre can count on an audience interested in the better foreign productions, there is the inducement of a superimposed synopsis, running concurrently with the appropriate sequences in the film, to make for ready understanding of the plot even though the language is unfamiliar.

It is an historical motion picture in its delineation of a period, a condition, but at the same time it tells a dramatic and human story, and tells it well. Community groups whose interest in foreign product of quality is understood may be approached for their support of the picture.

In the years which followed Waterloo and the later death of Napoleon I of France on St. Helena, the first Empire of France sank into the past, and disgrace, as Louis XVIII held sway on the French throne. But there existed in the country, secretly and in danger of their lives, one group of men, absolutely unswerving in their loyalty to the memory of Napoleon and the idea of empire. These were the so-called "demi-soldes," half-pay soldiers of Napoleon, in disgrace and under police surveillance. Their one ambition was seizure of the French throne for L'Aiglon, the son of Napoleon. Heading this group are Colonel de Montander and Captain Doguerneau.

When one of their number is treacherously betrayed and shot, Doguerneau takes vengeance by deliberately insulting the betrayer, de Breuilly, meeting him in a duel, and killing him. The sweetheart of the dead de Breuilly, Lise, seeking vengeance cultivates the friendship and admiration of de Montander, discovering he is the leader of the "demi-soldes," and betrays the group. They are tried before a courtmartial, and their eloquent appeals win the sympathy of the attending crowd, but bring sentence of death from the court. Too late to help, Lise realizes she loves Montander; he will not listen to her plea for freedom, preferring to die with his comrades.

In a poignant sequence, the Napoleonic stalwarts dress in the uniforms of their victorious campaigns under their Emperor, march into the

Mystery

Rather in the nature of routine mystery motion picture material, this independently-produced film is an adaptation of a mystery novel, "The Murder of Stephen Kester," by H. Ashbrook, and appears open to the conventional type of selling for pictures of the sort. Suspense is worked into the story fairly effectively, and the inevitable murderer is hidden from the searching eye of the audience until the set and proper time for revelation.

There are numerous perfectly plausible suspects, including one man whose guilt seems clearly established by a letter obtained by the authorities. That he was himself the victim of the murderer, rather than a murderer-suicide, as it was made to appear, adds the necessary touch to sharpen enjoyment for the mystery fans. That a young author of mystery and detective fiction was in the house when the murder was committed, and that he himself, despite the constant rebuffs of the police, uncovers the criminal, is not exactly an unexpected development when his presence in the house is discovered by the audience in the early moments of the picture.

The exhibitor, of course, has the old standby method of challenging audience detection of the criminal at his disposal, plus whatever value may lie in the adaptation of the novel and the names at the head of the cast of Charles Starrett and Shirley Grey.

At a masquerade house party Claude Gillingwater is found dead in a closet, obviously murdered. It is brought out that he has been especially unpleasant to his granddaughter, Miss Grey, with regard to her friendship for William Bakewell. When the police arrive, novelist Starrett, one of the guests, becomes a self-appointed assistant to the detective in charge of the case.

Readily suspect, in addition to Miss Grey and Bakewell, who attempts to elope with Miss Grey during the party, are Alden Chase, as Gillingwater's secretary, and Edward Keane, understood to have come to see the dead man on business, after an association with him years before in several mines in Mexico. When Keane is found dead, as well, in what appears to have been a suicide, a letter from him to Miss Grey makes it appear that he murdered his associate because of a long-standing grudge. But Starrett efficiently visits bankers, brokers, chemists and the like and discovers that the avaricious private secretary is guilty, which opens the way at the same time for a completion of the incidental romance between Miss Grey and Bakewell.—AARONSON, New York.

Produced and distributed by Chesterfield. Directed by Richard Thorpe. Screen adaptation, Andrew Moses. Photographed by M. A. Andersen. Assistant director, Melville Shyer. Recorded by Pete Clark. Art director, Edward Jewell. Adapted from the novel "The Murder of Stephen Kester," by H. Ashbrook. Running time, 67 minutes. Release date, June 15, 1934. General audience classification.

See America First

Interesting and Salable

There is strong goodwill building material in this new Vitaphone series, which purports to tell the story of the founding and development of the United States of America from the landing of the Pilgrims. John B. Kennedy renders the off-screen dialogue intelligently, while appropriate music presents an accompanying background. Although action, as such, is lacking, the camera has effectively pictured the landmarks, mementoes and monuments which recall the vital events in the continuing progress of the country. The exhibitor has here an excellent opportunity for tieups with schools and local organizations of all varieties. The first three subjects in the series, as seen, are indicated as to content or period covered by the titles, which are "Pilgrim Days," "The Boston Tea Party" and "Hail Columbia," which tells of the part played by Washington in welding and expanding the country, by Franklin, Jefferson, Robert Fulton, acquisition of Louisiana and Florida. The first two subjects run 11 minutes each, the third 10 minutes.

In the Dog House

Considerable Fun

There's an abundance of comedy in the two reels, comedy which Andy Clyde sustains, despite the fact that most of the situations and action are of pattern. Vivian Oakland is the nagging wife and Delmar Watson the lively but misunderstood lad from the orphan home. The family flivver goes haywire in the stretch but they get to the city pound in time to drive through the lethal chamber where straying dogs breathe their last. The wild ride has been done before, many times, but it has some new turns here.—Running time, 20 minutes.

Buried Loot

(MGM)

Clever Short Drama

First of a new featurette series, "Buried Loot" eschews the usual comedy formula and majors in straight drama. Motivated with the axiom that crime does not pay, no matter how cleverly conceived and executed, the picture tells a story packed with suspense. A bank cashier takes a jail sentence in order that he may later enjoy the profits of his crime, which, in his court trial, he claimed to have lost. With the cache of buried loot always an inspiring will-o-wisp, the crook falls victim to the insurance company's planted cell-mate, to whom he unfolds his plans. Result—man punished and money recovered. George B. Seitz directed.—Running time, 18 minutes. General audience classification.

Perfectly Mismatched

Funny in Places

To the Leon Errol fan, his familiar comedy tricks are presented; for the patron without any leanings in one direction or another (and rubber-legged Errol takes care of the leanings) there are a few spots appealing to the risibilities, but the "business" is for the most part aged. The antics are linked with the formula of mixed bedrooms and a tipsy tenant, with Dorothy Grainger as the former wife and Vivian Oakland the one of the moment.—Running time, 20 minutes.

Soft Drinks and Sweet Music

(Vitaphone)

Entertaining

Featuring master of ceremonies George Price and radio vocalist Sylvia Froos, this Broadway Brevities number has engaging music and entertaining performance. Price, a soda-jerker and song-writer, serves Miss Froos, a musical star, is fired, sings and plays his music for her, is introduced to the big producer, and makes a hit in the show. There is amusement in the burlesque of old-time "meller drammer," and entertainment in the singing of Price and Miss Froos, in addition to girl chorus work. Eventually Price awakens from his dream—behind the soda fountain.—Running time, 20 minutes.

Medbury at a County Fair

(Columbia)

Fair and Fair

John P. Medbury stays at home for a change in this Walter Futter production and describes this and that at a county fair, with some observations refreshing. Novel prize winners have their inning. There's much in the picture for the small town theatre, and perhaps the same is true of the metropolitan fan to whom the county fair is foreign to experience.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Dizzy and Daffy

(Vitaphone)

Excellent

Far and away an outstanding comedy, made unusually amusing and entertaining by the presence of Shemp Howard, a natural and continuously laugh-provoking comic, and interesting and exceptionally salable by the presence of the bewildering Deans of baseball fame, Dizzy and Daffy, this subject should turn out to be a showman's dream. On a small town team are the Dean boys, Howard, a pitcher (once) with weak eyes, and with Roscoe Ates as the stuttering umpire. The boys move on to the big leagues, Shemp pleads to get into a world's series game, as a base-running substitute, and the audience has an opportunity to see, from unusual camera angles, the expert twirling of the Deans. Chiefly by reason of the performance of Howard, it is an outstanding short, worth special exhibitor attention.—Running time, 20 minutes.

Screen Snapshots No. 3

Interesting

Into this issue of the seeing of Hollywood with Harriet Parsons, a polo match of studio folk provides action and meat for the production, after bits showing Dolores Del Rio and Fay Wray in their gardens, and Jean Harlow at the microphone. The polo is lively and adds considerable to the personality material.—Running time, 11 minutes.

A Toyland Broadcast

(MGM)

Christmas Fantasy

This Happy Harmony cartooned Christmas fantasy is geared to a light and mirthful tune, and is done in Technicolor. Featuring comic caricatures of Kate Smith, Boswell Sisters, Bing Crosby, Rubinoff, Paul Whiteman, Mills Brothers and other noted radiolites doing their stuff, the picture is highlighted by a toy dog's crooning "Trees" to a pine tree. A Hugh Harmon-Randolph Ising production. It's a nice children's attraction for holiday programs, more cleverly constructed than the ordinary short picture.—Running time, 9 minutes. General audience classification.

Pop Goes My Heart

(Vitaphone)

Good

A Merrie Melodie number in effective color, this song cartoon pictures the small animal life of the woods engaging in its varied and busy activity to the background melody of the title song. All goes well until a bear captures one of the small animals, and the collective forces of the others are required to recover the captive and rout the marauder. An entertaining and melodious subject.—Running time, 7 minutes.

Push Price War to Conclusion: Feist

Felix F. Feist, general sales manager for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, declared this week that if Kansas City is to continue its price war he is "in favor of an intensive one, to get it over with quickly." Mr. Feist stopped for a few minutes in the Missouri city en route to New York from Hollywood.

"All I know is what I have read in the trade papers," the MGM executive said. "I have been away a numbers of weeks. But if Kansas City theatres are determined to cut admissions, let them all do it at once, because the next move will be price increases."

Mr. Feist characterized as "stupid" the movement underway among Kansas City independents to boycott MGM and other distributors providing product to first-runs which cut prices too deeply. He said that such a move would not succeed because exhibitors who have contracted for pictures are obligated to play them.

"The idea is especially stupid since product buys were not predicated on the price at any prior run," he said.

To charges that RKO "walked out" on a price agreement when it cut admissions at the Mainstreet in Kansas City from 55 and 35 cents to 40 and 25 cents with a picture and vaudeville policy, Joe Vogel, Kansas City manager, said that Loew's is in no way responsible for the price debacle. He explained that some time ago various theatre interests agreed that prices should be increased so that straight film houses would charge 40 cents for evenings and 25 cents for matinees, while film-vaudeville theatres would charge 55 cents and 35 cents.

Mr. Feist said on the basis of reports he has received, New York and Philadelphia are the only large centers where theatre business generally has not improved. Mr. Feist has recuperated from an illness, having just returned from Honolulu.

Advertising Firm Sued

Foster and Kleiser, San Francisco outdoor advertising company, has been sued for $60,000 damages by William E. Dean, trustee in bankruptcy for Alonzo C. Schurtz. The charge is monopolistic operation in violation of anti-trust laws.

Charles Victor Knox, formerly connected with the Fawcett fan magazines, is now conducting a motion picture column for the Buffalo Evening News.

James Shannon Dies

James L. Shannon, 66, one of the founders of the Empress theatre in St. Louis, died late last week after a long illness.

Simple Films Best Abroad, Says Kelly

Pictures that are high class, but not high-hat, that tell down-to-earth stories with a maximum of action and a minimum of dialogue are the most popular around the world, in the opinion of Arthur W. Kelly, vice-president of United Artists in charge of foreign distribution, on his arrival in Hollywood this week after a globe-circling trip of eight months.

"Sophisticated dramas and hot-house society films in which the characters sit around and swap typical American wise-cracks are definitely unacceptable," declared Mr. Kelly. "The public abroad, like the public at home, is picture-wise. The people are shopping for entertainment, with musicals and comedies attracting the biggest audiences and showing the greatest profits. It's the result of the depression. Foreign film fans want to see the brighter side of life when they go to the theatre. They want to forget their troubles, not be reminded of them."

Mr. Kelly pointed out the success of all-Disney programs, generally lasting about one hour, in foreign cities. The program includes Mickey Mouse and Silly Symphony cartoon numbers. Mr. Kelly also stressed the great progress made by British studios during the past year.

M-G-M has the most extensive Associate Producer setup of all the major producing organizations, sixteen having the title of executive producer or associate producer. These men, as in other studios, are held responsible for the success or failure of pictures assigned them.

With M-G-M producing about 50 features annually and with Irving G. Thalberg, David O. Selznick, Hunt Stromberg, Harry Rapf and Bernie Hyman assigned to produce half this number, the remaining 25 pictures seem divided among 11 other associate producers, giving a handful of producers the responsibility of two pictures a year and the bulk one picture a year.

It takes 16 weeks to prepare and shoot the average program picture.

Those listed as associate or executive producers are: Irving G. Thalberg, David O. Selznick, Harry Rapf, Hunt Stromberg, Larry Weingarten, Sam Katz, Phil Goldstone, Jack Cummings, Al Lewin, Lucien Hubbard, Ned Marin, John Considine, Eddie Mannix, Benjamin Thau, Bernard Hyman and Bernard Fineman.

Color Comeback Awaited

Color, like music, is slated for a strong comeback if all the present plans and promises are carried out.

John Hay Whitney, following the success of "La Cucaracha," is scheduled to be the largest user of color, choosing the new tritone Technicolor process in the film of his entire program of six features, starting first with "Becky Sharp," now changed to "Vanity Fair."

Fox will film several sequences of Jesse L. Lasky's production of "Red Heads" and "Dante's Inferno" in color, while over at Warner, three productions, "Gold Diggers of 1935," "In Caliente" and "Midsummer Night's Dream," will all have colored sequences.

Other producing companies are toying with the color idea—some waiting for the public's reaction after the pioneer films get out in the hinterlands.

News Flashes

Before departing for New York for a much needed vacation, Gene Fowler sent out autographed copies of his latest book, which depicts word for word the screen play that he and Bess Meredyth wrote for 20th Century's production of "The Mighty Barnum." The book is being retailed at $2 a copy, which in itself should prove helpful and enlightening to aspiring writers interested in knowing how screen plays are constructed.

Upon the eve of starting rehearsal for "Midsummer Night's Dream," Jack L. Warner said no money or expense would be spared in making this one of the great spectacles of all times. He has placed the entire facilities of the studios at the service of this one picture. Those already assigned to the cast are James Cagney, Dick Powell, Joe E. Brown, Jean Muir, Anita Louise, Mickey Rooney, Hugh Herbert, Frank McHugh, Donald Woods, Eugene Pallette, Hobart Cavanaugh, Ross Alexander, Otis Harlan, Ian Hunter, Grant Mitchell, Arthur Treacher, Oliva de Haviland and Nina Pheilade. Thousands of atmospheric players subsequently will be called upon to fill out the huge vocal and dancing ensembles.

The comparative production quiet of the past few weeks melted before a miniature avalanche of newly started and just completed features. Ten features were started; twelve others were completed. M-G-M has three new ones. Fox and Warner each have a pair, and Columbia, Radio and Liberty are credited with one each. Warner completed three; Fox, Paramount and Universal two each, and the three others are from Monogram, Columbia and M-G-M.

First of those started by M-G-M is "Reckless," in which Joan Crawford, William Powell, Franchot Tone and May Robson will be featured. The second, "Ambulance Chaser," has Chester Morris, Virginia Bruce, Robert McWade, Mary Jo Mathews, Johnny Hines, Sid Silvers, Donald Meek and Dorothy Peterson. The third on the list, "Naughty Marietta," after long preparation goes before the cameras with Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy in the leading roles.

At Fox, work began on "One More Spring." In this Janet Gaynor and Warner Baxter are starred. The support includes Walter King, Stepin Fetchit, Rosemary Ames, Nick Foran, Astrid Allwyn, Jane Darwell and Roger Imhoff. Starting simultaneously, "The Little Colonel" is another for Shirley Temple, in which she will be supported by Lionel Barrymore, Evelyn Venable and Bill Robinson.

In the first of the new Warners, Aline MacMahon and Guy Kibbee again are teamed, with Lyle Talbot, Patricia Ellis, Allen Jenkins, Claire Dodd, Dorothy Tree, Hobart Cavanaugh, Hugh O'Neil, Walter Walker and Robert Barrat included in the cast. "Go Into Your Dance" will star Al Jolson with Ruby Keeler and feature Glenda Farrell and Helen Morgan.

"Alias John Law," the Columbia starter, is a western for Tim McCoy, with Billie Seward, Robert Allen, Frank Sheridan, Edward Earle, Jack Clifford, Tom London, Jack Mower and Alan Sears. Radio began work on "Roberta," stage hit, with a cast featuring Irene Dunne, Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers, Randolph Scott, Helen Westley and Ferdinand Munier. Completing the list of new features, Liberty put "Sweepstake Annie" before the cameras. In this Tom Brown, Marion Nixon, Wera Engels, Inez

Warners' quota of the completed product includes "Devil Dogs of the Air," "Gold Diggers of 1935" and "North Shore." The first, an aerial follow-up of "Here Comes the Navy," teams James Cagney and Pat O'Brien in the leads, with Margaret Lindsay, Ed Brophy, John Arledge, Robert Barrat, Frank McHugh and Helen Lowell featured. The musical sequel of the initial "Gold Diggers" presents Dick Powell, Gloria Stuart, Frank McHugh, Hugh Herbert, Dorothy Dare, Glenda Farrell, Adolph Menjou, Alice Brady, Grant Mitchell and Joseph Cawthorn. The final feature will have Barbara Stanwyck, Gene Raymond and Genevieve Tobin, the support including John Eldredge, Phillip Read, Doris Lloyd, Hale Hamilton and Forrester Harvey.

First of the Fox pair is "The County Chairman," George Ade's famous story and play, with Will Rogers, Louise Dresser, Evelyn Venable, Kent Taylor, Frank Melton, Stepin Fetchit, Robert McWade, Charles Middleton and Berton Churchill. The second picture, "Mystery Blonde," includes Mona Barrie, Gilbert Roland, John Halliday, John Davidson, Mischa Auer and Pat Flaherty.

At Paramount "The Vanishing Pioneer" was finished. A western, it presents Randolph Scott, Chic Sale, Mrs. Leslie Carter, Kathleen Burke, Ann Sheridan, Florence Roberts, George Marion, Sr., and Willie Fung. Likewise, "Lives of a Bengal Lancer," which has decorated Paramount's production chart for several years, finally was completed. Players are Gary Cooper, Franchot Tone, Richard Cromwell, Guy Standing, Kathleen Burke, C. Aubrey Smith.

Universal finished "I've Been Around." The cast includes Chester Morris, Rochelle Hudson, Phyllis Brooks, G. P. Huntley, Jr., Isabel Jewell, Ralph Morgan, Dorothy Christy and Betty Blythe. Also completed was "Straight from the Heart," featuring Mary Astor, Baby Jane, Roger Pryor, Carole Coombe, Andry Devine, Robert McWade and Henry Armetta.

Important among the completed pictures is M-G-M's "David Copperfield." The star-studded cast includes Lionel Barrymore, Frank Lawton, W. C. Fields, Lewis Stone.

The Columbia feature completed is "Behind the Evidence." In this, Norman Foster, Sheila Mannors, Donald Cook, Geneva Mitchell, Frank Darien, Samuel Hinds and Pat O'Malley will be seen.

Winding up the dozen completed pictures is Monogram's "Women Must Dress." Screen names included are Minna Gombell, Gavin Gordon, Hardie Albright, Lenita Lane, Suzanne Kaaren, Robert Light and Arthur Lake. There are also the several girl winners of the recent Monogram Agfa-Ansco snapshot contest.

LIVING ON VELVET

Warner

In this story unusual romance, based on a unique situation, is mixed with tense drama and emotion-stirring scenes. It's the story of a man who, escaping death in an airplane crash, considers his future existence as borrowed time, all velvet. Involved in a series of sensational escapades, he falls in love, to come into conflict with his best friend. A domestic failure, he estranges his wife, runs into another accident, this time fatal. With his death the way is opened for real romance for his widow and the family friend.

The story is an original by Jerry Wald and Julius Epstein, and is being directed by Frank Borzage, who recently completed "Flirtation Walk." Marked by innumerable Borzage human interest touches, the yarn capitalizes on understandable but not too familiar entertainment elements. Thus the triangle situation cleverly skips any semblance of indelicacy.

Prestige of the leading players is a showmanship asset. Kay Francis, last in "British Agent," is starred. With her are two leading men who, because of current pictures, are decidedly in the public eye. They are George Brent, now in "The Painted Veil," and Warren William, currently appearing in "Imitation of Life." Supporting names are Helen Lowell, Russell Hicks, Maude T. Gordon, Samuel Hinds and Martha Merrill.

An atmosphere of harum-scarum excitement runs through the story. While there is a tinge of tragedy, this quality is counterbalanced by comedy, synonymous with the title tone.

CLIVE OF INDIA

20th Century

This story, a romantic historical drama, deals with one of the most vivid chapters of modern English history and one of its greatest heroes. It's the story of how India became a British dominion, also the story of the man, Robert Clive, who, in the face of terrific political, domestic and business opposition, accomplished the amazing feat.

Being produced with the same zeal for dramatic and romantic entertainment values as characterized "Rothschild," and on a similar scale of grandeur, it has, at this stage, every evidence of being a big picture. Clive's story, being not too familiar yet at the same time comparable to that of any national hero, permits the adaptation of much that is unusual and intriguing in romance and drama.

Actually a biography of the man himself, it is a story rampant with adventure, love interest, pathos, conspiracy, politics, ambitions, patriotism and greed.

Originally a stage play, the production was whipped into screen usage by W. P. Lipscomb and R. J. Minney. Direction is by Richard Boleslavski, recently credited with "Men in White," "Operator 13" and "The Painted Veil."

Ronald Colman plays the role of Clive. Supporting him are Loretta Young, currently in "Rothschild" and "The White Parade"; Francis Lister, a British newcomer who starred on the Broadway stage in "The Red Cat"; Lumsden Hare, Montagu Love, Ferdinand Munier, Emily Malyon, Robert Greig, Doris Lloyd, Gilbert Emery, Sir Guy Standing and Etienne Girardot. Additionally there are hundreds of native Indian and British soldier extras participating in the Indian sequences and other hundreds in the London scenes, which feature the conflict of war and the conflict of political greed in Parliament.

BEHIND THE EVIDENCE

Columbia

This is an action drama story majoring in popular theatre elements. The original and screen play are by Harold Shumate, a specialist in this form of entertainment as demonstrated by "The Crime of Helen Santley," "Hell Bent for Love," "A Man's Game" and "One Is Guilty." Direction is by Lambert Hillyer, maker of several of Shumate's stories and also director of "Most Precious Thing in Life."

Familiar names are featured in the cast, in which Norman Foster and Donald Cook constitute two sides of the triangle of which Sheila Mannors is the apex. Supporting players include Geneva Mitchell, Samuel Hinds, Frank Darien, Pat O'Malley, Gordon DeMain and Edward Keane.

It is the story of an ex-wealthy socialite reduced to the status of a newspaper reporter. Assigned to cover his former fiancée's marriage ceremonies, he stumbles across an incident which later becomes part of a clue to a big robbery. Suspicious that the girl's intended is the brains of a gang and amid much danger, including a crooks-cop gun battle, he uncovers the various ramifications which lead to confirmation of his suspicions.

Topical thrill seems to be the element for interest-creating exploitation. While formula is pretty completely followed, several sequences, particularly those having a semi-mystery atmosphere, are suggestive of unique showmanship with which to clarify the title.

NORTH SHORE

Warner

Here is high society dramatic romance. As the title indicates, the atmosphere is that of the wealthy—their country estates, yachts, stables of blooded horses, and against this background is a story of upper strata society folk and the lives they lead as the ordinary hoi-polloi like to believe they live them. It builds into a formula triangle situation. For thrill it has a yachting party death, supposed murder, a dramatic court trial in which the heroine, sacrificing rigid family pride, provides evidence that clears the innocent.

The yarn is adapted from a well read novel by Will Irwin; the screen play is by Mary McCall, recently credited with "Desirable" and "Babbitt" and by Peter Milne. It is being directed by Robert Florey, maker of "I Am a Thief."

Barbara Stanwyck is the heroine. Principal supports are Gene Raymond, whom she marries, and John Eldredge, who becomes the other man in her life. Other names are Phillip Reed, Dorothy Tree, Russel Hicks, Nella Walker, Claude Gillingwater, Doris Lloyd, Hale Hamilton, Forrester Harver, Gordon Elliott and Brandon Hurst.

Settings, as well as the gowns worn by Miss Stanwyck, Genevieve Tobin and others, are elaborately modern. Several society horse shows are featured, an angle which suggests unique showmanship leads. The dramatic high-point is the courtroom scene, seconded by the conflict scenes within the Wyatt family household.

ALIAS JOHN LAW

Columbia

Contrary to title tone, this production, while a drama of crime and criminals, is also a western. To the tune of thrill action, adventure and mystery, it's the yarn of a cowboy who solves a baffling murder, unravels a chain of villainous double dealing, saves the old man, and while avenging the killing of his own brother wins the heart of the girl he loves.

The original story and screen play are by Ford Beebe, with direction by David Selman, who made the recent Tim McCoy picture, "Quicksand."

Tim McCoy is starred, while in a feature role is Billie Seward, who appeared with him in "Voice in the Night" and also was seen in "Among the Missing." Supporting players include Robert Allen, Frank Sheridan, Edward Earle, Jack Clifford, Tom London, Jack Mower and Alan Sears.

Made particularly to appease the appetites for western, out-door action yarns and incorporating standby values, the picture affords several good showmanship angles. Outstanding is the Tim McCoy name merit. Supplemental is the picture's theme. Following the oft-beaten path, it builds a series of dramatic situations, an ambush and a climactic gun battle.

THE NUT FARM

Monogram

Appropriately titled, this production is a comedy satire of Hollywood, certain phases of the none-too-ethical production fringe and the suckers who succumb to the lure of glowing promises. Keyed to a flamboyant comedy pitch, the story deals with a middle aged pair. The woman, much Hollywood struck, is easy bait for high powered unscrupulous promoters. A picture made proves a preview flop. The hero, however, whips it into such shape that instead of proving a dramatic sensation, it evolves as a ridiculous burlesque that brings fame, fortune, love and happiness for all concerned.

The original story is by John C. Brownell, the adaptation by George Waggner, and direction by Mel Brown.

With story content and its embellishing elements the greatest probable factors of audience and exploitation interest, the cast features some rather well known names. Included are Wallace Ford, Florence Roberts, Betty Alden, Oscar Apfel, Spencer Charters, Arnold Gray, Lorin Raker and Bradley Page.

Being produced in an atmosphere similar to that of "Make Me a Star," Paramount production of two or three years ago, the yarn makes no pretense at being an inside revelation of Hollywood foibles. Aiming solely at amusement, with the significance readily read into the title, it affords many opportunities for unique showmanship.

Chief among these is the bait, mainly in the form of tremendous profits and great fame, dangled before the hungry eyes of the innocent victims. Secondly is the production of the feature picture; its preview and the subsequent re-editing. This, being completely farcical, suggests varied stunts and gags.

WHY GET EXCITED ABOUT ONE REEL?

All right, Mr. Exhibitor, you try to be calm after seeing

TOYLAND BROADCAST

Gosh, it's a honey! Just a single reel but one of those things that steals the show! Filmed in gorgeous color. A cute story of a Toyland Broadcast, caricaturing the Top Stars of radioland. Perfect for the Holidays and great for any time. It's one of M-G-M's HAPPY HARMONIES SERIES (produced by Harmon-Ising) of color cartoons with music that exhibitors are talking about. Betcha you'll get excited too!

by JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

IMPORTANT!—The National Recovery Administration at Washington officially informed this department late last week that Executive Order No. 6710, exempting certain types of business from code clauses pertaining to hours and wages in towns under 2,500 population, does not apply to motion picture theatres. It had been generally understood that this order did apply to theatres, and therefore, the hour and wage provisions of the motion picture code did not affect any theatre in any town having a population of less than 2,500. The NRA informs us, however, that this is incorrect.

Robert A. Gaffney, Assistant Deputy Administrator of the Amusement Section of the National Recovery Administration said: "Theatres have never been designated to come under Executive Order 6710 exempting certain types of business from provisions relating to code hours and wages in towns under 2,500 population. We will appreciate your making the proper correction."

Deputy Gaffney's communication was directed to "The Code Question Box" after he had seen in this department an answer to an exhibitor's inquiry in which it was said that the order made it unnecessary for exhibitors in towns of less than 2,500 persons to abide by the film code's wage and hour stipulations.

NO. 92—WAGES FOR NON-UNION FILM PROJECTIONISTS

QUESTION—I work as a motion picture operator in a large colored house between 42 and 44 hours a week, receiving $25 a week. I do not belong to any union. Please advise me what pay I should get and what to do about it.—OHIO.

ANSWER—Motion picture theatre employees working in colored houses are given the same consideration as other theatre employees under the code.

The motion picture code (Section 2, Part 1-C, Article IV), says that theatre employees (with certain exceptions) shall not work more than 40 hours per week, and, furthermore, Section 6-a of the same part says that projectionists shall not work more than the maximum number of hours prevailing as of August 23rd, 1933, but under no condition (except in an emergency) shall the maximum exceed 40 hours weekly. It appears then that the theatre owner is violating the code by working the complaining projectionist more than 40 hours per week.

Regarding wages, Section 6-a says that the minimum wages for a projectionist shall not be less than the minimum wage that was in effect in a community as of August 23rd, 1933. And, in case of a dispute between the exhibitor and the projectionist as to what constituted the minimum wage and the maximum hours as of August 23rd, 1933, then the code says that such dispute shall be arbitrated in the manner prescribed in the code.

However, it is suggested that the complaining operator first present his problems in the matter to either the Regional Labor Board of the National Recovery Administration or the Local Compliance Board of the NRA. Addresses of both boards may be obtained by writing to the National Recovery Administration at Washington.

NO. 93—UNFAIR COMPETITION AND RELATION TO BANK NIGHTS

QUESTION—Kindly furnish information regarding a code complaint of a "bank night" being unfair competition when the complainant uses "bank nights" in several other theatres in other cities. No signed agreement has been made nor requested by exhibitors of my city in opposition to premium nights. I operate a third-run theatre which in no way interferes with the exhibition of the same pictures by the complainant.—TEXAS.

ANSWER—We fail to see how the fact that the complainant uses "bank nights" in other cities has any bearing on the specific complaint in which the inquiring theatre owner is the defendant, in view of the fact that "bank nights" in the copyrighted form in which they are generally used are outlawed as such under the code. However, the defendant exhibitor might mention to the Local Grievance Board during the hearing, the fact that the complaining exhibitor uses the same "bank night" plan at his own theatres elsewhere, and this for what it might be worth—if anything.

Nor does the fact that there has been no signed agreement effected or suggested by exhibitors in a city prohibiting the further use of the premiums have any bearing on the matter because the premium clause of the code is an entirely different section than the one which governs lotteries, bank nights and the like.

Shadoplay Price Is Increased to 15 Cents

Effective with the March issue, the price of Shadoplay, fan magazine, formerly owned by the publishers of Photoplay, and now owned by Macfadden, will be changed from 10 cents to 15 cents. Shadoplay will be sold independently of Photoplay. A new circulation guarantee and rate schedule for Shadoplay will be issued shortly, that of Photoplay remaining as it is.

Baltimore "Sun" Adds To Amusement Space

The Evening Sun, Baltimore, has enlarged the space given to motion pictures, drama, music and radio news and reviews. Gilbert Kanour, who is the reviewer and editor of films and drama, now does a column or more of news and articles every day with advertising on the same page.

Lilian Harvey Signed By British International

Harry Edington has closed a deal with British International Pictures whereby Lilian Harvey will make three pictures for the English company next year. She is scheduled to start work on the first production about February 1.

Immediate reply is being made direct to the many letters which Motion Picture Herald is receiving from exhibitors and distributors in the field, and from others, in which various questions are asked concerning certain doubtful phases of the Motion Picture Code. In addition, such code questions and the answers submitted are published as a regular service.

For obvious reasons, the letters will appear anonymously. However, the originals will remain on file.

Answers to questions about the Code are submitted only after consultation with authorities familiar with the technicalities of the document.

This service is available to everyone. Send questions to the Code Editor, Motion Picture Herald, 1790 Broadway, New York City.

"Mighty Barnum" Release Coincides with Centennial

The release early next year of 20th Century's "The Mighty Barnum," by United Artists, will coincide with the 100th anniversary of the beginning of the colorful career of the country's leading ballyhoo purveyor and showman. In 1835 Phineas T. Barnum left a small New York grocery store to exhibit Joice Heath, negress, supposedly 160 years old and who was supposed to have known George Washington as an infant. Thus began a career which has become almost legendary in the theatrical history of the country. Theatres will be enlisted in a tribute to Barnum when the film is released. Wallace Beery plays the leading role. The scenario of the film is to be published in book form by Covici, Friede simultaneously with the film's release.

Warner Club Players To Stage Performance

The Warner Club Players, amateur dramatic society composed of members of the Warner Club, will hold its second annual performance and dance in New York at the Club quarters on Friday, December 7. The group will present two one-act plays. Leo J. Drexler staged and directed both plays. Dancing will follow the performance.

The Brooklyn unit of the Warner Club held its second annual dance at the Vitaphone studios last Wednesday evening, Thanksgiving eve. Stage and screen stars were featured in the entertainment.

Ohio Sales Tax Passage Expected

It is expected that the sales tax in Ohio will be enacted by the state legislature, about to open its session. The tax has been defeated six times within the past 18 months. Governor White has recommended a measure calling for exemptions on sales under 10 cents, one cent tax from 10 to 40 cents, two cents from 40 to 70 cents, and three per cent from 70 cents to $1. Part of the nuisance taxes, including the admission tax, is recommended for repeal.

Colonel Alicoate discovers SHORTS!

During our social visits to the loges along the big stem during the past few weeks we have found nothing of abbreviated cinema nature quite so entertaining as the Pete Smith series of "Oddity" shorts he is doing for M-G-M. Here is something that is delightfully different, behind which is the voice of Pete Smith, a foremost disciple of the most modern school of screen narration. "Dartmouth Days," "Rugby" and "Strikes and Spares" are big enough for any house and any type of audience. —Editorial in Film Daily

ELIMINATING THAT SILENCE POCKET

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:

I haven't written to your magazine for some years, since I was at the Majestic, Columbus, Ohio. In fact, the paper's attitude in not trying to put more of an effort forth to get us a day off once a week, when the NRA was merely calling us executives, got my blood up.

Not of this nature is this letter written. It is simply a suggestion for those who make the indorsement trailers for every feature now coming from Hollywood and carrying the official trailer. Why couldn't they spend just a bit more money and place on this trailer a bit of music? It could be even changed from time to time. In every theatre an effort is made to avoid a silence pocket. The closing of the curtain and all is simply stopped when this trailer comes on; voices are heard over the theatre and the entire house goes dead. A bit of music properly handled, for it is very short. A trumpet blast, a gong or some conventional bit would greatly help. The same could be suggested for all state censor titles also.—JOHNNY JONES, Manager, Southern Theatre, Columbus, Ohio.

Editorial pages of the Managers' Round Table Club frequently have contained material relative to the discussion of managers' working conditions, a number of these carrying references to a day off per week. Starting with Aug. 12, 1933, up to and including Nov. 24, 1934, the subject has been treated in the following issues, under the captions noted:

- 1933—
 Aug. 12—Call to Arms.
 19—We Repeat.
 26—We Do Our Part.
 Sept. 2—Attention: Hon. Sol A. Rosenblatt.

 30—Let Us Resolve.
- 1934—
 Jan. 27—Slow Strangulation.
 Feb. 3—Ammunition Wins Battles.
 10—There Is Exultation.
 Mar. 10—Code Weakness.
 31—Under-Cover Men.
 Apr. 28—Cast It Out!
 May 19—Will Darrow Help?
 June 30—And It Still Is.
 30—Optimistic Note.
 July 7—The Irony of It.
 28—Dubious Bargains.
 Aug. 4—Again the Bonus.
 11—Jaysee Says 'Taint So.
 Sept. 1—What's Wrong with Business?

 27—To Mr. Anonymous.
 Nov. 10—Good Men Deserve It.
 17—An Open Letter to Exhibitors.
 17—Even More Urgent.
 24—Poisoning Initiative.

Thus the subject was discussed in 31 issues of the HERALD in the Round Table department.—A. MIKE VOGEL.

Metzger Resigns as BIP Representative

Lou B. Metzger, in Los Angeles, has dropped his connection with John Maxwell, as American representative of British International Pictures. The severance is entirely amicable, Mr. Metzger having acquired another theatre property in addition to his New Spreckles theatre in San Diego. He is also active in the liquor business in Los Angeles.

Liberty in Distribution Deal with Wardour, England

Wardour Films, Ltd., subsidiary of British International Pictures, English company, will distribute the product of Liberty Pictures in the United Kingdom. The arrangement was made following negotiations between Arthur Dent, managing director of Wardour, and Budd Rogers, general sales manager of Liberty.

The agreement provides an outlet for Liberty in the theatres operated by British International, including the Provincial Cinema Theatres circuit, one of the largest in Great Britain. Six of the eight productions on Liberty's program have arrived in London. The product is produced at the Pathe Studios at Culver City, on the Coast. M. H. Hoffman is president of the company.

RKO Radio Pictures, Ltd., Distributes Indian Film

RKO Radio Pictures, Ltd., has completed a deal with Himansuraj Indo-International Talkies, Ltd., managing agents of Bombay Talkies, Ltd., Indian company, to cooperate in the distribution of "Karma," the first Indian talking film produced with all-English dialogue. RKO Radio will distribute the film in Bengal, Bihar, Orissa, Assam and Burma.

Reginald Armour, managing director of RKO Radio Pictures, Ltd., recently declared that his company was about to distribute Indian talking films. The film "Karma" was produced by Himansu Rai.

A MUSICAL COMEDY THAT

"Demonstrates what the short feature field really can achieve"

E.W. Hammons

SYLVIA
FROOS IN

The GIRL from PARADISE

with FRANK LUTHER
GEORGE SHELTON
N.T.G. and the Paradise Revue
Produced by Al Christie

Excellent Entertainment.
Here is entertainment in its fullest sense, with good singing, brisk comedy, and likable flash of girl dancing groups. Elements for all types of audiences have been compiled in a production which demonstrates what the short feature field really can achieve.... Miss Froos' singing is good, with the Maurice Kusell chorus routines, piquant and colorful.
Motion Picture Herald

Fine Musical Flash.

A very pretentious musical comedy.... The ensemble numbers are given just the way they appear at the Broadway night spot, and are very elaborate, while the girls are unusually good looking.... Here is a smart and colorful musical that moves fast and has plenty of gayety and beauty.

Rosenblatt Hears Studio Code Issue

Sol A. Rosenblatt, compliance director, left Hollywood Wednesday by plane for the East after failing to mediate the code dispute between the producers, actors and writers. The Guilds' boards immediately undertook revision of the code. The producers presented a plan for a new association along the lines of the Academy. They rejected the Guilds' demands for autonomy in bargaining over working conditions.

Mr. Rosenblatt took a plane to Hollywood last week at the request of the Screen Actors and Writers Guilds in the hope that he, acting as an arbiter, could bring about a satisfactory settlement. Threats of a strike by actors and writers were reported Wednesday by news wire services.

John C. Flinn, executive secretary of the film Code Authority, returned east after a trip to Hollywood to line up next year's budget of the Authority. Mr. Flinn reported conditions among extras greatly improved under the operation of the code.

Demands of the actors, which are being fought by the producers and which Mr. Rosenblatt is endeavoring to settle satisfactorily for both groups, are:

1. A new standard contract with a clause providing for arbitration of all individual actor-producer differences.

2. No loaning of contract players to other studios without their consent.

3. Abolishment of the call bureau.

4. Right of agent to represent players in all dealings with producers, including matters not related to fixing of salary and obtaining of roles.

5. A basic eight-hour day for players hired by the day that shall include travel time to and from locations.

6. No Sunday or holiday work unless compensated for by another day off.

7. Short-term contracts to run consecutive days, not spread out over intermediate periods.

8. Overtime pay for day players and freelancers.

The National Industrial Recovery Board in Washington last week disapproved rules proposed to govern relations between producers and agents, writers, actors, directors and technicians. The rules were proposed by the agency committee of the film Code Authority.

Disapproval was based on the finding of the division administrator that the proposed rules were "beyond the powers and without the scope of the duties delegated to the agency committee." Agents are not members of the industry and are not subject to the industry code, and the relationships sought to be governed by the proposed regulations were chiefly those between actors and agents.

The Code Authority has disposed of more than 250 out of approximately 300 appeals filed with it since its inception, it was indicated last week. The major obstacle confronting the industry's governing NRA body at present is the Kansas City clearance and zoning scheduled, which, it hopes, will serve as a model for the drafting of plans for other territories.

More Westerns Asked By Ontario Censor

More westerns should be produced, in the opinion of O. J. Silverstone, of Scotland, Ont., new member of the Ontario censor board.

Mr. Silverstone, who operated a theatre at Meaford, Ont., in the silent screen days, is from the rural territory of the province.

Diplomats See "Hungaria"

"Hungaria," official picture of Hungarian life, was shown Friday to diplomats and their families by John Pelenyi, Hungarian minister to the United States, George de Ghika, consul general, George Linzboth, vice consul, and the Hungarian-American Society, at a private screening in the Columbia Pictures home office.

Artclass

CAVALIER OF THE WEST: Harry Carey—A nice picture. Some liked it, some did not as they expected lots of action and there was none except some gun play. Running time, 55 minutes. Played November 23-24.—H. J. Stallings, Moon Theatre, Henderson, N. C. General patronage.

Capital

RED HAIRED ALIBI: Merna Kennedy—Nothing big, no comments good or bad, but personally I would say it was fair entertainment. Running time, 60 minutes. Played November 14-15.—H. J. Stallings, Moon Theatre, Henderson, N. C. General patronage.

Columbia

BLIND DATE: Ann Sothorn, Paul Kelly, Neil Hamilton—Good picture that drew a fair business. Running time, 72 minutes. Played November 16-17.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Small town patronage.

DEFENSE RESTS, THE: Jack Holt—Good program picture. Recording good. Running time, 70 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

FIGHTING CODE, THE: Buck Jones pictures are always good and he always brings in a good crowd.—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. Small town patronage.

HELL BENT FOR LOVE: Tim McCoy—Okay for Friday and Saturday. Running time, 58 minutes. Played November 16-17.—Geo. F. Smith, Lyric Theatre, Lapeer, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

I'LL FIX IT: Jack Holt—Drew well on bargain night. Jack Holt is very well liked. Running time, 68 minutes. Played November 13.—Geo. F. Smith, Lyric Theatre, Lapeer, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

IT HAPPENED ONE NIGHT: Clark Gable, Claudette Colbert—Nothing can be added to what other exhibitors have said about this picture. It is one swell piece of entertainment. Played about eight months too late, but it pulled in people that very seldom go to a theatre. This is one picture that you don't have to get back of the screen when they start coming out. You can greet them and smile; it's something to smile about.—J. E. Ross, Jr., Strand Theatre, Saint George, S. C. Small town patronage.

LADY BY CHOICE: Carole Lombard, May Robson, Roger Pryor—Personally we do not care for the leads in this picture. It drew well on Sunday, however. Running time, 65 minutes. Played November 4-5.—Geo. F. Smith, Lyric Theatre, Lapeer, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

MOST PRECIOUS THING IN LIFE: Jean Arthur, Donald Cook, Richard Cromwell—Too much of Jean Arthur and in a role that does not suit her. Don't advertise it as a football picture as I did; there is very little football in it. Just another picture.—J. E. Ross, Jr., Strand Theatre, Saint George, S. C. Small town patronage.

ONE NIGHT OF LOVE: Grace Moore—Grace Moore is a wonderful singer, but as a small town picture it was the bunk. It fell flat at the box office. We lost money on this. Running time, 82 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

STRAIGHTAWAY: Tim McCoy, Sue Carol—This picture had a thrilling racing scene, but the love scenes did not seem sincere to me and so, although the picture drew fairly well, I was a little disappointed in it.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Small town patronage.

VOICE IN THE NIGHT: Tim McCoy—Good action picture. Running time, 59 minutes. Played November 16-17.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Small town patronage.

WHIRLPOOL: Jack Holt, Lila Lee, Jean Arthur—A couple more like this and Columbia can kiss Jack Holt goodbye. Give him a real story and then watch them come out to see it.—J. E. Ross, Jr., Strand Theatre, Saint George, S. C. Small town patronage.

WHITE EAGLE: Buck Jones, Barbara Weeks—A good Saturday picture for children and the young fellows from the surrounding territory.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Small town patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

MOTION PICTURE HERALD
1790 Broadway, New York

First National

BRITISH AGENT: Leslie Howard, Kay Francis—A small town headache. Running time, 80 minutes. Played October 26-27.—I. W. Rawley, Ward Theatre, Pismo Beach, Cal. General patronage.

BRITISH AGENT: Kay Francis, Leslie Howard—An alleged special, but a picture that is not even a good program picture. Acting okay, but something slipped when this picture was made.—Warren Weber, Deluxe Theatre, St. John, Kan. General patronage.

VERY HONORABLE GUY, A: Joe E. Brown, Alice White—Not so good, but pleased on a double feature. Running time, 62 minutes. Played November 9-10.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Small town patronage.

Fox

BABY TAKE A BOW: Shirley Temple—This gave 100 per cent satisfaction. Shirley Temple is wonderful. A great little star. Her acting is very good. The best picture of the year. This was much better than "Little Miss Marker." Claire Trevor and James Dunn also were good. The Fox Corporation deserves much credit for this little sweetheart. Running time, 73 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

BABY TAKE A BOW: Shirley Temple, James Dunn, Claire Trevor—They don't come any better than this one. Played it too old, so it did not mean so much for us. Every one liked it; some came back the second night and they told us they enjoyed it.—J. E. Ross, Jr., Strand Theatre, Saint George, S. C. Small town patronage.

BABY TAKE A BOW: Shirley Temple—Little Shirley with Jimmy Dunn as Daddy and Claire Trevor as Momma makes a combination that cannot be beaten. They came from every direction, big, little, old and young, and how they did enjoy this show. Second day was much better than the first and that is something that happens just so often nowadays. Played November 15-16.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

BEST OF ENEMIES: Buddy Rogers, Marian Nixon, Frank Morgan—Parts of this picture are fine, but we had criticism for showing such a picture because of so much drinking and extolling of beer. Played June 27.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Small town patronage.

BOTTOMS UP: Pat Paterson, John Boles—This had one slobber kiss in it that was disgusting. Why these long kisses? I venture to say that there is not one patron out of 10 that likes these long kisses. Running time, 85 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

CALL IT LUCK: "Pat" Paterson, Charles Starrett—A racing drama with an original twist. A melodrama of a superior type. Plenty of comedy and thrills and a wow of a finish. Drawing power a good average.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

CARAVAN: Charles Boyer, Loretta Young, Jean Parker, Phillips Holmes—Good story, wonderful sets, swell music. Hard to sell, but it builds. Running time, 100 minutes. Played November 4-5.—I. W. Rawley, Ward Theatre, Pismo Beach, Cal. General patronage.

CAT'S PAW, THE: Harold Lloyd—Lloyd's best picture, but he fails to draw any business for us. Film rental too high. Running time, 100 minutes. Played October 28-30.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Small town patronage.

CHANGE OF HEART: Janet Gaynor, Charles Farrell—Very good picture that did not do so well at the box office. Running time, 76 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN IN LONDON: Warner Oland, Drue Leyton, Mona Barrie—This is a very good picture of the mystery type and should please everyone. It is a clever and entertaining detective story and pleased my patrons. A crime is committed on a country estate near London and Chan is called on to solve the mystery and free the innocent man. This is good entertainment for the whole family and we played on Saturday to very good business. Running time, 76 minutes. Played November 17.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN'S GREATEST CASE: Warner Oland, Heather Angel, Virginia Cherrill—Good Chan story. Perhaps not his best, but still a good one.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

DAVID HARUM: Will Rogers—A dandy picture for the whole family. Just the kind of picture for Rogers. Excellent at the box office. Fox has the pictures that make a little money for the theatremen. Print and recording good. Running time, 81 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

ELINOR NORTON: Claire Trevor, Hugh Williams, Norman Foster—Stupid, boring, no good. Cancel it and you will have done your patrons a favor.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

GRAND CANARY: Warner Baxter—A good picture that did not draw for me. Seems as though Warner Baxter is slipping. Played November 8-9.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

JUDGE PRIEST: Will Rogers, Henry B. Walthall, Stepin Fetchit—Very good. One picture that Rogers shared with the others in the cast. Outstanding was the part that Henry B. Walthall took in the trial at the last of the picture. Then for comedy there was an old boy with whiskers that could make a 20-foot bullseye with his tobacco at the spittoon. This bit captured the audience. His technique was little short of marvelous.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

JUDGE PRIEST: Will Rogers—It's just too bad we can't have a Rogers at least once a month. Just let 'em know Will is on the screen and they'll all be there and then we don't see them again until his next picture. Not as good at the box office as "Handy Andy," but it's still good, wholesome, clean family entertainment and that's what we want. Running time, 81 minutes. Played November 4-6.—P. J. Lees, Majestic Theatre, Lake Mills, Wis. Small town patronage.

JUDGE PRIEST: Will Rogers—About as good as any Rogers picture and will do "David Harum" business. Fox has two of the greatest box office stars in the industry in Rogers and Shirley Temple, which makes me overlook some of the crows.—Warren Weber, Deluxe Theatre, St. John, Kan. General patronage.

LAST TRAIL, THE: George O'Brien, Claire Trevor—Here's a western that made the usual appeal to the people from outside of town. El Brendel supplies more than the usual amount of comedy and the picture was a big success.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Small town patronage.

LOVE TIME: "Pat" Paterson, Nils Asther—Very pleasing and well made. B. O. fair. Running time, 75 minutes. Played November 2-3.—I. W. Rawley, Ward Theatre, Pismo Beach, Cal. General patronage.

MY WEAKNESS: Lilian Harvey, Lew Ayres, Charles Butterworth, Harry Langdon—This picture did not draw extra well, but everyone, including myself, enjoyed it very much. I considered it one of the best comedies we have shown.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Small town patronage.

NOW I'LL TELL: Spencer Tracy—Here is a good picture, but didn't draw, and tragic ending caused patrons to leave theatre with depressed feeling. Played November 1-2.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

PECK'S BAD BOY: Jackie Cooper, Thomas Meighan, Jackie Searl—Just a nice little picture. Nothing to rave about, but patrons seemed satisfied. It is exactly what they expected to see. Didn't do the business that I expected it would, for reason, I believe, some adults thought it was a kid picture for kids. Running time, 73 minutes. Played November 17-19.—Harold Haubein, Cozy Theatre, Lockwood, Mo. Small town patronage.

PECK'S BAD BOY: Jackie Cooper—A swell little picture changed a trifle to keep up with the times. Played too new for our town, but should get good money after it is known, as the adults will like it just as well as the kids if you can get them in. Running time, 70 minutes. Played October 21-23.—P. J. Lees, Majestic Theatre, Lake Mills, Wis. Small town patronage.

PECK'S BAD BOY: Jackie Cooper, Thomas Meighan, Jackie Searl—Every exhibitor should play this—good for his patrons, his reputation and his box office. Running time, 73 minutes. Played November 16-17.—I. W. Rawley, Ward Theatre, Pismo Beach, Cal. General patronage.

PURSUED: Rosemary Ames, Victor Jory—Just got by on Bargain Nights. No complaints to speak of, but, sure no compliments. Very much over-acted. That little actress, Pert Kelton, stole the show. Running time, 68 minutes. Played November 14-15.—Harold Haubein, Cozy Theatre, Lockwood, Mo. Small town patronage.

SHE LEARNED ABOUT SAILORS: Lew Ayres, Alice Faye—Played on a double bill and it certainly sent the crowd away happy. Box office good. Running time, 76 minutes. Played November 2-3.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Small town patronage.

SHE WAS A LADY: Helen Twelvetrees, Donald Woods, Ralph Morgan—Very good program picture that the patrons enjoyed. Bad title that didn't help business any, but if you can get them in, they will like it.—J. E. Ross, Jr., Strand Theatre, Saint George, S. C. Small town patronage.

SHE WAS A LADY: Helen Twelvetrees—Here is one that fazed me. Was not looking for much, but it's a darn good picture and one that will please. Played November 13-14.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

STAND UP AND CHEER: All Star Musical—The only thing to cheer about in this one is little Shirley Temple. She steals the show. Too much of nothing to be a big musical, as it was supposed to be. The less said about it the better.—J. E. Ross, Jr., Strand Theatre, Saint George, S. C. Small town patronage.

STATE FAIR: Will Rogers, Janet Gaynor, Lew Ayres, Sally Eilers, Norman Foster—Here is one of the best pictures we have played, one that the country people delighted in. Played July 4.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Small town patronage.

365 NIGHTS IN HOLLYWOOD: James Dunn, Alice Faye—Affording a keyhole glimpse of what is doing in the film colony when its inhabitants are not on guard, with James Dunn, Alice Faye, Mitchell and Durant. Very well done. Pleased them all. Played to average business for the two-day run. Played November 23-24.—A. F. Affelt, Iosco Theatre, Oscoda, Mich. Small town patronage.

WILD GOLD: John Boles, Claire Trevor—Played on a double bill. Flood scene excellent. Gate okay and audience pleased. Running time, 77 minutes. Played November 2-3.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Small town patronage.

WORLD MOVES ON, THE: Madeleine Carroll, Franchot Tone—Pleased about 20 per cent. Too heavy drama, although a wonderful picture. Business poor. Played November 4-5.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Small town patronage.

Majestic

GUN LAW: Jack Hoxie—A so-so western. Hasn't much action, but it will get by. Running time, 50 minutes. Played November 16-17.—H. J. Stallings, Moon Theatre, Henderson, N. C. General patronage.

Mascot

CRIMSON ROMANCE: Ben Lyon, Sari Maritza—A good picture. First story of the air mail played in some time and all that saw it liked it. Played November 21-22.—H. J. Stallings, Moon Theatre, Henderson, N. C. General patronage.

YOUNG AND BEAUTIFUL: William Haines, Judith Allen—This picture failed to draw for me, but certainly was no fault of the production, as it is very good and should please in any spot. I guess folks had forgotten wise-cracking William Haines, but a few like this will bring back his popularity. Played November 6-7.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

MGM

BARRETTS OF WIMPOLE STREET: Charles Laughton, Fredric March, Norma Shearer—A high-class picture—in fact, so high-class that it is insufferably dull. No action, no comedy, just dialogue. If your audiences are high brow, it may be okay, but for the average movie patron, it's the nerfs! Played November 10.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

WANTS REPORTS ON NEWER FILMS

With the idea of encouraging early reports to "What the Picture Did for Me" on new product, John H. Forrester, of the Pines theatre, at Waldron, Ark., who writes, "I have read the HERALD for the past four years religiously," becomes with this issue a regular contributor to the department, sending the following interesting observations:

"In an effort to induce some other exhibitors who play features within two to eight weeks of release date to report, am going to try reporting for awhile. If it's possible to know about the pictures ahead, many a 'headache' can be paid for or shelved.

"Waldron is in the heart of a yellow pine lumber belt, sawmilling and lumber being the main industries in the county. The population of Waldron given by the census is 1,071 but there are nearly as many more living just outside city limits in the mill district. Farming is practically the entire support of the rural people, with some coal, etc. Waldron has no empty business houses nor residences and hasn't had for the past two years, although it is far from being in the midst of a boom. Somehow, there seems to be a pretty fair living for most business houses, show business having been fair to increasing about 30 per cent over this time last year during the past five months."

CHAINED: Clark Gable, Joan Crawford—A swell picture that will get good money where Gable and Crawford are liked. Played on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday and was able to run all three nights as the word-of-mouth advertising kept them coming. Running time, 80 minutes. Played September 30-October 1-2.—P. J. Lees, Majestic Theatre, Lake Mills, Wis. Small town patronage.

CHAINED: Joan Crawford, Clark Gable, Otto Kruger, Stuart Erwin—This is a very good picture that pleased every one of my patrons. This is a romantic drama with the comedy hit supplied by Stuart Erwin. It is lavishly produced with expert direction and excellent acting by the entire cast. It is an old story—a story of two men in love with the same woman. We played this two days to the best business in the past year and pleased all. Running time, 74 minutes. Played November 15-16.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

DANCING LADY: Joan Crawford, Clark Gable, Franchot Tone, May Robson, Winnie Lightner, Fred Astaire—A fine picture and very well attended. Every one was enthusiastic.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Small town patronage.

DEATH ON THE DIAMOND: Robert Young, Madge Evans—Good picture. Well liked and drew fairly well. Running time, 72 minutes. Played November 14-15.—Geo. F. Smith, Lyric Theatre, Lapeer, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

EVELYN PRENTICE: William Powell, Myrna Loy—A great motion picture that failed to draw because of the title. Powell and Loy were never better than in this drama. It takes weeks to make a good picture and five minutes to spoil it by a poor title.—Warren Weber, Deluxe Theatre, St. John, Kan. General patronage.

HAVE A HEART: Jean Parker, James Dunn, Stuart Erwin, Una Merkel—Good program picture. Nothing big, but it pleases. Played November 7.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

HIDE-OUT: Maureen O'Sullivan, Eugene Montgomery—Here is one that all exhibitors should play, one of the best of the Robert Montgomery and Maureen O'Sullivan pictures yet produced. A real family treat. Laughs top every thrill. Played three days to average business. Running time, 82 minutes. Played November 20-21-22.—A. F. Affelt, Iosco Theatre, Oscoda, Mich. Small town patronage.

HIDE-OUT: Robert Montgomery—Give the small town exhibitors more pictures like this and he won't have to worry about meeting the people as they come out. Plenty of laughs and an all around family picture. Running time, 80 minutes. Played October 5-6.—P. J. Lees, Majestic Theatre, Lake Mills, Wis. Small town patronage.

HIDE-OUT: Robert Montgomery—Good picture and was very well liked. Drew fairly well. Don't like Maureen O'Sullivan's (what a name) phoney accent. Running time, 83 minutes. Played November 21-22.—Geo. F. Smith, Lyric Theatre, Lapeer, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

OUTCAST LADY: Constance Bennett, Herbert Marshall—A good picture of its kind. Because of the foreign element, it failed to draw. Average business for the two-day run. Running time, 76 minutes. Played November 18-19.—A. F. Affelt, Iosco Theatre, Oscoda, Mich. Small town patronage.

SADIE McKEE: Joan Crawford—Just the kind of picture that pleased everybody. Played October 28-29.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

STUDENT TOUR: Charles Butterworth, Jimmy Durante—A well balanced picture. Everyone satisfied. Jimmy Durante at his best in this one. Also a very good supporting cast. Played November 9-10.—A. F. Affelt, Iosco Theatre, Oscoda, Mich. Small town patronage.

STUDENT TOUR: Charles Butterworth, Jimmy Durante—This is a very good show, when Durante isn't talking. His voice is terrible and his acting isn't much better. We played this too new and it failed to draw average business. Running time, 87 minutes. Played November 7.—Mrs. Clyde Pace, Pace Theatre, Gordon, Neb. Small town patronage.

STUDENT TOUR: Charles Butterworth, Jimmy Durante—Fair picture with a few laughs. Didn't draw well. Running time, 86 minutes. Played November 7-8.—Geo. F. Smith, Lyric Theatre, Lapeer, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

WHAT EVERY WOMAN KNOWS: Helen Hayes, Brian Aherne—One of the most disinteresting pictures ever made. Helen Hayes drew well first night. Hardly needed to open theatre second night after word of how terrible it was had gotten around town. Would cancel it if I had to do it over, or pay for it, for would have saved money. Played November 7-8.—John H. Forrester, The Pines Theatre, Waldron, Ark. Small town patronage.

WHAT EVERY WOMAN KNOWS: Helen Hayes, Brian Aherne, Madge Evans, Dudley Digges—This is only fair entertainment that did not please my patrons. The sophisticated type of patrons enjoyed this, but they are very few in our town. The acting is excellent, but the Scotch dialect made it difficult to understand. Many walked out before the show was half over and the disappointments were many. Played two days to only fair business. Running time, 89 minutes. Played November 19-20.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

WHAT EVERY WOMAN KNOWS: Helen Hayes—We can't remember a more delightful picture. However, it will not please the great unwashed. Running time, 90 minutes. Played November 18-19.—Geo. F. Smith, Lyric Theatre, Lapeer, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

Monogram

CITY LIMITS: Ray Walker, Sally Blane—This is a very interesting little story with plenty of laughs. Done a nice little business and had many favorable comments. Running time, 65 minutes. Played November 12-13.—O. J. Stallings, Moon Theatre, Henderson, N. C. General patronage.

FROM BROADWAY TO CHEYENNE: Rex Bell—One of the old westerns I picked up for the rural Saturday crowd. Anything with a horse and gun goes well with them. Played November 10.—John H. Forrester, The Pines Theatre, Waldron, Ark. Small town patronage.

GIRL OF THE LIMBERLOST, A: Marian Marsh—In spite of heavy competition this one drew very nicely on the toughest nights of the week. Play it by all means. It's the kind of a picture that is tailor-made for the small towns.—Warren Weber, Deluxe Theatre, St. John, Kan. General patronage.

GIRL OF THE LIMBERLOST: Marian Marsh, Ralph Morgan—A picture for the entire family. Excellent acting by Marian Marsh and Ralph Morgan. The cast was well selected and good acting by all. The kind of a production that brings new faces to your box-office. Business above the average for the three-day run. Running time, 86 minutes. Played November 15-16-17.—A. F. Affelt, Iosco Theatre, Oscoda, Mich. Small town patronage.

MONTE CARLO NIGHTS: Mary Brian—Mary Brian's beauty is the best thing about this picture. Acting not so good. I would say an ordinary program picture. Running time, 60 minutes. Played November 26-27.—H. J. Stallings, Moon Theatre, Henderson, N. C. General patronage.

Paramount

BELLE OF THE NINETIES: Mae West—This was our first Mae West picture. Opened up with an exceptional large matinee. After that only normal business. Picture did not please.—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. Small town patronage.

BELLE OF THE NINETIES: Mae West—Very poor attendance. Mae West certainly failed to get them in this time. Running time, 75 minutes. Played November 6-8.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Small town patronage.

BELLE OF THE NINETIES: Mae West—Expected "I'm No Angel" business and got the biggest surprise of my life. Just average run. Spoiled in our town I think by the publicity it received when retakes were taken so many times. A typical Mae West picture. See one, see them all. Running time, 72 minutes. Played Oct. 28-30.—P. J. Lees, Majestic Theatre, Lake Mills, Wis. Small town patronage.

BELLE OF THE NINETIES: Mae West—Packed theatre entire engagement, pleased 75 per cent of patrons. Story did not fit. Mae should be cast as modern business woman in a forthcoming production. Running time, 75 minutes. Played November 4-7.—W. A. Mauldin, Broadway Theatre, Lubbock, Texas. General patronage.

BELLE OF THE NINETIES: Mae West—They came over the hills with lanterns to see this one. Mae is our best drawing card, and any time she's here the S. R. O. sign is out. However, this picture wasn't as well liked as the others. The Legion of Decency gummied things up—if I may be allowed that expression. Running time, 74 minutes. Played October 28-29.—Geo. F. Smith, Lyric Theatre, Lapeer, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

CLEOPATRA: Claudette Colbert, Warren Wilcox—A marvelous, expensive portrayal of the famous siren of the Nile and her life. Not very interesting to average customer, although I put it over by tying up with schools. A super special of Paramount's that isn't worth its price at the box office. Played November 11-13.—John H. Forrester, The Pines Theatre, Waldron, Ark. Small town patronage.

EAGLE AND THE HAWK, THE: Fredric March, Cary Grant, Jack Oakie, Carole Lombard—This picture drew fairly well, but I think they were disappointed. The love story with Carole Lombard was objectionable, therefore the romantic interest nil or worse, and the shots of war-time flying not extraordinary.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Small town patronage.

ELMER AND ELSIE: George Bancroft, Frances Fuller—Absolutely the poorest excuse for film entertainment we have ever seen. Did not even get by on a double program. Running time, 75 minutes. Played October 26-27.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Small town patronage.

I'M NO ANGEL: Mae West, Cary Grant, Edward Arnold, Gregory Ratoff—Played too old. Drew fairly well. I'm wondering if Miss West will draw when I play "Gay Nineties." Am afraid not, but who can tell.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

LADIES SHOULD LISTEN: Cary Grant, Frances Drake—Very poor crowd, but a nice pleasing light comedy. Running time, 60 minutes. Played November 14-15.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Small town patronage.

LAST ROUND-UP, THE: Randolph Scott—This drew for us even if it is old. Give us more pictures of this kind and the small town's troubles would be over. Running time, 60 minutes. Played October 27-28.—L. G. Evanson, Lyric Theatre, McIntosh, S. D. Small town patronage.

LITTLE MISS MARKER: Shirley Temple—The kind of picture to bring out all the kids and they bring the parents with them. Played October 30-31.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

LONE COWBOY: Jackie Cooper—Very good for family trade. Running time, 60 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

MENACE: Gertrude Michael, Paul Cavanagh—One of the best mystery-horror type pictures we have played. Every one seemed to enjoy it, although it is draggy in spots. Step on it, get them in; they'll like it. Played November 14-15.—John H. Forrester, The Pines Theatre, Waldron, Ark. Small town patronage.

MENACE: Paul Cavanagh—Good mystery story. Suspense, chills and fever. Drew well on Bargain Night. Running time, 58 minutes. Played November 20.—Geo. F. Smith, Lyric Theatre, Lapeer, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

MRS. WIGGS OF THE CABBAGE PATCH: Pauline Lord, W. C. Fields, Zasu Pitts—Pauline Lord, W. C. Fields and Zasu Pitts are excellent. A human interest story for the entire family. Pauline Lord great as Mrs. Wiggs. She does marvelous acting in this picture. The entire cast was well chosen, and good acting by all. The kind of a show that brings new faces to your box-office. Business above the average. Running time, 73 minutes. Played November 11-12.—A. F. Affelt, Iosco Theatre, Oscoda, Mich. Small town patronage.

MRS. WIGGS OF THE CABBAGE PATCH: W. C. Fields, Pauline Lord, Zasu Pitts—Fine, exceptionally acted picture by all of cast. Plenty of favorable comments and good business. Played November 4-6.—John H. Forrester, The Pines Theatre, Waldron, Ark. Small town patronage.

MYSTERIOUS RIDER, THE: Kent Taylor, Lona Andre—An old western that pleased, although business was off. My serial ended the week before I played this and I did not start another with this picture. This I contribute my off business to.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

NOTORIOUS SOPHIE LANG: Gertrude Michael, Paul Cavanagh—No business, but a good picture. Running time, 64 minutes. Played October 24-25.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Small town patronage.

NOW AND FOREVER: Shirley Temple, Gary Cooper—The sweetest story ever told. A picture for all classes. A very good picture for any night of the week. Be sure to play it. Business above the average for the three-day run. Running time, 82 minutes. Played November 25-26-27.—A. F. Affelt, Iosco Theatre, Oscoda, Mich. Small town patronage.

NOW AND FOREVER: Gary Cooper, Carole Lombard, Shirley Temple—Not as good as "Baby Take a Bow" and they didn't hesitate to tell the manager that after the show. Too bad Shirley isn't put in plays like Will Rogers appears in. Wonder why the producers think it is best to put her in pictures that show nothing but the seamy side of life. Played November 24-25.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

NOW AND FOREVER: Shirley Temple, Carole Lombard, Gary Cooper—Picture was better than "Little Miss Marker," but not nearly as good as "Baby Take a Bow." Business way above average.—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. Small town patronage.

OLD-FASHIONED WAY, THE: W. C. Fields—This one wasn't so hot. It pleased some, and others didn't go for it at all.—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. Small town patronage.

OLD FASHIONED WAY, THE: W. C. Fields, Baby LeRoy—This one got the laughs from start to finish. It drew better than average. I believe it is Field's best to date. Running time, 71 minutes. Played November 18-19.—Mrs. Clyde Pace, Pace Theatre, Gordon, Neb. Small town patronage.

READY FOR LOVE: Richard Arlen, Ida Lupino—The kind of a picture that has human appeal, but a great drawback, which is the title of the production. A good cast and a story that follows through, but because of the poor selection of the title it failed to draw. Played November 13-14.—A. F. Affelt, Iosco Theatre, Oscoda, Mich. Small town patronage.

READY FOR LOVE: Richard Arlen, Ida Lupino—Another good little program picture which seemed to please generally. Played on "Cash night" and house crowded, but they all liked it. That's something. Played November 9.—John H. Forrester, The Pines Theatre, Waldron, Ark. Small town patronage.

READY FOR LOVE: Richard Arlen, Ida Lupino—Hokum and they liked it. Running time, 65 minutes. Played November 23-24.—Geo. F. Smith, Lyric Theatre, Lapeer, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

SCARLET EMPRESS, THE: Marlene Dietrich—A black eye for the small town and if you don't have to play it shelve it and you'll be better off. Beautiful settings and all music. Dietrich says about 20 words. Why don't the producers make two or three good pictures for the money they spend on one like this and give the exhibitor a chance to get his head above water. Running time, 103 minutes. Played November 11-13.—P. J. Lees, Majestic Theatre, Lake Mills, Wis. Small town patronage.

SCARLET EMPRESS, THE: Marlene Dietrich—Thirteen reels of thundering music and long-haired lovers. Things are getting better if any one does any business on this colossal flop.—Warren Weber, Deluxe Theatre, St. John, Kan. General patronage.

SHE DONE HIM WRONG: Mae West—Everybody came to see Mae West and all agreed she was great.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Small town patronage.

SHE LOVES ME NOT: Bing Crosby, Miriam Hopkins—One of Crosby's best, but it failed to get any extra business. Running time, 85 minutes. Played November 11-13.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Small town patronage.

SHE LOVES ME NOT: Bing Crosby, Miriam Hopkins—You can't go wrong on this one. Bing doesn't spoil this by singing too much, and this Miriam Hopkins is a scream. Kitty Carlisle is a sweet singer and easy to look at. We need more of this kind of picture to keep them coming. Played November 11-12.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

RELEASED THRU—The New Major
FIRST DIVISION

—HARRY H. THOMAS, president—

SHOOT THE WORKS: Jack Oakie, Ben Bernie—A better than average musical. Ben Bernie and his band are given plenty to do and do it well. The theme song, "With My Eyes Wide Open," has become popular and is pleasingly rendered. As a whole it gave good satisfaction. Jack Oakie gives a good account of himself. A clean and wholesome picture from start to finish. Business a fair average.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

THIRTY-DAY PRINCESS: Sylvia Sidney, Cary Grant—This film lot better than patrons expected. Pleased 70 per cent. Not natural drawing card. Must be advertised. Played September 16-19.—W. A. Mauldin, Broadway Theatre, Lubbock, Texas. General patronage.

THIRTY-DAY PRINCESS: Sylvia Sidney—A very pleasing picture and my patrons were glad to see Sylvia again. Played November 4-5.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

THUNDERING HERD, THE: Randolph Scott—Another good Zane Grey picture that grossed better than average business for us.—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. Small town patronage.

UNDER THE TONTO RIM: Stuart Erwin—An old western, but it drew them out and for a bargain night show it was an exceptional good one. All Zane Grey westerns are extra good at the box office.—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. Small town patronage.

WAGON WHEELS: Randolph Scott, Gail Patrick—Ran this with good shorts and had people tell me they enjoyed it more than any picture they had seen in a long time. I can't figure out whether the shorts drew them in or if it was "Wagon Wheels," for while it's a good western, I've seen better of this type. Any way, it drew more cash customers than any western played during the past year. Played November 21-22.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

WAGON WHEELS: Randolph Scott, Gail Patrick—Anybody that's in a town where good westerns go, take this one and give it everything you've got. The best I've seen in some time, with an added draw by the song being used and used in a right way. Give us more of this type of Zane Grey's story. Running time, 6 minutes. Played October 19-20.—P. J. Lees, Majestic Theatre, Lake Mills, Wis. Small town patronage.

WAGON WHEELS: Randolph Scott, Gail Patrick—Play this and get in the show business again. If you can't stack them in on this, lock the door and throw the key away. These Zane Grey westerns are the best box office of any Paramount releases.—Warren Weber, Deluxe Theatre, St. John, Kan. General patronage.

RKO

BACHELOR BAIT: Pert Kelton, Stuart Erwin—Good comedy picture that satisfied the majority. Did average business. Running time, 76 minutes. Played November 17.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

BY YOUR LEAVE: Genevieve Tobin, Frank Morgan—A nice program picture. It didn't draw any extra business, but seemed to please those who came in. It is all a comedy about a middle-aged man who wants to have a fling, but when he has a chance he loses his nerve. Running time, 80 minutes. Played November 4.—Mrs. Clyde Pace, Pace Theatre, Gordon, Neb. Small town patronage.

COCKEYED CAVALIERS: Wheeler and Woolsey—Their best comedy, but the costume stuff don't appeal to our patrons. Running time, 72 minutes. Played November 9-10.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Small town patronage.

COCKEYED CAVALIERS: Wheeler and Woolsey—The costumes ruined the whole show. Had some people to say that it is the poorest they have ever appeared in. Hope their next one is better than this.—J. E. Ross, Jr., Strand Theatre, Saint George, S. C. Small town patronage.

CRIME DOCTOR, THE: Otto Kruger, Karen Morley—Fair mystery drama, but rather drawn out. Did not please many. Running time, 74 minutes. Played October 26-27.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Small town patronage.

DANGEROUS CORNER: Conrad Nagel—This type of a story we thought very poor. Our patrons said they did not like the picture. We are still wondering why good money was spent to produce a picture of this type. Running time, 67 minutes. Played November 17-18.—L. G. Evanson, Lyric Theatre, McIntosh, S. D. Small town patronage.

DOWN TO THEIR LAST YACHT: Mary Boland, Polly Moran, Ned Sparks, Sidney Fox, Sidney Blackmer—One of those pictures where you hide in the office as they come out. Showed this to poorest mid-week business in months. Played November 14.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatres, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

FINISHING SCHOOL: Ginger Rogers—This seemed to please very much. Picture did only average business the first day. Nothing at all the second.—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. Small town patronage.

FIVE MORE SHOWMEN REPORT ON PICTURES

Add five more exhibitors to the showman-reporters serving you with their reports to "What the Picture Did for Me". They are:

John H. Forrester, The Pines Theatre, Waldron, Ark.

George F. Smith, Lyric Theatre, Lapeer, Mich.

W. A. Mauldin, Broadway Theatre, Lubbock, Texas.

P. J. Lees, Majestic Theatre, Lake Mills, Wis.

Martin S. Lane, Logan Theatre, Noblesville, Ind.

Read their comment on pictures in the light of their box-office returns.

ness the first day. Nothing at all the second.—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. Small town patronage.

FOUNTAIN, THE: Ann Harding—My patrons said this was the poorest show they ever saw. To prove it they walked out on the picture. As far as possible we gave out tickets to our next show as a way of refund. Running time, 84 minutes. Played November 24-25.—L. G. Evanson, Lyric Theatre, McIntosh, S. D. Small town patronage.

FOUNTAIN, THE: Ann Harding—Very weak from story standpoint, but good acting from entire cast. If exhibitors expect good returns on this one, advertise as woman's story. Running time, 76 minutes. Played October 21-23.—W. A. Mauldin, Broadway Theatre, Lubbock, Texas. General patronage.

FLYING DOWN TO RIO: Dolores Del Rio, Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers, Gene Raymond—This was a wonderful picture and well attended. Such pictures give a theatre an added distinction.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Small town patronage.

GAY DIVORCEE, THE: Ginger Rogers, Fred Astaire—One of the best musicals released in some time. Proved to be very popular with college students. Business excellent. Running time, 82 minutes. Played October 28-31.—W. A. Mauldin, Broadway Theatre, Lubbock, Texas. General patronage.

KENTUCKY KERNELS: Wheeler and Woolsey—Although "Cockeyed Cavaliers" chased patrons from the theatre, this team makes a glorious comeback in this one by delivering their best comedy acting. Patrons were never bored or displeased. Should be good box office anywhere in U. S. Running time, 72 minutes. Played November 18-20.—W. A. Mauldin, Broadway Theatre, Lubbock, Texas. General patronage.

OF HUMAN BONDAGE: Leslie Howard, Bette Davis—Too highbrow for our town, although a fine picture. Box office fair. Running time, 83 minutes. Played October 31-November 1.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Small town patronage.

RICHEST GIRL IN THE WORLD, THE: Miriam Hopkins, Joel McCrea—A nice little picture with just a touch of action and a different story that is a relief from the same old things. Done up in a nice way by RKO for a change and should get by almost any place. Running time, 77 minutes. Played October 26-27.—P. J. Lees, Majestic Theatre, Lake Mills, Wis. Small town patronage.

RICHEST GIRL IN THE WORLD, THE: Miriam Hopkins, Joel McCrea, Fay Wray, Henry Stephenson, Reginald Denny—Hats off to RKO for producing one fine picture that pleased everyone. We had reached the conclusion that RKO could not make a good picture—but here is one. It is a romantic comedy-drama that is fast moving, with spicy dialogue and unusual situations. This offers good entertainment, but is most appealing to adults. Played on a late Saturday night show to very good business. Running time, 76 minutes. Played November 17.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

THEIR BIG MOMENT: Zasu Pitts, Slim Summerville—The poorest that this team has ever turned out. Universal killed them off and now RKO has buried them. Too bad because they were at one time the greatest comedy team on the screen and the producers let them die giving them poor material.—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. Small town patronage.

WE'RE RICH AGAIN: Edna May Oliver—Nothing to this one. Marian Nixon chatters and talks the people to death. Running time, 72 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

WILD CARGO: Frank Buck—Used this one Bargain Night and it drew extra business.—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. Small town patronage.

Tower

DRIFTING SOULS: Lois Wilson—I do not know just what to say about this one. It wasn't bad, but would not draw for me. Played November 19-20.—H. J. Stallings, Moon Theatre, Henderson, N. C. General patronage.

United Artists

AFFAIRS OF CELLINI, THE: Fredric March, Constance Bennett, Frank Morgan, Fay Wray—Lost money on this one—no small town appeal. Running time, 88 minutes. Played November 6-8.—I. W. Rawley, Ward Theatre, Pismo Beach, Cal. General patronage.

BULLDOG DRUMMOND STRIKES BACK: Ronald Colman, Loretta Young—No business. Ronald Colman a fine actor, but no draw. Running time, 61 minutes. Played October 21-23.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Small town patronage.

LAST GENTLEMAN, THE: Good picture. Drew well. Arliss a favorite here. Running time, 72 minutes. Played October 21-22.—Geo. F. Smith, Lyric Theatre, Lapeer, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

LOOKING FOR TROUBLE: Jack Oakie, Spencer Tracy—Picture seemed to please, but business was very light.—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. Small town patronage.

Universal

ALL QUIET ON THE WESTERN FRONT: (Re-issue) Lew Ayres—A film that still proves popular with patrons. Used film on week-end and outdid the late releases where gross was concerned. Played August 30-September 1.—W. A. Mauldin, Broadway Theatre, Lubbock, Texas. General patronage.

BLACK CAT, THE: Boris Karloff, Bela Lugosi—Horror pictures seem to have run their course at this theatre. This has plenty production values and all kinds of thrills and chills. Drawing power below average.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

GIFT OF GAB: Edmund Lowe, Gloria Stuart, Ruth Etting, Phil Baker, Alexander Woolcott, Ethel Waters, Paul Lukas, Binnie Barnes—Don't expect too much and you will be satisfied. Good B. O. appeal. Running time, 70 minutes. Played November 18-19.—I. W. Rawley, Ward Theatre, Pismo Beach, Cal. General patronage.

I LIKE IT THAT WAY: Gloria Stuart, Roger Pryor—One entertaining film that a wise exhibitor should not cast aside. Story was good and musical numbers were hummed by patrons on the way out of theatre. Well worth advertising heavily. Business way above average. Running time, 65 minutes. Played November 9-10.—W. A. Mauldin, Broadway Theatre, Lubbock, Texas. General patronage.

HALF A SINNER: Sally Blane, Joel McCrea—Only fair. Running time, 80 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

LITTLE MAN, WHAT NOW?: Margaret Sullavan, Douglass Montgomery—Good show of its kind with no drawing power. The few that came to see it were pleased. Running time, 93 minutes.—J. E. Ross, Jr., Strand Theatre, Saint George, S. C. Small town patronage.

HONOR OF THE RANGE: Ken Maynard—This is the weakest Ken Maynard that I ever played. Played October 27.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

MILLION DOLLAR RANSOM: Mary Carlisle, Phillips Holmes—Only fair program picture. Played on "Cash night" and pleased about 60 per cent. Played November 2.—John H. Forrester, The Pines Theatre, Waldron, Ark. Small town patronage.

ROMANCE IN THE RAIN: Roger Pryor, Heather Angel—About the best that we have had from this company for some time. Many favorable comments from patrons. Business only average.—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. Small town patronage.

SMOKING GUNS: Ken Maynard—A dandy good western that will meet all requirements where they like western fare. Played November 10.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

Warner Bros.

BIG-HEARTED HERBERT: Kuy Kibbee, Aline McMahon—Not much money spent on this one, but it has laughs and that is all that is wanted from this pair. Small town man can't forget that he sold papers and can't eat cornmeal mush with an up-to-date family. Surprise ending that is good for many laughs.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

DAMES: Dick Powell, Ruby Keeler—We can see a good picture three or four times, but we can offer no reason why any one should sit through this one. Running time, 91 minutes. Played October 14-15.—Geo. F. Smith, Lyric Theatre, Lapeer, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

DAMES: Dick Powell, Ruby Keeler—Although it outdrew "Wonder Bar," I believe people are fed up with three or four reels showing a few girls going through the same old stuff. Camera work was wonderful, but the story was very draggy. No dancing by Ruby Keeler except one rehearsal scene. Three nights to better than usual business.—Warren Weber, Deluxe Theatre, St. John, Kan. General patronage.

DESIRABLE: Jean Muir, George Brent—This picture pleased. It drew above average business. Jean Muir grand and if she is given parts in forthcoming productions equal to this one, she's headed places. Running time, 70 minutes. Played November 10-12.—Harold Haubein, Cozy Theatre, Lockwood, Mo. Small town patronage.

DESIRABLE: Jean Muir, George Brent—Good acting, fair story, poor B. O. Running time, 68 minutes. Played October 31-November 1.—I. W. Rawley, Ward Theatre, Pismo Beach, Cal. General patronage.

DR. MONICA: Kay Francis, Warren William—This is a woman's picture. We had many favorable comments on this one. It is an adult picture and I think it helps to advertise it as such. Running time, 52 minutes. Played November 3.—Mrs. Clyde Pace, Pace Theatre, Gordon, Neb. Small town patronage.

GAMBLING LADY: Barbara Stanwyck—This is the best Barbara Stanwyck picture in some time because they have an interesting story to tell. The story is well told and production values are of the best so you can make a fuss about it. Drawing power a good average.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

HERE COMES THE NAVY: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien—This is a dandy picture for Cagney fans. It has plenty of action, comedy and romance. Running time, 86 minutes. Played November 13-14.—Mrs. Clyde Pace, Pace Theatre, Gordon, Neb. Small town patronage.

HOUSEWIFE: George Brent, Bette Davis—Darn good show, but darn little B. O. draft. Running time, 69 minutes. Played November 13-14.—I. W. Rawley, Ward Theatre, Pismo Beach, Cal. General patronage.

KANSAS CITY PRINCESS: Joan Blondell, Glenda Farrell, Robert Armstrong, Osgood Perkins—Good B. O., but, after all, it's the same old lines. Running time, 65 minutes. Played November 11-12.—I. W. Rawley, Ward Theatre, Pismo Beach, Cal. General patronage.

MADAME DU BARRY: Dolores Del Rio, Victor Jory—Not a small town picture. Box office a little above average due to Del Rio. Should not be sold as a special, although the production cost is obvious. Running time, 77 minutes. Played November 20-22.—I. W. Rawley, Ward Theatre, Pismo Beach, Cal. General patronage.

WORKING MAN, THE: George Arliss, Bette Davis—A wonderful picture. Did not draw so well owing to a bad rain storm, but everyone who came was pleased. Played June 24.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Small town patronage.

Short Features Celebrity

LITTLE RED HEN, THE: Comicolor Cartoons—The coloring in these cartoons is not very good. Running time, 8 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

Columbia

CONCERT KID: Scrappy Cartoons—Pretty good cartoon comedy. Running time, 7 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

FISHING FOR TROUBLE: Broadway Comedies—A very good two-reel comedy that got plenty of laughs. Running time, 19 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

MICKEY'S MEDICINE MAD: Mickey McGuire—This one went over big.—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. Small town patronage.

SPICE OF LIFE: No good for small towns. Running time, 8 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

TEN BABY FINGERS: George Sidney, Charlie Murray—This is only fair entertainment of the slapstick variety. It is a story of a baby left with two old men to take care of it—their ups and downs—and did not please. Very few laughs. Running time, 18 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

GRAND UPROAR: Terry-Toon—Very good, indeed, and liked by entire audience, but recording poor.—Albert Hefferan, Owl Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. Juvenile patronage.

HIS LUCKY DAY: Star Personality Comedy—Good. Running time, 20 minutes.—I. W. Rawley, Ward Theatre, Pismo Beach, Cal. General patronage.

HELLO, PROSPERITY: Andy Clyde—Very good.—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. Small town patronage.

HELLO, PROSPERITY: Andy Clyde—Fair comedy;

Andy's made much better. Running time, 20 minutes.—Harold Haubein, Cozy Theatre, Lockwood, Mo. Small town patronage.

JUST A CLOWN: Terry-Toon—Just a fair cartoon. Running time, 6 minutes.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Small town patronage.

KING'S DAUGHTER, THE: Terry-Toon—Terry-Toon cartoons are not as good as a lot of others we see. Running time, 6 minutes.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Small town patronage.

TRIMMED IN FURS: Mermaid Comedies—Very good.—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. Small town patronage.

Fox

PICTURESQUE PORTUGAL: Magic Carpet Series—Very good. Running time, 10 minutes.—I. W. Rawley, Ward Theatre, Pismo Beach, Cal. General patronage.

SCRAPING THE SKY: Adventures of the Newsreel Cameraman—All the Cameraman Adventures have been good.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Small town patronage.

MGM

ANOTHER WILD IDEA: Charley Chase—Good laughs. Plenty of action and ends with good, cleverly worded song.—John H. Forrester, The Pines Theatre, Waldron, Ark. Small town patronage.

BALLAD OF PADUCAH JAIL: Irvin S. Cobb—Fine. First of Cobb's for us and well liked.—John H. Forrester, The Pines Theatre, Waldron, Ark. Small town patronage.

THEM THAR HILLS: Laurel & Hardy—A little above average—good. Running time, 20 minutes.—I. W. Rawley, Ward Theatre, Pismo Beach, Cal. General patronage.

Paramount

AXE ME ANOTHER: Popeye, the Sailor—Popeye, the booster, makes good in this one by proving that spinach is the right food to eat. Not just animation in this cartoon, but real fun.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

SPRINGBOARD CHAMPIONS: Grantland Rice Sportlights—Good diving exhibition. Extra good photography.—John H. Forrester, The Pines Theatre, Waldron, Ark. Small town patronage.

TWO ALARM FIRE: Popeye, the Sailor—Not up to Popeye standard, but it pleased the kids. Running time, one reel.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Small town patronage.

RKO

AUTOBUYOGRAPHY: Headliner Series—Poor.—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. Small town patronage.

CUBBY'S STRATOSPHERE FLIGHT: Cubby the Bear Cartoons—Nothing to rave about.—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. Small town patronage.

DERBY DECADE: Ruth Etting—Ruth Etting's songs were great. The rest of the picture was very poor.—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. Small town patronage.

Universal

FINANCIAL JITTERS: Eddie Nugent—Very good comedy.—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. Small town patronage.

PICNIC PERILS: Sterling Holloway—Just fair.—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. Small town patronage.

WORLD'S FAIR AND WARMER: All Star—The best two-reel comedy that we have ever had from this company. It's worth some extra advertising.—J. E. Ross, Jr., Strand Theatre, Saint George, S. C. Small town patronage.

Warner Vitaphone

BEAUTY AND THE BEAST: Merrie Melodies—Extra good.—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. Small town patronage.

BUDDY'S BEARCATS: Looney Tunes—A very good cartoon comedy that pleased all patrons. This presents a baseball game with plenty of laughs and should please all. Good entertainment and an excellent filler. Running time, 7 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

TIN HAT HARMONY: Abe Lyman and band—Very good and liked by all the children, but adults did not care much for it. Recording good. Running time, 10 minutes.—Albert Hefferan, Owl Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. Juvenile patronage.

Serials Universal

RED RIDER, THE: Buck Jones—Extra good serial.—Draws better than "Gordon of Ghost City." Gets the kids and grown-ups alike.—John H. Forrester, The Pines Theatre, Waldron, Ark. Small town patronage.

VANISHING SHADOW: Onslow Stevens, Ada Ince—Played the sixth chapter last week and it was full of action as usual. This is one of the best serials I have played.—H. J. Stallings, Moon Theatre, Henderson, N. C. General patronage.

THE PARAMOUNT PLAN FOR REORGANIZATION

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF NEW YORK.

CORPORATION,
Debtor.

In Consolidation Proceedings for Reorganization of a Corporation.

No. 56763

Plan of Reorganization of Paramount Publix Corporation, including (as a part thereof) a Plan of Reorganization of Paramount Broadway Corporation Dated November 28, 1934, proposed by the debtor, pursuant to Section 77B of the Bankruptcy Act.

DEFINITIONS

The following terms, whenever used in the Plan of Reorganization, in the Schedules thereto and in the Introductory Statement, except where otherwise indicated by the context, shall have the following meanings, respectively:

DEBTOR: Paramount Publix Corporation (formerly Paramount Famous Lasky Corporation).

OLD BROADWAY COMPANY: Paramount Broadway Corporation.

PICTURE GROUP: Paramount Pictures Corporation, Paramount Productions, Inc., Paramount Pictures Distributing Corporation, Paramount International Corporation, and their substantially wholly owned subsidiaries, which corporations are primarily engaged in the business of producing and distributing motion pictures or control, through stock ownership, corporations so engaged.

BANK DEBT: the notes, aggregating $13,368,932.02, principal amount, issued by Film Production Corporation to the Debtor and by the Debtor endorsed and sold to certain banks pursuant to an agreement dated March 29, 1932, between the Debtor and said banks.

OLD BANK DEBT: that part of the Bank Debt equal, in the case of each of said banks, to the amount of the indebtedness, if any, of the Debtor to such bank prior to the issue of the Bank Debt and repaid out of the proceeds of the Bank Debt, aggregating $8,750,000 principal amount.

NEW BANK DEBT: that part of the Bank Debt, in respect of each of said banks, in excess of the Old Bank Debt, if any, held by such bank, aggregating $4,618,932.02 principal amount.

OLD DEBENTURES: Paramount Famous Lasky Corporation Twenty-Year 6% Sinking Fund Gold Bonds, due December 1, 1947, issued under an Indenture dated December 1, 1927, between the Debtor and The Equitable Trust Company of New York, as Trustee, and now outstanding in the principal amount of $11,918,000, and Paramount Publix Corporation Twenty-Year 5½% Sinking Fund Gold Bonds, due August 1, 1950, issued under an Indenture dated August 1, 1930, between the Debtor and The Chase National Bank of the City of New York, as Trustee, and now outstanding in the principal amount of $13,259,000.

OLD BROADWAY BONDS: Paramount Broadway Corporation First Mortgage 5½% Twenty-Five Year Sinking Fund Gold Loan Certificates, due January 1, 1951, issued by United States Mortgage and Trust Company, as Trustee, under Mortgage and Deed of Trust dated January 1, 1926, upon the Paramount Building at Times Square, New York City, and guaranteed by the Old Broadway Company and now outstanding in the principal amount of $8,875,000.

The opinions, computations, assumptions, estimates, conclusions and statements contained in the introductory Statement, the Plan and the Schedules to the Plan are based upon or formulated, from information requested from the Trustees and made available with their consent, are submitted without warranty by the Debtor and are not made, or joined in, by the Trustees or any of the Committees mentioned on this page or any other party.

All such opinions, computations, assumptions, estimates, conclusions and statements are made to assist the Court in the Reorganization Proceedings, and creditors, stockholders and other parties in interest, to make a determination (after bearing) as to the fairness of the Plan.

PARAMOUNT PROPERTIES BONDS: First Mortgage Six Per cent. Serial Gold Bonds, due $150,000 annually on September 1 of each year to September 1, 1942, at which date remaining bonds become due, issued by Paramount Properties, Incorporated, under Deed of Trust dated as of September 1, 1927 to The Anglo & London Paris National Bank of San Francisco, as Trustee, and now outstanding in the principal amount of $2,750,000. The Paramount Properties Bonds are secured by first mortgage on the Paramount Theatre Building in Los Angeles and the West Coast Studio in Hollywood.

PARAMOUNT LAND CORPORATION NOTES: Six Per Cent. Notes due January 3, 1934, issued by Paramount Land Corporation to Citizens National Trust and Savings Bank of Los Angeles, now outstanding in the principal amount of $816,666.68 and secured by Declaration of Trust in respect of the Vine Street property in Hollywood.

PRIORITY CLAIMS: claims the holders of which assert in the Reorganization Proceeding a right to priority over the Old Debentures and claims ranking on a parity therewith.

GENERAL CLAIMS: all claims against the Debtor other than the Priority Claims, Bank Debt, Old Debentures and the claims in connection with obligations of subsidiaries, and upon obligations in respect of specific properties, dealt with in Article III of the Plan.

EQUITY PROCEEDING: the proceeding in equity under the complaint filed in the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York on January 26, 1933, and entitled, "Broadway & Twentieth Properties, Inc., Complainant, v. Paramount Publix Corporation, Defendant, In Equity No. E74-39."

BANKRUPTCY PROCEEDING: the proceeding under the voluntary petition in bankruptcy filed by the Debtor in the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York on March 14, 1933, and entitled "In the matter of Paramount Publix Corporation, Bankrupt, In Bankruptcy, No. 56763."

REORGANIZATION PROCEEDING: the consolidated proceedings under petitions filed in the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York on June 7 and 8, 1934, now pending under the title "In the matter of Paramount Publix Corporation, Debtor, In Consolidated Proceedings for Reorganization of a Corporation, No. 56763."

TRUSTEES: includes the Receivers appointed in the Equity Proceeding, the Trustees in Bankruptcy in the Bankruptcy Proceeding, and the Trustees in the Reorganization Proceeding and their successors (if any) as such Trustees.

BANK CREDITORS' COMMITTEE: the committee of which Percy H. Johnston is chairman, and S. Sloan Colt and H. P. Howell are members, representing the Bank Debt.

VANDERLIP DEBENTURE COMMITTEE: the committee of which Frank A. Vanderlip is chairman, and Robert K. Cassatt, Morris L. Ernst, Duncan G. Harris, Julius Klein and Lawrence Stern are members, acting under a deposit agreement dated as of January 27, 1933, representing certain holders of Old Debentures thereunder.

MUNGER DEBENTURE COMMITTEE: the committee of which Lloyd A. Munger is chairman, and Harry Mottsmann and James B. Murray are members, representing certain other holders of Old Debentures under powers of attorney.

MERCHANDISE CREDITORS' COMMITTEE: the committee of which R. Earle Anderson is chairman and E. C. A. Bullock and Martin Quigley are members, representing holders of certain General Claims under powers of attorney.

BROADWAY BONDHOLDERS' COMMITTEE: the committee of which Peter Grimm is chairman, and Robert E. Dowling, J. Russell Forgan, Robert Goelet, George McAneny and Harold V. Smith are members, acting under a deposit agreement dated as of January 27, 1933, representing certain holders of Old Broadway Bonds thereunder.

SCHENK BROADWAY COMMITTEE: the committee of which Henry Schenk is chairman, Jacob Behrens and Wesley T. Bonn are members, representing certain other holders of Old Broadway Bonds under powers of attorney.

STOCKHOLDERS COMMITTEE: the committee of which Duncan A. Holmes is chairman, and Barney Balaban, John P. Bickell, Gerald Brooks and Maurice Newton are members, acting under a deposit agreement dated as of January 27, 1933, representing certain holders of stock of the Debtor thereunder.

NEW COMPANY: the corporation in which will be vested all of the assets of the Debtor to be included in the reorganization pursuant to the Plan. It is expected that the New Company will be the Debtor, but it may be another existing corporation or a new corporation organized for the purpose.

NEW BROADWAY COMPANY: the corporation (which may be the Old Broadway Company, another existing corporation or a new corporation organized for the purpose) in which will be vested substantially all of the assets of the Old Broadway Company.

NEW SECURITIES: the securities to be issued by the New Company pursuant to the Plan.

NEW BROADWAY BONDS: the bonds to be issued by the New Broadway Company pursuant to the Plan.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS: the reconstituted board of directors of the Debtor until carrying out of the Plan in the Reorganization Proceeding; thereafter the board of directors of the New Company.

INTRODUCTORY STATEMENT

Business and Corporate Structure:

Prior to November, 1932, the Debtor engaged (in part directly and in part through subsidiaries) in all branches of the business of production, distribution and exhibition of motion pictures. Since November, 1932, the Debtor has been a holding company. Through the Picture Group it has conducted the business of producing motion pictures and distributing them in all parts of the world. Through other subsidiaries it has engaged in the exhibition of motion pictures, largely in the United States and Canada, with some theatres in England and France. The theatres in which it has interests, of varying character, exceed 1,100 in number.

Prior to its receivership the Debtor had approximately 500 subsidiary and affiliated corporations. In addition to the receivership and bankruptcy of the Debtor, a number of its theatre owning subsidiaries are in receivership or bankruptcy. Some of them have been reorganized during the receivership and bankruptcy of the Debtor, and others are now in process of reorganization. Many of the important subsidiaries, including the Picture Group, have remained solvent.

The Old Broadway Company is a wholly-owned subsidiary of the Debtor and is owner of the Paramount Building (including the Paramount Theatre) at Broadway and 43d Street, New York City.

Assets:

Because of the very complicated corporate structure of the enterprise and because of the changing status of many of the subsidiaries it has been impracticable to obtain a detailed audit or appraisal of the consolidated assets of the Debtor and all its subsidiary and affiliated corporations at any particular time, or a detailed audit of their consolidated financial position at any time since the receivership. Furthermore, an appraisal of the fixed assets would, in any event, not be of practical value. The ordinary measure of real estate values cannot be exclusively applied in measuring the fixed asset value of theatre properties, as a substantial part of the value of the theatre properties in which the Debtor is interested arises, first, because large numbers of theatres are operated together in groups or chains, thereby enhancing their going-concern value, and, second, because these theatres furnish a substantial and assured part of the outlet for motion pictures manufactured and distributed by the Picture Group.

The aggregate of

(1) the Debtor's interest in its subsidiary and affiliated companies, not in receivership or bankruptcy, and for which financial reports are available, as taken from the books of each such subsidiary or affiliated company itself (after deducting all book liabilities other than the Bank Debt, with interest thereon),

(2) the book value of investments of the Debtor in other subsidiary or affiliated companies not in receivership or bankruptcy,

(3) the estimated value of the Debtor's interest in companies in receivership or bankruptcy, and

(4) the book value of other assets of the Debtor, amounted as of September 29, 1934 to $89,471,587.33. This figure excludes all items of good will.

There is annexed to the Plan as Schedule C an estimated Consolidated Balance Sheet* of the Debtor and subsidiaries not in receivership or bankruptcy, before reorganization, based on unaudited financial statements as of September 29, 1934, and reflecting suggested new reserves.

Said balance sheet includes suggested new reserves of $14,000,000 against book values, leaving the stated amount of the consolidated assets, before deducting claims against the Debtor in the Reorganization Proceeding, and before deducting costs of administration and reorganization, at approximately $75,000,000.

Included in the consolidated assets of the Debtor and its wholly owned or substantially wholly owned subsidiaries not in receivership or bankruptcy, at September 29, 1934, was cash aggregating approximately $17,071,146.08, and the film inventory of the Picture Group having a book value of $14,484,886.88, after what are believed to be conservative charges for exhaustion.

While it may not be completely clear that all of the properties of the estate will be of value to the New Company, it has been assumed that substantially all of the present assets of the Debtor will be vested in the New Company and that the present subsidiaries will retain their present corporate form, or, as a result of reorganization, substantially all their assets, leaving for later consideration whether any part of the assets either of the Debtor or of any of its subsidiaries shall be abandoned or otherwise disposed of.

Earnings:

The consolidated earnings of the Debtor and its subsidiaries, after taxes, for the years 1928-1931, inclusive, as certified by Messrs. Price, Waterhouse & Co., were as follows:

1928	$ 8,713,063.25
1929	15,544,544.33
1931	6,345,487.66

No audited consolidated statements in respect of the operations of the Debtor and its subsidiaries for the year 1932 were ever prepared. It has been estimated that there was a loss in 1932 of approximately $21,000,000, of which approximately $9,600,000 was incurred in the production and distribution business due in part to decrease in foreign exchange rates, to liquidation of production activities in France, and to extraordinary writedowns of film inventory because of the drop in film rentals.

The combined net operating earnings of the consolidated subsidiaries* (excluding profit or loss from foreign exchange, losses of the Old Broadway Company and net losses of subsidiaries which are inactive or the future status of which is uncertain, and excluding net capital gains and losses), after all charges (except the claim for interest on the Bank Debt), but before Federal income taxes, for 1933 and the first nine months of 1934, as computed from reports furnished by the accounting staff of the Debtor and its subsidiaries, have been as follows: (see following page).

Earnings figures for the third quarter of 1934 for the Picture Group and said foreign subsidiaries, adjusted to the same basis as the above figures in respect of 1933, indicate for that Group and for such subsidiaries net earnings for the third quarter of 1934 of approximately $574,000, as compared with approximately $918,000 in the third quarter of 1933. Preliminary earnings figures for the Picture Group for the fourth quarter of 1934 to date indicate a substantial continuing decline as compared with the same period in 1933.

Estimated reserves for Federal income taxes in respect of earnings for the first nine months of 1934 are $525,301.71, as reflected in Schedule

Includes cost of unreleased completed pictures and pictures in process, value of released pictures after reserves for exhaustion, story rights, scenarios, etc.

RELEASED THRU— The New Major
FIRST DIVISION

—HARRY H. THOMAS, president—

*Said balance sheet has been prepared only for the purposes of the proposal of the Plan in the Reorganization Proceeding and is not binding upon the Board of Directors in establishing the balance sheet of the New Company.

TOTAL CLAIMS WERE $297,702,162

C hereto. The above earnings are exclusive of earnings of the Debtor (arising largely from the distribution of old pictures, which, however, are relatively small in amount and are expected to disappear in the near future) and exclusive of charges on the books of the Debtor (which are believed to be largely non-recurring), and do not take into account any accruals for interest or other obligations of the Debtor which are not also obligations of subsidiaries. The dividends from non-consolidated companies included in such figures amount to $90,000 in 1933 and to $219,000 in the first nine months of 1934; certain of such dividends were, in each period, in excess of the Debtor's share in the net earnings for such period of the companies declaring such dividends.

Profit from foreign exchange amounted to $1,579,000 in 1933, and to $8,000 in the first nine months of 1934.

Net operating losses of the Old Broadway Company amounted to $720,000 in 1933, and to $530,000 in the first nine months of 1934. It is expected that, with the benefit of reduced interest charges on the New Broadway Bonds, such losses will be reduced, and that such reduction will be more substantial if the New Broadway Company writes off original cost of property to the extent of the reserve of $3,800,685.84 suggested in Schedule C.

Net operating losses of companies which are inactive or the future status of which is uncertain amounted to $1,593,000 in 1933, and to $529,000 in the first nine months of 1934. It is expected that, upon elimination of certain companies and completion of pending subsidiary reorganizations, a substantial portion of such losses will be eliminated.

The approximate net capital losses excluded in the above earnings figures amounted to $1,695,000 in 1933 and to $86,000 for the first nine months of 1934 in respect of active companies, and to $9,621,000 in 1933 and to $911,000 in the first nine months of 1934 in respect of inactive companies and those the future status of which is uncertain.

Claims against the Debtor's Estate:

The total amount of claims filed in the Bankruptcy Proceeding and/or Reorganization Proceeding up to November 28, 1934, after eliminating duplications and exclusive of claims for indeterminate amounts, was $297,702,162.37.* Of this amount $178,543,653.88 was represented by the claim filed in respect of the $8,875,000 principal amount of Old Broadway Bonds, and $23,644,255.42 was represented by the claim filed by the Trustees of Allied Owners Corporation. Upon consummation of the settlements heretofore negotiated by the Trustees, which as set forth in Article III it is proposed to carry out as parts of the Plan, the claim against the Debtor's estate in respect of the Old Broadway Bonds will be eliminated, and the claim filed by the Trustees of Allied Owners Corporation will be reduced to $5,000,000. Deducting the amount of such contemplated elimination and reduction the total claims figure would be reduced to $100,514,253.07.

In addition, up to November 28, 1934, claims have been eliminated or reductions effected, by negotiations or litigation conducted by the Trustees, or otherwise, in an aggregate amount of $16,891,400.55.

Of the remaining $83,622,852.52 of claims, $5,720,412.61 is represented by claims of wholly owned subsidiaries of the Debtor which it is proposed to release or otherwise deal with under the Plan on a basis not involving the issue of New Securities. A list of such claims is annexed as Schedule A. Deducting this amount leaves a figure of $77,902,439.91.

Of this $77,902,439.91, the claims dealt with in Article III of the Plan, in addition to the claims in respect of the Old Broadway Bonds and the claim of the Trustees of Allied Owners Corporation above mentioned, are as follows:

Bank Debt	$13,529,315.48
Claim in respect of Paramount Properties Bonds ..	2,750,000.00
Claim on Paramount Land Corporation Notes	816,666.68
Claim in respect of lease on theatre property at Jacksonville, Florida ...	786,255.80
Claim in respect of lease on theatre property at St. Petersburg, Florida ...	602,113.93
Claim in respect of lease on studio, etc. at Long Island City	886,708.50
Claims in respect of bonds and debentures of G. B. Theatres Corporation ..	1,397,408.19
	$20,768,468.58
Amount to be allowed in respect of Allied Owners claim, pursuant to Article III of the Plan	5,000,000.00
	$25,768,468.58

Deducting these claims from the figure of $77,902,439.91, above stated, and deducting also the claims filed in respect of the Old Debentures aggregating $25,835,571.76, and the Priority Claims aggregating $145,787.68, leaves General Claims aggregating $26,152,611.89.

While the foregoing amounts include some claims for interest, they are exclusive of varying amounts of interest to January 1, 1935, to be included in claims as dealt with in the Plan. They are also exclusive of claims for indeterminate amounts (a list of which, in so far as known, is annexed as Schedule B) and claims which may hereafter be filed by leave of the Court.

On the other hand, of said $26,152,611.89 of General Claims, approximately 75 claims, aggregating approximately $25,000,000 have not been finally allowed or conceded by the Trustees. In respect of a number of these claims, as well as of claims for indeterminate amounts, and in respect of certain of the claims dealt with in Article III of the Plan, the Trustees are carrying on, or may, prior to the carrying out of the Plan, undertake, negotiations for elimination or reduction by payment in cash, the making of new leases or operating contracts, or otherwise. Any special settlement made with respect to any such claim will be subject to the approval of the Court in the Reorganization Proceeding and, if so approved, will be binding on the New Company.

It is hoped that such a reduction in the claims will be effected, either by negotiation or by litigation, that the aggregate amount of Priority Claims, General Claims, Old Debentures, Old Bank Debt and other claims dealt with under Article III of the Plan and which are ultimately treated on a parity with General Claims, including interest to January 1, 1935, to the extent provided in the Plan, will not exceed $55,000,000. The Plan provides that it shall not be carried out unless and until such aggregate, including such interest, but exclusive of claims asserted for indeterminate amounts at the date of final confirmation of the Plan and of claims heretofore filed and based upon alleged violations of the anti-trust laws, shall be reduced to not more than $65,000,000.

Cash Requirements

The Trustees held cash as of September 29, 1934, amounting to $3,969,855.73. In addition, the consolidated cash of the wholly owned or substantially wholly owned subsidiaries of the Debtor not in receivership or bankruptcy as of September 29, 1934, amounted to approximately $13,101,290.35. This latter sum is, however, widely distributed among the numerous companies (which had as of September 29, 1934, current liabilities in the amounts stated on Schedule C), and it would seem advisable to retain the entire amount for the operations and capital and other commitments of the various companies.

In this connection it should be pointed out that certain amounts are annually required for capital renewals and also that the combined balance sheet of the consolidated subsidiaries as of September 29, 1934, shows mortgages, bonds, purchase money obligations and other capital liabilities of such subsidiaries, (including an item of net accrued expenses in connection with capital liabilities of subsidiaries which are in process of reorganization estimated to constitute current liabilities), amounting to $46,910,616.24. Some of these obligations may be eliminated as obligations of consolidated subsidiaries pursuant to pending reorganizations or eliminations of such subsidiaries. Some fall due from year to year and funds may be required to meet them, but the obligations are either spread over a large number of years or the amounts which the respective subsidiaries are expected to have available as the result of charges for depreciation are substantially sufficient to take care of their maturing capital

*Exclusive of Olympia Theatres, Inc., Saenger Theatres, Inc., and Minnesota Amusement Company, which are in receivership or reorganization proceedings.

Figures given for Picture Group for 1933 are for 12 months to January 27, 1934 (the year following receivership) for domestic business and for 12 months to December 30, 1933 for foreign business. Figures for foreign subsidiaries for 1933 are for 11 months to December 2, 1933. For the first nine months of 1934, figures for domestic business of the Picture Group are for 9 months to September 29, 1934 and for foreign business of the Picture Group and foreign subsidiaries are for 9 months to September 1, 1934.

*While the time for filing of claims in the Reorganization Proceeding expired on September 15, 1934, six claims aggregating $153,143.79 were filed after that date and up to November 28, 1934, by special leave of the Court, and additional claims may hereafter be filed by like leave of the Court.

PLAN PROVIDES FOR STOCKHOLDERS

commitments. In addition to the underlying obligations which mature from year to year, there are in the case of certain of the subsidiary companies wholly matured or demand mortgage obligations, a substantial portion of which it is expected can be renewed or continued.

For the payment of the New Bank Debt under the provisions of the Plan, for expenses of administration of the estate of the Debtor and of reorganization, including the reorganization of subsidiaries now pending, and for the corporate purposes of the New Company, it is estimated that, in addition to the cash held by the Trustees ($3,969,855.73 as of September 29, 1934), approximately $6,500,000 of new money should be provided. This amount is exclusive of cash, if any, which may be required under Articles X and XII of the Plan.

Desirability of Early Reorganization:

As pointed out above, in every year of its operation since 1927 to the receivership, except 1932, the consolidated net earnings of the Debtor and its subsidiaries (after all charges and taxes) exceeded $6,345,000, and, eliminating 1932, averaged over $12,000,000.

Despite the handicap of receivership and bankruptcy proceedings, combined net operating earnings in 1933 of the Debtor's consolidated subsidiaries (excluding the Old Broadway Company and subsidiaries which were inactive or the future status of which is uncertain and excluding foreign exchange profits and losses, and net capital gains and losses), after all charges but before the interest chargeable to one of the subsidiaries on the Bank Debt and before Federal income taxes, exceeded $5,690,000 (including $90,000 in dividends from partly owned companies).

It is estimated that earnings for 1934 on the same basis will not equal those for 1933.

It is believed that an early reorganization, and the consequent removal of the handicap of bankruptcy should increase the efficiency of the enterprise and result, under comparable conditions in the industry, in increased net operating earnings. Earnings for 1933 and 1934 appear to be at an annual rate sufficient to provide a substantial return upon, and substantial amortization of, the estimated amount of claims entitled to participate in the Reorganization Proceeding. Under these circumstances, it would seem that a reorganization should promptly be effected.

To that end protracted negotiations have been carried on by the Vanderlip Debenture Committee, the Bank Creditors' Committee, the Merchandise Creditors' Committee, the Broadway Bondholders' Committee, the Stockholders Committee, the petitioners in the Reorganization Proceeding and others interested in the estate of the Debtor. The Debtor believes, although the Plan has not been approved and adopted by any of the above Committees, that the attached Plan embodies the principles which have been agreed to in such negotiations, and intends to propose such Plan at a hearing for its consideration to be duly noticed and held as provided by Section 77B of the Federal Bankruptcy Act.

Outline of the Plan:

It is intended to reconstitute the entire assets of the Debtor in the Debtor or to vest them in another existing corporation or in a new corporation organized for the purpose, except as the Court in the Reorganization Proceeding may otherwise order and except that all claims or causes of action of the Trustees against officers or directors of the Debtor arising out of acts or conduct prior to the Bankruptcy Proceeding, and all claims or causes of action against persons other than such officers or directors arising out of or related to the same transactions, with respect to which, prior to the confirmation of the Plan, suits shall have been instituted by the Trustees or leave therefor shall have been granted to the Trustees by the Court, are to remain in the Trustees for future disposition for the benefit of the New Company, subject to the approval of the Court in the Reorganization Proceeding.

Holders of Old Debentures, of General Claims and of other claims ranking on a parity therewith, will receive, as provided in Article IV of the Plan, for each $1,000 of their claims, including interest to January 1, 1935 to the extent provided in the Plan, $500, principal amount, of new Twenty-Year 6% Sinking Fund Debentures, and 5 shares of new Cumulative Convertible 6% First Preferred Stock (par value $100 per share).

Stockholders of the Debtor will receive, as provided in Article V of the Plan, in respect of each share of presently outstanding stock of the Debtor,

(1) $\frac{1}{4}$ share of new Common Stock and
(2) a warrant evidencing the right to subscribe for a period of sixty days, at $2, for one unit consisting of

$\frac{1}{4}$ share of new Common Stock
 $\frac{1}{5}$ share of new Cumulative Convertible 6% Second Preferred Stock (par value \$10 per share).

The Bank Debt, the Old Broadway Bonds, the claim of the trustees of Allied Owners Corporation, and certain other claims against subsidiaries of the Debtor constituting also claims against the Debtor, and certain claims affecting special properties, are to be dealt with as provided in Article III of the Plan.

There is annexed to the Plan as Schedule D an estimated Consolidated Pro Forma Balance Sheet* of the Debtor and subsidiaries not in receivership or bankruptcy, giving effect to consummation of the Plan, based on unaudited financial statements as of September 29, 1934, and reflecting suggested new reserves.

The balance sheet (Schedule D) has been prepared on the assumption that, as a result of settlement or litigation by the Trustees, the Priority Claims and General Claims will be reduced to $10,785,595.20 in amount (including interest on the General Claims to January 1, 1935, to the extent provided in the Plan). The effect of such reduction would be that, if none of the claims separately dealt with under Article III of the Plan (other than the claim on the Old Bank Debt, the claim of the trustees of Allied Owners Corporation and the claim on the Paramount Land Corporation Notes) required the issuance of New Debentures or First Preferred Stock, the aggregate amount of claims for which New Debentures or First Preferred Stock would be issuable, including such interest on such claims accrued to January 1, 1935, would be $55,000,000, decreased by the aggregate amount (if any) paid in cash in respect of Priority Claims.

To enable creditors and stockholders to understand the facts underlying the more important features of the Plan, the following is a summary of the Plan.

WOULD COMPROMISE BANK DEBT

portant of the claims dealt with in Article III of the Plan and the nature of the compromises proposed, the following brief summaries of the facts respecting these claims and the proposed compromises are included in this Introductory Statement.

The Bank Debt:

In March, 1932, the Debtor owed $9,600,000 to various banks on current loans. In order to provide funds to pay off these current borrowings and for the completion of its program for production of pictures, the Debtor by agreement dated March 29, 1932, arranged a bank credit available for a year of up to approximately $14,000,000, utilizing a portion thereof immediately to repay the $9,600,000 which was then owed to the banks. The banks joining in this credit included some, but not all, of the banks which held maturing obligations of the Debtor, and in addition banks to which the Debtor was not then indebted. Subsequently the Debtor further availed itself of the credit so that the principal amount used aggregated $13,368,932.02.

The agreement of March 29, 1932, provided that the Debtor would sell certain assets (films and net rentals from films) to Film Production Corporation, a wholly owned subsidiary, that Film Production Corporation would issue its notes to the Debtor in payment therefor, and that the banks would, in turn, buy the notes for cash upon endorsement by the Debtor. The assets thus sold to Film Production Corporation had, at the commencement of the Bankruptcy Proceedings, a book value, and, it is believed, an actual value, materially in excess of the Bank Debt. The agreement also provided that Film Production Corporation would engage in no business except with the Debtor, and that obligations incurred to the Debtor would, in the event of non-payment of the notes when due, be subordinated to the notes. By a so-called production-distribution agreement of March 30, 1932, Film Production Corporation arranged for the completion by the Debtor of motion pictures included in the assets sold to it, the production of future motion pictures, and the distribution by the Debtor of the motion pictures so produced.

On or about November 17, 1932, the Debtor consummated the segregation of the producing and distributing branches of its business by the organization of the Picture Group and the vesting in the several corporations of that Group of the assets employed in the producing and distributing branches of its business. This segregation had been under contemplation by the Debtor's directors for some time and was deemed advisable by them both as a matter of internal administration and as a means of protecting the good will of the producing and distributing branches of the business as going concerns. In connection with this segregation, agreements were entered into under date of November 17, 1932, substituting members of the Picture Group for the Debtor in connection with various obligations of the Debtor under the production-distribution agreement.

In an action brought in June, 1933, in the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York, the Trustees have attacked the agreement of March 29, 1932, the production-distribution agreement and the agreements of November 17, 1932, and the claims of the banks thereunder, asserting in substance that the status of the Bank Debt was that of a general unsecured claim against the estate of the Debtor. In the action the Trustees also seek to recover from the banks all interest and commissions paid by the Debtor in connection with the Bank Debt.

Because of the complexity of the questions of law and fact involved, it is believed that a final determination of the rights of the parties in this action could not be had without protracted litigation.

The Plan proposes that the dispute as to the status of the Bank Debt shall be compromised by the payment of the New Bank Debt in full in cash, the treatment of the Old Bank Debt on a basis pari passu with the Old Debentures and General Claims, the dismissal of the Trustees' suit and the release of all claims against the holders of the Bank Debt in respect of past payments in connection therewith.

The Old Broadway Bonds:

$8,875,000, principal amount, of Old Broadway Bonds are now outstanding. They are the obligations of the Old Broadway Company and are secured by a mortgage upon the Paramount Building at Times Square, New York City. The Debtor was the lessee of the entire mortgaged property under a lease, and a claim was filed in the Bankruptcy Proceeding for $178,543,653.88 in respect of the Old Broadway Bonds.

The Trustees negotiated with the Broadway Bondholders' Committee for a settlement of this claim, and entered into an agreement dated July 25, 1934, with the Broadway Bondholders' Committee, the Old Broadway Company, the Debtor, Paramount Production, Inc., Paramount Pictures Distributing Corporation, and Paramount International Corporation, a copy of which agreement is on file with the Special Master in the Reorganization Proceeding.

The Plan proposes to compromise the disputes which have arisen in respect of the Old Broadway Bonds on the basis provided for in such agreement, by an issue of New Broadway Bonds which will be the obligations of the New Broadway Company, will retain the Paramount Building as security and will, until one-half of the authorized amount thereof shall have been retired, be entitled to fixed interest of 3 per cent. per annum and to additional interest of 2½ per cent. per annum payable only out of income remaining in any year after making provision for the cumulative sinking fund, and subject to certain other restrictions stated in Article III of the Plan. After one-half of the New Broadway Bonds shall have been retired as aforesaid, interest shall be at the fixed rate of 5½ per cent. per annum. The New Broadway Bonds will also be entitled to a sinking fund, payable out of income of the New Broadway Company, and will have the benefit of a new lease of the theatre and certain office space located in the Paramount Building upon terms set out in Article III of the Plan. Until one-half of the New Broadway Bonds shall have been retired, as aforesaid, payment of the fixed interest of 3 per cent. per annum and the application of $100,000 per annum to the purchase or redemption of New Broadway Bonds will be guaranteed by the New Company.

Claim of Trustees of Allied Owners Corporation:

Pursuant to an agreement dated January 27, 1927, between New York Investors, Inc. (then Realty Associates), Thompson Starrett Company and the Debtor, theatre sites were acquired by Allied Owners Corporation (a wholly-owned subsidiary of New York Investors, Inc.), and the following theatres were erected thereon:

Paramount Theatre, Brooklyn, N. Y.,
Alabama Theatre, Birmingham, Ala.,
Paramount Theatre, Fremont, O.,
Paramount Theatre, Glens Falls, N. Y.,
Pitkin Theatre, Brooklyn, N. Y.,
Valencia Theatre, Jamaica, N. Y., and Kings Theatre, Brooklyn, N. Y.

The Debtor agreed to pay to Allied Owners Corporation in each year for fifteen years an amount equal to 10% of the "capital account," as defined in said agreement, in the case of theatres in Greater New York, and an amount equal to 10½% of the "capital account," as so defined, in the case of theatres outside of Greater New York, and in addition, to pay at the end of fifteen years a final payment of 50% of such "capital account" against conveyance to the Debtor of title to such theatre properties. The "capital account" as so defined included, in addition to the actual cost of the sites and the theatres, an amount equal to 4% of such cost for financing and 7½% of such cost for promoters' fees.

Pursuant to said agreement, leases covering the above mentioned theatre properties were executed between Allied Owners Corporation, as landlord, and the Debtor, as tenant, at rentals equal to the annual payments above mentioned. Said agreement provided that any party thereto or Allied Owners Corporation might, at any time and from time to time, treat the above mentioned payments as payments on account of the purchase of land and building or as payments of rent or as part payment of each. It further provided that until all such payments should have been made the relation of Allied Owners Corporation with the Debtor should be that of landlord and tenant.

On November 15, 1927, the Debtor assigned to Loew's Theatre & Realty Corporation its rights under the leases relating to the Pitkin, Valencia and Kings theatres, and Loew's Theatre & Realty Corporation assumed all the obligations of the Debtor in respect of such leases, the faithful performance of the obligations so assumed being guaranteed by Loew's, Incorporated.

On July 15, 1932, in consideration of the deferment by Allied Owners Corporation of the payments due on July 1, August 1 and September 1, 1932, in respect of the four remaining theatre properties, the Debtor purported to assign to Allied Owners Corporation the guaranty by Loew's, Incorporated and the sub-lease from the Debtor to Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit Company in respect of the greater portion of the office space in the Paramount Theatre Building in Brooklyn. The Debtor defaulted on the payments due in respect of such four remaining theatre properties on January 1, 1933, and on June 1, 1933, Loew's Theatre & Realty Corporation defaulted on the payments due in respect of the Pitkin, Valencia and Kings theatre properties.

The total amount payable pursuant to the agreement of January 27, 1927, as asserted in the claim filed by the Trustees of Allied Owners Corporation, aggregates $29,735,016.04, of which $6,544,886.16 had been paid prior to June 16, 1934. The Trustees of Allied Owners Corporation (it having become bankrupt in 1933 and a petition for reorganization pursuant to Section 77B of the Bankruptcy Act having been filed in respect thereof in 1934) have filed a proof of claim in the Reorganization Proceeding for the unpaid balance of $23,190,129.88, plus interest to June 16, 1934, on past due installments amounting to $77,754.21 and unpaid taxes and penalties to June 16, 1934, amounting to $376,371.33, or a total claim for $23,644,255.42. Of this amount $11,000,308.78 is claimed in respect of the three theatre properties the leases of which were assigned to Loew's Theatre & Realty Corporation and $12,643,946.64 is claimed in respect of the four theatre properties retained by the Debtor. The annual payments provided for in respect of such four properties are $794,517 in each year, and the final 50% payment is $3,972,585.

The obligation of Loew's Theatre & Realty Corporation and of Loew's, Incorporated in respect of the Pitkin, Valencia and Kings theatre properties has been the subject of litigation by the Trustees of Allied Owners Corporation, but a settlement of such litigation has been reached, subject to confirmation thereof in the proceeding for reorganization of Allied Owners Corporation, upon a basis involving the sale of such properties to Loew's Theatre & Realty Corporation. It is believed that the settlement between the Trustees of Allied Owners Corporation and the Loew companies will necessarily result in a release of the obligations of the Debtor in respect of the Pitkin, Valencia and Kings theatre properties.

The Trustees filed objections to the claim of the Trustees of Allied Owners Corporation in the Bankruptcy Proceeding but no proceedings have been taken to date in connection with such objections or in connection with the claim as filed in the Reorganization Proceeding. The magnitude of the claim, the complexity of the issues of law and fact involved, and the likelihood that the claim would, after litigation, be sustained in a substantial amount, made settlement desirable. The Trustees therefore negotiated with the trustees of Allied Owners Corporation for a settlement on the basis outlined in Article III of the Plan.

The Plan proposes to give effect to such settlement by providing for the issue of the same amount of New Securities which would be issued to the holders of $5,000,000 of Old Debentures or General Claims (without interest), the payment of $150,000 in cash (being in respect of a claim for use and occupancy by the Trustees), the purchase of the Alabama Theatre at Birmingham, Alabama, and the leasing of the Paramount theatres at Brooklyn, New York, Fremont, Ohio, and Glens Falls, New York, upon the terms set out in Article III of the Plan.

THE PLAN

I.

CLAIMS AND INTERESTS TO PARTICIPATE IN THE REORGANIZATION

All claims of whatever character against the Debtor or its property, which are entitled under Section 77B of the Bankruptcy Act to participate in a reorganization, shall be entitled to participate under the Plan.

As stated in the Introductory Statement, the total amount of claims filed in the Bankruptcy Proceeding and/or Reorganization Proceeding (exclusive of duplications and of claims for indeterminate amounts) has been reduced, or upon consummation of settlements heretofore negotiated is expected to be reduced, from $297,702,162.37* (as of November 28, 1934) to $83,622,852.52. Said remaining claims are disposed of under the Plan as follows:

$5,720,412.61 is represented by claims of wholly-owned subsidiaries of the Debtor which it is proposed to release or otherwise deal with on a basis not involving the issue of New Securities;

$25,768,468.58 represents claims dealt with under Article III of the Plan, in addition to the claim on the Old Broadway Bonds;

*While the time for filing of claims in the Reorganization Proceeding expired on September 15, 1934, six claims aggregating $153,143.79 were filed after that date and up to November 28, 1934, by special leave of the Court, and additional claims may hereafter be filed by like leave of the Court.

Approximately 75 of said General Claims, aggregating approximately $25,000,000 as filed (again, exclusive of claims for indeterminate amounts), have not been finally allowed or conceded by the Trustees.

It is estimated that the additional interest accruing to January 1, 1935, to the extent provided in the Plan respect of the Old Bank Debt, the Old Debentures and the General Claims as filed, aggregates approximately $6,500,000.

Additional claims which may be entitled to participate in the reorganization are claims for indeterminate amounts (of which a list, in so far as known, is annexed as Schedule B) and claims which may hereafter be filed by leave of the Court.

In respect of a number of claims, including claims for indeterminate amounts and certain of the claims to be dealt with under Article III of the Plan, the Trustees are carrying on, or may, prior to the carrying out of the Plan, undertake, negotiations for elimination or reduction by payment in cash, the making of new leases or operating contracts, or otherwise. Any special settlement made with respect to any such claim will be subject to the approval of the Court in the Reorganization Proceeding and, if so approved, will be binding upon the New Company. It is hoped that such a reduction in the claims will be effected, either by negotiation or by litigation, that the aggregate amount of Priority Claims, General Claims,

SUBSIDIARY OBLIGATIONS TREATED

Old Debentures, Old Bank Debt and other claims dealt with under Article III of the Plan and which are ultimately treated on a parity with General Claims, including interest to January 1, 1935, to the extent provided in the Plan, will not exceed an aggregate amount of $55,000,000.

The Plan shall not be carried out unless and until such aggregate amount of all Priority Claims, General Claims, Old Debentures, Old Bank Debt and other claims dealt with under Article III of the Plan and which are ultimately treated on a parity with General Claims, including interest to January 1, 1935, to the extent provided in the Plan, but exclusive of claims asserted for indeterminate amounts at the date of final confirmation of the Plan and of claims heretofore filed and based upon alleged violations of the anti-trust laws, shall be not more than $65,000,000.

Holders of the Common Stock of the Debtor, outstanding in the amount of 3,220,902.85 shares, shall also be entitled to participate in the reorganization.

The rights of the several classes of creditors and of the stockholders of the Debtor shall be modified and altered through the payment of cash, the issue of New Securities or otherwise in the manner hereinafter described.

II. EXECUTORY CONTRACTS; OBLIGATIONS AND LIABILITIES OF THE TRUSTEES

The New Company will be deemed to have assumed such of the contracts of the Debtor which are executory in whole or in part, including unexpired leases, as shall have been affirmed or adopted by the Trustees prior to the date of confirmation of the Plan, and also all executory contracts of the Trustees and other obligations and liabilities incurred by them in the administration of the estate. All other executory contracts of the Debtor shall be deemed to have been rejected and disaffirmed by the Plan.

III. TREATMENT OF OBLIGATIONS OF SUBSIDIARIES ALSO CONSTITUTING CLAIMS AGAINST THE DEBTOR AND OF OBLIGATIONS IN RESPECT OF SPECIFIC PROPERTIES

I. Old Broadway Bonds:

$8,875,000, principal amount, of Old Broadway Bonds are outstanding. These bonds were issued by United States Mortgage and Trust Company, as trustee under the Indenture dated January 1, 1926 between it and the Old Broadway Company, are guaranteed by the Old Broadway Company and are secured by a mortgage upon the Paramount Building at Times Square, New York City. The Debtor was the lessee of the entire mortgaged property under a lease, and a claim for $178,543,653.88 was filed in the Bankruptcy Proceeding in respect of the Old Broadway Bonds.

The Trustees negotiated with the Broadway Bondholders' Committee for a settlement of this claim and entered into an agreement dated July 25, 1934, subject to the approval of the Court in the Reorganization Proceeding, with the Broadway Bondholders' Committee, the Old Broadway Company, the Debtor, Paramount Productions, Inc., Paramount Pictures Distributing Corporation and Paramount International Corporation, providing for the recommendation to the holders of Old Broadway Bonds of a settlement of their claims on the basis hereinafter set forth and as set forth in detail in said agreement. Said agreement will be binding upon the New Company and the

New Broadway Company. A copy of said agreement is on file with the Special Master in the Reorganization Proceeding.

In full settlement of all claims of the Old Broadway Company, the Debtor, the Trustees and the holders of and the trustee for the Old Broadway Bonds against one another there will be issued to holders of Old Broadway Bonds, against surrender of their Old Broadway Bonds (with July 1, 1933, and all subsequent interest warrants attached), a like principal amount of New Broadway Bonds which will be the obligations of the New Broadway Company, which will be a wholly-owned subsidiary of the New Company and will own the Paramount Building. The New Broadway Bonds will be dated as of February 15, 1935, will mature February 15, 1955, will be secured by a first mortgage on the Paramount Building and by the leases and guaranties thereof hereinafter mentioned, and until the principal amount of the New Broadway Bonds outstanding shall have been reduced to $4,437,500, will be entitled to:

(a) 3% per annum as fixed interest, payable semi-annually;

(b) in each year, commencing with the calendar year next succeeding the date of confirmation of the Plan, $200,000 or the net income of the New Broadway Company for the preceding calendar year, whichever is less*, to be applied to the purchase or redemption of New Broadway Bonds, provided that no such payment shall be made which would reduce below $50,000 the excess of the New Broadway Company's cash and marketable securities over its current liabilities (including therein proper accruals for fixed non-capital liabilities payable within one year); and

(c) 2½% per annum as additional non-fixed interest on the New Broadway Bonds, such additional interest to be cumulative, but such additional interest to become payable in any year only (i) out of net income remaining after making in such year the payments mentioned in (a) and (b) above and after applying the balance to the retirement of such indebtedness as may have been incurred by the New Broadway Company for necessary capital expenditures on the Paramount Building, (ii) in units of ¼%, or multiples thereof, of the principal amount of New Broadway Bonds then outstanding, and (iii) to the extent that such payment will not reduce below $50,000 the excess of the New Broadway Company's cash and marketable securities over its current liabilities (including therein accruals as stated in (b) above).

Until the principal amount of the New Broadway Bonds outstanding shall have been reduced to $4,437,500, the payment of the fixed interest of 3% per annum and the application to the purchase or redemption of New Broadway Bonds of not less than $100,000 per annum will be guaranteed by the New Company. Upon such reduction all accumulations, if any, of said additional non-fixed interest on the New Broadway Bonds which shall not have become payable in accordance with subsection (c) above will be released as obligations of the New Broadway Company.

Upon final confirmation of the Plan, the New Broadway Company will pay to the trustee for the Old Broadway Bonds, for distribution to holders thereof who, within two years from the making of such payment to such trustee, shall surrender their Old Broadway Bonds in exchange for New Broadway Bonds, an amount in cash equal to interest on the Old Broadway Bonds at the rate of 3% per annum from May 1, 1934, to the date of the New Broadway Bonds. Any part of such payment not so distributed within two years after the making thereof will be applied to the sinking fund for the New Broadway Bonds.

After the New Broadway Bonds outstanding have been reduced to $4,437,500, the full interest at the rate of 5½% per annum will become fixed, and all net income of the New Broadway Company remaining after payment of such interest will be applied to the purchase or redemption of New Broadway Bonds to the extent that such application will not reduce below $50,000 the excess of its cash and marketable securities over its current liabilities (including therein proper accruals for fixed non-capital liabilities payable within one year). Until all of the New Broadway Bonds are retired, the New Broadway Company will not declare or pay dividends on its stock.

Net income of the New Broadway Company for any calendar year, for the purpose of determining the rights of the New Broadway Bonds, is gross income, other than income arising from retirement of New Broadway Bonds or from forgiveness of loans to or indebtedness owed by the New Broadway Company, less operating expenses, taxes (including taxes due prior to the confirmation of the plan, if paid by the New Broadway Company), fixed interest on the New Broadway Bonds, interest on loans for future capital alterations or improvements, depreciation on such alterations and improvements

*Pursuant to guaranty by the New Company, a minimum of $100,000 in each such year will be so applied.

TO SETTLE ALLIED OWNERS' CLAIM and repayment of loans on account of payments in respect of interest, above-mentioned, on the Old Broadway Bonds or of expenses of reorganization.

The New Broadway Bonds will be redeemable in whole or in part at their principal amount plus accrued fixed interest and plus, until the principal amount of the New Broadway Bonds outstanding shall have been reduced to $4,437,500, such additional interest as may have become payable thereon. The New Broadway Bonds will not require the New Broadway Company to pay, or reimburse holders for, any taxes (i) attributable to ownership of, or income from, the New Broadway Bonds or (ii) which the New Broadway Company or the trustee for the New Broadway Bonds may be required or permitted to retain or deduct from payments of interest or principal.

The New Broadway Company will join with the trustee for the Old Broadway Bonds in amending the Mortgage and Deed of Trust dated January 1, 1926, and the Loan Bond of that date executed pursuant thereto, under which the Old Broadway Bonds are issued. The New Broadway Bonds will be issued by said trustee pursuant to such amendments, will be guaranteed by the New Broadway Company and will be in substantially the form of, and, except as herein stated, will have substantially the same terms and conditions as, the Old Broadway Bonds.

Corporations nominated by the New Company will lease from the New Broadway Company, as from the date of the New Broadway Bonds, (a) 117,592 square feet of office space in the Paramount Building at a fixed rent of $188,147.20 per annum for an initial term of ten years and two additional terms of five years each, but the lease will terminate at the expiration of the term during which the principal amount of the New Broadway Bonds outstanding shall have been reduced to $4,437,500, and (b) the Paramount Theatre for a term ending on the date when the principal amount of the New Broadway Bonds outstanding shall have been reduced to $4,437,500, at a fixed rent of $260,000 per annum (subject to reduction of $30 for each $1,000 of New Broadway Bonds retired during any preceding year, but not less than $200,000 fixed rent per annum) plus, as additional rent, the amount, if any, by which the percentages of the gross annual receipts from admissions (less admission taxes) herein-after set forth exceed the fixed rent:

Gross receipts up to $1,750,000	15%
Excess up to $2,000,000	16%
Excess up to $2,250,000	17%
Excess up to $2,500,000	18%
Excess up to $2,750,000	19%
Excess up to $3,000,000	20%
Excess up to $3,250,000	22½%
Excess over $3,250,000	25%

The lease of office space will, subject to expiration thereof as above stated, provide for a readjustment in rent or the making of a new lease at the then fair rental value at the end of ten years and fifteen years respectively. The New Company will nominate a corporation which will enter into a new lease with respect to the theatre upon the termination of the theatre lease above mentioned, for a term ending at the date of maturity of the New Broadway Bonds and at a rental to be fixed by appraisal, and the New Company will cause such lessee to deposit, as security for its performance under the lease, an amount equal to six months' rent thereunder, or a bond in the same amount.

The above leases will be pledged as additional security for the New Broadway Bonds and the first theatre lease, and the office lease terms thereof, will be guaranteed by the New Company.

The New Company will pay to the New Broadway Company, on February 15, 1935, on account of occupancy of office space in the Paramount Building by the Trustees and subsidiary companies of the New Company from January 26, 1933, to February 15, 1935, an amount in cash equal to $1.40 per square foot per annum, less payments made by the Trustees or the New Company for expenses incurred in connection with the readjustment of the New Broadway Bonds or on account of real estate taxes upon the Paramount Building payable on October 1, 1934, or any subsequent date. Liability in respect of occupancy of the theatre has been currently discharged.

The claims of all creditors of the Old Broadway Company other than the Trustees, the holders of and the trustees for the Old Broadway Bonds, will be unaffected by the Plan. The claim of the Debtor and of the Trustees against the Old Broadway Company will be released.

2. Bank Debt:

The nature of the claims in respect of the Bank Debt is explained in the Introductory Statement.

New Bank Debt—$5,175,131.32, including interest to January 1, 1935.

The New Bank Debt will be paid in full in cash.

Old Bank Debt—$9,813,095.35, including interest to January 1, 1935.

The holders of the Old Bank Debt will receive for each $1,000 of their claims $500, principal amount, new Twenty-Year 6% Sinking Fund Debentures, and 5 shares new Cumulative Convertible 6% First Preferred Stock (par value $100 per share).

The foregoing will be in settlement of all claims of the holders of the Bank Debt. The suit of the Trustees against such holders will be dismissed, such holders will assign to the New Company or its nominee the notes of Film Production Corporation, and all claims against such holders in respect of past payments in connection with the Bank Debt will be released.

3. Claim Filed by Trustees of Allied Owners Corporation:

The nature of this claim is explained in the Introductory Statement.

The Trustees of the Debtor have negotiated with the trustees of Allied Owners Corporation for a settlement on the basis outlined below and the detailed agreement for carrying out such settlement is now in process of preparation. If such agreement shall have been completed and approved by the Court in the Reorganization Proceeding prior to final confirmation of the Plan, it will be binding upon the New Company. If at the date of final confirmation of the Plan, such detailed agreement shall not have been so completed and approved, the detailed agreement for carrying out the settlement outlined below shall be in such form as may be approved by the Board of Directors of the New Company. The proposed settlement is as follows:

In full settlement of all claims of Allied Owners Corporation and the trustees of Allied Owners Corporation against the Debtor and the Trustees of the Debtor, a claim in the amount of $5,000,000, without interest, is to be allowed against the Debtor's estate, the sum of $150,000 in cash in satisfaction of the claim against the Trustees of the Debtor for use and occupancy by them of Allied Owners properties is to be paid, and the following agreements are to be entered into with the trustees of Allied Owners Corporation or their successors:

(1) Agreement for the purchase by the Trustees of the Debtor or the New Company, or by a subsidiary of the Debtor or of the New Company, and the sale by the trustees of Allied Owners Corporation or their successors, of the Alabama Theatre Property (including the theatre equipment in such theatre) at Birmingham, Ala., free of all liens and encumbrances, for $1,000,000, of which $100,000 will be payable in cash upon conveyance of title. The balance ($900,000) shall be payable as follows and shall be secured by a first mortgage on the property:

$20,000 at the end of one year after conveyance of the title and at the end of each year thereafter for a period of 9 additional years;

$30,000 at the end of each year thereafter for a period of 4 years; and

the unpaid balance from time to time to bear interest at the rate of 4% per annum, payable semi-annually. The Trustees of the Debtor, the New Company or such subsidiary, as the case may be, will have the right to prepay all or any part of the unpaid balance on any interest payment due.

(2) Agreement for the leasing by the Trustees of the Debtor or the New Company, or by a subsidiary of the Debtor or of the New Company, of the Paramount Theatre in Brooklyn, N. Y. (including the theatre equipment therein and marquee and other signs used as theatre signs, but excluding the commercial and general office portion of the building) for a term of twenty (20) years at a fixed rent of $100,000 per annum, payable in weekly installments, plus, as additional rent, the amount, if any, by which the percentages of the gross receipts from admissions (less admissions taxes) hereinafter set forth, exceed the fixed rent:

Gross receipts up to $15,000 per week 12½%

Excess over $15,000 per week and up to $20,000 per week. 15%

Excess over $20,000 per week. . 20%

When theatre is operated on a stage-show policy:

Gross receipts up to $20,000 per week 12½%

Excess over $20,000 per week and up to $25,000 per week. 15%

Excess over $25,000 per week. . 20%

The theatre will be deemed to be operated on a stage-show policy when there shall be expended not less than $4,000 in any week for orchestra, stage hands, theatrical performers and all other expenses in connection with stage shows, stage presentations or vaudeville shows. There will be paid as additional rent the amount of water rent assessed in connection with the theatre.

(3) Agreement for the leasing by the Trustees of the Debtor or the New Company, or by a subsidiary of the Debtor or of the New Company, of the Paramount Theatre Building at Glens Falls, N. Y., including the theatre equipment therein, for a term of twenty (20) years at a rent of $12,000 per annum, payable in weekly installments, plus, as additional rent,

HENRY ROBINSON LUCE, the youngest member of the new directorate, was born 36 years ago in Shantung Province, China, of American parents. After graduation from Yale in 1920 he studied at Oxford and then, with Briton Hadden, founded Time, the weekly news magazine, and Fortune, a monthly publication, both of which he publishes and edits.

the amount, if any, by which 15% of gross receipts from admissions (less admission taxes) exceeds $12,000 per annum.

(4) Agreement for the leasing by the Trustees of the Debtor or the New Company, or by a subsidiary of the Debtor or of the New Company, of the Paramount Theatre Building at Fremont, Ohio, including the theatre equipment therein, for a term of twenty (20) years from January 1, 1935, at a rent of $15,000 per annum, payable in weekly installments, plus, as additional rent, the amount, if any, by which 15% of gross receipts from admissions, less admissions taxes, exceeds $15,000 per annum.

The lease to be executed pursuant to the agreement mentioned in (2) above shall be prior to any present or future mortgages on the property covered thereby, and the two leases to be executed pursuant to the agreements mentioned in (3) and (4) above shall each be prior to any present or future mortgages on the properties respectively covered thereby except mortgages for an aggregate in respect of both properties of $220,000.

The other terms and provisions of the leases to be executed pursuant to the agreements mentioned in (2), (3) and (4) above will be in substantially the same form as the existing leases on the properties to be covered thereby or in such other form as may be approved by the Trustees of the Debtor (if executed prior to final confirmation of the Plan) or by the Board of Directors of the New Company (if executed thereafter). In the event that any of the agreements mentioned in (1), (2), (3) and (4) above provide for the performance thereof by a subsidiary of the Debtor or of the New Company, the obligation of such subsidiary thereunder shall be guaranteed by the New Company.

In addition to the foregoing settlement negotiated by the Trustees, it is intended that, subject to the provisions of Article VIII hereof, one member of the Board of Directors of the New Company shall be nominated by the board of directors of the corporation which shall acquire from the trustees of Allied Owners Corporation the aforesaid claim against the Debtor or the proceeds thereof.

4. $2,750,000 Paramount Properties Bonds:

The Paramount Properties Bonds are the obligations of Paramount Properties, Incorporated, a wholly owned subsidiary of the Debtor, incorporated under the laws of the State of California, and the claims thereon have been filed in the Bankruptcy Proceeding and in the Reorganization Proceeding primarily on the theory that the Debtor is liable as a stockholder of Paramount Properties, Incorporated, pursuant to the provisions of the Constitution and statutes of the State of California existing at the time of the issue and sale of the Paramount Properties Bonds.

The Paramount Properties Bonds now outstanding bear interest at the rate of 6% per annum, payable semi-annually, and the principal of the Paramount Properties Bonds is payable in the amount of $150,000 per annum until September 1, 1942, when the balance of $1,700,000 is payable. There are no existing defaults under the Deed of Trust securing the Paramount Properties Bonds.

The Trustees have negotiated with holders and representatives of substantial amounts of these Bonds for the settlement and readjustment outlined below:

The Paramount Properties Bonds will be replaced by new Bonds with an interest rate of 6% per annum, which will mature September 1, 1942. In lieu of the present serial maturities, a sinking fund to be applied to the purchase of Bonds at not exceeding par and accrued interest, or redemption of Bonds at par and accrued interest, will be provided in an amount sufficient to retire $100,000, principal amount, of Bonds on September 1, 1936, $125,000, principal amount, of Bonds on September 1, in each of the years 1937 and 1938, and $150,000, principal amount, on September 1 in each of the years 1939, 1940, 1941 and 1942. Paramount Properties, Incorporated, will have the option of tendering Bonds, at their principal amount, for the purposes of the sinking fund, in lieu of cash. The purchase of Bonds for the sinking fund by the trustee for the Bonds shall be upon calls for tenders and, in the event of tenders at the same price, preference in purchase shall be given to New Bonds exchanged for presently outstanding Bonds of earliest serial maturities.

Corporations nominated by the New Company, or (if prior to final confirmation of the Plan) by the Trustees, will lease from Paramount Properties, Incorporated, the Paramount Theatre Building in Los Angeles and the West Coast Studio in Hollywood for terms expiring September 1, 1942, at annual rentals sufficient in the aggregate to meet the service charges on the new Bonds. Such leases will be guaranteed by the New Company and will be assigned as additional security for the new Bonds. As further additional security, the furniture, fixtures and equipment in said Paramount Theatre Building owned by the Debtor or any of its subsidiaries will be subjected to a chattel mortgage for the benefit of the new Bonds. The release provisions contained in the present Deed of Trust will be eliminated, and in lieu thereof the new Deed of Trust will provide that the West Coast Studio will be released from the new Deed of Trust upon payment of 60% of the principal amount of the Bonds at the time outstanding.

The claims filed in the Bankruptcy Proceeding and in the Reorganization Proceeding in respect of the Paramount Properties Bonds will be released, and the claims filed by Paramount

SETTLEMENT OF NOTES ARRANGED

Properties, Incorporated, and Los Angeles Theatre Enterprises, Inc., will be released or, in the alternative, assigned to such other corporation as the New Company, or (if prior to final confirmation of the Plan) the Trustees, may designate.

If holders of at least two-thirds in amount of the Paramount Properties Bonds do not consent to the treatment outlined above, the Paramount Properties Bonds may be adjusted in such manner as may be agreed with the holders of at least two-thirds in amount thereof by the Board of Directors, or if (prior to final confirmation of the Plan) by the Trustees, in either case with the approval of the Court in the Reorganization Proceeding; and such adjustment may include the continuance of the mortgage at a rate of interest not more than the present rate and for a term not less than the present term, and the making or guaranteeing by the New Company of a lease or leases which may be pledged as collateral for the indebtedness secured by the mortgage.

Failing such agreement, the holders of Paramount Properties Bonds shall be entitled to treatment as holders of General Claims in respect of the claims filed on account thereof in the Reorganization Proceeding in such amount (if any) as may be determined in the manner provided in Article IV of the Plan.

5. $816,666.68 Paramount Land Corporation Notes:

The claim for $816,666.68 in respect of the Paramount Land Corporation Notes has been filed upon the alleged guaranty of the Debtor by its endorsement upon the Paramount Land Corporation Notes of the obligations thereunder of Paramount Land Corporation (a wholly owned subsidiary of the Debtor).

The Trustees have entered into an agreement, subject to the approval of the Court in the Reorganization Proceeding, with the holder of the Paramount Land Corporation Notes and others for the settlement of the claim on such Notes upon the basis set forth below.

The principal amount of the Paramount Land Corporation Notes will be reduced by the payment on account of principal of $36,666.68 in cash. Accrued interest to July 1, 1934, aggregating $61,250, and tax and assessment arrearages against the property securing the Notes, now aggregating approximately $33,116.35, will be paid in cash. The remaining $780,000, principal amount, of Notes will be exchanged for a like principal amount of new notes of Paramount Land Corporation dated as of July 1, 1934, bearing interest at the rate of 5% per annum, payable quarterly, and maturing serially at the rate of $6,000.00 per quarter until July 1, 1939, at which time the remaining principal amount of the new notes shall become payable. Pending litigation between Paramount Land Corporation and another subsidiary of the Debtor and the holder of the Paramount Land Corporation Notes will be dismissed.

The declaration of trust securing the new notes shall provide, among other things, that the trustee thereunder shall, at any time after July 1, 1936, but not before, release from the declaration of trust the so-called laboratory property upon payment of $150,000 in cash, provided there shall be no default in the payment of interest or principal on the new notes or in the performance of other obligations under the declaration of trust prior to July 1, 1936. The right to such release as above stated shall be unconditional and irrespective of any subsequent default and whether or not the proposed transferee of the so-called laboratory property shall be the Debtor or any corporation directly or indirectly controlled by the Debtor; provided that the provisions for such release shall not be applicable after the expiration of 90 days after said trustee has notified Paramount Land Corporation of its election to declare the balance owing on the new notes to be immediately due and payable and to sell the entire property referred to in said declaration of trust. No requirements with respect to improvements shall be included in the new declaration of trust, and no fee for acceptance and installation shall be charged by the trustee thereunder.

The claim of the holder of Paramount Land Corporation Notes against the Debtor shall be treated as a General Claim under this Plan in the amount of $780,000 and shall be entitled to receive New Securities therefor upon the basis provided in Article IV of this Plan. Such New Securities shall be held in trust, under the declaration of trust, for Paramount Land Corporation but as additional security for the new notes; and the declaration of trust shall provide that the trustee shall not have the right to sell such New Securities except upon 30 days' notice of default in the payment of interest or principal or other non-performance by Paramount Land Corporation of its obligations under the declaration of trust and failure of Paramount Land Corporation to cure such default within such 30 days; provided that if at any time after July 1, 1936, the aggregate market value of such New Securities, determined on the basis of average closing prices (or the mean of bid and asked prices if no sales occur during the day) for 10 consecutive business days, be less than $390,000, then such pledgee may, upon 30 days' notice (provided such aggregate market value, determined as above provided, does not during such 30 days exceed $390,000), sell all or any part of such pledged New Securities and shall apply the proceeds of such sale, after deducting all expenses thereof, to payment on account of the principal of the new notes then outstanding.

6. $561,750 First Mortgage on Theatre property, Jacksonville, Fla.:

Hiawatha Company, a wholly owned indirect subsidiary of the Debtor, is the owner of the Florida Theatre property at Jacksonville, Fla., which is subject to a first mortgage to The Prudence Company, Inc. securing a principal amount of indebtedness of $561,750.01 as of September 29, 1934. As further security for such indebtedness, a lease to the Debtor expiring April 7, 1942, at a net annual rental of $200,000, has been pledged under such mortgage. The Prudence Company, Inc., has filed a claim in the Reorganization Proceeding upon such lease in the amount of $786,255.80.

The indebtedness secured by the mortgage bears interest at the rate of 7% per annum, payable semi-annually, and the principal is payable in the amount of $2,916.66 monthly until April 1, 1937, when the balance of $430,500 is payable. Amounts due under the mortgage (including payments on account of principal) as of October 1, 1934, aggregate approximately $100,000.

Said indebtedness may be adjusted in such manner as may be agreed with the holder of the mortgage by the Board of Directors, or (if prior to the final confirmation of the Plan) by the Trustees, in each case with the approval of the Court in the Reorganization Proceeding; and such adjustment may include the curing of defaults under the mortgage, the continuance of said indebtedness at a rate of interest not more than the present rate and for a term not less than the present term, and the making or guaranteeing by the New Company of a lease which may be pledged as collateral for the indebtedness secured by the mortgage. Failing such agreement the holder of the mortgage shall be entitled to treatment as a holder of a General Claim in respect of the claim filed in the Reorganization Proceeding under the lease to the Debtor constituting part of the security for the mortgage, in such amount as may be determined in the manner provided in Article IV of the Plan.

7. $465,000 First Mortgage on Theatre property, St. Petersburg, Fla.:

St. Petersburg Enterprises, Inc., a wholly owned indirect subsidiary of the Debtor, is the owner of the Florida Theatre property at St. Petersburg, Fla., which is subject to a first mortgage to The Prudence Company, Inc., securing a principal amount of indebtedness of $465,000, as of September 29, 1934. As further security for such indebtedness, a lease to the Debtor expiring August 14, 1938, at a net annual rental of $150,000, has been pledged under such mortgage. The Prudence Company, Inc., has filed a claim in the Reorganization Proceeding upon such lease in the amount of $602,113.93.

The indebtedness secured by the mortgage bears interest at the rate of 6½% per annum, payable semi-annually, and the principal is payable in the amount of $2,066.67 monthly until April 1, 1936, when the balance of $388,400 is payable. Amounts due under the mortgage (including payments on account of principal) as of October 1, 1934, aggregate approximately $85,000.

Said indebtedness may be adjusted in such manner as may be agreed with the holder of the mortgage by the Board of Directors, or (if prior to the final confirmation of the Plan) by the Trustees, in each case with the approval of the Court in the Reorganization Proceeding; and such adjustment may include the curing of defaults under the mortgage, the continuance of said indebtedness at a rate of interest not more than the present rate and for a term not less than the present term, and the making or guaranteeing by the New Company of a lease which may be pledged as collateral for the indebtedness secured by the mortgage. Failing such agreement, the holder of the mortgage shall be entitled to treatment as a holder of a General Claim in respect of the claim filed in the Reorganization Proceeding under the lease to the Debtor constituting part of the security for the mortgage, in such amount as may be determined in the manner provided in Article IV of the Plan.

8. $930,000 First Mortgage on Studio, Laboratory and Film Depot properties, Long Island City, N. Y.:

Seneca Holding Corporation, a wholly owned subsidiary of the Debtor, is the owner of the studio, laboratory and film depot properties in Long Island City, N. Y., which is subject to a first mortgage to The Prudence Company, Inc., securing a present principal amount of indebtedness of $930,000. As further security for such indebtedness, a lease to the Debtor expiring December 31, 1937, at a net annual rental of $233,000, has been pledged under such mortgage. The Prudence Company, Inc., has filed a claim in the Reorganization Proceeding upon such lease in the amount of $886,708.50.

The indebtedness secured by the mortgage bears interest at the rate of 6% per annum, payable semi-annually, and pursuant to the mortgage the principal is payable in the amount of $40,000 semi-annually to and including July 1, 1935, the balance of $730,000 being payable on January 1, 1936. Amounts due under the terms of the mortgage (including payments on account of principal, but excluding unpaid taxes) as of July 1, 1934, aggregate approximately $203,700.

Said indebtedness may be adjusted in such manner as may be agreed with the holder of the mortgage by the Board of Directors, or (if prior to the final confirmation of the Plan) by the Trustees, in each case with the approval of the Court in the Reorganization Proceeding; and such adjustment may include the curing of defaults under the mortgage, the continuance of said indebtedness at a rate of interest not more than the present rate and for a term not less than the present term, and the making or guaranteeing by the New Company of a lease which may be pledged as collateral for the indebtedness secured by the mortgage. Failing such agreement, the holder of the mortgage shall be entitled to treatment as a holder of a General Claim in respect of the claim filed in the Reorganization Proceeding under the lease to the Debtor constituting part of the security for the mortgage, in such amount as may be determined in the manner provided in Article IV of the Plan.

9. $574,100 First and Refunding Mortgage Sinking Fund 6½% Bonds and $615,200 7% Debentures of G. B. Theatres Corporation:

G. B. Theatres Corporation, not a subsidiary of the Debtor, was prior to 1930 the owner and lessee of various theatres, chiefly in Massachusetts. In that year, it sold substantially all of its properties and assets to the Debtor, which transferred such properties and assets to Olympia Theatres, Inc., a subsidiary of the Debtor now in receivership. At the time of that sale, G. B. Theatres Corporation had outstanding First and Refunding Mortgage Sinking Fund 6½% Bonds and 7% Debentures.

Holders of the 6½% Bonds and of the 7%

Debentures have filed claims (a) in the receivership proceeding of Olympia Theatres, Inc., on the theory that the obligation of G. B. Theatres Corporation on the 6½% Bonds and the 7% Debentures was assumed by Olympia Theatres, Inc., and (b) in the Reorganization Proceeding, on the theory that such obligations were assumed by the Debtor, and further that the alleged assumption by Olympia Theatres, Inc. was guaranteed by the Debtor.

There are outstanding $574,100, principal amount, of the 6½% Bonds and $615,200, principal amount, of the 7% Debentures. The 6½% Bonds are secured by a mortgage on theatre properties in Massachusetts.

The Trustees have, with the approval of the Court in the Bankruptcy Proceeding, taken the following action with respect to the claims against the Debtor on the 7% Debentures and the 6½% Bonds:

7% DEBENTURES

The Trustees have caused Lares Theatres Corporation, a wholly owned subsidiary of the Debtor (hereinafter called Lares), to agree to purchase from Nathan E. and Samuel Goldstein (hereinafter called the Goldsteins), the entire $615,200 outstanding principal amount of 7% Debentures, or the new securities or cash to be issued or distributed in respect of such claims as may have been or may be filed thereon in the receivership proceeding of Olympia Theatres, Inc., or in the Reorganization Proceeding, at 50% of their principal amount. At November 28, 1934, the Goldsteins owned or controlled approximately $610,000 principal amount of said debentures. To the extent that the 7% Debentures represent claims against Olympia Theatres, Inc., Lares will use such debentures as the basis of participation by it as a creditor of Olympia Theatres, Inc. in any reorganization thereof.

6½% BONDS

The Trustees, in collaboration with the principal holders of the 6½% Bonds, and with a committee representing additional holders, have evolved a plan of reorganization with respect to such bonds (which has already been approved by holders of $261,600 principal amount of such bonds), and have caused Lares to enter into agreements with such principal holders and such committee to attempt to consummate such plan of which the following is a summary:

A new corporation (hereinafter called the New G. B. Company) has been formed with an authorized common capital stock consisting of 520 shares of Class B Stock (to be acquired by Lares) and 480 shares of Class A Stock (to be held by the Goldsteins). The New G. B. Company will have eight directors, four to be elected by the holders of the Class B Stock, three by the holders of the Class A Stock and one by such holders of the New Bonds as will presently acquire them, viz., the Goldsteins in so far as they will acquire New Bonds in exchange for such cash as may be provided by them in the foreclosure mentioned below, and the holders of the New Bonds issued pursuant to (A) below. The Class A and Class B stocks share equally as classes in liquidation or other distribution excepting dividends.

The New G. B. Company will issue the New Bonds hereinafter described, and the holder of each of the outstanding 6½% Bonds (with March 1, 1933 and subsequent interest coupons attached) will receive in exchange therefor from the New G. B. Company, at his option, either

(A) a like principal amount of New Bonds plus cash equal to full unpaid interest on his 6½% Bonds to the date of the New Bonds, or

(B) 65% of the principal amount of his 6½% Bonds in cash, less, in either case, any payments in respect of interest made on the 6½% Bonds subsequent to April 23, 1934.

The New G. B. Company will also

(a) acquire at foreclosure, subject to existing underlying mortgages and other liens, the properties securing the 6½% Bonds;

(b) acquire from the Goldsteins an existing lease expiring in 1941 on the Arcade Theatre in Springfield for $31,500 payable from the earnings of the theatre, and certain other considerations;

(c) enter into long term management contracts with the Goldsteins providing for aggregate salaries to the two Goldsteins of $525 per week, plus an additional amount of not exceeding $225 per week payable out of net earnings;

(d) acquire from Paramount Pictures Distributing Corporation a ten-year franchise for Paramount motion pictures in certain Massachusetts cities and towns;

(e) enter into an arrangement with Paramount Theatres Service Corporation for the furnishing by the latter of advice and assistance in connection with the operation of theatres; and

(f) acquire from Lares, in consideration of an assignment to Lares by the New G. B. Company of the 6½% Bonds to be acquired by it (which, prior to such assignment, will have been applied to the payment of the foreclosure bid), either

(1) leases on additional Massachusetts theatre properties now in the hands of Olympia Theatres, Inc. or one or more of its subsidiaries, or

(2) $400,000 of such debentures as may be issued in connection with the reorganization of Olympia Theatres, Inc., or

(3) $200,000 in cash.

To the extent that the 6½% Bonds so acquired by Lares will then represent deficiency claims against Olympia Theatres, Inc., Lares will use them as the basis of participation by it as a creditor of Olympia Theatres, Inc., in any reorganization thereof, including payment to Olympia Theatres, Inc. for the leases described in (1) above.

The Goldsteins will provide all cash required (a) upon exchanges of 6½% Bonds pursuant to (B) above, in consideration of the transfer to them of all such 6½% Bonds, which they will exchange for New Bonds and cash pursuant to (A) above, and

(b) in satisfaction of the foreclosure bid, in consideration of the issue to them of such aggregate principal amount of New Bonds as the cash so provided would purchase at a price equal to 55¼% of the principal amount thereof, provided, however, that such aggregate principal amount of New Bonds shall not exceed the aggregate principal amount of 6½% Bonds which shall not be exchanged pursuant to (A) or (B) above.

The Class B Stock of the New G. B. Company will be purchased from the Goldsteins by Lares for $107,500 in cash. In further consideration for said cash payment, the Goldsteins have agreed with Lares to carry out all their obligations above mentioned, and also to deliver to Lares, without further cost to it, securities of the same kind and in the same amount as may be issued in respect of such claims as may be filed in the receivership proceeding of Olympia Theatres, Inc., or in the Reorganization Proceeding, by holders of 6½% Bonds who do not exchange their bonds pursuant to (A) or (B) above, or the cash, if any, distributed in respect of such claims.

The New Bonds will be issued under an indenture which will constitute a mortgage on the properties now securing the 6½% Bonds (subject to existing underlying mortgages and other lines), and a lien on all leaseholds owned by the New G. B. Company, on the stocks of its subsidiaries, on the debentures above mentioned (if acquired by the New G. B. Company from Lares), and on all its tangible properties, real or personal (excluding current supplies). The New Bonds will be dated as of March 1, 1934, will mature March 1, 1959, will bear 6% interest per annum, payable semi-annually, will have a cumulative sinking fund of 4% per annum, payable out of net earnings (after repayment of loans from the Goldsteins and Lares, not exceeding $100,000 in the aggregate, which may be incurred for reorganization expenses, interest on the 6½% Bonds or working capital), applicable to the retirement of New Bonds by purchase. The New Bonds will be redeemable upon any interest date at 107½% within the first five years, at 105% during the next ten years, and at 102½% thereafter, in each case plus accrued interest. The indenture will permit, subject to restrictions designed to preserve the security for the New Bonds, releases of property subject to the mortgage, and will contain tax refund provisions similar to those applicable to the 6½% Bonds.

In addition to those to be issued in exchange for 6½% Bonds, the indenture will authorize $1,500,000, principal amount, of New Bonds, issuable only for the purpose of refunding an equal amount of obligations constituting liens senior to the lien of the new mortgage.

To the extent that the 7% Debentures and the 6½% Bonds to be acquired by Lares represent claims against the Debtor, such claims will be released or otherwise dealt with under the Plan on a basis not involving the issue of New Securities. Holders of such of the 7% Debentures and of the 6½% Bonds as shall not be acquired by Lares shall be entitled to treatment as holders of General Claims under this Plan in respect of the claims filed in the Reorganization Proceeding as above stated.

IV.

TREATMENT OF OLD DEBENTURES AND GENERAL CLAIMS

Holders of Old Debentures and of General Claims, and of all claims separately dealt with under Article III but in respect of which claims against the Debtor's estate may ultimately be allowed, will be entitled to participate in the reorganization upon the basis of the amount of their respective claims as finally established and allowed in the Reorganization Proceeding (or in such other manner as may be determined by the Board of Directors with the approval of the Court in the Reorganization Proceeding), with interest at the rate of 6% per annum from the date in respect of which each such claim shall have been allowed for interest (if any) to January 1, 1935, from which date the New Securities will bear interest and rank for dividends.

Holders of such claims thus established and allowed will be entitled to receive for each $1,000 in amount of such claims, including such interest to January 1, 1935,*

*The claims of the Old Debentures are to be computed for the purpose of the Plan at $1,017.09 in respect of each $1,000 Twenty-Year 6% Sinking Fund Gold Bond with coupons maturing on and after June 1, 1933, and at $1,034.00 in respect of each $1,000 Twenty-Year 5½% Sinking Fund Gold Bond with coupons maturing on and after February 1, 1933, with interest on the respective amounts so allowed from March 14, 1933, at the rate of 6% per annum, so that the total claim with interest accrued to January 1, 1935, will be for each such $1,000 6% Bond with coupons, approximately $1,126.94, and for each such $1,000 5½% Bond with coupons, approximately $1,145.67.

RELEASED THRU— The New Major
FIRST DIVISION

—HARRY H. THOMAS, president—

NEW SECURITIES ARE DESCRIBED

$500 principal amount, new Twenty-Year 6% Sinking Fund Debentures, and 5 shares new Cumulative Convertible 6% First Preferred Stock (par value $100 per share).

Priority claims shall be paid in cash to the extent (if any) that the asserted right to priority shall be finally established in the Reorganization Proceeding.

V.

TREATMENT OF STOCKHOLDERS

For each share of old Common Stock of the Debtor (of which 3,220,902.85 shares are outstanding) held, stockholders will receive

- (1) $\frac{1}{4}$ share of new Common Stock and
- (2) a warrant evidencing the right to subscribe for a period of sixty days, at $2, for one unit consisting of
 - $\frac{1}{4}$ share of new Common Stock, and
 - $\frac{1}{5}$ share of new Cumulative Convertible 6% Second Preferred Stock (par value \$10 per share).

Subscription warrants will be valid for 60 days from the date when such warrants shall be made available for distribution to stockholders, which shall be specified in a notice thereof to stockholders given in the manner provided in Article XIV. The warrants will entitle the holders thereof to subscribe as aforesaid upon presentation, within said 60 days, of the warrants in negotiable form accompanied by payment in cash of the subscription price, for account of the New Company, at the office of The Commercial National Bank and Trust Company of New York, 56 Wall Street, New York City.

VI.

CAPITALIZATION OF THE NEW COMPANY

As provided in Article I the Plan shall not be carried out unless and until the aggregate amount of all Priority Claims, General Claims, Old Debentures, Old Bank Debt and other claims dealt with under Article III of the Plan and which are ultimately treated on a parity with General Claims, including interest to January 1, 1935, to the extent provided in the Plan, but exclusive of claims asserted for indeterminate amounts at the date of final confirmation of the Plan and claims heretofore filed and based upon alleged violations of the anti-trust laws, shall be not more than $65,000,000.

It is believed, however, that this amount may be substantially reduced by litigation or negotiation. It is hoped that this reduction will be in a sufficient amount so that, if none of the claims separately dealt with under Article III of the Plan (other than the claims on the Old Bank Debt, the claim of the Trustees of Allied Owners Corporation and the claim on the Paramount Land Corporation Notes) requires the issuance of New Debentures or First Preferred Stock, the capitalization of the New Company outstanding upon the consummation of the reorganization will not be more than:*

Twenty-Year 6% Sinking Fund Debentures	$27,500,000
Cumulative Convertible 6% First Preferred Stock (par value $100 per share)	$27,500,000
Cumulative Convertible 6% Second Preferred Stock (par value $10 per share)	$ 6,441,806
Common stock	1,610,452
	Shares

*To these must be added such New Securities as may be issued pursuant to Articles X, XI or XII of the Plan.

Class of Creditors or Stockholders	New Debentures	First Preferred Stock (par value)	Second Preferred Stock (par value)	Common Stock (shares)
Old Bank Debt.....	$ 4,906,548	$ 4,906,548
Allied Owners Corporation.....	2,500,000	2,500,000
Paramount Land Corporation Notes.....	390,000	390,000
Old Debentures	14,310,655	14,310,655
General Claims	5,392,797	5,392,797
Stockholders (including shares issuable against warrants)			$6,441,806	1,610,452
Total	$27,500,000	$27,500,000	$6,441,806	1,610,452

The pro forma balance sheet annexed to the Plan as Schedule D has been prepared upon the assumption that this hope will be realized.

To the extent that all claims requiring the issue of New Securities, other than claims on the Old Bank Debt, claims on the Old Debentures, the claim of the Trustees of Allied Owners Corporation and the claim on the Paramount Land Corporation Notes, are not hereafter so reduced as a result of litigation or otherwise as to aggregate $10,785,595.20 or less in amount including interest on the General Claims (and Priority Claims for which New Securities may be issued) to January 1, 1935, to the extent provided in the Plan, additional New Securities will be required to be issued pro tanto. To the extent that such claims are so reduced to less than the aggregate of $10,785,595.20, including such interest to January 1, 1935, the above estimate of the amount of New Securities to be outstanding may be reduced pro tanto.

The authorized amounts of the New Securities shall be such as in the opinion of the Board of Directors shall at the time of carrying out of the Plan seem necessary or proper to enable the New Company to issue and deliver to all creditors and stockholders of the Debtor the New Securities provided for in the Plan, and to provide any cash or New Securities which may be required under the provisions of Articles X, XI or XII.

Shares of the Common Stock of the New Company will be reserved to the amount required for the conversion of the authorized First Preferred Stock and Second Preferred Stock of the New Company.

The shares of Common Stock may be without par value, or may have such par value as the Board of Directors may determine.

Distribution of New Securities:

Assuming the realization of the hoped-for reduction of claims as set forth in the Introductory Statement under the heading "Claims Against the Debtor's Estate," the New Debentures, First Preferred Stock, Second Preferred Stock and Common Stock issued under the Plan will be distributed approximately as follows:

VII.

DESCRIPTION OF NEW SECURITIES

The New Securities may be issued in temporary form in the first instance or interim certificates may be issued therefor. Scrip may be issued and distributed in lieu of fractions of a share of stock or of debentures of any denomination less than $100. Such scrip may be non-interest or non-dividend bearing, but shall be exchangeable for New Securities when presented in proper multiples. The New Company may make arrangements with brokers or dealers to facilitate the purchase and sale of such scrip and may compensate such brokers or dealers for their services in that connection; but in no event will the New Company itself purchase or sell such scrip.

Twenty-Year 6% Sinking Fund Debentures:

The Twenty-Year 6% Sinking Fund Debentures will be issued in coupon form in denominations of $1,000, $500 and $100, registerable as to principal only, will be dated as of January 1, 1935, will mature twenty years thereafter, will bear interest at the rate of 6% per annum, payable semi-annually, and will be redeemable, at the option of the New Company, at any time and from time to time, in whole or in part, upon at least thirty days' notice by publication, at the principal amount thereof plus accrued interest. They will be issued under an indenture to a bank or trust company as trustee (hereinafter in this sub-section, together with its successor trustees, if any, referred to as the trustee).

The New Debentures will be entitled to the benefit of a cumulative sinking fund as hereinafter provided. As promptly as possible after the date which shall be the closing date of the monthly accounting period nearest to January 1 in each year, the consolidated net earnings of the New Company and its subsidiaries shall be determined for the twelve months' period ending on said date. Such consolidated net earnings for said twelve months' accounting period, together with all earned surplus arising from consolidated net earnings for prior twelve months' accounting periods commencing Sunday, December 30, 1934, less all dividends on First Preferred Stock and the Second Preferred Stock which shall have accrued during all such twelve months' accounting periods, whether or not paid, are hereinafter referred to as "consolidated net earnings available for the sinking fund." From the consolidated net earnings available for the sinking fund, the New Company shall pay to the trustee on June 15, 1936 and, so long as any New Debentures shall be outstanding, on June 15 of each year thereafter, whichever of the following two sums shall be the larger, viz., (a) an amount equal to one-third of the consolidated net earnings available for the sinking fund which shall have accrued during the next preceding twelve months' accounting period, or (b) the sum of an amount equal to 2% of the aggregate principal amount of the New Debentures issued prior to said June 15 and an amount equal to 6% of the aggregate principal amount of New Debentures which pursuant to operation of the sinking fund shall have been purchased or redeemed or called for redemption on a date prior to said June 15. The obligation to pay the sum specified in the foregoing sub-paragraph (b) shall be cumulative.

Each sinking fund payment for the New Debentures shall be applied to the retirement and cancellation thereof not later in any event than the next succeeding January 1, pursuant to purchase in the open market or upon calls for tenders at not exceeding the principal amount thereof and accrued interest, or, to the extent that retirement by purchase or upon calls for tenders is not so made, by drawings by lot at such price.

The New Company will also covenant in said indenture that so long as any of the New Debentures shall be outstanding, (a) it will not pay or declare any dividend or make any other distribution in respect of any stock of any class of the New Company except out of net earnings of the New Company accruing on or after December 30, 1934, and (b) it will not pay or declare any dividend or make any other distribution in respect of any shares of its Common Stock, or apply any sum to the purchase or redemption of any stock of any class, unless the sinking fund payment required in respect of the next preceding twelve months' accounting period, together with an accumulated unpaid sinking fund payments, shall have been paid to the trustee.

The New Company will also covenant in said indenture that it will not apply any sum to the purchase or redemption of any shares of any such stock unless and until the principal amount of New Debentures outstanding shall be less than $14,000,000.

The New Company will also covenant in said indenture that it will not sell, or permit the sale of, any shares of stock of any of the corporations in the Picture Group owned by it or by any other corporation in the Picture Group (except to another corporation of the Picture Group or to the New Company) without paying, or causing to be paid, the proceeds thereof to the trustee to be applied to the retirement and cancellation of the Debentures in the manner provided in respect of sinking fund payments, and that it will not pledge or create any lien, or permit any pledge or creation of a lien, on or in respect of any such shares without equally and ratably securing the Debentures. The New Company will further covenant therein that it will not pledge or create any lien, or permit any pledge or creation of any lien, on or in respect of any motion picture negatives or positives constituting assets of any of the corporations in the Picture Group unless such pledge or liens shall be for the purpose of obtaining services, or rights or other property, useful in the production or distribution of such negatives or positives, or for the purpose of securing loans, not in excess of such aggregate amount as shall be specified in the indenture, to finance the production of motion pictures in such manner that the proceeds of each picture so financed will be applied to the repayment of such loans or to the financing of new productions.

Classes of Stock of the New Company:

The authorized capital stock of the New Company shall consist of the following classes of stock:

- Cumulative Convertible 6% First Preferred Stock (par value $100 per share)
- Cumulative Convertible 6% Second Preferred Stock (par value $10 per share)
- Common Stock (with or without par value, as the Board of Directors of the New Company shall determine) payment of dividends, when and as declared by the Board of Directors, dividends at the rate of 6% per annum of the par value thereof from January 1, 1935, and no more, payable quarterly on January 1, April 1, July 1 and October 1 in each year, before any sum or sums shall be set apart for or applied to the purchase or redemption of First Preferred Stock or Second Preferred Stock or Common Stock and before any dividend or other distribution shall be declared or paid upon or set apart for the Second Preferred Stock or the Common Stock, and such dividends shall be cumulative, so that if dividends upon the outstanding First Preferred Stock at the rate of 6% per annum of the par value thereof from January 1, 1935 to the end of the then current quarterly dividend period for such stock shall not have been paid, or declared and a sum sufficient for the payment thereof set apart, the amount of the deficiency shall be paid, but without interest, or dividends at said rate shall be declared and a sum sufficient for the payment thereof set apart, before any sum or sums shall be set apart for or applied to the purchase or redemption of First Preferred Stock or Second Preferred Stock or Common Stock, and before any dividend or other distribution shall be declared or paid upon or set apart for the Second Preferred Stock or the Common Stock.

Dividends on Second Preferred Stock:* Out of the surplus or net profits of the New Company available for the payment of dividends and remaining after full cumulative dividends as aforesaid on the First Preferred Stock shall have been paid or provided for to the end of the then current quarterly dividend period for such stock, the holders of the Second Preferred Stock shall be entitled to receive, when and as declared by the Board of Directors, dividends at the rate of 6% per annum of the par value thereof from January 1, 1935, and no more, payable quarterly on January 1, April 1, July 1 and October 1 in each year, before any sum or sums shall be set apart for or applied to the purchase or redemption of First Preferred Stock or Second Preferred Stock or Common Stock and before any dividend or other distribution shall be declared or paid upon or set apart for the Common Stock, and such dividends shall be cumulative, so that if dividends upon the outstanding Second Preferred Stock at the rate of 6% per annum of the par value thereof from January 1, 1935 to the end of the then current quarterly dividend period for such stock shall not have been paid, or declared and a sum sufficient for the payment thereof set apart, the amount of the deficiency shall be paid, but without interest, or dividends at said rate shall be declared and a sum sufficient for the payment thereof set apart, before any sum or sums shall be set apart for or applied to the purchase or redemption of First Preferred Stock or Second Preferred Stock or Common Stock and before any dividend or other distribution shall be declared or paid upon or set apart for the Common Stock.

Dividends on Common Stock:* Out of the surplus or net profits of the New Company available for the payment of dividends and remaining after full cumulative dividends as aforesaid upon the First Preferred Stock and Second Preferred Stock shall have been paid or provided for to the end of the then current quarterly dividend period for such stocks, as hereinabove set forth, dividends may be declared upon and paid to the holders of the Common Stock to the exclusion of the holders of the First Preferred Stock and Second Preferred Stock.

Rights on Liquidation: In the event of any liquidation or dissolution or winding-up of the New Company, voluntary or involuntary, the holders of the First Preferred Stock shall be entitled to receive out of the assets of the New Company available for distribution to its stockholders (whether capital or surplus), before any distribution of such assets shall be made to the holders of Second Preferred Stock or Common Stock, an amount in the case of each such holder of First Preferred Stock which, together with the aggregate of the dividends paid upon his shares of First Preferred Stock, shall be equal to $100 per share, plus an amount equal to interest at the rate of 6% per annum of the par value thereof thereon from January 1, 1935 to the date of distribution upon any such liquidation or dissolution or winding-up, and in the event that such assets of the New Company available for distribution to its stockholders shall be insufficient to permit the payment in full of the amounts to which the holders of the First Preferred Stock are entitled as aforesaid, then the entire assets of the New Company available for distribution to its stockholders shall be distributed ratably among the holders of the First Preferred Stock according to the amounts which they respectively would be entitled to receive if such assets were sufficient to permit the payment in full of said amounts. After payment in full of said amounts to the holders of the First Preferred Stock, the holders of the Second Preferred Stock shall be entitled to receive, out of the assets of the New Company available for distribution to its stockholders (whether capital or surplus), before any distribution of such assets shall be made to the holders of Common Stock, an amount in the case of each such holder of Second Preferred Stock which, together with the aggregate of the dividends paid upon his shares of Second Preferred Stock, shall be equal to $10 per share, plus an amount equal to interest at the rate of 6% per annum of the par value thereof thereon from January 1, 1935 to the date of distribution upon any such liquidation or dissolution or winding-up, and in the event that such assets of the New Company available for distribution to its stockholders remaining after payment in full of the amounts to which the holders of the First Preferred Stock shall be entitled shall be insufficient to permit the payment in full of the amounts to which the holders of the Second Preferred Stock shall be entitled as aforesaid, then such remaining assets shall be distributed ratably among the holders of the Second Preferred Stock according to the amounts which they respectively would be entitled to receive if such assets were sufficient to permit the payment in full of said amounts. After payment in full of said amounts to the holders of the First Preferred Stock and Second Preferred Stock, the holders of the Common Stock shall be entitled, to the exclusion of the holders of the First Preferred Stock and Second Preferred Stock, to share ratably in all the remaining assets of the New Company available for distribution to its stockholders.

Redemption of Preferred Stocks*: The First Preferred Stock and Second Preferred Stock at any time outstanding may be redeemed by the New Company, in whole or in part, at any time or from time to time, at its election expressed by resolution of the Board of Directors, upon not less than sixty days prior notice to the holders of record of the First Preferred Stock or Second Preferred Stock to be redeemed, given as hereinafter set forth, by the payment in cash in each case of an amount in the case of each share thereof so to be redeemed which, together with the aggregate of the dividends paid thereon, shall be equal to the par value thereof, respectively, plus an amount equal to interest at the rate of 6% per annum of the par value thereof thereon from January 1, 1935 to the date of redemption. If less than all of the outstanding shares of First Preferred Stock or of Second Preferred Stock, as the case may be, is to be redeemed, the shares to be redeemed may be determined by lot, or pro rata, in such manner as may be prescribed by resolution of the Board of Directors. Notice of such redemption shall be given by publication at least once in one newspaper published and of general circulation in the City of New York, not less than sixty nor more than ninety days prior to the redemption date. A similar notice shall be mailed by the New Company, postage prepaid, not less than sixty nor more than ninety days prior to such redemption date, addressed to the respective holders of record of the First Preferred Stock or of the Second Preferred Stock, as the case may be, to be redeemed, at their respective addresses as the same shall appear on the stock transfer records of the New Company, but the mailing of such notice shall not be a condition precedent to such redemption. Notice having been so given by publication, from and after the date fixed therein as the date of redemption, unless default shall be made by the New Company in providing moneys for the payment of the redemption price, all dividends upon the shares of stock thereby called for redemption shall cease to accrue and all rights of the holders thereof as stockholders of the New Company shall cease and determine, except the right to receive the redemption price and the right to convert the shares so called for redemption into shares of Common Stock of the New Company at any time up to and including the day which shall be two weeks prior to the date fixed for redemption as hereinabove set forth, or if such day shall be a holiday, then the first business day thereafter. by the New Company shall not be reissued, and no stock shall be issued in lieu thereof, and such First Preferred Stock and Second Preferred Stock shall be retired from time to time in the manner permitted by law.

The New Company shall not purchase any shares of its Common Stock until all of the shares of its First Preferred Stock and Second Preferred Stock shall have been retired, or until the funds necessary for the redemption of all of its outstanding shares of First Preferred Stock and Second Preferred Stock shall have been set apart therefor.

Voting Rights: Upon all elections of directors, and upon all other matters upon which the vote or consent of the stockholders of the New Company shall be required or taken, the holders of First Preferred Stock shall be entitled to twenty votes for each share of First Preferred Stock held by them respectively, and the holders of the Second Preferred Stock and of the Common Stock shall be entitled to one vote for each share of each such stock held by them, respectively.

Conversion Rights: All or any shares of the First Preferred Stock, and all or any shares of the Second Preferred Stock in 10-share lots or multiples thereof, at any time outstanding, shall be convertible at any time (but, in the case of shares called for redemption only up to and including the day which shall be two weeks prior to the redemption date, or if such day shall be a holiday, then the first business day thereafter), at the option of the holder, into fully-paid and non-assessable shares of Common Stock of the New Company on the basis hereinafter specified, upon presentation and surrender to the New Company at the office of any transfer agent of its Common Stock, of the certificate or certificates representing such share or shares to be so converted, duly stamped, if necessary, and properly endorsed for transfer. Upon the surrender of any such certificate or certificates for such purpose, the holder thereof shall be entitled to receive therefor a certificate or certificates representing the number of shares of Common Stock of the New Company into which such shares of First Preferred Stock or Second Preferred Stock, as the case may be, are convertible as hereinafter set forth.

The basis for such conversion shall be at the rate of seven shares of Common Stock for one share of First Preferred Stock, and nine shares of Common Stock for ten shares of Second Preferred Stock. If, at any time or times prior to such conversion, the holders of the Common Stock of the New Company become entitled, or are required, to exchange the shares of Common Stock then held by them for a larger or smaller number of shares of Common Stock only, thereafter each holder of First Preferred Stock or Second Preferred Stock then outstanding, upon conversion thereof, shall receive, in substitution for the Common Stock to which he would have been entitled upon conversion but for such exchange, a number of shares of Common Stock equal to the number that would have been issued and delivered to him in exchange for the shares of Common Stock which would have been issued and delivered to him if he had converted his First Preferred Stock or Second Preferred Stock into Common Stock immediately prior to (a) the record date fixed for the determination of the holders of Common Stock entitled or required to make such exchange of such Common Stock or (b) such exchange if no such date shall be fixed. If, at any time or times prior to such conversion, shares of the Common Stock of the New Company are issued as a stock dividend in respect of the Common Stock, thereafter the number of shares of Common Stock which each holder of First Preferred Stock or Second Preferred Stock (in 10-share lots or multiples thereof) then outstanding shall be entitled to receive upon conversion thereof shall be increased in the same ratio as that by which the number of outstanding shares of Common Stock shall have been increased by the payment of such stock dividend. If at any time or times prior to such conversion the New Company shall reclassify its Common Stock in whole or in part into other classes of stock, or shall dissolve, liquidate or be wound up, or shall sell all or any portion of its properties and assets, or shall merge with or consolidate into another corporation, and as a result thereof there shall be cash, securities or other properties or assets distributable to the holders of the Common Stock, the number of shares of Common Stock into which shares of First Preferred Stock and shares of Second Preferred Stock (in 10-share lots or multiples thereof) are convertible, shall not thereby be changed, but the New Company shall, at least sixty days prior to (a) the record date fixed for the determination of the holders of Common Stock entitled to such distribution or (b) such distribution if no such date shall be fixed, mail notice to all holders of record of shares of First Preferred Stock and shares of Second Preferred Stock at their respective addresses as the same appear on the stock record books of the New Company, specifying the nature of such distribution and the record date fixed for the determination of the holders of Common Stock entitled thereto, or the proposed date of such distribution if no such record date shall be fixed. The New Company shall also mail to the holders of record of shares of First Preferred Stock and of shares of Second Preferred Stock notices of (1) the initial dividend upon the Common Stock, (2) any dividend which shall be declared by the Board of Directors to place the Common Stock upon a regular dividend basis, (3) any subsequent dividend at a rate in excess of such regular dividend basis, and (4) any dividend which together with all dividends declared during the same calendar year shall exceed in the aggregate $1 per share on the Common Stock in such year, unless notice shall already have been given of the declaration of a dividend placing the Common Stock upon a regular dividend basis and such regular dividend basis shall have been in excess of $1 per annum; any such notice shall be mailed to such holders at such respective addresses at least thirty days prior to the record date fixed for the determination of the holders of Common Stock entitled to such dividend or the payment date of such dividend if no such record date shall be fixed.

Fractional shares shall not be issued upon conversion of First Preferred Stock or Second Preferred Stock but if upon such conversion a stockholder shall become entitled to receive a fraction of a share of stock of any class of the New Company, the New Company may issue scrip representing such fraction, which scrip may be non-voting, non-dividend and non-interest bearing, exchangeable together with other scrip aggregating one or more full shares of stock of such class, within a period to be fixed by the Board of Directors, for stock certificates representing such full share or shares of stock of such class, and otherwise in such form and containing such terms as shall be fixed by the Board of Directors at the time of the issue thereof.

Upon conversion, the holder of First Preferred Stock or Second Preferred Stock shall be entitled to receive in cash out of surplus available therefor the amount of the accrued dividends thereon for the elapsed portion of the current quarterly dividend period of such stock, less a cash adjustment for any dividend which shall be deemed to have accrued on any stock issuable upon such conversion.

Waiver of Preemptive Rights: Unless otherwise determined by the Board of Directors, no holder of any stock of the New Company, of any class or classes, shall, as such holder, have any right to purchase or subscribe for (1) any shares of stock of any class or classes or any warrant or warrants, option or options, or instrument or instruments that shall confer upon the holder or holders thereof the right to subscribe for or to purchase or receive from the New Company any stock of any class or classes which it may issue or sell, or (2) any obligation which the New Company may issue or sell that shall be convertible into, or exchangeable for, any shares of the stock of the New Company of any class or classes, or to which shall be attached or appurtenant any warrant or warrants, option or options, or instrument or instruments that shall confer upon the holder or holders of such obligation, warrant, option or instrument the right to subscribe for, or to purchase or receive from the New Company, any shares of its stock of any class or classes.

BROOKS REPRESENTS BRITISH INSURANCE

Gerald Brooks, named to the Paramount board is an investment executive with E. F. Hutton & Co. He is a representative of both stockholders and bondholders, particularly large British insurance companies with Paramount holdings.

VIII. MANAGEMENT

It is contemplated that the New Company will have a Board of Directors of not less than twelve nor more than twenty members, so classified that one-fourth shall be elected annually for terms of four years.

The Board of Directors of the Debtor has been partially reconstituted and the Board of Directors of the New Company is expected to include the following persons:

Gerald Brooks	Henry R. Luce
Duncan G. Harris	Charles A. McCulloch
Percy H. Johnston	Maurice Newton
Julius Klein	Frank A. Vanderlip
Adolph Zukor

It is expected that the other directors to be chosen will bring additional strength to the New Company, and the Debtor has been informed that representatives of substantial creditor and stockholder interests do not expect to approve and adopt the Plan before the additional members of the Board of Directors have been selected.

IX. METHOD OF ACCEPTANCE OF AND PARTICIPATION IN PLAN

The method by which creditors, stockholders and other parties in interest may evidence their acceptance of the Plan, and, after confirmation by the Court in the Reorganization Proceeding, may participate therein, will hereafter be determined, and notice thereof will be duly given to the creditors, stockholders and other parties in interest.

X. PROVISION FOR ANY CLASS OF CREDITORS OF WHICH LESS THAN TWO-THIRDS SHALL ACCEPT THE PLAN

In respect of each class of creditors of the Debtor of which less than two-thirds in amount shall accept the Plan, protection for the realization by them of the value of their interests, claims or liens shall be provided, either, as the Board of Directors may determine (a) by the sale of the property of the Debtor free of the interests, claims or liens of such class or classes of creditors, at not less than a fair upset price to be fixed by the Court in the Reorganization Proceeding, and the transfer of such interests, claims or liens to the proceeds of such sale, or (b) by appraisal and payment either in cash of the value either of such interests, claims or liens (as such value may be determined by the Court in the Reorganization Proceeding), or, at the objecting creditors' election, by payment by delivery of the securities allotted to such interests, claims or liens under the Plan, or (c) by such other method as the Board of Directors may determine, and as will in the opinion of the Court in the Reorganization Proceeding, under and consistent with the circumstances of the case, equitably and fairly provide such protection. Upon any sale of the property and assets of the Debtor, or any part thereof, the New Company, or any other person or persons acting for the purpose of carrying out the Plan, may be a purchaser at such sale, and may apply, ratably in satisfaction of the purchase price, all interests, claims and liens of all classes of creditors whose claims have been allowed and the holders of at least two-thirds in amount of each of which classes have accepted the Plan, and the interests, claims and liens of the assenting creditors of the other class or classes concerned, and for this purpose the New Company or such other purchaser will be vested with all such interests, claims and liens. Any cash which may be required for such provisions shall be paid by the New Company, and if the Board of Directors shall so determine, the New Company may for that purpose sell for cash at such price as may be determined by the Board of Directors, any of the authorized amounts of the New Securities which may not be required for delivery to creditors or stockholders participating in the Plan.

XI. MEANS FOR EXECUTION OF THE PLAN

The Plan of Reorganization of the Debtor will be carried out under the provisions of Section 77B of the Federal Bankruptcy Act. It is expected that it will be carried out by the revesting in the Debtor of all of its assets, except as the Court in the Reorganization Proceeding may otherwise order and except as hereinafter stated, but the Plan may be carried out by the transfer of such assets to another existing corporation or to a new corporation to be organized for the purpose. The New Company will create and issue the New Securities, and execute the appropriate agreements and indentures necessary or proper to carry out the Plan. In case the New Company shall be a new corporation, a certificate of incorporation will be executed and filed, and in case the New Company shall be an existing corporation the necessary amendments to its certificate of incorporation will be executed and filed, for the creation of the new stocks to be issued pursuant to the Plan and in case the New Company is the Debtor, it will take the necessary corporate action to reduce its authorized capital stock and number of shares, and thereafter to increase its capital stock and number of shares and classify such shares as contemplated by the Plan.

The reorganization of the Old Broadway Company will be carried out under the provisions of Section 77B of the Federal Bankruptcy Act in the manner provided in Article III of the Plan, either by revesting in the Old Broadway Company, or by transferring to another existing corporation or a new corporation to be organized for the purpose, substantially all the assets of the Old Broadway Company.

All claims or causes of action of the Trustees against officers or directors of the Debtor arising out of acts or conduct prior to the Bankruptcy Proceeding, and all claims or causes of action against persons other than such officers or directors arising out of or related to the same transactions, with respect to which, prior to the confirmation of the Plan, suits shall have been instituted by the Trustees or leave therefor shall have been granted to the Trustees by the Court, shall, subject to the further orders of the Court in the Reorganization Proceeding, remain in the Trustees and shall not be vested in the New Company, but such claims or causes of action shall be prosecuted or otherwise disposed of, for the benefit of the New Company, in such manner as the Trustees shall.

MAURICE NEWTON INVESTMENT OFFICIAL

Maurice Newton, named to Paramount's new directorate, is an investment executive associated with Hallgarten & Co., and a former member of Paramount boards. He is a representative of stockholders.

PLAN PROVIDES FOR MODIFICATION

with the approval of the Court in the Reorganization Proceeding, determine. All expense of such prosecution or other disposition of such claims or causes of action shall, subject to the orders of the Court in the Reorganization Proceeding, be borne by the New Company, and the net proceeds thereof shall be paid to the New Company.

Except as otherwise herein provided, the form and terms of the New Securities, the means for executing the Plan and all details of its consummation not herein otherwise expressly provided for, shall be determined by the Board of Directors.

The allowances made or to be made by the Court in respect of the Equity Proceeding, the Bankruptcy Proceeding and the Reorganization Proceeding, for the compensation and expenses of the Trustees, of their counsel, accountants and other agents employed by them under Court order, shall be paid in cash in such manner and at such time or times as may be determined by the Court.

The Vanderlip Debenture Committee, the Bank Creditors' Committee, the Stockholders' Committee, the Broadway Bondholders' Committee, the Merchandise Creditors' Committee, the Munger Debenture Committee, the Schenck Broadway Committee, and their respective agents and counsel, caused for the Debtor and for the petitioners in the Reorganization Proceeding, and such other parties and counsel as the Court may determine in the Reorganization Proceeding, shall be reimbursed for their reasonable expenses incurred, and shall receive reasonable compensation for their services rendered, in the Equity, Bankruptcy and Reorganization Proceedings and otherwise in connection with the Plan, as may be determined by the Court in the Reorganization Proceeding. Said amounts shall be paid in cash; provided, however, that the New Company may, in lieu of payment in cash, offer Twenty-Year 6% Sinking Fund Debentures, First Preferred Stock, Second Preferred Stock or new Common Stock, to parties in interest, depositaries, committees or other representatives of creditors or stockholders, and the attorneys or agents of any of the foregoing and of the Debtor, as compensation for their services and reimbursement for expenses, if those entitled thereto will accept such compensation and the Court finds the same to be reasonable.

XII. UNDERWRITING

It is expected that, prior to final confirmation of the Plan, arrangements will be made with responsible parties for the underwriting of the subscriptions by the stockholders of the Debtor to the New Securities under the Warrants to be issued pursuant to Article V of the Plan.

The Board of Directors may cause the New Company to enter into an agreement for such underwriting with such parties and upon such terms and conditions as it may determine with the approval of the Court in the Reorganization Proceeding.

XIII. MODIFICATION OF PLAN

Changes and modifications in the Plan may be made in the manner provided in Section 77B of the Bankruptcy Act, subject to any right of withdrawal approved by the Court which any creditors, stockholders or other parties in interest may have under any agreement and subject to any other right of withdrawal which may be given by the Court by order or decree.

XIV. NOTICES UNDER THE PLAN

Wherever notice shall be required or permitted to be given to creditors or stockholders under or pursuant to the Plan, such notice shall be given to all creditors, stockholders and parties in interest by publication once in each week for two successive weeks in The New York Times, New York Herald-Tribune, New York Daily News-Record, Chicago Tribune and Los Angeles Times, and in such other manner (if any) as the Court may direct.

XV. STATEMENTS CONTAINED IN PLAN

The statements contained in this Plan, in the attached Schedules and in the Introductory Statement have been compiled from sources believed to be reliable. Certain of them are necessarily approximate or estimates or assumptions, and none is to be considered as a representation.

No estimate, statement, explanation or suggestion contained in the Plan, in the Introductory Statement, in the attached Schedules or in any circular issued or which may hereafter be issued by the Debtor or the New Company, or by any of their officers, or by any committee representing stockholders or any class of creditors of the Debtor, or by any depositary, or by any one else, is intended or is to be accepted as a warranty or representation or as a condition of acceptance of the Plan; and, except with the approval of the Court in the Reorganization Proceeding, no defect or error shall release any creditor or stockholder of the Debtor accepting the Plan or affect or release any acceptance

SCHEDULE B

Claims Filed for Indeterminate Amounts

American Tri-Ergon Corporation

This is a claim for an accounting of profits for alleged infringement of a patent relating to the manufacture of sound films, the claimant having obtained an adjudication of the validity of its patent and of infringement by the Debtor in the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit. Certiorari has been granted by the Supreme Court of the United States to review said decision. This claim may be very substantial, but it is impossible to forecast the amount, and it is the opinion of the Debtor's legal department that, if the claim is finally sustained, the Debtor may be successful in asserting a right to indemnification.

First National Bank of Seattle

This claim is for $88,456.05 plus an unspecified amount and is in respect of a guaranty of a lease on the Paramount Theatre, Seattle, Wash. A settlement has been arranged with the committee representing holders of bonds issued in respect of the property, but the consummation of the settlement awaits completion of legal proceedings in Seattle.

Joseph P. Bickerton

This claim is on account of royalties on the picture, "Dance of Life," the aggregate amount of recovery in respect of which is estimated at not exceeding $1,000.

Jesse L. Lasky

This claim was filed for $282,000 plus an indeterminate amount on account of an employment contract between the claimant and the Debtor.

State of New York

Two tax claims were filed for indeterminate amounts and are believed to be duplicated by other claims filed for specified amounts.

Isidore A. Simon and Jennie C. MacMahon, as executors of the estate of Will MacMahon

This claim is asserted on account of alleged violation of copyright, and while the amount of any recovery is expected to be small, it is expected that the claim will be settled on a basis involving a release of all liability of the Debtor.

thereof or release or affect any payment made or action taken pursuant thereto. Reference is hereby made to the statement preceding the Plan, defining the meaning of the various terms as used in the Plan, in the attached Schedules and in the Introductory Statement.

Dated, New York, N. Y., November 28, 1934.

Robert Wilby Undergoes Operation in Atlanta

Robert Wilby, theatre executive, is at the St. Joseph Hospital, Atlanta, recovering from an operation performed last week. Oscar A. Morgan, Paramount district manager, underwent an operation at the same hospital this week.

Comerford Roosevelt Guest

M. E. Comerford, Pennsylvania theatre circuit head, was a weekend guest of President Roosevelt at Warm Springs, Ga., last week, with Frank C. Walker, former Comerford executive.

			Less: Suggested New Reserves, as above.....	14,000,000.00	13,426,456.01
					$149,724,338.55

The above balance sheet utilizes in the main information furnished by the accounting staff of the Debtor and its subsidiaries, and is without audit. Assets are reflected at book figures without regard to realizable values, except as stated above. Items of good will have been excluded from the above balance sheet. The above balance sheet, in which suggested new reserves are reflected, has been prepared only for the purposes of the proposal of the Plan in the Reorganization Proceeding and is not binding upon the Board of Directors in establishing the balance sheet of the New Company.

Accounts of Canadian Companies are stated in Canadian dollars converted into same number of U. S. dollars.

The above balance sheet assumes that the claims against the Debtor (which, as stated in the Introductory Statement to the Plan, have been filed in the Bankruptcy Proceeding and/or Reorganization Proceeding for amounts aggregating $297,702,162.37, exclusive of claims for indeterminate amounts and exclusive of such claims as may be filed after November 28, 1934) will be so reduced, either by negotiation or by litigation, that the aggregate amount of Priority Claims, General Claims, Old Debentures, Old Bank Debt and other claims dealt with under Article III of the Plan and which are ultimately treated on a parity with General Claims (including interest to January 1, 1935 to the extent provided in the Plan, but excluding claims for indeterminate amounts at the time the Plan is finally confirmed) will not exceed $55,000,000. To the extent that such assumption is not realized, the claims against the estate will be correspondingly increased; to the extent that a greater reduction is obtained, the claims against the estate will be correspondingly reduced; and in either case adjustment will be required in the interest of Common Stock in the estate. Contingent liabilities of subsidiary companies are not reflected.

No deductions have been made in "Cash on hand and in banks" on account of cash payments subsequent to September 29, 1934 in connection with settlement of claims.

The Bank Debt and interest thereon have been excluded as liabilities of subsidiaries and are included only in "Claims Against the Estate."

*The remaining claims to be dealt with under Article III of the Plan (except the G. B. Bonds and Debentures which are carried on the books as obligations of a subsidiary in receivership) are included in the above balance sheet as liabilities of subsidiaries under their appropriate headings at the amount at which they are reflected on the books, viz.:

Old Broadway Bonds	$9,834,862.19	Jacksonville, Florida, Mortgage	$ 596,351.13
Paramount Land Corporation Notes.....	925,674.15	Long Island Studio Mortgage.....	1,035,361.79

As the Paramount Land Corporation Notes are reflected in the above balance sheet among liabilities and subsidiaries, the claim thereon has not been included in the balance sheet among the "Claims against the Estate"; as provided in Article III of the Plan, cash payments aggregating $131,033.03 are to be made and the claim in respect of the Notes will entitle the holder to receive New Securities in the same amount as a holder of a General Claim for $780,000, which New Securities are to be held in trust for Paramount Land Corporation by the holder of the Notes but as further security for the new notes of Paramount Land Corporation to be issued in exchange for such Notes. Adding these amounts to the claims reflected in the above balance sheet results in a total of "Claims to be paid in cash" of $5,456,164.35 and a total of other claims of $55,000,000. Included in the claims reflected in the balance sheet, however, are five claims aggregating $212,812.41, which are also obligations of subsidiary or affiliated companies.

The above balance sheet utilizes in the main information furnished by the accounting staff of the Debtor and its subsidiaries, and is without audit. Assets are reflected at book figures without regard to realizable values, except as stated above. Items of good will have been excluded from the above balance sheet. The above balance sheet, in which suggested new reserves are reflected, has been prepared only for the purposes of the proposal of the Plan in the Reorganization Proceeding and is not binding upon the Board of Directors in establishing the balance sheet of the New Company. As stated in the Plan, the question of abandonment or other disposition of certain assets has been left for later consideration; the above balance sheet, accordingly, does not reflect changes in corporate structure or in properties since September 29, 1934, except as specifically contemplated by the Plan.

Accounts of Canadian Companies are stated in Canadian dollars converted into same number of U. S. dollars.

The above balance sheet assumes that the claims against the Debtor (which, as stated in the Introductory Statement to the Plan, have been filed in the Bankruptcy Proceeding and/or Reorganization Proceeding for amounts aggregating $297,702,162.37, exclusive of claims for indeterminate amounts and exclusive of such claims as may be filed after November 28, 1934) will be so reduced, either by negotiation or litigation (1) that the following claims dealt with under Article III of the Plan will constitute liabilities of subsidiaries only and in the following amounts:

New Broadway Bonds, with accrued interest...	$ 9,091,580.94	Jacksonville, Florida, Mortgage.....	$ 596,351.13

and (2) that the aggregate amount of Priority Claims, General Claims, Old Debentures, Old Bank Debt and other claims dealt with under Article III of the Plan and which are ultimately treated on a parity with General Claims (including interest to January 1, 1935, to the extent provided in the Plan, but excluding claims for indeterminate amounts at the time the Plan is finally confirmed) will not exceed $55,000,000. To the extent that such assumption is not realized, the amount of New Debentures and First Preferred Stock will be correspondingly increased; to the extent that a greater reduction is obtained, the amounts of such Debentures and First Preferred Stock will be correspondingly reduced; and in either case adjustment will be required in the interest of the Common Stock.

Contingent liabilities of subsidiary companies are not reflected. No deductions have been made in "Cash on hand and in banks" on account of cash payments made between September 29, 1934 and the date as of which the Plan will be consummated, in connection with settlement of claims. The amount "Cash on hand and in banks" shown in the above balance sheet reflects, among other things, the receipt of $6,441,805.70 pursuant to exercise of subscription warrants, or underwriting of subscription, and the payment of $5,175,131.32 on account of the New Bank Debt and $2,500,000 of administration and reorganization expenses. To the extent that such expenses paid in cash exceed $2,500,000 the "Cash on hand and in banks" will be decreased, and to the extent that such expenses so paid are less than that amount, the "Cash on hand and in banks" will be increased, in either case with an adjustment in the interest of the Common Stock.

These amounts are exclusive of such New Securities as may be issued pursuant to Articles X, XI or XII of the Plan and are exclusive of $390,000 of New Debentures and 3,900 shares of First Preferred Stock to be issued and held in trust for Paramount Land Corporation by the holder of the Paramount Land Corporation Notes but as additional security for the new notes, such notes being included among liabilities of subsidiaries in the above balance sheet. Included in the claims reflected in the balance sheet, however, are five claims aggregating $212,812.41, which are also obligations of subsidiary or affiliated companies.

By F. H. RICHARDSON

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 251.—(A) How may the projectionist overcome the evil of keystone effect to the extent of making the sides of the picture parallel? (B) In just what way is keystone effect accompanied by tendency toward out-of-focus effect? (C) Just what would you try out in an effort to overcome out-of-focus effect due to projection angle? (D) If a new theatre is being designed and the exhibitor asked your advice, what maximum projection angle would you approve?

Answer to Question No. 245

Bluebook School Question No. 245 was: (A) Is there any real objection to location of a motor-generator in a room immediately adjoining the projection room? (B) Name such objections as might obtain against location of a motor-generator set in the main projection room. (C) Should frame of motor-generator set be grounded? If so, how and why? (D) What would you consider as the best method of eliminating noise and vibration in installing a motor-generator set? (E) Is it important that a horizontal type of motor-generator set be perfectly level endwise?

Quite a few sent satisfactory answers, though some of them might have been a bit more elaborate as to details. (The following sent satisfactory answers to Question No. 244, but too late: C. E. Wainscott; J. L. Prindley and C. F. Allerton; F. M. Langley.) The satisfactory answers to No. 245 were sent by D. Danielson; S. Evans and C. Rau; A. F. Sprafke; R. J. Arntson; H. Edwards; C. Oldham; C. E. Wainscott; G. E. Doe; J. Wentworth; D. Ferguson; G. A. Artley; T. Van Valkenburg; L. M. and C. B. Traxler; D. Lally and F. Ferguson; R. and K. Wells; D. Thatcher; F. L. Saylor and G. N. Guidotti; N. L. Haynes and A. Richardson; S. Johnson and E. Hodson; T. Danielson and L. M. Goss; R. Davis, J. Frazier, G. B. Lantree and F. D. Ormie; N. L. Simms; R. G. Crews and T. T. Davidson; R. Geddings and L. Grant; B. N. Somers; F. H. and L. Klar; F. Harlow and G. Harrison; P. and L. Felt; P. L. McIntosh; T. Turk; D. T. Bennett; G. E. Osborn; C. B. Murray and R. Crawford; D. L. Sinklow; D. Breaston and H. Haber; D. Goldberg and L. Hutch; O. Thum and I. D. Ackerley; D. Stellegos and G. Wayne; C. Mellinger and H. Pitchkey; F. L. Benton and F. L. Dodson; B. R. and M. Thaller; L. Thomas and N. N. Boyd; T. N. Onby; G. Thompson; T. Morris and D. L. Danielson; L. I. Miner; H. Hughes and E. Mantol; M. F. Fallon; P. N. Manners; D. Johnson;

B. T. Caldwell; L. Howell and W. R. Griever.

We will look at three answers to Section (A). S. Evans and C. Rau say: "There is no real objection to locating an M. G. set in a room immediately adjoining the projection room, provided the floor of same be solid enough to not be affected by vibration, and so built that the noise of the set will not be heard outside the room."

D. Danielson says: "The advantages of such location outweigh any possible objections to it. Noise may be very effectively eliminated (usually it is possible to do so, if necessary) by strengthening the supporting structure to support one or more sets."

F. H. S. and P. Dabley say:

"We would consider a real objection that is much more than counterbalanced by benefits derived to be no really real objection, and that is the case in this instance. The objections to such location (if objections is the correct term) are:

"(1) A heavy set or sets must usually be hoisted to considerable height. (2) Since two or even one set has considerable weight, the supporting building structure beams must be heavier than might otherwise be necessary. (3) The mounting or support of the set or sets must be such as will absorb all vibration and prevent any noise from being communicated to the structure of the building or to the projection room. (4) Possibility of show stoppage when in one-man room a storm trips the circuit breaker one or more times.

"As against this is the highly beneficial effect of the set or sets being constantly under the direct supervision of the projectionist (we assume that otherwise the set would be located at some distance), which is of course essential to the set's being kept in the best possible condition."

(B) H. Edwards says: "The vibration, of which there always is some, added to that produced by the other machinery of projection. The added noise—not much, but always some. The amount of space occupied in projection rooms, many of which already are over-crowded. The dust stirred up by constant action in the main room, plus the dust from the arc, some of which may, if the lamphouse ventilation be not what it might and should be, get into the air and settle on the commutator of the generator, with tendency to cause excessive wear. The possibility of film coming into contact with the armature or the commutator, with possibly disastrous results. The fact that high speed parts would have a tendency to keep the air filled with dust, some of which would of course settle on the film, causing minute scratches in the photographic emulsion."

(C) A. F. Sprafke says: "While the code does not require that motor-generators having an output of less than 150 volts be grounded, grounding is nevertheless a very cheap safety device and one well worth installing. If motor and generator rest on a common base, the usual procedure is to clamp a copper wire under the holding nut of one of the anchor bolts, and attach its other end to a water pipe, being careful to make good electrical contact."

(D) G. E. Doe says: "I consider spring suspension or support as best for the reason that while rubber (oil resisting), or cork or hardwood planks will do the trick for a time, bye and bye, under constant heavy compression, while the rubber or cork perhaps do not exactly solidify, they nevertheless do lose a portion of their efficiency in absorbing vibration, though as to loss of effectiveness in insulating sound I am not so sure.

"Another excellent method is to mount a set on hardwood planks somewhat longer than the set—say 18 inches longer at each end—and lay the ends of the planks on concrete or wooden piers of sufficient height to raise the set high enough to be convenient to work with. The wood absorbs all vibration, insulates sound and will last a term of years. Their replacement is not expensive and is quite easily accomplished."

(E) T. Van Valkenburg says: "Theoretically our Bluebook is quite correct in advocating a perfectly level set for horizontal type M. G. sets. In practice, however, a slight deviation seems to have little effect in stoppage of armature float. However, it cannot be denied that too much out-of-level is bad, and since perfect level does no manner of harm, I guess the Bluebook is right and it is important that the set be perfectly level."

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

*An international association of showmen meeting weekly
in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress*

DRASTIC REMEDIES NEEDED

Under the heading of what is jestingly known as "publicity" the studios incredibly continue to allow the exposure of the industry's trade secrets to the startled gaze of the reading public. Matters having little or no bearing whatever upon the exhibition of pictures are dragged by the tail into print and so publicized that unfavorable reaction is immediate.

Recently, the eminent New York Times devoted generous space to the findings gathered by a major studio which had canvassed a number of managers for information on the draw of various stars, pictures that had succeeded or failed, etc. Yet, what should have been trade data and held in confidence was allowed to fall into the hands of a newspaper for general reader consumption.

A friend of the family popped over a few evenings back and during the conversation remarked that as most of So-and-So's latest had to be remade, the very popular star referred to would no doubt be a flop in her new picture. Queried as to the source of the tip, friend-of-the-family confessed to picking it up in some daily chatter column or fan magazine. Patiently we explained that certain sequences in the feature had been re woven satisfactorily and that the trade paper reviews were entirely favorable.

But the young lady scoffed at what she termed our alibi and no doubt has determined not to see the picture as will, it is reasonable to assume, many others who also believe what they read in the papers.

What with one thing and another, the theatreman today has a tough enough time of it to bring in the grosses without being further penalized by dubious publicity emanating from various studio sources. It has long gotten to the point where anything even remotely connected with motion pictures is grist to the voracious publicity mill.

To compete successfully with each other and with the news headlines for reader attention, the army of word-peddlers on the Hollywood front readily makes mountains out of mole hills. And for this reason too much of the chatter columns and fan magazine stuff harms rather than helps the box office.

The production difficulties of the motion picture studio are no more the business of outsiders than the manufacturing problems of the automobile industry. But, as Terry Ramsaye observed, while newspapers carefully refrain from any discussion, for instance, of new car demerits, editors take for granted the right to say what they blooming well please about the business of the screen.

For this sorry state of affairs, the industry is itself entirely to blame. Just why the studios permit the dissemination of material inimical to their own interests is beyond us. Drastic remedies long overdue are in immediate order and regulations intended to discourage promiscuous and negative publicity must be adhered to religiously.

The constipations and headaches of the motion picture industry are too much in the public prints.

MANAGER'S BLOOD BOILS

Elsewhere in this issue of the HERALD is printed a communication from Manager Johnny Jones, of the Southern Theatre, in the prosperous and hospitable city of Columbus, Ohio. Among other things, this showman is entirely critical of our efforts in the manager's behalf, stating in part:

"... the paper's attitude in not trying to put more of an effort forth to get us a day off once a week when the NRA was merely calling us executives, got my blood up."

Well, let's look at the record.

From August 12, 1933, up to and including November 24, 1934, the editorial page of this department has spoken up vigorously for the alleviation of managers' working conditions in exactly 31 different weekly issues. Not only have we stressed the necessity of a regular day off each week but we have campaigned also for more equitable remuneration. And, Mr. Jones, we shall continue to plead the theatreman's cause at every opportunity.

As a possible check against the blood-rising to which Mr. Jones confesses, may we prescribe regular weekly readings of MOTION PICTURE HERALD—including, of course, Managers' Round Table Club section?

Under a Pittsburgh date line, the New York World-Telegram reports the conclusions reached anent juvenile crime at a convention there of some society or other for the prevention of something. One speaker blamed motion pictures, another radio, and a third, politics.

Well, maybe they should have tossed for it.

SHOWMEN'S LOBBY LAUGHS!

Lindstaedt-McCreary Plant 'Bundling' Gag

The creator of this cartoon is F. Gordon, Times Square Theatre, New York.

Puts Radio Station In Theatre Lobby

For the most part, fronts and lobbies of closed theatres are used, if at all, to advertise attractions at other local houses of the same circuit. E. E. Whitaker, City Manager, Atlanta Lucas and Jenkins houses now reports another slant in which the lobby of the closed downtown Georgia was utilized to put over "Gift of Gab" at the Fox, situated some distance out of the business district.

Whitaker sold radio station WJTL on moving the broadcasting apparatus to the lobby of the Georgia, and for this purpose a double thickness of glass was erected for passersby to look through, at the same time serving to keep out street noises. Theatre carpets, furniture and back drop completed the layout, picture and theatre credits carried on the drop. Box office served as the control room.

Broadcasting continued from early to late with regular programs, announcers at every 15-minute break stating the entertainment was coming from the "Gift of Gab" station, including location and mention of picture.

To be expected were the continuous throngs out front and when the same crowds remained too long, curtains over the glass were pulled down. So successful was this stunt that the station continued the bally until the next week, and will remain until the house is reopened.

Lobby Becomes Radio Station

Whitaker recommends the gag even for an open theatre where lobby space permits, and also suggests this in the inside foyer in advance of any big attraction that can stand the buildup.

Astrom Arranges Contests On "Drummond" in Sweden

Carrying out the suggestion in the "Bulldog Drummond" pressbook, Harold Astrom, United Artists manager in Stockholm, Sweden, tied up with popular fan magazine there and ran portraits of ten leading Swedish stars with features mortised out and finger-print of star inserted in space. From these clues readers were supposed to guess names of film personalities and silver cup was awarded winner. Criminal-technical laboratory in Stockholm cooperated in forming contest.

Tieup with department store resulted in garbled-sentence contest using sentences from dialogue of film. Contestants had to place answers in special box in store.

Grove Offers Special Tickets to Students

H. D. Grove at the Fort Theatre, Rock Island, Ill., issues a special student ticket with copy reading "This ticket when presented at the box office will admit any student for ten cents between the hours of 12.45 and 5.00 on Saturday at the etc., etc." These are distributed round town.

On "Monte Cristo" Grove contacted newspaper and ran a want ad contest. For each three time want ad insertion, one free ticket was given, for each six, two were presented, and he reports good results with the stunt.

Long before the showing of "Pursuit of Happiness" Managers Karl Lindstaedt, Paramount, Austin, and Wm. C. McCreary, State, Hibbing, Minn., decided that the picture could be best sold with a laugh campaign. With this in mind, a few weeks ahead special previews were held for the Mayor, Chief of Police, newspaper editors and leading furniture dealer of both towns.

After the showings the group were persuaded that what the towns needed was a large sized laugh and with the approval and cooperation of these officials the following teaser campaign was conceived and executed:

Two column blind display ads with no mention of the theatre were run advertising for a young couple to take part in a public demonstration of "bundling" on a platform planted in a prominent spot. Newspapers ran follow-up stories on this.

The next day similar ad and stories were published and two days later copy in another display ad invited the town to come and witness the show. Then the snapper the day before the demonstrations when Karl and Bill called off the whole business, stating that the City Council had refused permission, but that those readers believing in the revival of the much discussed bundling could see how it was done in the picture, incidentally, the first time in the campaign that the attraction and theatres were mentioned. The fourth and final ad was a regular theatre display topped by further copy on the gag.

The furniture dealers tied in by running window cards, asking for bundling beds and boards for display purposes and also demonstrated the ancient art (see photo) with two dummies and a bundling board between them.

The lighted candle signal sequence in the picture was also utilized by Lindstaedt, who, the night before, planted lighted candles in different store windows with bundling copy. From all reports, everything went over as planned, everyone enjoying the huge laugh which reflected itself at the ticket windows.

Mule Gags Feature "Flirtation" Drive

The natural desire of showmen to discreetly chisel in on big parades or any other widely publicized outdoor event was fulfilled on the "Flirtation Walk" campaign at the New York Strand. Hundreds of thousands being assembled along Broadway to witness the annual Macy toy parade, the Warner exploiters managed to parade a bannered mule led by a man in cadet uniform along the line of march an hour before the procession started.

What with a number of other street stunts, the mule was kept quite busy, for instance preceding a parade of American Legion members in uniform who marched to the theatre, Post band giving concert in front of theatre. Lobby was in keeping with the color in the picture, outstanding being title in red, white and blue flasher lights.

Tying in with the Army-Navy game in Philadelphia, special displays were reported promoted for the first time at the Pennsylvania station, and in a tieup with the New York Central Lines, stations within a radius of 25 miles were posted with cards showing scenes from the picture, copy mentioning that picture was screened at West Point on the Central Lines.

Numerous stores went for the regional color idea for neckwear window tieups, accompanying photo illustrating how effectively this hookin was made. Saturday previous to opening, all local football games were covered on a candy tiein, with giveaways distributed in imprinted envelopes.

RKO Radio Goes Streamline In "Silver Streak" Press Book

Streamline and silver seem to be the themes of the press book on "Silver Streak," RKO Radio's streamline train story. Silver imprinting has been used profusely throughout to emphasize certain tieups, and as exploitation suggestions, the names of all equipment suppliers to the new Burlington train have been listed along with their specialties for exhibitor information.

The railroad of course is in on the campaign with a half-sheet poster tying in the picture, and other hookups mentioned include cookies, razor blades, carpet sweepers, etc. Additional advance publicity sent out by Leon Bamberger of Ned E. Depinet's office included letter to railway officials and department heads, synopses of story and replica of railroad tieup half-sheet.

Home Stretch—

The final lap in the 1934 Quigley Awards competitions is being hotly contested. While the judges—Messrs. Harry Arthur, Edward Golden and Gordon White—are pondering over the merits of the November campaigns, December entrants are setting themselves for the biggest effort in the last month of the current year's Quigley project.

Showmen everywhere are cooperating to make December—the bell lap—the featured month as far as number and quality of campaigns are concerned. Loew's, Mullin and Pinanski, RKO, Famous Players Canadian, and Warner Brothers are a few of the leading circuits furnishing competition, as well as independents from all over who refuse to lag behind.

Over three weeks remain until the gong rings—plenty of time for every showman everywhere to get aboard on the twelfth and last lap of the Big Race. Theatre men are again advised that entries are invited for the Quigley Awards from all parts of the world on any product, major or independent, domestic or foreign.—A-MIKE.

Henderson Promotes Trips On "Student" Essay Contest

An essay contest did the business for Leo Henderson on "Student Tour" at the Idaho, Twin Falls, Idaho, the subject being "Do Good Students Make the Best Athletes." The idea received cordial cooperation from the various school officials, who encouraged pupils to participate and papers gave it a nice break.

Principals of high schools in nearby towns were contacted and Leo reports that for the first time in four years, the local school superintendent allowed theatre advertising in the different classes. So strongly was it sold that a number of English teachers used the contest question as a class subject.

Main prizes were two round trips to Salt Lake City and through the cooperation of Manager Ray Hendry, Capitol Theatre, Salt Lake City, hotel accommodations were promoted for the winners, who also were guests at a college football game. Other prizes included 30 days' theatre passes.

High Coverage Reported In Boston Suburban Papers

Among other effective things Harry Brown, Jr., does to publicize the Paramount and Fenway Theatres, Boston, are regular stories in his suburban press, this member reporting an average of 85 papers out of 125 using his stuff.

Locally, Harry recently landed 420 free advertising lines in one Boston paper on "I Sell Anything," ad including shot of Pat O'Brien from the picture pointing at a number of questions relating to ads on classified page on "where can you buy, etc." Answers were found in the want columns and first ten sending in correct answers received passes.

For "Lemon Drop Kid," free candy was promoted in imprinted bags for distribution at theatres and window cards on the book planted in prominently located book stores.

Helps Needy With "Mrs. Wiggs" Barrel

The good neighbor press book barrel stunt worked very well for Harry Botwick on "Mrs. Wiggs" at the State, Portland, Maine, Harry selling local paper on finding 25 neediest families and local Lions Club to cooperate. Red Cross officials assisted in locating the needy families.

Twenty-five groceries and markets were then promoted to place a "Mrs. Wiggs' Friendly Barrel" on their premises, the accompanying photo showing one of the barrels and cooperating merchants. The idea was followed through thoroughly so that the needy families received the food, the extra publicity and word of mouth advertising.

The State Teachers Association was holding its annual convention in Portland a few days ahead of the opening, and permission was secured to distribute heralds at the convention halls.

Picture was tied into children's reading hour at public library, where announcements were made, stills and one sheets posted. The date was also mentioned in all public school classees. Ushers in costume, special showing for orphans, poor children and inmates of all institutions were the stunts featured.

featured and displayed on counters and in windows. Local beauty parlor plugged the Gaynor permanent wave and radio company printed no cost circulars for distribution at theatre inviting bearer to visit factory and possibly win radio, reverse side carrying theatre copy.

Helson Bets Merchant On Election Returns

R. S. Helson, Dickinson Theatre, Beloit, Kan., got a lot of publicity on a stunt he worked for "Peck's Bad Boy" by betting one of the leading merchants on the election returns. Loser had to push the winner through streets in wheelbarrow (see photo) at busiest hour Saturday, and it might be noted that Helson won the bet. Barrels strung along at intervals carried picture name.

For "Mrs. Wiggs," Helson sponsored an ad writing contest in local daily offering cash prizes for best one submitted and passes for next 10.

Cartoon Drawings Feature "Navy" Front

Manager Bernstein, Loew's Yonge Street, Toronto, as a change of pace constructed a cartoon front on "Navy" caricatures of stars being used instead of the conventional blowups. Men in uniform from bannered sound truck distributed heralds, announcer plugging date on P. A.

For street bally two girls in sailor outfits gave life savers and a "Cagney Special Sure Tip" was passed out at the races which, when unfolded revealed "Navy" copy.

Coley Distributes Passes To Honor Roll Students

Harry Coley, assistant manager at the Liberty in Chickamauga, Ga., grabbed a little good-will for his theatre on "Peck's Bad Boy" by contacting the PTA and offering passes for a special school children's matinee to all honor students at local schools.

Tickets were distributed at chapel exercises with nice plug for theatre. Coley plans to make this a monthly feature.

Bordered by over 60 face cuts of stars from the six companies with whom he has contracted for his new product, a full page ad in his local press was taken by Charles F. Truran, Park, Meadville, Pa.

Copy was headed "Most Important Announcement in Meadville's Theatre History," followed with the listings of the featured pictures under the headings of each company. All booked short subjects were listed with the newsreels also given a plug.

Taxi Drivers Distribute "Agent" Theatre Programs

A special eight-foot still display was planted in a music store window by Don Nichols, Broadway Theatre, Charlotte, N. C., for "British Agent" carrying punch copy with title, etc. Bookmarks distributed by public libraries, street car cards, fountain menus and theatre programs handed out by taxis to passengers, in addition to classified ad tieup were part of Don's campaign.

On "Navy" entire house staff arrayed in naval uniforms with front covered with flags and banners. A special one sheet display was given by the U. S. Navy in the Post Office, door knob hangers used profusely, tire covers and radio announcements promoted.

Photographer Takes Free Photos

Bernard Seaman, Ogontz Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa., tied up with a local photographer on "Now and Forever" and carried ad in house program reading "Have you a little Shirley Temple in your home? We'll be glad to take her picture absolutely free." Photos were taken two evenings on the mezzanine.

STOCKING PARADE. Dave Schiller, of Loew's Grand, New York City, collected the crowds with these live models behind the mast windows displaying stockings to sell "Dames". Note snappy theatre ad.

They're Still Stepping Fast on "Dames"

Burgess Waltmon, at the Orpheum, Fulton, Ky., promoted a broadcast from a leading station in Memphis in which the song hits were plugged by a name orchestra and included in the broadcast were frequent mentions of the date in Fulton, history of the town and other local news. Burgess built this up in advance and secured complete listener response in his town.

In Camden, N. J.—

A squad of attractive gals in shorts and blouses put on the roller skate street stunt for Manager Joe Murdock, at the Stanley, passing out heralds for this purpose and visiting prominent stores which carried notices in ads. Girls also participated in auto parade in new model cars promoted from Dodge dealer. Sound float carried feds to race track where plug was also put over. At City Hall, with assistance of police chief, gals cut loose balloons with passes.

Among the effective newspaper stunts put over by Murdock was the presentation at local hospital of a gold spoon to the first girl baby born on the opening day, picture breaking for sizeable space.

In Jersey City—

The two Bobs—Paskow and Deitch—co-operated on a number of bell ringers, stand-outs being titles painted in bright yellow and red on sidewalks in seven foot letters, and three 24s together in about a dozen different spots, incidentally the first time this unique posting has been done locally. Also effective was red-inking front page of local paper, copies distributed by 20 newsboys in trains, busses and at street intersections.

And in Bayonne, N. J.—

Jules Fields obtained a holdover business at the DeWitt with a flock of fast clicking stunts embracing many of the national and other tieups. Star stills were distributed in five-and-tens, hosiery stores handed out special pamphlets, newsboys wore imprinted aprons two weeks ahead, 24 seet on lobby floor, ushers, wearing medallions and electric changeable sign, promoted, aided in bringing the turnaway business.

To Sharon, Pa.—

Where Manager T. F. Whyte, at the Columbia, promoted his paper for front page art and story showing Dick Powell and Ruby Keeler reading copies of the Sharon daily, captions including title and theatre date. Paper also ran press book guessing contest. Whyte made tieup with Postal for distribution of miniature wires and also was able to tiein with local Dollar Day promoting use of poles in front of stores for theatre banners.

And to Brockton, Mass.—

Where Manager W. W. Adams, assisted by Ed Cushman at the Colonial promoted his fire department to supply bannered truck for bally of local girls. Vehicle was old one, not in active use, thus Adams was able to secure permission to borrow it, local dealer supplying driver gratis.

Girls also built up advance at theatre and one of the young ladies was planted in window of prominent store demonstrating hosiery. As Bus Berkeley, Warner dance director, formerly resided in Brockton, newspaper was promoted to run guessing contest built around a Berkeley dance routine, Adams stating that many of the answers were displayed at the Warner Exchange in Boston.

Ornstein Presents Two Smart Slants

Two well working exploitations, which he states are original in the form they are presented, come from Manager Ed Ornstein, Vernon, Mt. Vernon, Ky. The first concerns a tieup with the local school and the second is an effective substitute for the Amateur Night stunt.

The school tieup is what Ornstein calls a "Young Citizens' Club," for which he has membership cards printed and distributed to the individual teachers. Each Friday afternoon the teachers pass out the cards to the students who have made passing grades in three-fourths of their studies and whose attendance and deportment have been normal.

Students so selected then present these cards at the theatre on Saturday morning at 10 o'clock and are admitted at reduced prices. They are put under the regular school discipline and are taught how to conduct a regular club meeting. Outside speakers are arranged who give pep talks and discuss various subjects of interest. After all business is transacted a picture selected by the local P. T. A., Woman's Club and Ornstein is presented.

Amateur Radio Broadcast

Under the above title Ed is putting on his own broadcasts, the material being the radio dramatizations from the various press books. Amateurs are chosen to portray the characters from the stage over a public address system, the stunt usually put on a week ahead of whatever dated picture is so publicized.

P. A. is centered on stage under a spot, amateur performers backstage out of view of audience. After the dramatization, Ornstein announces the picture and date, then puts on a voting contest for the best performance—the cast still being unknown. Passes are given the winners. This gag does away with the difficulties of the conventional amateur night, brings in a lot of diversified talent and is an out of the ordinary plug for the coming picture. Ed says the cash outlay is small.

The two above described ideas have been doing very well for this Round Tabler and he is kind enough to invite correspondence from others of the membership who wish further details, especially regarding the school club in which many other slants go to make up the routine.

GOOD-WILL

Invites New Families

H. E. Wilton, Strand, Hamilton, Canada, through local service organization, secures weekly list of new family arrivals in his city. To each family a letter of welcome is mailed enclosing a courtesy pass for two, letter also plugging theatre in a dignified manner. Wilton reports this as effective, meeting new arrivals personally whenever possible and, in many cases, letters of appreciation are received with guests becoming regular patrons.

Courtesies to Groups

J. M. Schoepel also finds effective invitations to individual groups, organizations, leagues, teams, underprivileged children, etc., to certain performances when the program affords an especial appeal to the specific group. In many cases, valuable publicity is forthcoming.

Better Films Council Tieup

Verne Touchett, Fond du Lac, Fond du Lac, Wis., through a quick booking had five days to put over "One Night of Love" and got in touch immediately with six prominent women, who were asked to compile an invitation list to a special preview. Educators, clergymen, officers of all civic clubs, members of better films council, etc., were invited, and before preview, officers of latter organization spoke, asking each in audience to tell a dozen friends about the picture.

Touchett reports their promises were on the level as receipts showed. Ministers praised the picture before their congregations, president of Catholic Women's Council announced it at meeting night prior to opening, prominent women spoke on it via radio and school principals had it announced in all classes.

Lunch Club Tieup

E. R. Brennan, Fox, Marinette, Wis., sends along newspaper clipping describing stunt staged on his stage recently at noon before house opened. Brennan invited local Lions Club to hold weekly luncheon on stage and gave interesting talk on production of sound pictures and how they are reproduced at theatres. Also spoke on importance of correct booking, etc., etc.

After lunch, group was taken on tour of theatre, including visit to projection room and explanation of equipment. Showing of newsreels and other shorts concluded program. Brennan states the club men were much impressed and the stunt added immeasurably to the theatre's good will.

MISCELLANEOUS . . .

Click Summons Novelty

B. V. Warren, Rialto, Denison, Tex., put out a summons or citation, an exact replica of that used by local courts, principals being "State of Hysterics vs. Stepin Fetchit," signed by Judge Priest. Local cop served everyone in downtown district, and stunt landed two front page stories.

Election Throwaway

W. Horace Reese, Spruce, Philadelphia, tied his show into the election excitement with a long election throwaway headed—"don't vote Republican or Democrat until you have looked over the 'Spruce' ticket." Units of program were marked off in regular election order, and copy wound up—"Polls open 6:30 to 11 P. M. Poll tax 20 cents."

Saturday Children's Hour

Each Saturday afternoon from one to two, Louis Lamm puts on a special hour of cartoons for his juvenile attendance, and allows the youngsters to remain to see the regular show. Louis calls the gag "Children's Hour," and states it is successful in building up his kid attendance on this day.

Old Can Matinee

R. V. McGinnis, New Theatre, Russellville, Ark., broke front got quite a bit of local attention in his papers with a tieup with Chamber of Commerce on an "old can" matinee for children. Free admission was given for 15 cans, Chamber agreeing to haul away the "receipts."

Glassine Change Bags

Louie Orlove sends along a small imprinted glassine bag, copy reading, "Keep Your Money Under Cover, the Notorious Sadie Lang is coming to etc. etc." Cashier placed two nickels in each bag and gave them out at the box office with other change. For instance when a dollar bill was handed in for two 25 cent tickets, cashier returned 40 cents from the change machine and one of the envelopes.

Awning Ad Strips

Louis Stein, Stanley, Newark, N. J., suggests strips of oil cloth to fit the scalloped edges or aprons of store awnings. Strips contain attraction and theatre playdates and merchants are sold on the idea for its effectiveness in catching the eye of the passerby and attracting attention to merchandise displays. Stein reports most recent successful use of this slant on "Little Miss Marker."

Rotary Club Cooperation

Fred Souttar varies the Christmas poor show idea by tying in with members of local Rotary Club to cooperate by acting as ushers and states the clubmen had as much fun as the kids. Paper was tied in as co-sponsor on the "Empty Stocking Fund," broken toys and clothing accepted as admissions.

Children's Tire Matinee

Harold Knudsen suggests tie up with tire dealer to pay regular children admission for every old tire brought to theatre boxoffice by kids under 12, trailer, slide, heralds, etc., used to plug stunt. Harold says tires should be piled in nearby lot or on waiting trucks and not at theatre. Bob Frenzel, Knudsen's supervisor, is credited with the idea.

Dancing School Benefit

Knudsen also favors hookin with local dancing school in the form of a special show sponsored by school in which pupils and teachers sell tickets to friends, relatives, well wishers, etc. Harold says the cast show should be as large as possible, as obviously the more amateur performers, the fatter the gross. Tieup clicked well for him.

Five-and-Ten Lucky Numbers

Charlie Moyer, State, Hanover, Pa., has a permanent stunt with his McCrory store, in which several thousand numbered bags are printed each week, copy requesting holders to save bags for free tickets to theatre. Store pays for bags and plugs picture in window display, where lucky numbers are posted each Saturday morning. Charlie contributed ten passes weekly, and states results are splendid.

Store Free Ticket Angle

L. W. Bevel tied in with local furniture store on "Treasure Island" whereby for every $5 paid on account or in trade, customers received free ticket to theatre. Cards in window stressed the gag and store carried it in ads. Merchant paid for everything including theatre tickets. Bevel says this is to be recommended on any picture in situations where it can be sold.

Lawn and Vacant Lot Cutouts

Illustrated below and in first column are two ways in which Walter F. Davis, Orpheum, Fort William, Ont., uses cutouts. The Shirley Temple was made up in quantity by the house artist and planted on lawns in various parts of town. They were moved to different spots each day during the run of the picture. The "Wiggs" fence angle cutout was planted in prominent vacant lot locations.

This is a very effective stunt, reports Davis, who advises their use of most any kind of a featured attraction.

RUSSELL V. HUPP

started in showbusiness early enough, for at the age of six we hear he was a pianist in a vaudeville act. His father was a theatre orchestra musician and through him started in this game and has been at it ever since in one capacity or another. Russ toured vaudeville with RKO, Warners and Publix as theatre organist and then became assistant manager of the Temple Theatre, Mishawaka, Ind., and from there to his present assignment, manager of the Gem in Cassopolis, Mich.

WILLIAM REISER

manages the Arcadia Theatre, Pittsburgh, Pa. Bill says he went through high school and business college in his spare time and learned most of the business during his association with Bud Silverman of the Granada in Toledo and Alden Birnham at the Grand, Massillon, Ohio. Reiser tells us he looks forward to his copy of the Herald each week and he has nothing on us, because we'll look forward to his contribution each week.

OSCAR L. GRAY

is no stranger to these pages, because he's been a pretty active member since joining, but we're just getting around to welcoming him in the Club, so we hope you'll excuse the delay, Oscar. This member manages both the Colonial and Academy Theatres in Hagerstown, Md. Oscar informs us he has managed houses from Florida to the Great Lakes and owned and operated two of his own houses in Delaware until last year; he is also a member of the Variety Club.

THOMAS J. McCOY

started in as treasurer of the Russell Theatre when it was the Allen Circuit. Famous Players took them over shortly after and Tom has been with them since, now managing the Imperial at Ottawa, Canada. He is married and has two children, was born and educated in Canada and has managed three houses, the Russell, Regent and Imperial.

BILL WASH

started in show business as a house artist with Publix-Kincey, North Carolina Theatres and was promoted from that position to assistant at the Paramount Theatre, Concord, N. C. Well, Bill, we haven't had any contributions from you for our poster art page. So, we'll count on you for that and a little on your activities in the front of the house.

MAXWELL WEINBERG

house manager at the Little Theatre, Baltimore, Md., assists his brother Herman, who is also a member. Max has been feature writer and correspondent for Seven Arts Feature Syndicate interviewing motion picture personages, conducted motion picture column on Baltimore World, organized motion picture club of Baltimore to produce amateur 16 mm. films and did camera work for local newsreel. Both Max and his brother Herman have recently collaborated on a play.

VICTOR CORNEILLAC

joins us from the Empire Theatre in Trinidad, B. W. I. where he manages the house. Victor started as manager of the Empire Theatre, belonging to the British Colonial Film Exchange and was then transferred to the Paladium, same circuit where he stayed for a while and was later returned to the Empire.

MARGARET L. BROWNING

is a lady showwoman managing the Savoy Theatre in New York City and she's certainly close enough to Club headquarters to come in and make herself acquainted. Remember, your responsibility to the Club and let's hear from you.

STAN SCHIRMACHER

acting as assistant manager of the Temple Beach Theatre, Tempe, Ariz. Last year Stan worked under Red Harkins, another member at the State in Tempe which operated during the winter and this past summer was Red's partner in Arizona's only open air theatre at Tempe Beach. This is a new project and Stan tells us was "built almost entirely by the labor of my own hands."

MARTIN WADE

is the city manager of the Wade-Tex Theatres down in Gainesville, Texas and since Martin is the first member from his city to join the club, we're hopeful that we shall hear lots from him and the men under him. The State of Texas has been well represented in our pages and we look forward to the ranks swelling considerably with this new member's application.

MARTIN S. LANE

manages the Logan Theatre, Nobleville, Ind. Martin doesn't seem to have wandered far from the home fires, because he was born, educated in Indiana and managed theatres there. He started as assistant manager of the Stratford Theatre in Indianapolis and then became manager of that house, last year he was transferred and promoted to his present theatre.

WILLIAM B. SAVITS

is managing the Arcadia Theatre in Portsmouth, N. H. and was born and educated in Liverpool, England. Bill started with Paramount Publix New England Theatres as usher, chief usher, assistant manager in charge of personnel and then was put in charge of service and non-technical maintenance for the New England Theatres Operating Co. From there, Savits managed the Patio, Century Circuit house and then to his present location. With all your experience and the various places you've been we miss our guess, if you haven't something of interest to report.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Running times are those supplied by the companies. Asterisk indicates running time as made known by West Coast studio before announcement by home office in New York. Variations also may be due to local censorship deletions. Dates are 1934, unless otherwise specified. Letter in parentheses after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers.

A prediction

DAVID

will be the best-loved picture of 1935

—AND THE BEST ADVERTISED!

Watch for details of the greatest national magazine campaign in film history!

MEET "David Copperfield"

An introductory to the proudest offering in the history of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

"Farewell!" Heart-stabbing scenes between David and his mother.

David Copperfield's creator himself could hardly withhold his blessing.

"David Copperfield"—a name which spells magic to millions... a story that has cast a haze of enchantment over all who read it... now becomes a motion picture that will live long in your heart. Produced by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, it is but natural that one of its most interesting features is the authenticity of its background.

When David O. Selznick and his associates decided to make a picture of "David Copperfield" their first step was to go to England where, with Mr. Walter Dexter, internationally known Dickens' authority, they visited the scenes made famous by the original story. They photographed the house where David lived, the Hungerford Stairs leading down to the Thames near where the Micawbers lodged—Highgate, where Dora and David had their cottage—and Windsor Terrace where David lived with the Micawbers after his mother's death.

Then they went down to Putney where David and Dora were married—and out to Gravesend where David saw old Mr. Peggotty off to Australia. Then to Yarmouth, the scene of little Em'ly's tragedy. They photographed Blunderstone Rookery—the little country lane—Mrs. Copperfield's room and David's little room Blunderstone Rookery where David was born. Just one of many beloved landmarks that come to life on the screen.

IF Charles Dickens could look down at his favorite child's re-birth and know of the reverence and love with which it is being attended, we believe that next to it. Then to Dover where Aunt Betsey Trotwood lived and where poor Mr. Dick flew his kite.

Throughout the past century one great romance has lived to fascinate each new generation... "David Copperfield". An immortal among books, it comes to the screen vivid with life and romance. What love is... what lovers feel... that is the story of "David Copperfield."

Here indeed is a motion picture which justifies the prediction that it will rank among the Great and certainly will be the best loved picture of 1935—a moving and faithful adaptation of one of the great stories of all time.

Produced after two years of the most painstaking research work from an adaptation supervised by Hugh Walpole, the noted English novelist. Directed by George Cukor, who transferred "Little Women" from the pages of Louisa M. Alcott's novel, this sincere and moving dramatization is given life and beautiful realism by a notable cast of 65 including:

"Something will turn up." Touching is the friendship of Micawber (W. C. Fields) and David.

M-G-M Production Staff in England inspects Aunt Betsey Trotwood's cottage, faithfully reproduced in every detail on the screen.

WHY NOT MICKEY MOUSE?

AFTER endless studies, conferences and broodings, the authors of the Paramount Plan have come off the nest with a tentative board of directors which reads like this:

MR. GERALD BROOKS, investment executive with E. F. Hutton & Company.

MR. PERCY H. JOHNSTON, president of Chemical Bank & Trust Company.

MR. HENRY R. LUCE, editor and publisher of Time and Fortune.

MR. MAURICE NEWTON, investment executive with Hallgarten & Company.

and MR. ADOLPH ZUKOR—just a motion picture executive.

MR. DUNCAN G. HARRIS, realtor, member of Brown, Wheelock, Harris & Company.

DR. JULIUS KLEIN, business consultant, former Assistant Secretary of Commerce.

MR. CHARLES A. McCULLOCH, corporation director, including First National Bank of Chicago.

MR. FRANK A. VANDERLIP, former banker and director of many corporations,

In this array of able gentlemen there is no one person to whom one might take reasonable exception as a member of the board of directors of any corporation.

But the array itself, taken as a whole, viewed as a board, is well calculated to make Paramount stockholders and all of Paramount's army of workers and great array of exhibitor customers wonder when, if ever, what passes for management in the corporation's destiny will come to a contemplation of the fact that its future is in the amusement industry.

This board as a board savours a deal more of window dressing than any address toward the operation of a company presumed to be dedicated to the activities of production, distribution and exhibition of motion pictures.

The Paramount board presented is heavily laden with percent marks, aromatic of debentures and indentures, but the tintinnabulation of the ticker drowns all the purl of cameras and the whirr of projectors.

Paramount was built by Mr. Zukor to be a motion picture company. This industry moves on movies.

MR. KENT ON DECENCY

WITH some of the wails and complaints of sundry picture makers of assorted capacities about the restrictive pressures of the Production Code Administration yet in our ears, it is with a special interest that we discover what Mr. Sidney Kent had to say on this subject in the course of his recent visit to London.

It is reported in a leading article in The Cinema, thus, under a headline, "Fox Chief Praises Decency Campaign":

Frank appreciation of the "clean-up" of the film industry by the "Leagues of Decency" was expressed by Mr. Sidney Kent, chief of Fox, in a press interview yesterday. "Some of the films went too far. . . . I think the campaign was a very good thing for the picture business. Basically clean pictures are the only ones that the industry can afford to go for."

OUR YOUNG MILLIONS

THE other day Mr. Elmer Rice, able dramatist, announced his weariness with the stage of Broadway and his retirement therefrom because of the banalities thereof. Now arises Mr. Joseph Hergesheimer, able novelist, to say that he hates novels and would like to get a job as a newspaper columnist. Novels are, in the mind of Mr. Hergesheimer, boring.

Both Mr. Rice and Mr. Hergesheimer are very right and warranted in doing what they like about it. That, however, is no indictment of the audience for the Broadway theatre or the novel.

The great shining fact is that some men grow up and, in their maturity, weary of childish and adolescent things. But the public never grows up, never gets mature. The masses flow from the womb alike in sensory equipment, always young, always eager, always ignorant, always a market for vicarious experience. The art which purveys to them must always be telling the same story, because it is always the same organism living the same life that has to be served. To the few who have the capacity for a real maturity it all gets to be spinach—so they have to move on to other interests.

The editor of a great popular magazine, remarking on the same subject the other day, observed: "We have to discover writers of 'young love' copy rather frequently. Whenever we find a good one, we order maybe a dozen novels or serials—and we get maybe three or four, almost never more than six. The trouble is that the writers get tired of the subject—they grow up. But there's always a new crop. The birth rate takes care of both the writers and the customers."

The motion picture's millions are always young.

The word chisel came into English from the Low Latin cisellus and it got its metaphorical meaning before it became a verb and before there was a film business.

THIS WEEK ---

1935 PRODUCT

Good music, clean comedy, drama of modern life built on strong, simple stories, will characterize the 1935 product, in the opinion of Fox production chief Winfield Sheehan. A marked improvement in quality, resulting from this year's effort to eliminate objectionable elements, will feature the new product, with consequent increase in attendance, he declared. . . .

ALASKA FILM

Ewing Scott, author and co-director of Paramount's "Renegades," concerning aerial exploration in Alaska, will sail next month for location, carrying three planes, two to be used for personnel and supplies, the third for camera equipment. . . .

PASSION PLAY

As an experiment, the Capitol in Grand Island, Neb., an A. H. Blank house, will feature a Passion Play during Christmas week, the producer to be Reverend Albert Johnson, using a local cast. If successful the production will play other Blank houses in Nebraska, possibly at the Omaha Paramount eventually. . . .

REAL VETERAN

L. Ernst Ouimet, first film distributor in Canada and first exhibitor in Montreal, has leased the Imperial, Montreal, planning a combination policy. The theatre is close by the site of Ouimet's original Ouimetoscope, nickelodeon opened 30 years ago by the pioneer now reentering exhibition. . . .

NO SUNDAY FINES

Voted down by the city council of Washington, Pa., last week was a proposed ordinance to fine theatres for operation on Sunday. The proposal was formulated by the Council of Protestant Churches, and presented by David B. Morris. . . .

TAX EXEMPT

Admissions and film contracts are not affected by the new New York City sales tax, according to major company executives, and Charles L. O'Reilly, president of the local Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce. Purchases of accessories, however, are subject to the levy. . . .

MEXICAN THEATRE

Construction has been started in Mexico City on a new 3,000-seat de luxe theatre which is estimated to reach a probable cost of $500,000. Modern equipment, featuring air conditioning, is planned, the theatre to be ready in about eight months.

ANTI-TRUST SUIT

Next week in Chicago federal court Jones, Linick and Schaefer will file a Sherman anti-trust action against Balaban & Katz, with a similar suit planned against Paramount-Publix in New York, charging inability to obtain first run product from major distributors for the McVickers theatre in Chicago. The plaintiffs own the house, which had been leased to Paramount, then shifted to B. & K. management, then going back to the plaintiff. . . .

NEW THEATRE

J. J. Parker Theatres has opened the new Roosevelt theatre at Bonneville Dam, located 30 miles from Portland, Ore., on the Columbia River. Seating 600, the theatre will have accommodations for boxing, wrestling as well as motion pictures. The theatre's patronage is drawn chiefly from the 3,000 employed at the dam.

DOCTOR OF CINEMATOGRAHY

J. Farrell Macdonald, veteran character actor now appearing for Columbia, last week was appointed to the faculty of the University of Southern California, as instructor of classes in the art of motion picture acting, and with the title of doctor of cinematography. Covering all phases, he will lecture twice each week. . . .

OHIO TAX

Unexpectedly last week the Ohio senate passed a sales tax which carries repeal of the present 10 per cent admission tax. The measure goes back to the House for compromise, since that legislative division previously had passed a bill calling for a straight three-per cent tax, the Senate's being a graduated scale. . . .

VIRGINIA CENSOR

By reason of economies the Virginia state censor board thus far this year has turned into the state treasury $13,909.58, the highest figure in the 12 years of the board's activity. During the fiscal year the censor saw 1,415 films, 149 less than the previous year. The surplus for 12 years amounts to $80,463.47. . . .

EXHIBITOR-MAYORS

In the December municipal elections, two exhibitor mayors in Ontario, Canada, were reelected. H. E. Wilton, manager of the Strand, Hamilton, won handily, while P. J. Nolan, owner of the Avalon, Rexy and Columbia, won a second term in Ottawa. . . .

GUILD SELECTION

The Hollywood Screen Writers' Guild on December 20 will vote for the five best written pictures, the awards to be distributed at the annual dinner-dance. The award will be separate from the annual Academy selection. Waldemar Young is chairman of the award committee, counting the vote of the Guild's 750 members. . . .

RCA SHIFTS

A committee of the board of RCA, at the instigation of General J. G. Harbord and David Sarnoff, chairman and president, respectively, is studying the advisability of a readjustment of RCA's capital structure. A new department, known as the department of information, has been organized. Headed by Frank E. Mullen, former Chicago NBC director of agriculture, the office will assume the public relations work formerly handled under the direction of Glenn I. Tucker, resigned. . . .

JULIAN WYLIE

Julian Wylie, 56, a figure in the London theatre for 20 years, died last week in London. Named Julian Samuelson, he turned early from accountancy to the stage. First a theatrical agent, he became a producer, having presented more than 200 plays during his long career. Three years ago he staged J. B. Priestley's "The Good Companion," in New York. . . .

CODE'S 1st BIRTHDAY FINDS 25 OF 41 TRADE PRACTICE CLAUSES INEFFECTIVE

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

"Now in the very moment when a marked advance is about to be made by this industry in coordinating the activities of its three economic divisions, and of attempting to replace discord and friction with harmony and cooperation, we are presented with a spectacle of false prophets and professional agitators arising to shout their empty and evil prophecies into the ears of the members of this industry."

So spoke Sol A. Rosenblatt, then a Division Administrator of the NRA, on the eve of the enactment of the motion picture code on December 7th, 1933, when, after a series of stormy hearings in New York and Washington, and some private discussions at Warm Springs, Georgia, General Hugh S. Johnson, now retired, spread wide the protecting wings of his Blue Eagle to embrace the screen in the National Recovery Administration's broad and ambitious plan.

Personal opinions of motion picture individuals vary, on this first anniversary of the code, as to the value of that 14,000-word document as an instrument for creating and maintaining the proper procedure for the conduct of business. They vary according to the special interests involved, and according to the relation of the code's vital parts to those interests. Regardless, not all the results anticipated by Mr. Roosevelt last December 7 have materialized, the record showing that, rather than replacing "discord and friction" with sweet "harmony and cooperation," the Blue Eagle has, in many ways, acted conversely, replacing some of the existing harmony and cooperation with discord and friction, as witness some of the results seen after a year of operation:

1. Twenty-five of the 41 code clauses intended to establish fair trade practices have proven to be ineffective, trivial or unnecessary; 13 clauses have given varied relief; three are the cause of strife.

2. Forty per cent of all code inquiries received from exhibitors by Motion Picture Herald's "Code Question Box" department pertain to disputes or misunderstandings between employers and employees over labor provisions.

3. Twenty-seven per cent of the "Code Question Box" inquiries concerned disputes or misunderstanding involving such competitive practices as rebates on admissions in the form of lotteries, prizes, reduced script books, coupons, throwaway tickets. Eleven per cent of the inquiries sought advice in exchange

Congress Paving Way for Abandonment of All Codes; Supreme Court Criticizes NRA

First indications that Washington has been seriously considering tangible recognition of the general dissatisfaction with the codification of business procedure came Tuesday when word trickled through unofficial channels from the Capital that when the 74th Congress convenes in January the national legislators will be asked to vote on a bill which would give any industry the opportunity to abandon compliance without further ado. On the other hand, any codified industry desiring to retain its document may do so, with compliance continuing in effect.

The National Industrial Recovery Act will be the first New Deal measure to approach a supreme court decision of constitutionality, the court at Washington completing Tuesday the taking of oral argument in the fight of the oil industry against its code and Code Authority. It was unofficially indicated Wednesday that the supreme court will be highly critical of administration of the Recovery Act and may hold unconstitutional executive orders which have had the effect of creating offenses, which is done by presidential approval of codes, it is charged.

Congressional action to give industry local code autonomy was taking form this week with legislators and economists winding up the drafting of measures which would permit abandonment, if an industry so desired, of all parts of any code with the exception of Section 7-A, which guarantees the right of labor to bargain.

The Recovery Board is preparing suggestions for revisions to be submitted to the President in two weeks. He will then confer with business leaders and advisers.

Certain Washington quarters believe that while the new legislation will make continued acceptance voluntary, efforts will be made to hold code authority industries in line by so phrasing new labor provisions as to make acceptance beneficial to business. In any event Administration officials realize "mailed fist" tactics should be abandoned for a "purely cooperative" arrangement.

Washington admits some industries would be glad to abandon their codes but that others are anxious to retain them, though it concedes changes are needed.

Organized labor will demand enactment of a 30-hour-a-week law, the elimination of child labor, and propose retention of Section 7-A, according to William Green, American Federation of Labor president.

Abram Myers, Allied counsel, told directors in New Orleans the film code is to be scrapped. He said MPTOA members are willing to join a fight to remedy code conditions.

disputes over elimination clauses.

4. The machinery for establishing clearance and zoning schedules has broken down almost completely.

5. Long and troublesome procedure has weakened the effectiveness of Local Grievance Boards.

6. Price-cutting "wars" and excessive premium competition continued; attempts to control prohibited "Bank Nights" have brought confusion.

7. Creative effort spent by some of the industry's best minds in trying to keep the code's machinery functioning with some semblance of order has been lost to normal film business.

8. Machinery for establishing better relations between the agents and producers and between players and the studios has broken down badly.

9. Hundreds of subsequent-run exhibitors are frankly belligerent.

10. Organized labor crafts in production and exhibition—almost always amply protected by union contracts—did receive further benefits from the code's wage scales and working schedules. But the industry is said to have been unable to increase admissions to keep pace.

11. On the other hand, unorganized labor and "white collar" workers of the "middle-class" of wage earner—especially theatre managers—have received little or no protection.

A self-regulating body within the industry may be of inestimable value in properly moulding intra-industry relations, but the independent and subsequent-run motion picture theatre is nurturing the belief—voiced by Nathan Yamins, exhibitor representative on the Code Authority—that "the time has now arrived for amending the code both as to substantive and administrative provisions," and this, it is held, "in order that the small enterprise—the little exhibitor—may get that measure of justice and protection to which he is entitled."

On the other hand, unofficial reports indicate that some NRA officials hold up the motion picture code as one of the few "which is satisfactory to both the government and a greater proportion of the industry."

MPPDA Cites Benefits

An official statement from New York headquarters of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors, Will H. Hays, president, on Monday, cited benefits of the code in the first year. The statement said:

"The motion picture industry was among the first to join the major industries of the nation in the development of a code of fair competition under the National Industrial Recovery Act.

"Through the further step of self-government, a general increase in the industry's wage payrolls has resulted; working hours have been reduced; safeguards to assure fair trade practices throughout the industry were codified into a single document and the machinery of arbitration and conciliation developed over a period of many years, was extended to the industry as a whole."

Some Beneficial Results

The document has brought some beneficial results. Hundreds of workers have received additional wages and better working conditions.

Intelligent and patient efforts of some trade leaders have created the nucleus of machinery of arbitration and conciliation which some day might guide the orderly progress of the most complex and competitive industry in the United States.

A few selfish exhibitors who had overbought product with the intent or effect of depriving their competitors of such product were compelled to release these productions.

The benefits of the 10 per cent elimination clause are available if and when the exhibitor has met certain provisions.

Too, distributors are compelled to offer each theatre owner the Optional Standard License Agreement for which the owners had campaigned over a period of years.

The code now controls to a limited extent substitutions of pictures, and also has limited control over the forcing of shorts with feature sales.

Certain forms of "lottery" merchandising are prohibited, but to date there has been considerable confusion governing their control.

The code protects organized labor from interference of employers in the participation of union activities, even encouraging

JOHNSON WRITES NRA'S OBITUARY

"The NRA is as dead as the dodo, which is not only dead but extinct." So declared General Hugh S. Johnson, once the fighting champion of the Blue Eagle, in New York Monday.

The General, spending the day in a department store to promote the sale of some books he wrote while in the Army, interrupted autographing copies to tell reporters that the Recovery Administration had ceased to operate.

From Cleveland, Colonel Leonard P. Ayres, economist, declared abandonment of the National Industrial Recovery Act is necessary to recovery. Greater freedom in profit and price competition is essential, he said.

organization by prohibiting employers from interfering with such organization. Organized labor, too, is endowed with the right to bargain collectively—but those hundreds of non-union workers in the industry, principally engaged in exhibition—are not so certain of their rights. Their wage scales and working schedules may be specified in the code, but there are cases on record where these employees have been compelled to refrain from demanding their code rights for fear of dismissal.

The code is described in the official draft as not being designated—to oppress small enterprises—yet the small independent exhibitor still has to fight his own battles, against heavy odds, for product and preservation.

Lacks "Policing" Powers

The weakest part of the motion picture code, like others, is the lack of "policing" powers over convicted violators, and its inability in this connection to force compliance. Typical of this situation was the ineffectiveness of two code clauses which were intended to maintain right moral standards in production and advertising-publicity procedure. The industry finally found it advisable to establish its own machinery for maintaining such standards, independent of the code, by means of the Production Code Administration under Joseph I. Breen, and the Advertising Advisory Council under J. J. McCarthy.

The confusion created by the breakdown of the clearance and zoning structure has rarely been equaled in the stormiest days of exhibitor-distributor relations in connection with the establishment of field rules governing the priority of clearance of one theatre over another.

The first year of the code—which at the outset raised him from Broadway lawyer to the favored position of NRA Division Administrator over all amusements—brought to Sol A. Rosenblatt the encomium of "No. 2 man of the Recovery Administration," after his recent elevation to Director of Field Administration and Enforcement.

Others whose names appeared in electric-light headlines at the beginning of motion picture code deliberations last summer, and during the early days of its application, are no longer active in this connection. General Johnson gave way to his critics and resigned in tears, turning later to the personal business of writing an autobiography of the Blue Eagle. Eddie Cantor, comedian for Samuel Goldwyn, is likewise conspicuously absent from code participations. An automobile ride with the President at Warm Springs, last November, and considerable talking for publication about the rights of his fellow actors in Hollywood netted Mr. Cantor a position on the Code Authority as the representative of the motion picture player. Last week Mr. Cantor sailed for a rest in Europe the while Hollywood's actors were engaged in battle with producers and Mr. Rosenblatt over their rights under the code.

Joseph M. Schenck, president of United Artists, who rode with Mr. Cantor and the President last fall during a code tete a tete, likewise has been absent from code participation, while Abbott Lawrence Lowell, president emeritus of Harvard University, another of the "first crop" of Presidential Code Authority appointees, gave up the job almost simultaneously with his appointment. Clare Booth Brokaw, who was appointed by the President to represent the public on the Code Authority, has not been heard from since.

Studios Still Deadlocked

The net effect of the code in Hollywood and the maze of production code committees created by it appears to be the establishment of a Standing Committee of Extras which is re-registering some 17,000 extras in a breakdown which will probably dislodge 14,000 players from the extra list.

A study of the present status of all of the code's 41 clauses which were drafted with the intension of establishing fair competition and eliminating unfair trade practices was made this week. Estimated values of the clauses are as follows:

Part 1—Defamation of Character of Competitor, His Product Or Theatre—In all probability this clause will continue dormant for the life of the code. In any event, it is a matter from which any complainant may secure more effective protection under libel law. The code cannot award monetary damages.

Part 2—Circularizing of Threats of Legal Proceedings to Harass Competitors—Meaningless, because a complainant must prove it was done not in good faith.

Part 3—Securing Confidential Information Concerning the Business of a Competitor—Likewise worthless, because here, too, a complainant must prove such information was secured not in good faith.

Part 4—Controlling Excessive Salaries—Aimed at Hollywood, this clause precipitated such a protest by talent and others that it was first made temporarily ineffective and later was admitted by the NRA to be impracticable.

Unfair Practices—Producers

Part 1—To Prevent Producers from Raiding the Stage for Acting and Writing Talent—The practice obviously cannot be controlled.

Part 2—Conspiracy of Large Studios to Pre-

RIGHT TO CANCEL 20 PER CENT IS NEEDED, CAROLINA EXHIBITORS TOLD

Kuykendall Declares for Greater Elimination; Terry Ramsaye Says Exhibitors Must Impress Producers; Picquet Reelected

By D. G. SPENCER

Charlotte Correspondent

The privilege of eliminating 20 per cent of feature product contracted for en bloc is necessary to conduct properly the business of running a motion picture theatre, in the opinion of Edward L. Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America. Mr. Kuykendall, in his official capacity, this week told delegates to the North and South Carolina convention of Motion Picture Theatre Owners, meeting in the Hotel Charlotte at Charlotte, that efforts will be made at once to effect a revision of the code in order to give exhibitors double the elimination privileges now accorded in the 10 per cent cancellation clause. (List of those attending appears on page 13.)

One hundred active theatre owners of the Carolinas convened Monday and Tuesday, eager to discuss in the open their problems of buying and playing motion pictures and to arrive at practicable solutions. All of the usual problems of exhibition were thrown upon the table: Contractual relations with exchanges, anti-film legislation, clearance and zoning, the code, music taxes levied by the American Society of Composers and Authors, the Legion of Decency, merchandising methods and the like.

No time was lost in launching the movement for a code amendment to obtain a 20 per cent elimination privilege, the exhibitors appointing a committee to take the matter in hand.

Principally responsible for the new demand for increased cancellations was said to be a desire to offset the campaign of interests outside of the industry for Congressional abolition of block booking. Too, the 10 per cent elimination clause in its present form in the code is held to be too complex and has many strings attached. The code requires the exhibitor seeking the privilege per cent to have purchased all of the product offered to him at the one time by the distributor. Also, the average rental for the pictures contracted for must be less than $250, and all of the exhibitor's contractual relations with the distributor under the contract must be in good standing.

Protest Free Shows

Keen opposition to free radio shows, to the exhibition of commercial films in schools, and to fees charged theatres by the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers for use of music under the copyright act, was expressed in resolutions adopted Monday.

A federal investigation of the music tax and repeal of the tax provision were advocated for relief from "this burdensome imposition."

The association opposed an anti-film program recently suggested by Mrs. Robbins Gilman of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, whereby commercial motion pictures would be

RAMSAYE TO CAROLINA EXHIBITORS

THE motion picture industry, including the exhibitor, was charged with being industriously busy in behalf of every aspect of business but the customers, in an address by Terry Ramsaye, editor of MOTION PICTURE HERALD, to the convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina in Charlotte this week.

"Every interest, every problem and every angle of every problem has its exponents and proponents and committees and contenders and guardians, everything, copyright, music tax, protection and zoning, admission tax, Sunday opening and what-have-you—everything and everybody is being attended to except the public which pays for it all," Mr. Ramsaye asserted.

"If the motion picture business had been doing any part of a job of public relations—and that means that at least 60 per cent of the responsibility is on the exhibitors—there would not have been occasion for the Legion of Decency campaign and there would not have been—or continue to be—those provocations upon which professional agitators and job makers continuously peg their drives.

"We can never hope to be free from the attacks of the professional attackers of the ilk we have had from Wilbur Crafts to William Harrison Short, because they ferment their own mash and generate their own provocations, but we must not take comfort or excuse in that, for it was a negligence of the common public interest and the accepted canons of mores and tastes which ultimately forced the hand of a great religious organization—an organization of admittedly wide tolerances—to lay down some law and gospel of conduct with respect to the screen to the followers of the faith.

"Lay aside all other considerations and you must admit it is bad business to get in wrong with so many customers all at the same time!

"The exhibitor has a big responsibility that is not to be evaded. He does not have to accept in silent acquiescence everything that Hollywood puts in the can.

"But do not be lazily content with complaining to the film salesman and the branch manager. What you say to them, or what you write to them gets no farther than their desks. They have enough bad news for the home office without enclosing yours.

"The motion picture audience is your audience. The public is your public. The pictures are on your screen and it is on your representations and invitations that they come in to see and hear.

"It is your job to tell the producers and distributors what your people, your customers, your community likes and dislikes. The public is inarticulate but you do not need to be.

"It is up to you to tell the picture makers and tell them so they will stay told.

"It is well that you should belong to such organizations as this and to go on record with resolutions and kindred declarations, but also individually you should get personal and direct in expressions. Write letters—hot letters. Hollywood gets lots of fan mail and almost no trade or exhibitor mail. Mostly they are highly sensitive to genuine box office expressions—their scrapbooks on 'What the Picture Did for Me' prove it.

"Send letters of opinion to stars, to directors, to producers and give them personal application and pressure.

"Mr. Ed. Kuykendall has remarked upon the useless and destructive effrontery so unexpected and unbecoming of Mr. Will Rogers which was embodied in a sequence interpolated in 'State Fair.' You can bet that if Mr. Rogers, our great homespun philosopher and exponent of the homely virtues, gets that complaint wrapped over his horny knuckles there'll be no more such audience affronts planted in his pictures.

"But tell it to Hollywood—personally—it's a personality business, filled with personal prides, vanities and ambitions. You can make them sorry for being dumb, ashamed of being dirty.

"This new era of the talking picture demands that the exhibitor do some talking, too—in behalf of the public, his public—your prosperity begins at home—not in Hollywood—if you are an exhibitor and not just a manufacturer's agent."

Kansas City Independents Drop Threat of Boycott

The proposal of Kansas City independent exhibitors to boycott Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and other distributors whose product is shown first-run at admission prices competitive to the neighborhoods in the sector, this week appeared to have passed into oblivion. It was reported that the independents were awaiting action on the part of the Code Authority, with the hope that it will modify such first-runs' protection.

Jay Means, president of the Kansas City Independent Theatre Owners, who was the originator of the boycott plan, said this week the plan "was being held in abeyance." Despite Mr. Means' expressed indignation, he has been showing MGM product.

Although the association adopted the Means resolution to stand 100 per cent for a boycott, it developed that the move depended largely on support from Fox Midwest and exhibitors within a radius of 100 miles. Cooperation also was sought from the Kansas-Missouri Theatre Association. Only Kansas City independents seemed interested.

Loew's Votes Extra 75-Cent Dividend

At the annual meeting of Loew's, Inc., stockholders in New York on Tuesday, J. R. Rubin, chairman of the meeting, stated that the management would recommend to directors declaration of an extra dividend of 75 cents. C. C. Moskowitz was named a director.

It was revealed at the meeting that salary and bonus paid to Nicholas M. Schenck during the year was $219,607, while David Bernstein, vice-president and treasurer, received $148,664. Mr. Rubin, as an official of Loew's, received $67,000, while Irving Thalberg, Louis B. Mayer and Mr. Rubin as officials of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, received salaries totaling $287,000.

Further, the Mayer Company, comprised of these three, received $741,738 as its share of MGM profits under their contracts, made at the time of the purchase of MGM by Loew's.

Loew Net in Toronto For 20 Months $96,633

Marcus Loew's Theatres, Inc., Toronto, has reported net profit for the 20 months ended August 30, of $96,633.63 after charges, including depreciation, taxes and interest. Gross operating earnings were $264,811.50. Cash on hand last August was $159,379, compared with a total for the equivalent period the year before of $118,184.

Net of $12,041, equal to 36 cents per share on 33,741 seven per-cent preferred shares, after depreciation, expenses and other charges, was reported by Loew's London Theatres, Ltd., of Canada for the period January 5 to August 30, 1934. Last year the net was $19,594 for 12 months.

exhibited in public school buildings and supported by taxation.

Disapproval of the present system of block booking of pictures was expressed, along with opposition to forced buying of short product with features.

The theatre owners thanked the producers for the "great improvement" in pictures produced in the last year, commended the Jesters Club for the entertainment provided, and voiced appreciation of the six years of service as secretary of Mrs. Walter Griffith, who resigned to become secretary of the Local Grievance and Zoning Board.

Charles W. Picquet, of Pinehurst, who for a decade has been president of the association, was re-elected. Other officers for 1935 will be H. R. Berry of Hartsville, S. C., first vice-president; S. S. Stevenson, Henderson, second vice-president; Miss Ruth Hardin of Charlotte, secretary and treasurer.

The new board of directors is composed of H. F. Kincey, of Charlotte; W. H. Hendrix, Greensboro; H. E. Buchanan, Hendersonville; J. F. Miller, Hickory; W. T. Culpepper, Elizabeth City; J. M. Gregg, Charlotte; M. F. Schnibben, Florence; Mrs. Kenneth Richardson, Seneca, and Albert Sottile, of Charleston.

Mayor Arthur H. Wearn welcomed the 100 exhibitors to Charlotte, and Mrs. Kenneth Richardson of Seneca, S. C., gave the response.

An invitation to hold the 1935 meeting in Charlotte next December, extended by Clarence O. Kuester of the Chamber of Commerce, was accepted.

Cites Improved Business

A much greater volume of business is in evidence in all sections and pictures are cleaner and better, said Mr. Kuykendall.

"We theatre people are not at odds with sincere efforts of the public to secure better pictures," he declared. "It is only the professional reformer who earns his salary by attacking movies or a wholesale boycott of theatres to which we object." He said the industry should not be condemned because 4 per cent of its output has not been approved.

Mr. Kuykendall said the "cleanup" movement has started so much discussion about pictures that it actually has resulted in bringing thousands of adults to theatres who had not been in the habit before. He emphasized the importance of "Family Nights" and urged each theatre owner to have at least one change of program each week suitable for the whole family.

"Exhibitors all over the country are writing in to ask about their rights and privileges under the code," said Edward Levy, speaking as general counsel of the MPTOA. "Four matters which interest them most are: (1) Use of premiums and give-aways; (2) compulsory buying of shorts with feature pictures; (3) premature advertising, and (4) non-theatrical competition."

M. A. Schlesinger of New York, president of General Talking Pictures, told how the music tax affects the several hundred theatres he operates in South Africa.

The Charlotte Jesters Club, of which John Kirby is president, had charge of the entertainment at the banquet Monday night. A floor show was given by an orchestra and group from Chicago. Afterwards a dance was held in the hotel ballroom.

Coast Exhibitors Prepare Fight on Legislative Front

California theatre interests this week were marshaling their forces to offer strong opposition to any possible program of taxation to be levied against the industry by the state legislature when it convenes on January 7. Sentiment among industry leaders in the territory reflected their fear of possible reprisals from the Upton Sinclair-Frank F. Merriam fight for the governorship, which was lost by the novelist, after stiff antagonism by the California film industry.

Mr. Sinclair's famous EPIC plan gave him nearly 900,000 votes for governor and although he lost, the plan proved sufficiently popular in the public mind to elect 27 EPIC assemblymen and obligated 11 more state officials who sought and accepted EPIC support in the election.

The film industry's chief fear from the forthcoming legislative session is that the Sinclair bloc, which has to secure only 14 votes in the legislature to control the new session, may start a program of taxation levied against the industry. Mr. Sinclair, in the last days before the general election, suddenly started a campaign against block booking and blind buying and offered his services to industry leaders, but was turned down.

Hulda McGinn, of San Francisco, secretary-manager of the California Theatre Association, will represent the industry at the session.

Eastman Official Sees Business More Favorable

The business of the Eastman Kodak Company has shown increased earnings in 1934 over 1933, according to Rudolph Speth, company executive. The volume of business also has indicated a substantial increase, he said. "We feel the business outlook is favorable, and that there is a gradual disappearance of pessimistic feelings, both as to domestic and foreign conditions," he said.

The company announced last week that it would pay a wage dividend to employees, the first such payment in three years.

Through a tieup with American Airlines, Fox dispatched prints of the Shirley Temple film, "Bright Eyes," to exhibitors in 16 cities this week.

RKO Home Office Employees Dance

Employees of RKO's home office are ushering in the holiday season with a dance Friday at the 58th Street Lodge Building, New York. Helen Doyle is chairman.

Kate Kent, 70, Dies

Kate Kent, known to virtually every casting director in the business since 1914, died in Hollywood Wednesday after being struck by an automobile. She was 70 years old and had been playing small parts for 20 years. She is survived by a son, Ted Kent.

Fire Destroys Interior Of Kentucky Theatre

Fire destroyed the interior of the new Ritz theatre in Hickman, Ky., last week and plunged the entire town into temporary darkness. The loss was estimated at between $7,000 and $8,000. Flames burst from the projection booth while 200 persons were awaiting the start of the second performance. There was a slight disorder among Negroes in the balcony, but no one was reported injured. The theatre was opened Thanksgiving Day.

Yates to Coast to Start Phonograph Record Plant

Herbert J. Yates arrived in Hollywood from New York last week for the second time in several months, for the purpose of establishing a phonograph record factory in Los Angeles to serve the territory west of Denver. Ralph D. Poucher, executive of Mr. Yates' Consolidated Film Industries, Inc., accompanied Mr. Yates.

"THEY CAN'T TAKE IT," or "Crime Without Passion"

by ROY W. ADAMS

Dedicated to Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur

Motion Picture Herald has the following record of events and documents in what possibly might be called a difference of opinion about product between an exhibitor and its producers.

The exhibitor is the able and long experienced Roy W. Adams of the Mason Theatre in Mason City, Michigan, famous among the followers of the Herald's "What the Picture Did for Me" department as a contributor of pithy, pungent and fair evaluations of pictures these many years. The producers are the most able Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur, notably successful makers of amusement material for the printed page, the stage of Broadway and the screen.

At present the differences stand as follows:

From "What the Picture Did for Me," Herald issue of November 17.

CRIME WITHOUT PASSION: Claude Rains—The universal verdict is that this is the poorest picture ever seen in this town. They held their noses and walked out on it the first night, and the second night nobody came in. The title is terrible, and the picture is worse.—ROY W. ADAMS, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich.

Astoria, L. I., November 19th, 1934

Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre,
Mason, Mich.

Dear Mr. Adams:

We read your criticism of "Crime Without Passion" in the Motion Picture Herald, and in reply would like to inform you that we consider you unfit to run a movie theatre. Your inability to appreciate great art and advertise same to your customers is one thing that is wrong with you nit-wit exhibitors.—Yours truly,

(Signed—in pencil) BEN HECHT and CHARLES MAC ARTHUR
Producers of "Crime Without Passion"

Mason, Michigan, November 26, 1934

Messrs. Hecht and MacArthur,
Astoria, L. I.

Gentlemen:

Your letter of the 19th with reference to my report on "CRIME WITHOUT PASSION" has been received.

Your criticism of exhibitors is hardly justified in this instance, as I did get the customers into the theatre, but I could not make them like your picture.

Your letter is now on exhibition in the lobby of my theatre, where it affords my patrons much more entertainment than your picture did.

Thanking you for your favor, I am—Very truly yours,

(Note to Editor:—Believe it or not, the above correspondence is genuine. My criticism of the picture in question was not based on my own opinion, but on the fact that I received more scathing criticisms on it than on any other picture I have ever shown. We have the word of Messrs. Hecht and MacArthur that this picture is great art, but that doesn't cash in at the boxoffice. The first lesson in the exhibitor's primer of experience is that you can't sell art to the customers unless it is disguised as entertainment, and this opus doesn't qualify on that account.—ADAMS.)

The moral would appear to be that: A motion picture is as good as the audience sees it.

Here is indeed sharp cut demonstration of the fact that the great majorities are not ready for departures in technique, or any manner of story telling in which the manner of the telling becomes to them a confusing obtrusion.

"Crime Without Passion" has been deemed by many competent critics to be an excitingly interesting performance, and in fact drew from Fred Ayer of Motion Picture Herald's staff a notice of high approval. However, in Mr. Ayer's review, published August 25, he observed: "'Crime Without Passion' is fundamentally a director's picture. . . ."

Relief Unit Plans Film Employment

The filming of various industrial projects and historical events for the United States government is part of a plan proposed by the Federal Employment Relief organization of California to alleviate widespread unemployment among Hollywood technicians, writers and directors. The employees will be paid by the state.

The American Society of Cinematographers has had delegates in Washington for the past two months promoting the plan in order to place idle cameramen and assistants.

Sales Managers Map Block Booking Fight

National sales managers of major distributors met at the New York Motion Picture Club Tuesday to map a line of defense in what is expected to be a bitter fight for retention of block booking.

Through the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, the major companies are understood to have learned from Washington that included in what is assuming the proportions of a flood of adverse film legislation, one of the measures planned for consideration by the new Congress is a bill designed to eliminate block booking. Other conferences will be held later.

Reach Laboratory Code Agreement

Agreement on the provisions of the laboratory code was reached in Washington Tuesday after conferences between Deputy Administrator William P. Farnsworth and laboratory representatives.

The main features of the changes made in the agreement, it was said, are the provisions of a maximum working week of 38 hours for night forces, which are to receive the same pay as the 40-hour day workers. The code is now being prepared.

Sheehan In New York To Testify in Suit

Winfield Sheehan, Fox production chief, left Hollywood this week for New York to testify in a suit filed by James N. Cleary, Fanny Lurie and Gustave Oppenheimer against Fox Film and Chase National Bank.

The suit, which involves financing deals several years ago and concerned Fox Film, is now being tried in New York supreme court. The majority of the defendants are or have been connected with Chase National.

A. T. & T. Net Drops

Net operating income for the American Telephone & Telegraph Company showed a decrease in October as compared with last year, according to a report to the federal communications commission. The net this year was $1,141,025. Last year it was $1,466,587.

Norma Shearer and George Arliss Lead in 124,837 Replies to Sidney L. Bernstein's Survey; Korda Tops Directors; Adventure and Musical Comedy Best Liked Subjects; "Cavalcade" Heads Pictures Chosen

Norma Shearer and George Arliss lead in popularity among British audiences, particularly of the deluxe theatres, as reflected in a direct-to-patron survey conducted by Sidney L. Bernstein, in ten of the theatres of his circuit, including these deluxe theatres: the Granadas at Tooting and Walthamstow, the Elite at Wimbledon, Regal at Watford and Plaza and Regent at Rugby. The three first mentioned are in the London area.

A total of 250,000 questionnaire blanks was distributed among the patrons and 124,837 were returned, filled out. From those replies a number of important facts of public taste were established, in addition to that of star popularity:

Adventure and musical comedy are the best liked types of productions.

More patrons attend the theatre twice a week than once a week.

Patrons want an organ solo as part of the program.

Double featuring is preferred by 84.5 per cent of the patronage, and particularly by women.

A three-hour program suits the majority, but the next largest group preference is for 3½-hour shows, the younger element swelling this part of the vote.

"Cavalcade" heads a list of pictures most liked, "I'm No Angel" the least liked, with its subject matter essentially American.

Alexander Korda is the most favored director.

Patrons would like to see the cast shown on the screen at the end of the picture as well as at the beginning.

Comparison of the results of Mr. Bernstein's canvass with those of MOTION PICTURE HERALD's annual poll of independent exhibitors on the Ten Money Making Stars of 1933-34 reveals several directions of similarity in British and American patrons' tastes, and at the same time points a contrast in role and theme.

Following are listed the six leaders among male stars in the Bernstein poll:

- | | |
|------------------|---------------------|
| 1. George Arliss | 4. Clive Brook |
| 2. Clark Gable | 5. Robt. Montgomery |
| 3. Wallace Beery | 6. Ronald Colman |

Gable and Beery were voted identical relative ratings in the "Money Makers." Will Rogers, first among the "Money Makers," and Joe E. Brown, fifth, were not among the 50 named in the British results. Both Rogers and Brown present types of comedy primarily American in foundation and presentation. Eddie Cantor, sixth among the men in the "Money Makers," ranked 18th in the Bernstein list.

On the other hand, George Arliss, first in the Bernstein poll, was eighth of the men in the "Money Makers." Clive Brook ranked fourth in the British list, Robert Montgomery fifth and Ronald Colman sixth. Among the "Money Makers," Brook was 99th, Montgomery 16th and Colman 49th. Arliss, Brook and Colman were British players before coming to Hollywood.

Among the feminine players the contrasts were not so marked. Here are the six leaders as chosen by the British audiences:

- | | |
|-------------------|----------------------|
| 1. Norma Shearer | 4. Kay Francis |
| 2. Marie Dressler | 5. Marlene Dietrich |
| 3. Greta Garbo | 6. Katharine Hepburn |

Janet Gaynor, first among the women in the "Money Makers," won eighth place in the British survey. Mae West, second in the HERALD poll, was 17th in England; Joan Crawford, third "Money Maker," was 9th; Shirley Temple, fourth, did not appear among the 50 women named in Britain; Marie Dressler ranked fifth in the HERALD poll, and Miss Shearer was sixth.

Miss West's film portrayals have been of distinctively American subjects. The fact of later release of Hollywood product in England is reflected both in the high ranking of Miss Dressler, who died July 28, and in the absence of Shirley Temple from the British list. Mr. Bernstein distributed his questionnaires from May 7 to May 19, and they were collected June 13. Since that date the analysis of the results has been under way. Shirley Temple's three first features were released in the United States as follows: "Stand Up and Cheer," May 4; "Little Miss Marker," June 1, and "Baby Take a Bow," June 22. Taking into consideration the spread of time between American and British release, none of these features had been before the British audiences when the poll was made.

Surveys had been made previously by Mr. Bernstein in 1928 and 1932. Tabular comparisons of the three British polls are made on a succeeding page. Highlights are as follows:

Colman, winner in both 1928 and 1932, dropped to sixth this year, but Norma Shearer repeated her 1932 popularity. In the first survey Dolores Del Rio and Betty Balfour, who has not made American pictures as yet, shared top honors.

Arliss stood first with both men and women patrons. Clark Gable, however, owed his second place largely to the women's vote. Gable rose from position 28 to second place, Beery from tenth to third. Warner Baxter, Herbert Marshall and Fredric March were among the women's favorites; Jack Hulbert, Charles Laugh-ton, Lionel Barrymore and Tom Walls scored heavily with the men. Hulbert and Walls are practically unknown in the States. On the other hand, Maurice Chevalier fell from fifth to nineteenth, paralleling his drop in the "Money Makers." John Boles dropped from 6th to 23d, but Boles improved his position in the HERALD survey.

Patrons younger than 21 years gave Clark Gable precedence, also a large vote for Jack Hulbert. The older patrons gave Clive Brook second place and demonstrated their great liking for the late Miss Dressler. (There were four age groups in the reply classification: Under 21, 21-40, 40-60 and over 60.)

More men than women voted for Marlene Dietrich, more women than men for Greta Garbo. Kay Francis and Jean Harlow stood high with the men, Katharine Hepburn with the women patrons. Constance Bennett dropped from second to 32d, Ruth Chatterton from 4th to 18th.

Another question in the Bernstein survey read: "Which film stars do you dislike most?" That the replies provide no gauge of public opinion at large is evidenced by the fact that Greta Garbo, winner of third ranking in popularity, also was second among the "disliked" players, second to Mae West, who won 17th place in popularity. Jean Harlow stood 11th among the best liked women players but was third among the "disliked." James Cagney and Lee Tracy, both among the winners among the men, were named with Adolphe Menjou as least liked. In all six of these instances, the players appear in distinctive types of roles that lend themselves to emphatic liking or lack of preference.

Korda and Walls Lead

British directors were most preferred, with Alexander Korda and Tom Walls at the head of the list. The replies evidenced increasing interest in directors. A few years ago comparatively few patrons knew the names of half a dozen directors, those analyzing the survey reported. At the same time, it was not stated how many answered this question.

- | | |
|-------------------------|----------------------|
| 1. Alexander Korda | 12. Mervyn Le Roy |
| 2. Tom Walls | 13. Rouben |
| 3. Ernst Lubitsch | Mamoulian |
| 4. Victor Saville | 14. King Vidor |
| 5. Cecil B. De Mille | 15. James Whale |
| 6. Joseph von Sternberg | 16. Lloyd Bacon |
| 7. George Cukor | 17. Alfred Hitchcock |
| 8. Frank Capra | 18. Jack Buchanan |
| 9. Frank Lloyd | 19. Herbert Wilcox |
| 10. Basil Dean | 20. Jack Raymond |
| 11. Walter Forde | |

Naming productions best liked of the directors given the most votes, the patrons selected these:

ALEXANDER KORDA: "The Private Life of Henry the Eighth," "Wedding Rehearsal" and "Catherine the Great."

TOM WALLS: "Cookoo in the Nest," Blarney Stone," "Turkey Time" and "Thark."

ERNST LUBITSCH: "Monte Carlo," "The Love Parade" and "Trouble in Paradise."

VICTOR SAVILLE: "The Good Companions," "I Was A Spy," "Sunshine Susie" and "Love on Wheels."

CECIL B. DE MILLE: "Ben Hur," "The King of Kings," "Orphans of the Storm," "Way Down East" and "This Day and Age."

JOSEPH VON STERNBERG: "The Blue Angel," "Shanghai Express," "Blonde Venus," "Song of Songs" and "The Scarlet Empress."

GEORGE CUKOR: "Dinner at Eight" and "Little Women."

FRANK CAPRA: "Lady For a Day" and "It Happened One Night."

FRANK LLOYD: "Cavalcade."

JAMES WHALE: "The Invisible Man."

Results compared with those of the 1932 questionnaire:

- | 1932 | 1934 |
|----------------------|-------------------------|
| 1. Ernst Lubitsch | 1. Alexander Korda |
| 2. Tom Walls | 2. Tom Walls |
| 3. Lewis Milestone | 3. Ernst Lubitsch |
| 4. Alfred Hitchcock | 4. Victor Saville |
| 5. D. W. Griffith | 5. Cecil B. De Mille |
| 6. Cecil B. De Mille | 6. Joseph von Sternberg |

Twice-a-Week Attendance

"How often do you go to the pictures?" patrons were asked. "Twice a week," replied 42.7 per cent of those voting; "once a week," said 37.4 per cent; "three times a week," 11.8 per cent; "less than once a week," 5.1 per cent; "more than three times a week," 3 per cent.

Where They Sit

More than half, or 52.8 per cent, said they preferred to sit in the "middle stalls," or center section of the main floor; 19.2 per cent in the "back stalls," main floor rear; 11.1 per cent in the front circle, mezzanine or first balcony; 10.1 per cent in the back circle, or second balcony, and 6.8 per cent in the front stalls, or orchestra.

More women than men said they used the circle. More men than women preferred the back stalls. Strikingly fewer than average under 21 patrons and, similarly, decidedly more than average 21-40 patrons said they preferred the circle. On the other hand, patrons of both sexes belonging to the 40-60 age group were inclined to use the front stalls, a fact attributed to failing eyesight.

Proposed for Stardom

The British audiences also expressed themselves on players who in their opinions should be starred. Leading the women were Una Merkel, Jean Parker and Glenda Farrell. Tied for first in this classification among the men were Frank McHugh and Guy Kibbee, followed by Franchot Tone and Otto Kruger. (Several of these since have been starred.)

Adventure Films Lead

Society drama would have led all types of pictures in audience preference but for the vote of those under 21 years of age, and conversely the thriller-adventure kind, preferred by the younger patrons, lost ground with each succeeding older age group. Those under 21 alone preferred war pictures to travelogues.

In the tabling of votes which follows, a first preference was accorded 7 votes, second liking 6 votes and so on down to one vote for a seventh preference.

Picture Preferences

Patrons were asked to write "Very Good," "Good," "Fair," or "Bad" opposite such of the following pictures as they had seen:

Aunt Sally	Strange Interval
Bitter Sweet	That's A Good Girl
Cavalcade	The Bowery
Cuckoo in the Nest	The Kid From Spain
Dinner at Eight	The Pride of the Force
I'm No Angel	The Private Life of
I Was A Spy	Henry the Eighth
Jack Ahoy	The Way to Love
King Kong	This Week of Grace
Night Flight	Three Cornered Moon
Paddy the Next Best	Tugboat Annie
Thing	Voltaire
Song of Songs	42nd Street

In the voting the first six films heading the list with the highest number of "Very Good" votes were:

1. Cavalcade.
2. The Private Life of Henry the Eighth.
3. I Was a Spy.
4. Tugboat Annie.
5. The Kid from Spain.
6. Voltaire.

The six films receiving the most unfavorable votes were:

1. I'm No Angel.
2. Dinner At Eight.
3. The Pride of the Force.
4. Three Cornered Moon.
5. Strange Interval.
6. King Kong.

Nine of the twelve pictures in the two classifications have been among MOTION PICTURE HERALD'S "Box Office Champions," named on the basis of largest receipts in key city theatres. Of those receiving the "Very Good" verdict from the British patrons the following were among the "Box Office Champions" for the calendar year 1933: "Cavalcade," "The Private Life of Henry the Eighth," "Tugboat Annie" and "The Kid from Spain," while "Voltaire" was a Champion for the month of August, 1933. "I Was A Spy," British picture, did not have the breadth of American distribution to be a candidate for the "Champions."

At the same time, four of those receiving unfavorable votes in the Bernstein survey were "Box Office Champions" in America—"I'm No Angel," for the calendar year 1933, and "Dinner at Eight" and "Strange Interval" ("Strange Interval" was the title as released in Britain), for the first half of 1934. "King Kong" was a monthly winner among the "box office champions."

Favor Organ Solos

Young Britain is particularly in favor of having organ music with its screen fare, the vote showed; of the adults the women leaned toward organ numbers more than did the men, the total vote being 84.6 per cent favorable. Those under 21 were 9 to 1 for them, the 21 to 40 group 6 to 1, and those 40 to 60 years old voted 5 to 1 for use of the organ.

Chutes for Chocolates

When Mr. Bernstein in his questionnaire asked for "suggestions to make for the improvement of cinema entertainment generally," several proposals unusual, to say the least, found their way into the blanks.

Among the novel requests was one from a man of 65 who thought it would be "an excellent idea" if chocolates, cigarettes and ices could be delivered to patrons by means of a movable chute which would also collect the necessary payment. "Thus other patrons would not suffer disturbance from attendants," was the thought of the writer.

Another patron considered it "rather essential" that escalators be installed in place of the stairs leading to the circle, and that all gangways between seats should be constructed as moving platforms "to save people having to walk to their seats."

72, GOES TO SAME THEATRE EVERY DAY

Attendance seven times a week at motion picture theatres was revealed by several of those less than 21 years old who participated in Sidney L. Bernstein's survey in ten of his theatres in England.

One woman patron, age 72, wrote that she attended the same cinema, the Granada in Walthamstow, London suburb, every afternoon, thus seeing the program six days a week. "They all know me there and look after me," she explained.

A sizable number of those replying to the questionnaire urged that children and babies be barred from evening performances.

TRADE PRACTICE RESULTS ANALYZED

vent Independents from Renting Space in So-called "Major" Studios—Nothing can be done to compel large producers to rent studio space to anyone; complainant must prove conspiracy.

Part 3—Employing As Extras Members of Employees' Families or Persons Not in Need of Extra Work—Ineffective, especially because of the proviso which says such people may be employed as extras when "the exigencies of production require an exception to be made."

Part 4—Governing the Relations of Producers and Studios with Talent Agencies—After months of wrangling a committee finally completed a set of rules of fair practice. Two weeks ago the NRA ordered these rules abandoned because the committee "exceeded its authority."

Part 4-A—Governing the Relations of Producers and Studios with Directors, Writers and Actors—Committees of actors and writers have been working with production representatives to accomplish this end, and, two weeks ago, they reached a deadlock, actors threatening to strike if their demands for an "open shop" were not met.

Part 5—Preventing "Star Raiding" of One Studio's Talent by Another—In all probability this clause will never be made effective, the complex machinery for its enactment never having been set up.

Part 6—To Prevent "Raiding" of Cartoon Talent of One Cartoon Producer by Another—Unimportant.

Part 6-A—Preventing One Cartoon Producer from "Stealing" the Cartoon Character of Another—It is obvious that a complainant would resort to the courts if a competitive producer appropriated his cartoon property.

Unfair Practices—Producers-Distributors

Part 1—Pre-showing a Film Based on a Play When Contract for Play Rights Prohibits Such Showing—A trivial clause and one which will probably never be involved.

Part 2—Enticing an "Outside" Producer Away from Another Producer or Distributor—Meaningless.

Unfair Practices—Distributors

Part 1—Threatening to Build a Theatre to Intimidate an Exhibitor—Ineffective, because the exhibitor must prove that the distributor committed an overt act.

Part 2—Distributor's Employee Interested in a Theatre Who Interferes with Film Buying of a Competitive Theatre—Few distributors' employees are interested financially in theatres on their own, and no distributor's employee is considered to have an interest in any theatre affiliated with his distributor employer.

Part 3—Substitutions of Pictures—Involving only those contracts in which pictures are scheduled "no substitute," or in which a named star, named director or named "well known" author or named book or named play is specifically listed. There may be a difference of opinion over the starring status of a player. Too, the distributor may substitute any story, book or play which is not marked "No Substitute" and which is not based on a "well known" story, book or play. Furthermore, the producer has the right to change, as he sees fit, the construction of any story, book or play to any extent, and to change any title listed in the contract, or change a supporting cast.

Part 4—To Prevent Licensing of Product to Non-Theatricals—This clause has no "teeth." An exhibitor must individually make a specific complaint against the non-theatrical, leaving the responsibility of establishing competition as a non-theatrical on his shoulders. The clause is made further ineffective by the permission

CODE AUTHORITY PRAISES ROSENBLATT

Because Sol A. Rosenblatt, NRA Administrator, has fulfilled his duties "in an outstanding, capable, conscientious and impartial manner," the Motion Picture Code Authority unanimously has resolved "to record its formal expression of gratitude and appreciation to the Honorable Sol A. Rosenblatt for energy tirelessly expended, ability capably directed and a public service well performed," in connection with his activities as Division Administrator of the film code.

granted distributors, in a second section of the clause, to sell pictures to schools, churches and other institutions.

Part 5—Forcing a Short Subject Sale with a Feature Sale—This gives only partial relief, enabling the distributor to compel the exhibitor to buy as many shorts as the exhibitor can use on a basis proportionate with the number of features involved in the contract.

Part 6—Divulging Box Office Receipts—Wholly ineffective, because an employee may divulge receipts without the knowledge of the distributor and the distributor would not be held accountable.

Part 7—Fraudulently Transferring Assets—Intended to prevent a distributor from transferring his assets to another distributor in a fraudulent manner for the purpose of avoiding the delivery of product. Fraud must be proven.

Part 8—Rental Readjustments—This clause is intended to compel a distributor to make an adjustment of rentals on a block of pictures purchased on an average rental for the block when all of the pictures are not delivered. It can effect justifiable adjustments.

Part 9—Relief to Exhibitor from Designated Playdates—Distributors cannot demand specific playdates when specified days are not mentioned in the contract—but, they can and do get specified playdates when the contract specifies such playdates. The distributor, therefore, specifies such dates in the contract when it is negotiated.

The second section is intended to relieve an exhibitor from the showing of a picture on a certain day when he believes such picture is objectionable to his family trade. But, the distributor can compel the exhibitor to show the same picture at a later date.

Part 10—Withholding Feature Deliveries for Default in Short Subjects—The distributor cannot withhold such deliveries—provided the exhibitor has agreed to arbitrate all claims and controversies arising under ALL existing Optional Standard License Agreements, thereby weakening its effectiveness.

Part 11—Selling Specials—The distributor must first offer specials to his regular exhibitor client—but he does not have to make such offer if ALL of the client's contractual relations with the distributor are not in good standing. This weakens the effectiveness of the clause.

Part 12—Fire Regulations for Exchanges—Providing for fire drills and fire prevention and fire-fighting equipment at exchanges.

Unfair Practices—Exhibitors

Part 1—Selective Service Contracts—Governing the manner of making rejections under a selective buying contract, which practice usually only involves large downtown first run theatres.

Part 2—Overbuying—This clause has been one of the most beneficial to exhibitors, giving them relief from situations in which competitors had overbought with the intent and effect of depriving them of product.

Part 3—Reduced Admissions, Rebates, Premiums, Prizes, Lotteries, Etc.—The reduced admission section prohibits an exhibitor from lowering admissions below the minimum specified in his contract. Premiums are permitted, unless 75 per cent of the exhibitors in a territory vote otherwise. Exhibitors in one territory so voted but resultant protests were so stormy that the ban was nullified and since then no other action has been taken.

Lotteries and "bank nights" are prohibited, but their prohibition, especially of "bank nights" has caused no end of confusion because of conflicting opinions of various boards and local and state governments. The lottery and "bank night" section has been one of the biggest "headaches" of exhibition trade practices. Complaint must be lodged against each individual "bank night" user to make the ban effective.

Part 4—Fraudulently Transferring Ownership of Theatres—Intended to protect distributors from exhibitors who would transfer ownership in order to avoid uncompleted film contracts.

Part 5—Advertising Conflicting with a Prior Run—Subsequent runs shall not advertise specific pictures before their appearance at a prior run, according to this clause—but subsequent runs still advertise contrary to the clause.

Part 6—Interfering with Theatre Leasing Negotiations—Admittedly unworkable and nullified last week.

Part 7—Midnight Shows—These are prohibited unless permission is obtained from the exchange—and, so, exhibitors secure the necessary permission.

Part 8—Miss-outs on "Circuit Shipments"—A clause that is rarely involved.

Unfair Practices—Distributors-Exhibitors

Part 1—Optional Standard License Agreements—Compelling distributors to have available for use by exhibitors a copy of the Optional Standard License Agreement and a copy of the distributor's own company contract and the exhibitor is given the right to accept either form. However, distributors' individual "sales policy provisions" may be made a part of the Optional contract, which enables the distributor to insert in the Optional contract any and all of the "sales policy provisions" which are included in his own company form of contract.

Part 2—Arbitration of Contract Disputes—If arbitration is agreed to, it must be according to the Optional Standard License.

Part 3—Fraudulently Breaching Contracts—Prohibiting commercial fraud wherein one distributor and an exhibitor conspire to break existing contracts with another exhibitor or another distributor. A clause that is rarely, if ever, involved, and embracing a matter that would require considerable effort to prove.

Part 4—Commercial Bribery—No distributor or exhibitor must give or offer a gratuity in order to procure advantages. Likewise involving a matter rarely up.

Part 5—Disclosing Box Office Receipts—And, again, neither the distributor nor exhibitor can be held responsible for disclosures made by agents.

Part 6—Ten Per Cent Elimination Clause—Exhibitors are given the privilege of eliminating ten per cent of the pictures contracted for—provided, however, the contract is in good standing, pictures involved in the agreement do not average more than $250 per film and, provided further, that the exhibitor purchased all of the pictures offered to him at the same time by the distributor.

THE CAMERA REPORTS

WINNING ENSEMBLE. Three of the Herald's "Ten Biggest Money Making Stars of 1933-34," pictured at the Fox studio. Will Rogers topped the men, Janet Gaynor the women. And the first child to be so chosen was Shirley Temple.

GOING HOLLYWOOD. (Below) James Barton, former star of "Tobacco Road," leaving New York for the Coast (with Mrs. Barton) to make "The Taming of Zenas Henry" for RKO Radio.

BACK ON BROADWAY. (Left) Samson Raphaelson, Fox scenarist and author of "The Jazz Singer," whose new stage play, "Old Love," has gone into rehearsal for opening Christmas night.

JUNGLE LORE OR POLITICS? Frank Buck, animal film producer, and Col. Theodore Roosevelt, who once met in Singapore, meeting again at an AMPA luncheon in New York. And again Buck is off to Singapore to make another RKO Radio adventure film.

HEROISM WINS. What might have been a conflagration of widespread devastation was held to a fire affecting a relatively small area of the Warner lot, with a loss of a quarter of a million dollars, by the courage of studio workers. They fought the blaze until it was fully under control, aided only latterly by professional firemen. The pictures at the top of the page show the fire at its height, and Kay Francis, Warner star, surveying the ruins. The company has already begun its rebuilding.

RETURNS FOR OPERA SEASON. Lily Pons as she arrived in New York from Europe for her engagement at the Metropolitan. Later she will appear in a film for Radio.

TO SCREEN. Joe Cook, famed stage comedian, who has been signed by Educational for comedies.

AT PREMIERE. Betty Hamilton, featured in London Films' "The Private Life of Don Juan," released by United Artists, with Cayetano de Quesada, a guest at the New York opening.

CIRCUITS WIN FREE SHOW FIGHT; WILL BOOK STANDARD OIL TROUPE

Guy Lombardo Headliners Will Play Theatres as Added Attraction, with Circuits Paying Half of Salary Expenses

Capitulating to formidable opposition presented by the united fronts of three industries—the motion picture, legitimate theatre and newspaper publishing—through their Code Authorities, the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey on Monday agreed to abandon at once its project of blanketing the country with free radio shows. In addition, the motion picture interests effected arrangements whereby the oil company's troupe of headliners will be booked into theatres as added attractions, with the major circuits paying half the salaries.

Having disposed of the Standard Oil show problem, the film Code Authority, in cooperation with the Authority of the legitimate theatre, set about settling the problem of the broadcasters' utilization of former theatres, as well as radio studios, as places for free radio programs.

In the controversy over Standard Oil's free "advertising" show policy, the amusement industry, together with the publishers, negotiated an agreement that henceforth, whenever the oil group sponsors a radio show in a theatre or public auditorium, admissions comparable with those of first-run film theatres will be charged.

Standard Oil's free show was launched in New Haven 10 days ago and immediately brought protest from theatre and newspaper men. Theatre men cited the unfair competition of free admission to a two-hour variety entertainment with well known entertainers. The newspapers saw danger to their advertising revenue.

Standard Oil executives cooperated promptly with motion picture circuit, legitimate theatre and radio executives when they met Monday in the offices of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, in New York.

Plans for the tour of the Guy Lombardo-Esso Marketers were revised so that the show will work in actual cooperation with the theatres. It will be booked into theatres as an added stage attraction at regular admission prices. Others in the troupe are Pat Barnes, Cross and Dunn, Joan Abbott, the Mayfair trio and the O'Flynn quartet.

"The Esso Marketers" is the name used by the marketing organization of the Standard Oil companies of New Jersey, Louisiana and Pennsylvania, and the Colonial Beacon Oil Co.

New Plan Already Effective

The new plan went into effect on Monday at Schenectady, where, instead of playing a rented auditorium, the show went into RKO's Proctor theatre.

Solution of the unique situation came quickly, once the theatre interests combined forces.

"We want to cooperate with the theatre interests—not oppose them," said J. C. Donan, advertising manager of Standard Oil of New Jersey, who was at the MPPDA meeting. "As soon as it was pointed out to us that our original 'free show' plan was interpreted by theatre owners as unfair competition, we looked around for some other plan, and that plan developed at Monday's meeting."

PATRONS PREFER SINGLE FEATURE

At the instigation of Thomas Saxe of Saxe Amusement Management, Inc., Milwaukee, L. W. Orlove, manager of the Uptown theatre, recently experimented with a single feature and strong shorts, in contrast to the usual double feature program. A trailer was prepared, informing the audience one week in advance of the plan. During the week of the single feature each member of the audience was asked to fill out a card which would indicate the preference for duals or single features. The result had the youngsters expressing a preference for double bills, but 90 per cent of the adults favored a single feature and good short subjects.

Dates and Bookings

Dates and bookings for the remainder of the troupe's present tour are as follows:

December 12, RKO Palace, Albany; December 13, Loew's State, Syracuse; December 14, Loew's Palace, Rochester; December 15, Paramount Hippodrome and Great Lakes, Buffalo; December 17, Warners' Warner, Erie; December 18 and 19, Warners' Stanley and Loew's Penn, Pittsburgh; December 20, Capitol (Warner-Paramount), Wheeling, W. Va.; December 21, Warners' Virginia, Parkersburg, W. Va.; December 26, booking assumed jointly by Loew's and RKO, White Plains, N. Y.

Undated bookings and the circuits include Philadelphia, two nights, Warner; Baltimore, Warner and Loew's, jointly; Washington, Warner, Loew's and RKO; Richmond, Loew's; Norfolk, Loew's; Wilmington, Warner and Loew's; Trenton, RKO; Raleigh, N. C., Paramount; Charlotte, Paramount and Warner; Columbia, N. C., Paramount; Memphis, Loew's and Warner; Chattanooga, Paramount; Little Rock, Ark., Paramount; Shreveport, La., Paramount; New Orleans, two nights, Paramount, Loew's and RKO; Harrisburg, Pa., Loew's; Nashville, Tenn., Paramount and Loew's, and Newark, three nights, Loew's, RKO, Warner and Paramount.

Those representing the film industry in the MPPDA meetings were Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America; Harold S. Bareford, alternate for Harry M. Warner on the Code Authority; Charles L. O'Reilly, president of the New York Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce; Major Leslie E. Thompson, RKO. Merlin Hall Aylesworth, president of the National Broadcasting Company and chairman of the board of Radio-Keith-Orpheum, represented the radio broadcasting industry, while Henry Moskowitz and William A. Brady acted for the legitimate theatre. F. M. Williams represented the newspaper Code Authority.

Several months ago the Code Authorities of the motion picture and legitimate theatre had appointed committees to meet with a similar committee of the broadcasters' Code Authority, to stamp out free broadcasts in radio studios and regular theatres. The radio committee agreed to make a thorough survey and sent questionnaires to broadcasting studios, to be submitted to their public. The radio committee did not report, and this week, despite assurances from the motion picture Code Authority that it had received word from the radio group that the results of its survey would be made known in the "immediate future," major and independent circuits launched their own move and conferences were held in New York.

Labor officials, musicians and actors joined the move. On a committee of six appointed last week by Charles L. O'Reilly, all interests are represented. This committee consists of Harold S. Bareford, films; M. R. Runyon, radio; Dr. Henry Moskowitz, legitimate theatres; Frank Gillmore, Actors' Equity; Joseph N. Weber, American Federation of Musicians; George Browne, International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees. John C. Flinn, executive secretary of the film Code Authority, was appointed executive secretary of the committee. The committee will be a permanent one.

A proposal to boycott players who appear in free shows was made at the initial conference of this committee Friday. It was urged that theatres refuse to play attractions in which these blacklisted performers appear, and that studios decline to sign them for pictures.

Warner Rebuilds After Studio Fire

The reconstruction of the devastated area at the Warner Hollywood studio, following last week's fire, will be started immediately, Jack L. Warner, vice-president in charge of promotion, said late last week. He declared about 15 acres of the 80-acre plant were burned, estimating the damage before an inventory at $300,000. Shops at the Sunset Boulevard plant and the old Vitagraph plant will be used during repairs.

Paramount and United Artists were among the first competitive companies to offer their studio facilities to Warner after the fire. Adolph Zukor and Joseph M. Schenck, of Paramount and United Artists, respectively, offered their plants in the event production was hampered because of the fire.

Warner is installing six new 33,000-volt transformers, capable with present equipment of generating more electrical power than any other plant, at the Coast studio. Frank Murphy, head of the electrical department, is in charge of the installation, which is being rushed for use on the forthcoming "A Midsummer Night's Dream," "Go Into Your Dance," "Black Fury" and "Gold Diggers of 1935." The new transformers weigh 15,000 pounds each and will generate power for the four new sound stages now under construction.

Press Commends Results of Films' Self-Regulation

The press of the land is daily presenting evidences of an appreciation of the motion picture industry's self-regulative efforts at a general improvement of the level, morally and culturally, of the merchandise which gets 78 cents of every American amusement dollar. Herewith are presented some typical expressions from clippings that have come over the editor's desk:

Uplift in Tone

"There seems to be evidence that the emphatic protest which went over the country last summer is bearing fruit in a decided uplift in the tone of the major motion picture productions released of late . . . the constructive work which Mr. Hays has done in the past is having its reward in the immediate results which are coming from Hollywood. . . . We believe praise should be given to Mr. Hays because his efforts have had no small part in making the industry responsive to this call for better pictures."—Philadelphia, Pa., Presbyterian, Nov. 22, 1934.

Their Houses in Order

" . . . Following the campaign of the Legion of Decency, the picture producers have put their houses in order under the direction of Will Hays' organization . . ."—Hackensack, N. J., Evening Record, Nov. 23, 1934.

A First-Rate Job

"Editor and Publisher has in the past condemned vulgar, indecent and misleading motion picture advertising in newspapers, and we now wish to acknowledge the excellent clean-up that followed the change of front at Hollywood when religionists started to boycott all movie houses exhibiting immoral films. . . . We wish to acclaim as a first-rate job the internal clean-up of the past few weeks."—New York City, Editor & Publisher, Nov. 24, 1934.

Prestige Enhanced

"The improvement in the tone of motion pictures during the past year has been commented upon by many critics. Any number of objectionable features have been eliminated from the new pictures with the result that the prestige of the screen has been enhanced. . . ."—Providence, R. I., Visitor, Nov. 23, 1934.

Industry Well Regulated

"Declaring that the movie industry has so well regulated itself that the need for a censorship or court interference had been reduced to a minimum, Judge Joseph L. Kun, of Municipal Court, yesterday congratulated the members of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners' Association of Pennsylvania, Delaware and Maryland on their efforts to present clean amusement. . . ."—Philadelphia Inquirer-Public Ledger, Nov. 24, 1934.

Helped Box Office

"The motion picture profession is beginning to learn that the trend toward decency in pictures . . . has not only helped their collective conscience, but their box office receipts.

"Reports that business is going ever onward and upward over the country, are borne out by the box office figures right here in Springfield. . . .

"Juvenile attendance is creeping back and the more elderly straight-laced class . . . are coming back to the movies again to find out what really is going on. And they're liking it. . . ."—Springfield, Mo., Leader & Press, Nov. 21.

PASTOR PATROLS MAE WEST FILM

The Reverend James A. Smith, pastor of St. Lawrence's Roman Catholic Church, in Sayville, Long Island, last Sunday took upon himself the duties of pledge enforcer as well as pledge giver. After having read the Legion of Decency motion picture pledge at four masses, the pastor made sure that his parishioners strayed not from the path of the Legion, by taking up a picketing position at the box office of Joseph Phelps' Sayville theatre, the only one in town, where Mae West's "Belle of the Nineties," listed in Class B, was showing. He met many of his 500 parishioners during his militant pacing to and fro, but strangely enough they were all just walking, none having any intention of seeing Mae West. The pastor finally decided it was safe to leave—and Manager Phelps agreed with him.

American Seating Net $95,579 for Nine Months

The American Seating Company has reported for the nine months ended September 30, a consolidated profit of $95,579 after depreciation, interest and other charges, but before federal tax. The net compares with $64,143 for the corresponding period last year.

For the quarter ended September 30 the profit was $216,358 before taxes, which compares with a net loss of $39,474 in the preceding quarter and a profit of $184,604 before taxes in the third quarter of 1933.

Reade Opens Astor

Walter Reade reopened the Astor theatre on Broadway this week with MGM's "Babes in Toyland," at popular prices. Mr. Reade also operates the Mayfair on Broadway. Mr. Reade and Nicholas M. Schenck concluded an agreement canceling the 10-year MGM lease on the Astor.

BUSINESS FIGHTS NRA REENACTMENT

An attempt to enlist the aid of business men and industries in 12 states in the central west in fighting reenactment of the National Industrial Recovery Act in its present form has been started by the Kansas City Chamber of Commerce.

The move aims to obtain the support of Congressmen and Senators to vote for certain changes in the present Act when it is brought up at the coming session of Congress. The most important change would be to give the government no authority in making codes, its authority to be limited to either approving or rejecting a code set up by any industry. Letters expressing the local chamber's opposition to the NRA are being sent to chambers of commerce in many states.

Catholics Again Sign Pledges of Legion of Decency

Thousands of Catholics last Sunday again signed the Legion of Decency pledge to stay away from motion pictures adjudged indecent. The pledge will be repeated annually on the same Sunday in the Catholic church year.

Explanatory of the Legion's new move were the remarks of Archbishop John T. McNicholas of Cincinnati, the Legion's founder, who said that while he understood that the Production Code Administration, under the guidance of Joseph I. Breen, had made great improvement, a mass pledging of all Catholics would ultimately bring about complete elimination of salacious films.

The Episcopal Committee on Motion Pictures, appointed by the Catholic Bishops of the United States, requested that the call be sounded again in every parish.

Coincidentally, the Legion issued a list of more than 100 "A," "B" and "C" motion pictures.

This week it was indicated in New York that there is a widespread feeling in the diocese against the weekly listing of classified pictures as described above. Many dioceses, including Brooklyn, are using a list of approved pictures only.

San Francisco Film Board Of Trade Elects Officers

The annual meeting and election of officers of the San Francisco Film Board of Trade was held last week. Officers chosen were L. E. Tillman, Columbia, president; G. William Wolf, RKO, vice-president, and Chas. H. Muehlman, Warner, secretary-treasurer. These officers, with the addition of George Ballentine, Fox, and Grover C. Parsons, MGM, make up the board of governors.

Jack Bettencourt, former manager for Paramount, tendered his resignation and has been succeeded by George Smith, the new manager at San Francisco.

Botsford New Scenario Editor for Paramount

A. M. Botsford, executive assistant to Emanuel Cohen, in charge of Paramount production on the Coast, has been named head of the scenario department, following the resignation of Merritt Hulburd to join Samuel Goldwyn.

Bogart Rogers is scenario editor, and William Wright, former production assistant to B. P. Schulberg, has taken over Mr. Botsford's production activities in addition to assisting Mr. Cohen.

1,000 at Variety Club Dance

More than 1,000 attended the fourth annual motion picture relief dance and show sponsored by the Variety Club in Kansas City last Monday night at the Pla-Mor. Arthur Cole of Paramount was general chairman, assisted by George Baker of the Newman Theatre; Irwin Dubinsky, Laurence Lehman of the Mainstreet and Stanley Chambers of the Uptown Theatre.

10,265 Theatres Took $415,153,000 U.S. Report Shows

Coinciding closely with the estimates made by MOTION PICTURE HERALD, final figures on the theatrical industry for 1933, made public this week by the United States Census Bureau at Washington, show a total of 10,265 theatres with box office receipts of $415,153,000.

The bureau's final calculations differed from those of the HERALD only in the case of motion picture and vaudeville theatres, where two additional returns showing receipts of $775,000 were filed after the conclusion of the canvass. As a result, the totals for this group were increased from 642 houses with receipts of $49,451,000, as reported by the HERALD, to 644 houses with receipts of $50,226,000.

A total of 75,993 persons received employment in the theatrical industry last year, their compensation totaling $85,422,000, it was shown. The number of full-time employees averaged 63,136 and their payroll was $80,519,000, while there was an average of 12,857 part time employees who received $4,903,000.

The 10,265 theatres of the country were operated by 8,294 proprietors, it was disclosed. A break-down of the figures revealed that the 9,499 motion picture houses had 8,024 proprietors and an average of 54,030 full-time employees receiving $67,009,000 and 11,698 part-time employees receiving $4,442,000, the total payroll being $71,451,000. The 644 motion picture and vaudeville theatres had 191 proprietors and an average of 7,924 full-time employees receiving $10,053,000 and 711 part-time workers receiving $252,000, the total payroll being $10,305,000.

The legitimate theatres, 122, had 69 proprietors and an average of 1,182 full-time employees receiving $3,457,000 and 448 part-time workers receiving $209,000, the total payroll being $3,666,000.

The report showed that of every dollar spent in the country for various services, slightly over 15 cents went into the theatre box office, the motion picture houses receiving 12.91 cents, motion picture and vaudeville 1.82 cents and legitimate 0.31 cent.

Trans-Lux Head Accuses Andrews

The management of Trans-Lux Daylight Picture Screen Corp. is striking back at a group trying to seize control and accuses Archibald M. Andrews of again being the moving spirit in the fight.

The charge was made in a letter to stockholders over the signature of Percy N. Furber, president, who appealed for proxies for the annual meeting December 19.

"Investors face a serious threat to the safety of their securities through unwarranted and baseless allegations by so-called independent reorganization committees," the letter stated. Mr. Furber referred to Mr. Andrews as a "promoter."

SCHULBERG OR WANGER IN PARAMOUNT TALKED

Schulberg Declares He Will Return to Post or Produce Independently of Any Studio

B. P. Schulberg may return to his former post of managing director of all Paramount production activity, according to reports of unofficial discussions recently held in Hollywood between the producer and "people from New York," presumably representatives of the trustees of Paramount Publix or the company's bankers.

It was reported also that Walter Wanger, former Paramount production executive, is likewise being considered for the top studio position. He is now making six features for Paramount.

If Mr. Schulberg were to enter the official Paramount production picture, he would succeed Emanuel Cohen, who in June of 1932 took over the company's production reins from Mr. Schulberg, who had just resigned to enter independent production.

Either That or Independent

Mr. Schulberg arrived in New York over the weekend for a three weeks stay. En route from Hollywood he stopped over in Kansas City for a half hour and, interviewed by the HERALD's correspondent, said "there are such rumors." He explained that he was going to New York in connection with Paramount's production affairs, and added:

"I will either take over Paramount production entirely or, if that falls through, will produce entirely independently of any studio, releasing through the major distributor who offers me the most advantageous terms."

Accompanying Mr. Schulberg east was Howard Spellman, former story editor for RKO Radio Pictures, who said in Kansas City that he will be Mr. Schulberg's assistant, if Mr. Schulberg takes over Paramount production.

"It is significant that I am going east with Schulberg," Mr. Spellman said. "I very likely will be with him in his future activities."

On Tuesday in New York, Mr. Schulberg again said there had been certain discussions in Hollywood pertaining to future production activity in connection with Paramount. There also had been "certain rumors," he declared, and "I have heard some of them myself."

Await Reorganization Approval

It is considered highly improbable in well informed circles that anything of an official nature can be concluded with Mr. Schulberg until Paramount is cleared of its bankruptcy and placed in the hands of its already partially formed new board of directors. There is to be a public hearing of the reorganization plan, December 27, after which court approval is expected.

The only open opposition to date against the plan has been voiced by Samuel Zirn, said to represent bondholders of less than $50,000 of debentures, and by Archibald Palmer, counsel for bondholders of Allied Owners, one of the largest Paramount creditors. Both interests object to the proposed board of directors.

Selection of three additional directors, to reach the minimum of 12 members, is under way, and is expected to be completed before December 27.

Federal Judge Goddard in New York made final decision on the amounts of fees to be paid the three Paramount trustees—Charles E. Richardson, Charles D. Hilles and Eugene W. Leake—allowing them each $32,500. Judge Goddard also fixed interim allowances of $175,000 for Root, Clark, Buckner & Ballantine, counsel for the trustees.

J. M. Bettencourt this week became sales manager of the Paramount exchange in San Francisco, with the transfer of George Smith from Cincinnati to managership of the coast branch. J. J. Oulahan, Washington salesman, succeeds Smith in Cincinnati.

Tax Rule to Check Cutting of Prices

Tax regulations issued by the Internal Revenue Bureau in cooperation with the amusements division of the NRA are designed to reduce price-cutting by requiring collection of the admission tax at the regular price of the theatre, rather than at the price at which admission is given under "throw-aways," "two-for-ones" and other offers.

Feeling that the code provisions against price cutting thus would be given "teeth," the NRA had appealed to the Internal Revenue Bureau.

The NRA announced in Washington that it will begin an investigation of salaries paid to motion picture Code Authority members. Salaries of code executives come out of assessments, W. A. Harriman, NRA executive said, and in some cases investigation has disclosed the heads of certain code authorities draw large salaries from trade associations.

Because of his conscientious work on the code, John C. Flinn, executive secretary of the film Code Authority, last week was given a salary increase of $8,000 annually, bringing his annual remuneration to $20,000.

Eleven months' operation of the Code Authority has cost $181,498, of which $24,478 was spent during November, the authority reported this week. This figure includes the expenditures of its various agencies.

Termination of the national clearance and zoning stalemate was reported close at hand, with the Code Authority concentrating on two schedules—Kansas City and New Haven. Indications were that New Haven's schedule may be the first of the two to receive the Code Authority's official sanction.

A number of amendments to the vaudeville provisions of the motion picture code will be discussed at a public hearing in Washington December 19.

Edward Horne Dies

Edward A. Horne, manager of Radio's print department for the past 15 years, died last week at his home in New York. Burial was in Gate of Heaven Cemetery, Valhalla, N. Y.

PAY OR GET NO FILM, BRITISH RENTERS SAY

Distributors Also to Refuse Product to Exhibitors Showing Over 3½ Hours

By BRUCE ALLAN
London Correspondent

Two new announcements by the Kinematograph Renters' Society are likely to have a very big influence on the future conduct of the British industry. The first defines, and the second sets out to limit, what is regarded by distributors as the illegitimate credit taken by many exhibitors in rental payments.

The Society based its survey on the principle that the industry "is in reality a cash one," and that it has been "drifting towards one of credit," so that "some exhibitors recently have made the granting of long credit a condition of doing business."

Now the society has decided that from information already in its possession, certain exhibitors will be classified in three groups:

1. Those who will pay twice a week.
2. Those who will pay twice a month on definite dates.
3. Those who will pay once a month on a definite date.

"Failure to pay . . . would result in delivery of the next program being withheld," said the statement, which also made it plain that the system would be controlled by the Society, so that "renters individually are relieved of any discrimination by exhibitors whose payments are controlled, or from any opprobrium, the reason being that the Society itself is the clearing house."

It is added that a fourth classification of exhibitors who will pay weekly will be made if necessary.

The policy amounts to one of a classification of British theatres on the basis of the credit which they safely can be allowed. If it were practicable to apply the cash principle in a 100 per cent form there is no doubt that the workings of the industry in all its branches would be eased enormously, and it is probable that the KRS, which is directed with intelligence and a sometimes rather drastic efficiency, is working towards that end.

At the present moment, the exhibitor is the only person obtaining maximum benefits from the circumstance that the patron at the box office not only pays cash but pays it all.

There is therefore no logical reason why all rentals should not be collected in seven days—nor, since we are being logical, why renters themselves should not also pay cash to all their creditors. That millennium receives no mention in the K.R.S. statement.

Program Time Limit Effective

The exhibitor is certainly getting plenty of regulation these days. Another KRS communiqué of the week announces that the recent decision that 3½ hours should be the maximum program time has proved fully effective. Inasmuch as any theatre which exceeds this limit will find its film supplies abruptly cut off, the rule is unlikely to be broken.

British patrons are satisfied with a three hour show, or less, but crazy competition in certain districts was greatly extending this limit and,

CEA resolutions notwithstanding, there was no saying where it would have ended if the KRS had not stepped in.

Britain and America

The extremely bright B.I.P. house organ, the British Motion Picture News, though it no longer features John Maxwell's astonishing demonstrations of what a Scottish solicitor can do with the law of libel, continues to deal with trade problems with a candor rarely found in the professional press. Unfortunately its outspokenness is limited by a rather blinkered view of some of these problems; it simply cannot, for instance, get the American market in a correct focus—which is rather surprising in a publication presumably reflecting the views of Arthur Dent, distributing chief of B.I.P.. Wardour, a highly practical British executive who has sold films to America.

According to the British Motion Picture News, the statement of a Sunday paper critic that the American market is "standing open, high, wide and handsome" is "just so much mottled tosh." The real truth about America, it says, is that "all British producers can hope for are just a few crumbs."

The point is, surely, quite other. If British films are being successfully sold in the States today, as they are, it is because their producers have realized that their fate is in the hands of American exhibitors and not of American distributors. But perhaps these producers expected something more than "crumbs?"

Patron Strike Threat

The Manchester and Salford Trades Council, acting on threats already made by the National Association of Theatrical Employees, has, as expected, passed a resolution calling upon Trades Union members in the area "to patronize only those places that conform to Trade Union conditions."

This is a sequel to the failure of local exhibitors to arrive at an agreement as to wages and working conditions with the Association.

It was asserted at the Trades Council meeting that 95 per cent of cinema patronage came from trade unionists.

"Overbuilding"—a Reaction

The CEA's booklet exposing Overbuilding has undoubtedly had a big effect already. To the thinking of some exhibitors it has had too much. Speaking at the banquet of the Birmingham branch of the Association, W. S. Clift, chairman, said that the attitude of some local licensing authorities now was: "We have one cinema in this town and we think that is sufficient."

Mr. Clift urged the CEA to make it plain that it was not desired to afford the owner of a small and out of date cinema protection against a modern building.

First Division Signs Garyn, McConnell For "Time" Selling

Fred J. McConnell has been named eastern sales manager, and Walter P. (Pat) Garyn western sales manager for the "March of Time" short subject news series which First Division is to release. Both are well known executives, Mr. McConnell having been with Universal in charge of short subject sales and later with Van Beuren. Mr. Garyn, former theatre operator, was assistant to Winfield Sheehan when he was Fox sales manager, later was an MGM sales executive, and subsequently was general sales manager and then executive assistant to Herman Robbins, president of National Screen Service.

John A. Curtis, vice-president and treasurer of First Division, arrived in Hollywood from New York last week preparatory to the establishment of the company's own production unit. He also is working on plans to establish exchanges in the west. Al Friedlander is expected in Hollywood about January 10 to assist Mr. Curtis.

The company last week announced new exchanges in Detroit, Washington, and one in the south. An office in Chicago is expected to be opened shortly. Milton Cohen has been named manager of the Detroit exchange. W. M. Richardson, with Universal for several years, has been named district manager in the south.

First Division has concluded arrangements for distribution of films of the London-Shikat wrestling match at Madison Square Garden in New York this week.

Warner Holders Name 5 Directors

Stockholders of Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., named five members to the board of directors without opposition at their annual meeting in Wilmington, Del., Monday. Four of the five were re-elected.

The directors named are Charles S. Guggenheimer, Stanleigh P. Friedman, Sam E. Morris and Morris Wolf, re-elected, and Samuel Carlisle, who succeeds former Judge John P. Laffey, of Wilmington. Judge Laffey requested his name be omitted from nomination because of ill health.

Ivan Culbertson, Wilmington attorney, presided at the meeting in the absence of former Federal Judge Hugh E. Morris, company attorney.

Abel Klaw and John E. Krauss, Wilmington inspectors of elections, announced that 2,383,909 shares had been voted for the new directors.

Abel Cary Thomas, secretary and general counsel for Warner, announced that a special meeting will be called within a short time to merge the Stanley Company of America with Warner Brothers. Mr. Thomas said there will be no reorganization of the company under the common stock, in response to a direct question on the subject.

Mr. Thomas said Warner hopes to put a home miniature talking picture projector on the market.

Milliken Presents Five-Point Program and Screens First of "Character Building" Films

By FRANCIS L. BURT
Washington Correspondent

Full cooperation of the motion picture industry "in the detection of crime and the apprehension of criminals through the use of motion picture technique" was offered this week to the Attorney General's Conference on Crime in Washington by the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, as part of a five-point program of educational and repressive work.

Called by Attorney General Cummings to coordinate efforts to prevent crime, the conference was attended by a large number of enforcement officials, educators, representatives of religious organizations, leaders of the bar and various industries. The motion picture industry was represented by former Governor of Maine Carl E. Milliken, secretary, and an attorney, of the MPPDA.

In submitting the industry's five-point program, Mr. Milliken had screened for the conference the first of a group of "character building" pictures which will be offered to deepen in the minds of the public a sense of personal responsibility, with the expectation that the same type of pictures specially pointed will serve also the cause of crime prevention.

Other points in the program were: The use of every available source of scientific information to the end that the content of motion picture entertainment and particularly the method of presenting dramatic material on the screen shall not contribute to the making of crime and criminals or to the undermining of character; the continuation of definite and specific efforts to present within the proper scope of artistic creation the best and most scientific methods of crime suppression by police and other law enforcement agencies; and cooperation in any national program that may be undertaken to arouse public opinion to the needs of law enforcement and crime prevention.

Formation of a National Crime Research Institute, to work in conjunction with the Department of Justice, was proposed by Mr. Milliken, to "integrate into authoritative form data now available, encourage the prosecution of further studies and, as studies are made, present to the public the information thus provided concerning the causes and deterrents of crime."

"An institution established in this way might well be the means for correlating and presenting the results of scientific research in crime causation," he commented.

Cooperation with Police

"Speaking for the motion picture industry, we not only suggest, but urge this method of providing findings for those who are engaged in the production of motion pictures in order that such pictures may be adequately safeguarded in form and in content."

A definite field of cooperation with the police authorities is opened up by Mr. Milliken's proposal for the use of motion pictures in the apprehension of criminals.

"The motion picture industry would be glad to cooperate with law enforcement authorities in the detection of crime and the apprehension of known criminals through the possible use by such agencies of motion picture technique," he declared.

"The present practice of photographing convicted criminals and the use of such photographs for purposes of identification at a later date may be improved by the use of motion picture apparatus.

"The motion picture camera, if installed by police departments, could record the features of the offender in mobility and give a truer likeness. Also the use of sound recording, with the offender required to speak, would identify peculiarities of speech and voice tones.

Stills for Bulletins

"Still photographs made from these motion pictures could continue to be used for bulletins in post offices and other public places and for general distribution to the press, but the greater additional value would come in the search for notorious criminals, whose crimes command nationwide attention and who are being sought throughout the country. Talking pictures have the power to familiarize the nation, in fact the world, with the features and recognizable characteristics of notorious offenders, in animation and sound, as an effective means of aiding public authorities in their prompt apprehension."

Four of the character-building pictures, described by Mr. Milliken, which were compiled by the Committee on Social Values in Motion Pictures, of which Dr. Howard Le Sourd, dean of the Graduate School of Boston University, is chairman, were privately shown to the conference delegates at the Hotel Mayflower Tuesday afternoon.

Character Situations Chosen

Relating to the new type of picture, designed specifically to aid educational authorities in building character, Mr. Milliken said:

"Studies of the subject made it evident that the type of picture most widely approved was one which presented a life situation or problem that could be discussed. The plan now evolved by expert opinion is to take character situations from existing photoplays which depict a series of everyday problems of character education, presented without obvious effort to improve and educate.

"Specifically, we are pleased to advise the Conference of the proposed preparation of a similar series of pictures designed to aid crime prevention."

Mooney to Head B. & D. Promotion

Paul C. Mooney is en route to New York from London, to take charge of sales promotion for British & Dominions in the United States. The English company is headed by Herbert Wilcox.

Mr. Mooney was originally a Cleveland newspaper man. He later became branch manager for Fox in Cleveland, and subsequently was sales manager for Louis B. Mayer and then a vice-president of Producers' Distributing Corporation.

New Wisconsin Exhibitor Unit

Theatre owners in Wisconsin, dissatisfied with the present structures of the two state associations, met at Milwaukee late last week to construct from the local MPTO and Allied units a new statewide group which would not have any national affiliations. The present organizations would be dissolved upon formation of the new unit on January 1st.

Working on the new structure is a committee of ten, including E. F. Maertz, Charles Washicheck, James J. Boden and John Honthaner, representing Allied; George Fischer, A. C. Gutenberg, A. D. Kvoil and Ernst Langemack, representing the state MPTO, and Ross Baldwin and B. K. Fischer, acting on behalf of exhibitors not affiliated with either group.

Meanwhile, Allied in Illinois, at a special meeting held at Chicago, was understood to have raised its dues from 20 cents to 40 cents per seat annually.

The Independent Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Delaware and Eastern Maryland will meet on Thursday at Harrington, Del., to formulate a protest against the 10-day clearance given theatres of Wilmington and Washington.

Some 100 exhibitors of Louisiana are meeting at New Orleans to talk with Sidney E. Samuelson, president of Allied, about a new state Allied organization.

Mr. Samuelson also presided at a directors meeting of the national Allied association. He predicted affiliated theatres would make an attempt to force 25-cent minimum admissions on independent houses, which, he said, can make a profit on 10 and 20-cent admissions. Abram F. Myers, Allied counsel, urged a firm stand on the Tri-Ergon patent situation.

Also in session in New Orleans was the Georgia theatre owners association, which talked about petitioning the government for a reopening of the code. They charged the code in its present form is unfair to independents, and that code boards are controlled by "major circuits."

The Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York was in session on Wednesday at the Hotel Astor on Broadway, Harry Brandt presiding. Preliminary announcements said Senators Borah and Nye would speak.

Allied Amusements of the Northwest were outlining a campaign against adverse legislation, principally taxation.

Demands Workers' Standards Kept Up

An amendment to the code which prohibits exhibitors from entering into "any agreement, directly or indirectly, for services of a kind usually and customarily performed by theatre employees directly compensated by exhibitors, unless such agreement provides that no person actually engaged in rendering such services shall be employed at a lower standard provided for" in the code, "except under contracts entered into prior to the effective date of the amendment," was submitted to the industry this week by Deputy Administrator William P. Farnsworth.

The chart, based on Motion Picture Herald's tabulation of box office grosses, indicates the trend of business in three Atlantic Coast key cities during the ten week period from September 22 to November 24, 1934. In each city, the gross for that city during the first week of the period is taken as 100 per cent.

Godsol, Former Film Head, Dies

Frank J. Godsol, at one time president of Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, died in Lausanne, Switzerland, last week, according to word received in New York.

Mr. Godsol originally came from Cleveland, then joined Pathe of France many years ago, and later was associated with the Shuberts. He became purchasing agent in the United States for France during the war. He was the founder of Tecla Pearls.

Once a member of the board of directors of the Goldwyn company, Mr. Godsol obtained control and became president, as Samuel Goldwyn, one of the founders of the company, retired. Mr. Godsol acted for the Goldwyn Company in the merger which developed into Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

He was believed to have been 61 when he died, having lived in Switzerland for many years for his health.

Glass Loses Suit Against Hoblitzelle

R. Z. Glass, independent neighborhood exhibitor of Dallas, this week lost his suit for an injunction to prevent price-fixing and alleged monopoly, against Karl Hoblitzelle, Interstate Circuit, Inc.; R. J. O'Donnell, Southern Enterprises, Inc.; Paschall-Texas Theatres, Inc., and Dent Theatres, Inc.

Judge W. M. Taylor in 14th district court, Dallas, ruled that protection on Class A product for major first-run houses did not prevent independents from getting the ordinary run of product. Protection, he decided, is necessary to maintain fair prices for higher class pictures and thus obtain a continuation of product for all theatres and for the public.

Judge Taylor said he was unable to find actual proof that the plaintiff would sustain injury as a result of the protection agreement.

Double Bill Ruling Seen This Month

Trial of the Harry Perelman suit to force major distributors to eliminate the new season contract clause banning double features reached its conclusion last Thursday in Federal Court, Philadelphia. The sole question to be decided, according to Judge George A. Welsh, was whether the unity of action of the defendants in using double feature clauses in contracts has resulted in collusion and restraint of trade.

Judge Welsh is expected to hand down a decision before the Christmas holidays. Both sides were given until December 21 to file briefs.

On the last day of the trial, three exchange men testified that their companies had enforced restrictions against double bills at various times between 1930 and 1932 as a result of complaints made against the Venice theatre.

In summing up for the plaintiff, his counsel, Benjamin Golder, quoted from a California decision restraining collusion in fighting double features. In rebuttal, Morris Wolf, defense attorney, denied the existence of collusion, asserting double features tended to cut down attendance at film theatres and reduce interest in films on the part of patrons.

Robert E. Long, Publicist, Dies

Robert Edgar Long, for years associated with David Wark Griffith in charge of publicity for the director, died late last week at the Hospital for the Ruptured and Crippled in New York, following a brief illness.

A veteran of theatrical and motion picture publicity, Mr. Long handled that work for many noted producers, including William A. Brady, the Aborns, Earl Carroll and Russel Janney.

SHOWMEN'S REVIEWS

This department deals with new product from the point of view of the exhibitor who is to purvey it to his own public

Bright Eyes

(Fox)
Comedy-Drama

"Bright Eyes" should prove a genuine Christmas present for every exhibitor who plays it. Also its presentation should be all of that for the public, both the regulars and those who show up only upon special occasions. The reasons therefore are many.

First, and unquestionably the most significant of its many commercial and entertainment merits, is Shirley Temple. Second is story quality. That, fully of appealing heart-interest, blends practically all the elements that audiences like to see in a picture. Consistently human, its drama is potent without being theatrically melodramatic. Its comedy is natural. Both are charmingly combined. The pathos of the drama, playing upon sentiment, emphatically amplifies the value of the comedy. There is pulse-quickenning thrill, also a clever admixture of hokum and realism.

Expertly acted and intelligently directed, the picture tells an elevating and sympathy inspiring story. Though interest is always upon little Miss Temple, there are times when all the others of the cast are in the spotlight and occasions when Jane Withers and Charles Selton almost steal the show.

Early sequences firmly establishing its character, the picture actually gets underway when the loop aviators arrange a Christmas party for fatherless Shirley. Her mother accidentally killed en route to the happy event, it is the fate of Loop, Shirley's idol, to break the news. That he does by taking her up into the air. In the clouds, he tells her that that they are near heaven, where his father and mother are, where her daddy is too, and where, because she was so lonely for him, Shirley's mother has come.

Then it's Shirley in the Smythe household; sequences marked by the outstanding performance of Joy as the spoiled brat and the biting comedy of irascible old Uncle Ned Smith. Sympathy, already strong for Shirley, is intensified by their performances as well as the cruel and avaricious demeanor of Mr. and Mrs. Smythe.

The story runs to its climax as Uncle Ned announces plans to adopt the child who has won a high place in his supposedly hard old heart. To finance his claim to Shirley, godfather Loop undertakes a hazardous flight. Shirley, who has run away from home, stows herself away in the plane. In the air she appears to Loop, who already has been informed via radio that he is accused of kidnaping the child. An accident forces the pair to bail out, their parachute landing just on the edge of a cliff.

In court, the judge asks Shirley with whom she would like to live and she points out Loop, Uncle Ned and Adele Martin, a girl who once had jilted Loop. The judge dismisses all the others. Adjourning to his chambers, Loop and Adele, inspired by Shirley, are made to see the light and the picture fades out in an atmosphere that assures all that Uncle Ned will take ample care of its heroes.

That "Bright Eyes" should be an outstanding commercial success requires only a furtherance of the quality of showmanship which as applied during the last few months has made Shirley

Helldorado

(Fox-Lasky)
Adventure

From a showmanship as well as audience topical interest point of view, the reported discovery of gold in territory adjacent to the locale in which this picture was made looms up as an unusual exploitation asset. "Helldorado" is the story of a 1934 gold strike. Dolled up with drama, romantic love interest, comedy, thrill—much of which, as far as patron interest is concerned, bears little relation to the basic idea—the yarn ramifies in many directions.

Self-appointed leader Ryan browbeats a bunch of auto travelers into rescuing themselves from a spectacular cloudburst. Leading snobbish Glenda, Ulysses and pickanniny Sam Ed into the grotesque sanctuary of ghost town Helldorado, the picture assumes a fantastic atmosphere as old Prospector Abner, for whom time had stopped years ago, mistakes Ryan for an old pard and Glenda for his wife. The hero believes he has discovered a new bonanza, which he promises to share with the entire party of truck drivers, salesmen, show girls and business tycoons.

Leading Glenda and the tolerant but reserved Fan Avery from their isolation, Ryan tells the ready listening townfolk of his find. Despite the fact that an assay proves the ore fool's gold, a modern gold rush ensues, via auto, airplane, ox-cart and by foot. Finding nothing, the disappointed prospectors are ready to rend Ryan limb from limb, when Glenda, who returned to Helldorado with the mob, thumbing through old papers discovers the locale of the mine. As there will be riches for all who stake claims, Glenda suddenly discovers that beneath Ryan's eccentric and domineering exterior and his penchant for exaggeration there is a real heart.

The cast being hardly of the power that will inspire box office rushes, and H. B. Walthall's performance being probably the only feature that will be talked about, the problem of selling the attraction resolves itself into how topical exploitation can be adapted in whetting patron curiosity. With gold as the subject, and all that man has done to get it as the embellishing feature, the show is wide open for alluring exploitation.—McCARTHY, Hollywood.

Enchanted April

(Radio)
Comedy-Drama

More than one obstacle must be skilfully overcome if this production is to be developed into a popular audience attraction. Its potential entertainment comes under no general heading. Essentially something for the intelligentsia, the picture is of that type which most exhibitors, other than those playing to sophisticated clientele, have indicated is beyond the understanding and appreciation of their audiences. As dialogue is the principal interpreting medium, action, save in one or two instances, is at a minimum. Additionally, because of the abstruse story trend, illusion that would permit audiences to exercise imagination only vaguely permits an anticipation of what is to follow.

In the spirit of the show, the acting is good. However, rather than being a well-fused whole, the performances assume the aspect of excellent solo character portrayals. Thus usual exploitation methods are difficult to apply. In many cases, word-of-mouth advertising probably will prove effective. Generally, nevertheless, the power of clever, smart printed words is to be relied upon.

On a rainy English afternoon, Lotty talks Rose into renting a sun-drenched, flower-smothered Italian villa. The two middle aged women yearn to go adventuring in search of the gayness they lost when youth had fled. Principally they want to get away from their husbands; Mellersh, a former museum clerk who has become a best selling author with an army of feminine fans, and Frederick, a triviality-worshipping solicitor.

At the villa, enjoying the acme of their dreams, even though they have some comedy tinged difficulties with their paying guests, Lady Caroline and Mrs. Fisher, the story is that of two amazed women living in another world. With the arrival of Frederick, the atmosphere turns ridiculously comic in the scenes where he takes a hot bath and in the family tree tracing sequence with Lady Caroline. Then arrives Mellersh, to find that his current flame, Lady Caroline, is domiciled under the same roof as his wife, Lotty. Nothing tense or dramatic happens. Caroline seems infatuated with landlord Briggs. The Arbuthnots appear to have discovered a new understanding and appreciation. And Mellersh is semi-awed to realize that Lotty is a far more fascinating and glamorous woman than any of the alluring creatures of whom he has written.

Naturally the Ann Harding fan following will find much in her work and the story to admire. But the ordinary folk most likely will like the antics of Reginald Owen, supplemented to the comedy contrasts provided by Jessie Ralph, Charles Judels and Rafaela Ottiano. As the major appeal of the picture undoubtedly will register most effectively with the women, special efforts should be exerted towards whipping up advance interest among feminine patrons.—MCCARTHY, Hollywood.

Jealousy

(Columbia)

Drama

Entertainment with a novel twist, this yarn of the green-eyed monster and the tricks he can play on an otherwise sane and satisfactory young man, is likeable product, set in part in the lively atmosphere of the squared circle. The surprise conclusion bids fair to create a fair amount of word-of-mouth selling. This fact, coupled with the fact the picture is well-paced and mixes action, romance, drama and comedy, should prompt every effort to getting the patrons into the house.

The exhibitor has Nancy Carroll, popular and attractive, in the feminine lead, and George Murphy opposite. Murphy, comparatively new to the films, is personable and definitely capable, indicating that stress on his name in the cast will be no mistake, both from the standpoint of immediate appreciation by the audience, and as a buildup for probable future appearances. In addition, chiefly in support, are Donald Cook and Arthur Hohl, both familiar names.

The tragedy and heavily dramatic episodes of the picture are all part of the mental concoction of a young boxer under the influence of five clenched fingers encased in a glove, and while his cheek is adjacent to the canvas, but the theatre patrons do not know that until the closing minutes. When they do discover it, it comes as a surprising and unusually pleasing revelation.

Murphy, successful young pugilist, is engaged to Miss Carroll, secretary to Cook, executive of a jewelry firm. Miss Carroll finds it impossible to cure Murphy of his short-tempered jealousy, and after an argument in Cook's office, Miss Carroll returns his ring. He reports just in time for a bout. Miss Carroll, contrite, goes to the bout with Cook, and Murphy, seeing them and startled, is lowered to the canvas not too gently via a strong right.

Later, after the knockout, he and Miss Carroll are married, while Murphy starts a comeback. Financially embarrassed, Miss Carroll goes to work, obtaining a job as manager of a store Cook owns. Through a misunderstanding, Murphy finds her one evening at the apartment of Cook, and the resulting fight ends in the death of Cook. Murphy, temporarily losing his mind, wanders the country, while his wife goes on trial for murder. Coming to, he arrives at the courtroom in time to save his wife by confessing his guilt. As he is led to the electric chair, he falls, and awakens in that same early bout, listening to the count of nine. Up again, a lesson learned, and with Miss Carroll at the ringside, he wins the fight, and sees the light with respect to Cook.—AARONSON, New York.

Gambling

(Fox)

Drama

In this adaptation of a stage play by the expert and experienced George M. Cohan, which is produced by Harold B. Franklin, Mr. Cohan is once again the "whole show." Just what importance the regular run of film theatre patronage over the country will attach to the appearance of Mr. Cohan in the starring role of a picture is problematical. Perhaps the exhibitor himself, knowing best his own community and his own patronage, will be best able to answer that question. Mr. Cohan appeared last year in "The Phantom President."

The man who talks out of the side of his mouth brings a certain individualism to his screen role. His name may be used for what it may be worth. The only other names which appear to be familiar to the motion picture public generally are those of Wynne Gibson and Dorothy Burgess. The Six Spirits of Rhythm, colored band, appear briefly.

The theme is indicated by the title, with a born gambler taking the buffeting of fate in the gambling spirit, and clearing up a disturbing mystery by playing his hunches to the limit. He dabbles in romance, a pseudo-romance, done for a definite purpose, then discovers that there is still a desire for affection left in his makeup. Thus romance and revenge are dual elements in the structure of the story, with the clever and theatre-wise Cohan entirely dominating the picture.

There is, naturally enough, a limited amount of action, and the pace which is usually so necessary to the motion picture designed for popular consumption, appears to have lost out to the careful and studied mannerism of Cohan.

Cohan, as a well-known gambler of New York, operates a fashionable gambling place for the wealthy, with elaborate devices to make fruitless the raids of persistent police patrols, and a deep and consuming affection for a daughter, studying in Europe and about to return home. At the boat, Cohan finds no daughter but a note saying she is eloping with Theodore Newton, whom she met on the boat, and who, Cohan learns, is a young man about town of considerable wealth. Later Cohan learns the girl has been found dead in a New York hotel.

Despite the protestations of innocence on the part of Newton and his insistence that he loved the girl and would not harm her, the broken-hearted gambler sets about to accomplish what the police apparently are unable to do. Miss Gibson, fast young woman living with Miss Burgess, and Miss Burgess, who had been maintained in an apartment by Newton, visit Cohan's place with a mutual friend. Cohan cultivates the friendship of the gold-digging Miss Gibson, and makes love to Miss Burgess.

Playing his game slowly and carefully, he learns that Miss Burgess is married to Newton and that he planned to get a divorce in order to marry Cohan's daughter. With the connivance of a friendly police inspector, he plans a fruitful raid on his gambling resort, and arranges that the two girls be present. He and the inspector confront Miss Burgess with evidence, and she weakens. Cohan goes to Newton, exacts a confession that he killed Cohan's daughter by accident when she fell. Newton kills himself, and Cohan, through with gambling and the mystery cleared, finds he and Miss Burgess really have a mutual feeling.—AARONSON, New York.

Six Spirits of Rhythm

Sweet Adeline

(Warner)

Dramatic Romance

Light dramatic romance, tinged with specialty music, played against an atmospheric beer-garden and theatre background of the Spanish War era, embellished by one striking silhouetted trick "swing number," is this picture's entertainment essence.

The motivating story is pretty much familiarized, yet it is not without a catchy novelty. It is wholesome material, pitched to a tempo which strives to capture the homey Nineties spirit. Departing markedly from the vivid glamour as utilized by this company in previous musical productions, it nevertheless is not lacking in eye and ear appeal. Noticeable in the spectacle sequences is the full gowned costuming of the chorus girls, effective to the point where it is the trim ankle rather than the full body that constitutes the lure.

Comedy, both incidental to the theme and interpolative in its resurrection of old gags, assumes an important part in keeping the picture moving and providing a vivid contrast to the romantic and dramatic premise. Love interest is made more poignant by introduction of the tried and true triangle element.

Barnett is an embryo composer-playwright, in love with Adeline, but persona non grata to her father, Oscar Schmidt. Insisting that she replace the imported siren Elysia in the leading role in the Rockingham sponsored show, he makes it possible for the war idol, Major Day, to ace himself into Adeline's affections. Then as the breach between Barnett and Adeline becomes wider, the bond between her and the Major becomes tighter. With Adeline's singing and the typical comedy of stage director Herzig and Rockingham intervening, the yarn follows the well charted course until the first girl glamour staircase number, quickly succeeded by the trick silhouette swing feature. Then with the combination female spy-menacing woman, Elysia, intervening with some revengeful dirty work, swinging Adeline is catapulted into the orchestra pit and injured. Recovering, the story picks up with another back stage sequence which, in revealing that it is the finale of Barnett's new show in rehearsal, serves as the medium of making Adeline and Exploitation for this show should seek to capitalize the aura and atmosphere of the Gay Nineties. The title, which almost automatically suggests the picture to be a glorification of the heroine of the convivial good fellows' hymn, is the girl's name. The song is featured only as an accompaniment to the credits. The Marines Are Coming

(Mascot)
Comedy-Drama

A lively comedy drama, with comedy taking a large share of the entertainment credit, this picture again brings William Haines, who once enjoyed a sound popularity, back to the screen in a wise cracking, smart aleck sort of role as the dashing romantic marine, who is in continuous conflict with his captain and who captivates and is captivated by every woman he sees.

Comedy, drama, romance and action have their places in the picture's structure, in a combination which makes for mass entertainment. The action, unfortunately, is subordinated, hardly measuring up to what the audience might be led to expect from the energetic title.

Besides Haines, there are Esther Ralston, Conrad Nagel and Armida in chief support, while Edgar Kennedy supplies most of the straight comedy. Haines is continuously in hot water, especially with his superior, but when it comes to a showdown, he does the right thing, sacrificing his real feeling for the girl, knowing she will be happier in the long run with his more stable and serious rival.

Haines returns from another of his romantic sojourns, to meet the disapproval of Nagel, his superior officer. On his heels comes Armida, fiery Spanish miss, who refused to accept the run-out which Haines had tried on her. Haines is also heavily in debt to tailors and the like, bills which he is ordered to pay by the colonel. Nagel is visited by his fiancée, Miss Ralston, and Haines loses no time in making himself attractive to her.

Nagel threatens Haines unless he ceases to see Miss Ralston. Haines refuses and when Haines, still pursued in comic episodes by the persistent Armida, is forced to resign from the Marines because of the unpaid bills, he blames Nagel for having used his position to be rid of a rival for the hand of his fiancée. Haines and his orderly, Kennedy, re-enlist as privates and are sent to South America with American forces fighting a marauding bandit. They are assigned to Nagel's company, and the old conflict is renewed.

When Nagel is captured by bandits and Haines is approached to desert to the rebel forces by reason of his expressed enmity for Nagel, he accepts, goes to the bandit camp, and there, after a hectic action sequence, frees Nagel and the two break up an ambush for American troops. Haines, with Armida still in pursuit, refuses to listen to Miss Ralston's protestations of affection and goes with the Spanish girl, leaving Nagel to make his fiancée happy.—AARONSON, New York.

Cross Streets

(Chesterfield)
Drama

A dramatic effort which carries what appears definitely to be an unnecessarily tragic ending, something of a millstone about the neck of the production, this independent film cannot be said to offer much in the way of unusual exploitation or selling opportunity for the exhibitor.

It tells the story of a brilliant college graduate, who, thrown over by his fiancée, goes from bad to worse, is helped out of the gutter by a former classmate, but fails finally, dismally, although his going out has been set in heroic vein. The film might well have been titled "The Man Who Couldn't Take It," and the idea is not pleasant.

The leading players are Johnny Mack Brown and Claire Windsor, with Anita Louise and Kenneth Thomson in chief support.

Brown, about to graduate from medical school, is the honor boy of his class, having worked his way through school and merited the athletic and scholastic honor heaped upon him. He is engaged to Miss Windsor who, rather than share the struggle of the early years of a young physician, turns to Niles Welch, wealthy young classmate of Brown, and marries him, which throws Brown into a state of dejection from which he cannot emerge. Instead of practicing he becomes a broken tramp and drunkard. Stumbling into a garage, he meets Thomson, another classmate whom he once befriended. Thomson gives him a home and clothes, and the two revisit the college of their youth.

There Thomson talks much of the greatness of the surgeon, Brown, who, he says, has been working at a famous European clinic. He makes a proposition to the dean that he will endow a new medical building if Brown is made head surgeon. At the reunion, Brown meets Miss Windsor and her husband again, and Miss Windsor attempts to renew their love, after some 20 years. But Brown is falling in love with their daughter, Miss Louise, who is engaged to a young student. At the dinner, Brown refuses the appointment as head surgeon, and bares his life story, which is partially told in flashback. Miss Windsor and Miss Louise go to his room after the dinner, and Welch, finding him there, shoots Brown. Before he dies, Brown grasps the gun, making it appear a suicide, leaving a general reconciliation among those who had loved him.—AARONSON, New York.

'Neath Arizona Skies

(Monogram)
Western

Besides its fair share of the riding, shooting, fighting action which the fans of the western film seem thoroughly to enjoy, this picture has in the lead the lively and young John Wayne, who has a substantial following.

The selling, with concentration on Wayne and a strong play for the youngsters, appears to call for nothing unusual, the exhibitor probably getting his best results from the type of exploitation which has proved most successful in his community with previous westerns with the same star. In support are Sheila Terry, and such western standbys as Yakima Canutt, Buffalo Bill, Jr., and George Hayes.

The story has Wayne, young cowboy and guardian of a small Indian girl, defending the child from marauders who seek to capture her and kill the man who deserted the child's mother years before, in order thus to obtain a large amount of money due the child for oil wells in which her Indian mother held a share.

Canutt, as usual, is the villain of the piece, working with his henchmen to do away with Wayne. Escaping, and sending the child on ahead, Wayne engages the pursuing bandits. Wounded and lying unconscious, he is found by Wilsey, who just has robbed the express office. Wilsey changes clothes with the wounded man in order to throw suspicion on him. Wayne is found by Wilsey's sister, Miss Terry, who assists him and believes the story he tells. The child, meanwhile, has been befriended by Hayes. He locates the girl's father, who prepares to defend his daughter. Wayne and Hayes come upon the body of Wilsey, who has been killed by his robbery partner in a double-crossing maneuver.

Wayne, the child and her father are cornered in a ranch house besieged by Canutt and his gang. A ruse permits them to turn the tables momentarily, when Hayes arrives with the sheriff and the expected and welcome posse. The romance and the safety of the child feature the conclusion of the film.

Straight action material, the picture belongs in the action position—the weekend.—AARONSON, New York.

Drama

Out of Poland and the Muza-film studio at Warsaw has come a poignant drama of life in a backward community of the Carpathian Mountains. Superstition and fear of the unknown is the backbone of the plot, which carries as well the strong material centering about the public persecution of a young girl.

It is in the native Polish language. Theatres in communities of that racial stock, and metropolitan houses interested in foreign films, have something unusual to show their patrons. For others there are plentiful superimposed translations of dialogue, which make understanding of the story a simple matter.

One of the chief assets of the film, in so far as public appreciation in this country is concerned, is the wealth of pictorial beauty which almost characterizes the picture. The mountain region in which the film has been made forms a striking background for a simple story of a people almost too simple. Native customs, as they are pictured, lend an atmosphere of travel interest to the story itself. The performers do their work capably.

The film opens as Dmetro is married. In the midst of the wedding feast he goes out, sees Maryjka, native girl whose personal attractiveness to men has made her the object of the envy and hatred of the remainder of the community, and attempts to force himself upon her. She, afraid of his strength, agrees to meet him that night. When she is promised a new embroidered jacket, she goes with him happily. But when two cows die almost at the same time, the women insist the animals have been bewitched by Maryjka and demand she be driven out.

The mayor, wanting the attractive girl for himself, offers to stop the chatter against her, if she will be more congenial. She refuses, and lives a hounded life as a result. There comes to the town a stranger who sees Maryjka at the village fair. Tall and handsome, he impresses the villagers and Maryjka by his feats of strength. When he wins from the angry Dmetro at dice, they fight, the stranger is wounded but kills Dmetro. The stranger is found by Maryjka, who nurses him in her cabin, while the villagers scour the country for him. The village idiot, prying, sees them together, notifies the village, and Maryjka sends him off through the forest, while she stays to meet the enraged villagers.

Kicking and beating the girl, they drag her to be punished, while the idiot, somehow repenting his act, goes to open the dam to flood the village and save the girl. The stranger tries to stop him, learns the reason and goes after the girl. The daughter of Dmetro's widow, caught in the flood, is rescued by the stranger before the eyes of the horrified villagers. Now ashamed of their treatment of the girl and the stranger, they leave them alone.—AARONSON, New York.

Spring in the Park

(Universal)

Entertaining

An entertaining number of the Oswald cartoon series, in which the little hero, as a policeman, flirts with the nursemaid, impelled by the springtime, until the sergeant arrives to replace him with the nursemaid. Oswald, forced to walk the baby, substitutes in the carriage, and the fun begins.—Running time, 7 minutes.

Going Places

(Universal)

Interesting

Going places with Lowell Thomas, the audience is engagingly entertained with scenes from many lands, while the voice of Mr. Thomas adds a definite effectiveness to the interest of the subject. Aztec ruins in Mexico, the famed Isle of Malta, Indians fishing in the rushing torrent of the Columbia River, unhampered by licenses, by virtue of an old treaty made between the Indians and the United States; the tortuous ascent by college men of Mt. Crillon, Alaska's almost impassable, snow and ice-covered highest peak. A good short subject.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Henry's Social Splash

(Universal)

Fair Comedy

Comedy in the noisy fashion of the excitable Italian performer, Henry Armetta, this has its moments for those who like this near-slapstick type of excitement. Henry's wife, a social climber, forces him to go with her to Newport, there hoping to annex a baron for their daughter. The annoyed Henry gets into trouble without loss of time, nearly killing his valet, and knocking out the baron, who is discovered by the police to be a notorious crook. If you like Henry and his antics.—Running time, 21 minutes.

BRITISH PICTURES SHOWN IN LONDON

BLIND JUSTICE

Produced by Twickenham Film Productions and released by Universal. Directed by Bernhard Vorhaus. Features Eva Moore, Frank Vosper and John Stuart.

This is a good adaptation of Arnold Ridley's play, its notable feature being the acting of Eva Moore as an old family servant who makes a convenient mistake in preparing a drink and poisons a guest who is blackmailing her young master. Plot values good.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

Produced by Warner-First National Pictures and distributed by First National. Directed by Ralph Ince. Features Carol Goodner, Barry Clifton and Ernest Sefton.

A quota offering with a backstage story but too slow-moving and unconvincing to have much general appeal.

A GLIMPSE OF PARADISE

Produced by Warner-First National and distributed by First National. Directed by Ralph Ince. Features Eve Lister and George Carney.

Good acting by George Carney, British variety star, in thinnish story of ex-convict who outwits a woman-blackmailer of his daughter. Otherwise not of much interest outside of quota requirements.

BIG BUSINESS

Produced by Warner-First National and distributed by Warner Bros. Directed by Cyril Gardner. Features Eve Gray and Claude Hulbert.

Claude Hulbert as a down-and-outer who poses as a big business man, for criminal purposes, but actually puts the business on its feet and makes good. The star appeal is its main asset.

OPEN ALL NIGHT

Produced for and distributed by Radio Pictures. Directed by George Pearson. Features Gillian Lind and Frank Vosper.

This is a cleverly constructed story against the background of a big hotel. Frank Vosper puts up a good performance as an ex-Russian aristocrat and night manager of the hotel who straightens out various love affairs and accepts responsibility for a murder of which he is not guilty, before committing suicide because there is no place in the world for him. Well directed with good characterization and acting.

THE SCOOP

Produced for and distributed by Paramount. Directed by P. Maclean Rogers. Features Anne Grey and Tom Helmore.

Mystery drama, with the original story angle that a reporter detailed to investigate a murder is the actual criminal. Treatment is not ambitious enough to make it usable outside England.

THE SILENCE OF DEAN MAITLAND

Produced in Australia and distributed by Radio Pictures. Directed by Ken G. Hall. Features Charlotte Francis and John Loder.

The book title and the fact that Australian backgrounds are used are the chief appeals, while the central dramatic situation of a clergyman confessing, from the pulpit, to a crime for which another man has paid the penalty has a value with some publics.

Stranger Than Fiction

(Universal)

Of Interest

This, Number 4 of the series in which James Wallington, well known radio voice, handles the accompanying explanation, is up to standard as regards subject matter, highlighted by shots of an old Spanish gun with a barrel 12 feet long, a road constructed of a cotton sheet in the South, the ice caves of New Mexico, in one section of which eggs may be fried on the ground, the colored boy of Los Angeles, born without arms, who is absolutely a wizard in shooting marbles with his toes. The subject is of general interest.—Running time, 9 minutes.

Spice of Life No. 2

Jokes from the Press

In the second edition of cullings of humor from Literary Digest, Doc Rockwell introduces and closes the reel with "Minute Man" patter that has one or two bright spots but otherwise adds nothing to the picture. The humor jottings are varied, with something for varied tastes.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Knickerbocker Knights

(Universal)

Entertaining

A vaudeville show on the screen, and entertaining with the word-twisting Roy Atwell acting as master of ceremonies, introducing Gypsy Nina, playing the accordian and singing; the Pearl Twins, in a bit of eccentric dancing; Hayes, Haig and Howe, in novelty dancing and acrobatics; Jerome Mann, whose impersonations of such as Winchell, Durante, Ben Bernie and Joe Penner are expert. The Cecil Mack Choir sing the negro spiritual, "Roll Dem Cotton Bales," to conclude the subject, which has varied entertainment.—Running time, 20 minutes.

Stranger Than Fiction

(Universal)

Par Value

Number 5 of this interesting series, the material herein rates par with others of the group, while the voice of James Wallington, as always, is pleasant and inviting. Featured in this number are the Tennessee boy who is a crackshot with the old sling shot, America's only diamond mine, at Murfreesboro, Ark. Running time, 9 minutes.

The Whole Show

(Universal)

Entertaining

The entertainment which is inherent in this novelty subject from Mentone comes chiefly as a result of the work of the unusually clever James Barton, whose skits are amusing and entertaining. With the assistance of several he first appears in a Mexican sketch, then in a barroom scene, as an Arkansas mountaineer and as the accented proprietor of a music store, who tries to sell a zither to a man who wants to buy a flute. Barton's versatility definitely makes him "the whole show."—Running time, 20 minutes.

Going Places

(Universal)

Traveling via Screen

Under the guidance of the voice of Commentator Lowell Thomas, the camera carries the audience here and there, into Algiers, colorful city of northern Africa; to New York, Genoa, Italy, and Oregon, there to see strangely fashioned ships that never sail the seas; a peek into a jewel case containing fabulous wealth in famous diamonds, in a case which automatically closes and locks at a tap on the showcase glass; a little trip to Nassau, in the West Indies, where the climate is a delight. Variety assures general audience appeal in the subject.—Running time, 9 minutes.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

By VICTOR M. SHAPIRO

Hollywood Correspondent

A GENTS came in for verbal lashings by the colony this week.

In general, agents were accused of being heartless and thoughtless of their less fortunate co-workers. Were it not known that agent incomes, 10 per cent from creative workers' salaries, range in some instances higher than those of the highest paid star, producer or director, the epithets hurled would have been less vehement.

Hollywood, large and small, gave emotional outlet to the revelations that since the start of the motion picture division of the Community Chest drive, with every other group—actors, writers, directors, producers and white collar help—going over their quotas, the agents had contributed the grand total of close to $35, not even one-tenth of one per cent of their quota.

All's Well Again

Will Rogers contributed to the news of the week with an after dinner speech at a banquet to Banker-man Winthrop Aldrich and his associates from New York's Chase National, tendered by Fox officials at Movietone City. The press was not invited.

Both Will Rogers and Irvin S. Cobb, who flanked the representatives of the Rockefeller interests, tossed good-natured sallies at the banking fraternity, and while most of the money-men took good-naturedly what Will and Irv handed out good-naturedly, it was only after Will rose again to speak at the very conclusion of the festivities, that the guests sensed from his humorous epilogue that someone had been nettled. Will's tact at the finale cleared the air, and Will and Irv's credit is good again.

Artclass Film Exchanges, Inc., plans the immediate reissue of four Harry Carey productions, originally released on the state rights market several years ago. The four are western features.

Venetian Productions, of which Angelo De Vito is director, has signed Don Casanova, Italo-American dancer, for the male lead in "The Greatest Love," first of a series of Italian pictures.

Sam Van Runkel, former producer of shorts for Universal, has signed a contract with Carl Laemmle to produce 24 short subjects for the current program, starting January 1. Twelve will feature Henry Armetta, while the remaining 12 will feature Sterling Holloway.

John Curtis, vice-president of First Division, this week in Hollywood leased the Sennett Studios for his production program, which will start January 15 with the first of a series of four Hoot Gibson pictures, with four dramas to follow.

Robert Donat has been signed to a long term contract by Warner. The English player, who last appeared in "The Count of Monte Cristo," will arrive in Hollywood about April 1. His first starring film will be "Captain Blood," by Rafael Sabatini.

Greta Garbo and Fredric March will be starred in MGM's picturization of Tolstoi's "Anna Karenina," with David O. Selznick as producer and George Cukor as director.

Helen Flint has succeeded Claire Dodd in the cast of Warner's "While the Patient Sleeps." Miss Dodd was unable to play because of illness. Ray Enright is directing.

MGM has signed Constance Bennett to a three-year contract providing for a 40-week guarantee the first year with two one-year options providing for the same output.

Five Start, Five Completed

The production graph dipped sharply as the five new pictures starting this week were balanced by five completed. Fox is credited with two new pictures, the others accruing to 20th Century, Monogram and Columbia. Features completed are two at Warner and one each at Monogram, Liberty and Columbia.

The two Fox features starting seem to be in the important class. First is "Dante's Inferno," in which Spencer Tracy, Claire Trevor, Henry B. Walthall, Seigfried Rumann, Nick Foran and Alan Dinehart occupy the principal roles. "Life Begins at Forty" will star Will Rogers, with Rochelle Hudson, William Stelling, George Barbier, Thomas Beck, Jane Darwell, Roger Imhof and Slim Summerville in support.

At Columbia "Once a Gentleman," featuring Lilian Harvey, Tullio Carminati, Tala Birell, Hugh Williams, Ferdinand Gottschalk and Luis Alberni got underway. 20th Century started "Folies Bergere de Paris," the cast for which includes Maurice Chevalier, Merle Oberon, Ann Sothorn, Reginald Owen, Robert Greig and Walter Byron. The list of newly started pictures is completed by Monogram's "Great God Gold," with Sidney Blackmer, Edward Maxwell, Martha Sleeper, Regis Toomey, Gloria Shea and Ralf Harolde.

Completed at Warner was "Black Fury." The cast is headed by Paul Muni and Karen Morley. Other players are William Gargan, Tully Marshall, J. Carrol Naish, Sara Haden and Effie Ellsler. Also completed, "Living on Velvet" will present Kay Francis, George Brent, Warren William, Helen Lowell, Russell Hicks, Maude Gordon, Samuel Hinds and Martha Merrill.

Monogram's contribution to the finished quota is "The Nut Farm," in which Wallace Ford, Bradley Page, Joan Gale, Oscar Apfel, Spencer Charters and Florence Roberts will be seen. At Liberty, "Sweepstake Annie," featuring Tom Brown, Marian Nixon, Wera Engels, Inez Courtney, Ivan Lebedeff, Dorothy Peterson and William Janney, was completed. Columbia finished "Carnival," which has Lee Tracy, Sally Eilers, Jimmy Durante and Fred Keating.

THE CUTTING ROOM

Advance outlines of productions nearing completion as seen by Gus McCarthy of Motion Picture Herald's Hollywood Bureau

COPY CATS TOWN TALK (Tentative Titles) MGM

The combination of name and unique story values points the way to this production's showmanship. Clark Gable, currently in "Forsaking All Others," and Constance Bennett, last seen in "Affairs of Cellini" and "Outcast Lady," are teamed in the leads. The principal supporting cast possesses more than usual strength, with Stuart Erwin, Billie Burke, now in "Forsaking All Others"; Katherine Alexander, featured in Radio's forthcoming "Enchanted April," Harvey Stephens, one of the highlights of "Evelyn Prentice," and Henry Armetta.

The original story is by Laurence Stallings, noted among his other accomplishments for "What Price Glory" and "The First World War," and Dale Van Every, author of the recent "Poor Rich" and "Love Birds" and also remembered for "The Spirit of Notre Dame." Direction is by Robert Z. Leonard, maker of "Outcast Lady," the Michael Arlen story, "Green Hat," which featured Miss Bennett.

The story is modernly atmosphered. It has Gable as a go-getting newspaper reporter, a rough and ready lover and an A-1 woman tamer. Sans much of the exciting get-the-news hysteria characteristic of the formula gentlemen of the press yarns, the story is given a sophisticated tinge. On the trail of sensational news, Gable discovers he can get his story only through Miss Bennett, ritzy Park Avenue socialite. Introducing her to the thrill of printer's ink, the hero solves a murder mystery, exonerates the accused, and having a taste of how the upper crust lives through a girl glamorous yachting party, culminates his romantic rise in his profession and life by marrying the girl.

On paper a spirited work, the story in a measure restores to Gable some of the unique glamour that marked his earlier successes. Similarly, Miss Bennett is presented in a role which promises much.

I MURDERED A MAN (Tentative Title) Universal

This story is straight-away melodrama. It's the yarn of a perfect crime, so perfect, however, that it backfired to the ruination of its perpetrator. The original story is by Colin Clements and Florence Ryerson, adapted by Karen De Wolf and Rufus King, with the screen play by Leopold Atlas and Robert Tasker, who was the author of "Grimhaven" and associate scenarist of "Hell's Highway." Direction is by Edward Laemmle.

To interpret the story, the producers have chosen a cast whose best screen work has been in pictures similarly realistic and grim. The two principals, Charles Bickford and Sidney Blackford, are supported by Helen Vinson, Onslow Stevens, Dudley Digges, John Darrow, John Larkin, Evelyn Selbie and Alice Ardell.

Features of the story, which is modernly timed and located in a southern city, are the series of conflicting romantic situations which establish the motive for the killing; the cleverly

The presentations of this department are in no sense reviews of the pictures or evaluations of the productions. They are inventories of material.

The endeavor is to inform the exhibitor of the nature of the story and the personnel and to set forth the elements of appeal which the producer is seeking to put into the product.

"The Cutting Room" is published for the special service of exhibitors who require some detailed information concerning the character of the picture and its selling factors in advance of previews, reviews and press books.

This department's survey of pictures in no way anticipates or supplants the functions of the Showmen's Reviews which are prepared when the finished product is made available.

planned and executed murder that cast suspicion upon an innocent woman; the dramatic court trial with its jury disagreement. The whole is climaxed by a situation wherein the murderer, seeking to remove the last possible vestige of suspicion, so entraps himself that confession is inevitable.

Essentially a potential attraction for the crime fans, the yarn, while providing no mystery, is nevertheless an exposition of the efficacy of the circumstantial evidence theory, whether actual or planted, as a means of establishing guilt.

THE MYSTERY OF EDWIN DROOD Universal

Probably the most intriguing value of the production of this Charles Dickens' classic will be the mystery of Edwin Drood. As it is being faithfully produced in the manner written by Dickens, with everything just as it is in the novel, the feature is being carried to the point where its author left it incomplete. The mystery of Edwin Drood has been solved, but it is a closely guarded studio secret which will be revealed only in the picture itself. This unique quality, supplementing the Dickens vogue and prestige, plus the acknowledged strength of the cast names, permits not only the adaptation of all the tried and true tricks for dramatic mystery yarns, but also makes possible much that is different.

Based on an unfinished novel, the adaptation is by Leopold Atlas and Bradley King, with the screen play by John L. Balderston and Gladys Unger. The director, Stuart Walker, is experienced in interpreting Dickens' works through the recent "Great Expectations."

The cast is of exceptional merit as its talents apply to this type of entertainment. Central and perhaps most menacing influential character, a Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde character, is Claude Rains, currently appearing in "The Man Who Reclaimed His Head" and recently in "Crime Without Passion." Figures who in dramatic conflict precipitate the mystery are Douglass Montgomery, featured in "Little Women," "Little Man, What Now" and "Music In The Air," and David Manners. Romantic interest is concentrated in Heather Angel. Three players seen in "Great Expectations"—Valerie Hobson, Francis L. Sullivan and Forrester Harvey—are included in the cast. Other important names are E. E. Clive, Walter Kingsford, Effie Ellsler, J. M. Kerrigan and the juvenile star George Ernest.

GREAT GOD GOLD

Monogram

This story is a semi-exposure of the receiver-ship racket. For unusual topical value the story dramatically illustrates the methods whereby unscrupulous attorneys establish a false ethical front; the means whereby they wreck shaky corporations to their own profit, and the ruin of stockholders, coloring the whole with one real romance and another illegitimate affair.

The original story is by Albert J. Meserow and Elynore Dalkhart, with the screen adaptation by Norman Houston, who did "Sixteen Fathoms Deep" and "Monte Carlo Nights." Direction is by Arthur Lubin.

The cast is of exceptional strength. The leading role is played by Sidney Blackmer, currently in "The President Vanishes," also "The Count of Monte Cristo." Important in the cast both from a point of romantic love interest as well as being the one who exposes the crookedness is Martha Sleeper, now featured in Radio's "West of the Pecos." She and Regis Toomey, newspaper reporter, provide the love interest. Portraying the shady lawyers are Edwin Maxwell and John T. Murray. Other players are Gloria Shea, Ralf Harolde and Maria Alba.

Because of the recent wide publicity given such financial debacles as the Insull case, as well as the experiences that a vast number of common people had in the stock market collapse, the story, which dramatically capitalizes such occurrences, has a familiar significance that opens the door wide for personal exploitation. With the title serving as a basis for such showmanship, there seem to be endless opportunities for concentrating attention upon this picture in unique and forceful ways.

New Theatre Planned For Uptown Manhattan

The Van Dyck Amusement Corporation, New York, has leased property at the corner of Broadway and Dyckman street, in uptown Manhattan, and plans to erect a motion picture theatre and stores. It is expected the theatre will be ready by May 1.

THE CODE QUESTION BOX

by JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

No. 94—ASCAP'S MUSIC TAX HAS NOTHING TO DO WITH CODE

QUESTION—I operate a small theatre, and the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers wants me to pay a license fee of $13.75. Must I pay this fee, and do all other theatres pay it? I don't have anything but pictures—no other music. Business is poor and I don't have the money to see a lawyer.—MARY-LAND.

ANSWER—The American Society's license arrangement is a matter that is entirely outside the jurisdiction of the motion picture code and is the private business of Ascapi and the exhibitor.

All motion picture theatres must pay the license fee charged by Ascapi, or else stand in violation of the United States Copyright Act, which carries a penalty of as much as $250 for each violation. And this regardless of whether or not the exhibitor uses a piano, organ or whole orchestra, because music rendered by means of the sound system in connection with the projection of a motion picture is a public reproduction of copyrighted music and as such is subject to the society's license fee.

If any exhibitor refuses to pay this fee, the society can bring him to court charging violation, and damages may be awarded.

No. 95—PROCEDURE FOR HEARING LABOR COMPLAINT

QUESTION—On November 1, 1934, Local Board in Washington for settlement of a wage dispute between members of that local and a circuit of theatres. Can you tell me when this case will be heard, and, if you cannot, can you tell me about how long does it usually take to settle such disputes?—GEORGIA.

ANSWER—We cannot tell when this case will be heard, nor can we tell how long it will take before the hearing is held and a settlement ordered, because this information is not obtainable from the National Labor Board at Washington. The board usually acts quickly in these matters.

No. 96—ELIGIBILITY FOR ELIMINATION UNDER 10% CLAUSE OF CODE

QUESTION—Am I allowed the tenth-picture cancellation of a 100 per cent contract on 1933-34 products? Warner contracts are in question. They claim that I have no right to cancel any pictures under the code unless a picture is undesirable, etc., since I signed the contract prior to December, 1933, and most of the pictures on the contract were released prior to July 15, 1934.

Does national release date count, or the availability date furnished by the exchange?—ARKANSAS.

ANSWER—Under the motion picture code, the 10 per cent elimination clause is applicable to pictures actually released after December 7, 1933, even though they were contracted for prior to that date.

This means that the 10 per cent elimination clause is applicable only to those 1933-34 pictures which were actually released after December 7, and that it is not applicable to those 1933-34 pictures which were released before December 7, 1933. If thirty out of forty 1933-34 pictures were released before December 7, then the exhibitor is entitled to cancel 10 per cent—or one picture—of the remaining 10 released after December 7.

Of course it must be understood that in order to obtain the benefits of the 10 per cent elimination clause in the code, (1) the exhibitor must have purchased under the specific contract all of the feature motion pictures that were offered to him at the same time by the distributor; (2) that the average rental price must be less than $250 per picture; (3) that the contract must be in good standing; and (4) in order to exercise this privilege, the exhibitor must give to the distributor written notice of each motion picture to be excluded within 14 days after the general release of that picture in the exchange territory out of which the exhibitor is served. The exhibitor may exclude without payment one picture out of each group of 10, provided he has paid for the other nine. But, if the exhibitor does not wish to cancel the tenth picture of any group, he may play and pay for it, and cancel a later picture of another group.

The old man with the whiskers is going to put his arms around you

This year let Frank Capra be your Santa Claus . . . and the cycle-making miracle man of the screen will fill your stocking with the greatest box-office tak-ings you have ever experienced. "Broadway Bill," Capra's latest, drew unanimous raves from the New York critics, made Radio City Music Hall ring with excited cheers and won a holdover at the world's finest theatre. To smart showmen this means two things . . . book "Broadway Bill" December 27th, and set aside extended playing time for it! In the words of Variety Daily, "Capra has done it again"
. . . and that means a "Merry Xmas" for you!

Confidence

- 4 years of Ross Federal Service to the motion picture industry has proven one main point—that an unbiased system of checking theatre receipts has a definite place in the merchandising of motion pictures.

Confidence

- And now the same quality of Ross Federal

Service is being called upon by the largest national advertisers in the country in market research.

Confidence

- To the national advertiser, market research means constant field work in checking the effectiveness of advertising—quality of dealers—why consumers do or do not purchase advertised products, etc., etc.

Confidence

- Ross Service has conducted more than 200,000 inquiries into the value of radio programs to national advertisers — as to whether or not radio is a good medium for advertisers — and what programs are being accepted or rejected by the listeners.

We point with pride to the partial list of our national advertising clients, appended—only their confidence in our ability to render authentic and satisfactory service would attract such an array of important concerns to Ross Federal Service.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

DANGEROUS CROSSROADS: Chic Sale, Diane Sinclair, Frank Albertson—Having read so many good reports on this in Motion Picture Herald (the only place to get the real lowdown), I set this in place of a newer show. Pleased everyone and is an all around fine show for the small burg. Also O. K. on the draw.—L. V. Bergtoldt, Opera House, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

DEFENSE RESTS, THE: Jack Holt, Jean Arthur—Jack Holt as an unscrupulous lawyer is well cast and the picture rates as a very good programmer. Played Nov. 5-6.—Hollis Drew, Temple Theatre, East Jordan, Mich. General patronage.

HELL BENT FOR LOVE: Tim McCoy, Lillian Bond—A real good action picture. Tim McCoy pleases here O. K. Running time, 58 minutes. Played Nov. 23.—B. A. McConnell, Emerson Theatre, Hartford, Ark. Mining town patronage.

HELL CAT, THE: Robert Armstrong, Ann Sothorn—Lively and entertaining comedy drama.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

HELL CAT, THE: Robert Armstrong, Ann Sothorn—This little picture has everything the small town audience goes for. Liked by all and the kids went wild during the last two reels. Played Nov. 19-20.—Hollis Drew, Temple Theatre, East Jordan, Mich. General patronage.

I'LL FIX IT: Jack Holt—Jack Holt, as his own suave self with a good supporting cast, turns in a satisfactory entertainment. Nothing to rave over but pleasing and clean. Good attendance. Played Nov. 15-16-17.—C. C. Klutts, Glade Theatre, Moore Haven, Fla. Small town patronage.

LINE-UP, THE: William Gargan, Marian Nixon—Just a fair action picture. Running time, 65 minutes. Played Nov. 30-Dec. 1.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Small town patronage.

MAN TRAILER, THE: Buck Jones—A good Jones western. Plenty of action and thrills. Did not draw as well as average but was not fault of the picture. Played Nov. 17.—J. O. Smith, Paramount & Dixie Theatres, Ashland and Lineville, Ala. Small town patronage.

ONE NIGHT OF LOVE: Grace Moore, Tullio Carminati—Played this four days first part of week to a little more than average business. It was backed up with strongest advertising campaign that has been waged since this house opened. Started 7 weeks ago. Now for the picture. It is my opinion it has a classified draw at the box office. With plenty of publicity will bring in the shekels. My humble opinion is Grace Moore personality registers real well on the screen and it goes without saying her voice is delightful.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

ONE NIGHT OF LOVE: Grace Moore, Tullio Carminati—Pictures like this make me proud that I have an infinitesimal part in presenting them to the public. We have not played this production but I have seen it and can report that it is nothing less than magnificent. Everything about it shows careful production and wholehearted effort. This will be greatly appreciated by your more discriminating patronage but may be just a trifle above the heads of the average theatre-goer.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty Theatre, Ft. Worth, Tex. General patronage.

SHADOWS OF SING SINGS Mary Brian, Bruce Cabot—It will fill in a program and that's about all. Played Nov. 27-28.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

SONG YOU GAVE ME, THE: Bebe Daniels, Victor Varconi—The worst picture from every angle we have ever played—poor photography, terrible sound and a weak story. It was sold as a special and we have lost a lot of confidence in Columbia for telling us what a fine picture this was going to be. Again, I say, terrible. 16 walkouts. Running time, 84 minutes. Played Nov. 30-Dec. 1.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Small town patronage.

WHAT PRICE INNOCENCE?: Jean Parker, Willard Mack—An old one that probably gave the Legion of Decency its clean-up idea. It has no place in the theatre. Played Nov. 24.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

WHIRLWIND, THE: Tim McCoy—A very good western that didn't have the usual "western draw." First McCoy I have used for years and that may account for the drop.—L. V. Bergtoldt, Opera House, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

What the Picture Did For Me

MOTION PICTURE HERALD
1790 Broadway, New York

First National

BRITISH AGENT: Leslie Howard, Kay Francis—This town simply will not go for anything foreign. Mr. Howard should drop his Oxford English (or whatever you call it) and talk so that folks can understand him. Story okay, also direction, etc. But the title and Howard's lingo did not click.—Jack Greene, Geneseo Theatre, Geneseo, Ill. Small town patronage.

CIRCUS CLOWN, THE: Joe E. Brown—A perfect story and role for Joe. Good Saturday business.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

DRAGON MURDER CASE, THE: Warren William, Lyle Talbot, Margaret Lindsay—Good mystery picture; not as gruesome as most and all the better for it. Gave good satisfaction and did fair business against bad weather. Running time, 67 minutes. Played Nov. 15-16-17.—B. R. Johnson, Orpheum Theatre, Kerobert, Canada. Small town patronage.

GENTLEMEN ARE BORN: Franchot Tone, Jean Muir, Margaret Lindsay, Ann Dvorak—This a very good picture that pleased practically everyone. It is a comedy drama, presenting the ups and downs of four college graduates in the business world. It is full of interest from start to finish and the excellent supporting cast performs wonderfully. The trailer sold the show for us and we played one day to very good business. Running time, 74 minutes. Played Nov. 23.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

HAPPINESS AHEAD: Dick Powell, Josephine Hutchinson—A pleasing picture, but not a special and it disappointed at the box office. Very nice entertainment, however.—Herman J. Brown, Majestic Theatre, Nampa, Idaho. General patronage.

SIX DAY BIKE RIDER: Joe E. Brown, Maxine Doyle—Amusing entertainment typical of this star's former pictures. Pleased our patrons but did not pull extra business. Running time, 69 minutes. Played Nov. 21-22.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Oregon. Small town patronage.

SIX DAY BIKE RIDER: Joe E. Brown, Maxine Doyle—Not as good as "Circus Clown." Plenty of action and good clean comedy. Played Nov. 18-19.—George Recktenwald, Playhouse Theatre, Clyde, N. Y. Small town patronage.

Fox

CARAVAN: Charles Boyer, Loretta Young, Jean Parker, Phillips Holmes—A fair picture, but no drawing power, despite plenty of advertising. Played two days and lost money on both. Running time, 101 minutes. Played Nov. 12-13.—J. K. Buckner, Palace Theatre, Grapevine, Tex. Small town and rural patronage.

CARAVAN: Charles Boyer, Loretta Young, Jean

DUDE RANGER, THE: Fox—George O'Brien—My report in November 10th issue read "but many complaints were passed on it." An error no doubt due to my careless writing. It should have read, "Had many compliments passed on it." Running time, 65 minutes. Played October 24-25.—Harold Haubein, Cozy Theatre, Lockwood, Mo. Small town patronage.

Parker, Phillips Holmes—A very pleasing operetta type picture. Some fine music. The only objection I had was that a couple of reels of the parading could have been eliminated to the benefit of the picture. Played Nov. 22-23.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

CARAVAN: Charles Boyer, Loretta Young, Jean Parker, Phillips Holmes—Some nice musical numbers wasted on a production that simply does not click. Too long for one thing and the cast, with the exception of Jean Parker, wanders, while the patrons wonder. Fair business on a mid-week change, but failed to please. Running time, 101 minutes. Played Nov. 14-15.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Oregon. Small town patronage.

CARAVAN: Charles Boyer, Loretta Young, Jean Parker, Phillips Holmes—Combines romance, music, drama and spectacle. Did satisfactory business and pleased. Running time, 100 minutes. Played Nov. 23-24.—Dennis J. Mooney, Princess Theatre, Ordway, Colo. Small town patronage.

CAT'S PAW, THE: Harold Lloyd, Una Merkel—another good one from Lloyd; hope he will make more pictures soon. Can't see why he does not make some two-reel comedies also. Played on our weakest days to above average attendance. Running time, 100 minutes. Played Oct. 22-23-24.—J. K. Buckner, Palace Theatre, Grapevine, Tex. Small town and rural patronage.

CAT'S PAW, THE: Harold Lloyd, Una Merkel—Clever comedy and different from anything Lloyd has ever used before. Pleased in our case, but failed to draw better than average business. Swell family fare. Running time, 100 minutes. Played Nov. 23-24.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Oregon. Small town patronage.

DAVID HARUM: Will Rogers, Louise Dresser, Evelyn Venable, Kent Taylor—We played this old, but business was mighty good—and they went out pleased, which is the best part. Played Nov. 16-17.—P. G. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

DUDE RANGER, THE: George O'Brien—Drew well and pleased. One of the best westerns that we have ever run. O'Brien is always good and this is one of his best. Played Nov. 24.—J. O. Smith, Paramount and Dixie Theatres, Ashland and Lineville, Ala. Small town patronage.

GAMBLING: George M. Cohan—The name of Cohan drew in a few. As for the picture, it is just one of those to fill in a vacant date. Running time, 80 minutes. Played Nov. 16-17.—Dennis J. Mooney, Princess Theatre, Ordway, Colo. Small town patronage.

HELL IN THE HEAVENS: Warner Baxter—Excellent. Tense, exciting—a little comedy and plenty of thrills. It is a 100 per cent for our type audience. Played Nov. 22-24.—Hollis Drew, Temple Theatre, East Jordan, Mich. General patronage.

HELL IN THE HEAVENS: Warner Baxter, Conchita Montenegro—The stock shots of the flying sequences were very familiar. We have had them about eight times and that is so apparent that it is my opinion that they came out of the "All Quiet on the Western Front." Certainly it is the same old story, the ace flyer and the kid that couldn't take it. I ask you, is that not just about the average war picture that deals with flyers since "All Quiet." Baxter did the best he could with the weak story. Certainly we recognized the old familiar plane that went down in flames and the same eight planes in the squad flying with the phoney background very plain that they were silhouetted against.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

JUDGE PRIEST: Will Rogers—Rogers continues to draw better than ever, this one outdoing all previous pictures of his. Cannot say that the picture outclasses his others, but guess it's because the folks are just waking up.—Jack Greene, Geneseo Theatre, Geneseo, Ill. Small town patronage.

JUDGE PRIEST: Will Rogers—Our patrons said it was Rogers' best. Business fair. Running time, 79 minutes. Played Nov. 28-29.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Small town patronage.

JUDGE PRIEST: Will Rogers—Rogers as usual drew the crowd and pleased. Highly entertaining. Stepin Fetchit takes second honors. Running time, 80 minutes. Played Nov. 9-10.—Dennis J. Mooney, Princess Theatre, Ordway, Colo. Small town patronage.

JUDGE PRIEST: Will Rogers—This picture has everything that could be desired for 100 per cent entainment. Entire cast do great work. It is the opinion of our patrons that "Judge Priest" far exceeds all other Will Rogers pictures. It is clean, has lots of comedy, a great story, and we join our patrons by saying, boy, oh boy, what a picture! Running time, 79 minutes. Played Nov. 19-20.—J. K. Buckner, Palace Theatre, Grapevine, Tex. Small town and rural patronage.

LOVE TIME: "Pat" Paterson—A wonderful picture for lovers of real music. For the average run of theatre goers it's just another picture with not much pep. If you can tie in with instructors and pupils of music you can't go wrong. Played Nov. 28-29.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

LOVE TIME: "Pat" Paterson, Nils Asther—A very fine picture, but the title and being a costume picture killed it. Experience proves that folks want down-to-earth stories. Not Austrian or other foreign stories. Really lost money on it simply because folks would not come in to see it. The whole cast worked great.—Jack Greene, Genesee Theatre, Genesee, Ill. Small town patronage.

MARIE GALANTE: Spencer Tracy, Ketti Gallian—Some good musical numbers—interesting shots of Panama Canal. Good entertainment but hard to get the folks in on new star. Pleased those who saw it. Would stand up for extended run. Running time, 80 minutes. Played Nov. 24.—Dennis J. Mooney, Princess Theatre, Ordway, Colo. Small town patronage.

ELINOR NORTON: Claire Trevor, Norman Foster, Hugh Williams, Gilbert Roland—The playing was the only redeeming feature to this picture. Running time, 70 minutes. Played Nov. 11.—Dennis J. Mooney, Princess Theatre, Ordway, Colo. Small town patronage.

PECK'S BAD BOY: Jackie Cooper, Thomas Meighan, Jackie Searl—Very good. Well received by everyone. Played Oct. 25-27.—Hollis Drew, Temple Theatre, East Jordan, Mich. General patronage.

PECK'S BAD BOY: Jackie Cooper—This is a good, clean picture which drew and pleased, especially the children. Running time, 71 minutes.—J. O. Smith, Paramount and Dixie Theatres, Ashland and Lineville, Ala. Small town patronage.

PURSUED: Rosemary Ames, Victor Jory, Russell Hardie—It's plot number 5 or maybe it's number 6—all dolled up with a South Sea atmosphere, which doesn't fool the customers for a minute. After the first five minutes they know what's coming, but stick it out to make sure they are right. They were. Used on a midnight preview, this got by for a comedy, but Fox never intended it for that. Running time, 68 minutes. Played Nov. 17.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Oregon. Small town patronage.

PURSUED: Rosemary Ames, Victor Jory, Russell Hardie—This is just another picture that is a real drawback to the industry. It is a tropical story with unpleasant characters and surroundings. There have been too many pictures of this type and the public is tired of them. It is strictly an adult attraction and offers very poor entertainment. The Code should prohibit such pictures as this. Played one day to very poor business. Running time, 68 minutes. Played Nov. 21.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

SERVANTS' ENTRANCE: Janet Gaynor, Lew Ayres—A first quality picture that pleased 100 per cent. A great love story with pleasing touches of comedy interwoven. No dull moments. Running time, 88 minutes. Played Nov. 26-27.—J. K. Buckner, Palace Theatre, Grapevine, Tex. Small town and rural patronage.

SERVANTS' ENTRANCE: Janet Gaynor, Lew Ayres—Right up our alley. While this was a story of Sweden, it was done in American lingo, everyone understood it, and was modern. More like this will be welcome.—Jack Greene, Genesee Theatre, Genesee, Ill. Small town patronage.

SERVANTS' ENTRANCE: Janet Gaynor, Lew Ayres—Not quite as good as this star's fans expect, but it is better than average entertainment. A little too long for the story material and for some reason, best known to Hollywood, is given a Swedish background. We have a good many Swedish patrons and they told us it did not ring true. Business fair but the picture did not please generally. Running time, 88 minutes. Played Nov. 7-8.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Oregon. Small town patronage.

SERVANTS' ENTRANCE: Janet Gaynor, Lew Ayres—This is a typical Gaynor vehicle—sugar and spice and everything nice—but our patrons enjoyed it and told us so. It was part of a perfect program which ran two hours and forty minutes (our patrons are accustomed to seeing double feature programs)—"Servants' Entrance," Laurel and Hardy short, Mickey Mouse, Shirley Temple short, Fox Movietones, and trailers.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty Theatre, Ft. Worth, Tex. General patronage.

SERVANTS' ENTRANCE: Janet Gaynor, Lew Ayres—Fair picture, very disappointing. Not what I thought it would be. Patrons not at all satisfied with the picture. Fair business. Played Nov. 4-5-6.—George Recktenwald, Playhouse Theatre, Clyde, N. Y. Small town patronage.

SERVANTS' ENTRANCE: Janet Gaynor, Lew Ayres—Here is a nice little picture. Janet Gaynor always pleases. Some said they were disappointed in the part she played in this, but I think most everyone was well pleased. Running time, 84 minutes. Played Nov. 1-2.—Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Tex. General patronage.

SHE LEARNED ABOUT SAILORS: Lew Ayres, Alice Faye—One of the best comedy dramas for a long time. Clean. Pleased. Drew well. Played Nov. 9-10.—P. G. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

SHE LEARNED ABOUT SAILORS: Lew Ayres, Alice Faye—This is one of the best program pictures made this year by any company. It is original and clever, with two personable young players who are becoming very popular. Our patrons enjoyed it immensely.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty Theatre, Ft. Worth, Tex. General patronage.

STAND UP AND CHEER: Shirley Temple, Warner Baxter, Madge Evans, James Dunn—Don't play this if you don't want to see red. No plot. Shirley Temple only good one in it and she was only in for a few minutes. Perfect recording and good clean print, but no business. Running time, 80 minutes. Played November 23-24.—Albert Hefferan, Owl Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. Juvenile patronage.

WILD GOLD: John Boles, Claire Trevor—This did well on a double feature program, as our patrons found it entertaining. Harry Green was likeable in a comedy role. There is one good song in the picture.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty Theatre, Ft. Worth, Tex. General patronage.

WORLD MOVES ON, THE: Madeleine Carroll, Franchot Tone—This is only fair entertainment and did not please our patrons. It is a drama and entirely too long drawn out. The war scenes are about the best ever produced, but they made many patrons stay away. This will only please a certain class of patrons and here that class did not come out to see it. We played one day to only fair business. Running time, 100 minutes. Played Nov. 22.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

MGM

BARRETT'S OF WIMPOLE STREET: Norma Shearer, Charles Laughton, Fredric March—Truly a wonderful picture and acting superb. Most all of my patrons liked it. I heard a few say they did not care for this type but still they go to see this one. Played Oct. 21-22.—Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Tex. General patronage.

CHAINED: Joan Crawford, Clark Gable, Otto Kruger, Stuart Erwin—Very good picture, good acting, but did not draw. Played Nov. 13-14-15.—George Recktenwald, Playhouse Theatre, Clyde, N. Y. Small town patronage.

CHAINED: Joan Crawford, Clark Gable, Otto Kruger, Stuart Erwin—A wonderful picture. The entire cast very good. We did nice business as Joan Crawford and Clark Gable are so well liked. Play it. Played Oct. 14-15.—Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Tex. General patronage.

DEATH ON THE DIAMOND: Madge Evans, Robert Young—A fast-moving picture with plenty of comedy furnished by Ted Healy and Nat Pendleton. Did nice business and I think everyone pleased. Played Nov. 4-5.—Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Tex. General patronage.

EVELYN PRENTICE: William Powell, Myrna Loy—A good show but not to be compared to "Thin Man" in entertainment. The ladies may cry a little, so they will have a nice evening. Played Nov. 25-26.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

GIRL FROM MISSOURI, THE: Jean Harlow, Lionel Barrymore, Franchot Tone, Lewis Stone, Patsy Kelly—This is great entertainment that should do well in both small town and large city. It has a somewhat novel plot with numerous clever situations. The acting is excellent and Harlow is beautiful. Patsy Kelly can be strongly billed as she is the hit of the picture with her droll characterization.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty Theatre, Ft. Worth, Tex. General patronage.

MYSTERY OF MR. X, THE: Robert Montgomery, Elizabeth Allan, Lewis Stone—A good mystery picture that seemed to please the few we got in to see it. No squawks. Running time, 85 minutes. Played Nov. 21.—B. A. McConnell, Emerson Theatre, Hartford, Ark. Coal mining town patronage.

OPERATOR THIRTEEN: Marion Davies—This is positively the best show of the year. The story of the South during the war with plenty of thrill scenes. The Mills brothers singing is another good point. Did not draw a large crowd but nothing seems to now.—J. O. Smith, Paramount and Dixie Theatres, Ashland and Lineville, Ala. Small town patronage.

OUTCAST LADY: Constance Bennett, Herbert Marshall, Hugh Williams—Here is a fine picture with a sad ending, but everyone enjoyed it. Some beautiful clothes worn by Constance Bennett. This picture will please. Played Oct. 30-31.—Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Tex. General patronage.

TUGBOAT ANNIE: Marie Dressler, Wallace Beery, Robert Young, Maureen O'Sullivan—It's old, but we brought it back as a tribute to Marie Dressler and advertised it thusly: "So that you may have one last opportunity to see the immortal Marie Dressler, we respectfully offer you 'Tugboat Annie'." It pleased the patrons and gratified the management. Played Oct. 16-17.—Ray Baker, Grand Theatre, Littleton, Colo. Small town or suburban patronage.

Monogram

CITY LIMITS: Frank Craven, Sally Blane, Ray Walker—This is one of the best program pictures I've ever played. Played on Friday-Saturday and it sure pleased. Many thanks, Monogram. Craven is fine and Walker is always pleasing.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Country and rural patronage.

GIRL OF THE LIMBERLOST: Marian Marsh—This is an exceptionally good show. I advertised it heavily but it failed to draw but it surely pleased the ones who saw it. I consider it much better than "Little Women" but Monogram sure put out a bum line of paper on this. A picture like this deserves better posters. Running time, 81½ minutes. Played Nov. 22-23.—J. O. Smith, Paramount and Dixie Theatres, Ashland and Lineville, Ala. Small town patronage.

RIDERS OF DESTINY: John Wayne, Cecelia Parker—One of the best western stars in the business is this fellow Wayne. This is a good one from him.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town and country patronage.

Paramount

BELLE OF THE NINETIES: Mae West, Roger Pryor, John Mack Brown, Katherine De Mille, Duke Ellington and his orchestra—This seemed to please generally, although some of the West fans didn't care for it. Good Sunday business.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

BELLE OF THE NINETIES: Mae West, Roger Pryor, John Mack Brown, Katherine De Mille, Duke Ellington and his orchestra—This did not draw as well as "Mrs. Wiggs," and seemed a very ordinary picture, outside of the Mae West personality, and one or two pictures of that are sufficient. Played Nov. 25-26.—P. G. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

BELLE OF THE NINETIES: Mae West—Mae is slipping at the box-office. While she is still glamorous and wears a million dollars worth of gowns, she did not do half the business that "I'm No Angel" did. This is due to the fact that it had so much publicity as to title and deletion that the fan magazines were full of it. She is a type that for two pictures was an innovation, a new personality that was so pronounced that it is my bet that she will not last long. Katherine De Mille was good in her small role of the other woman and she is a fine looking brunette and very attractive in her Creole makeup. Business very much off the second day. The best part of the picture was the Negro chorus work at the camp meeting. Recording off due to old print. Not so good.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

BELLE OF THE NINETIES: Mae West—The usual West-ern type show, though you wonder how Mae sat calm and collected all the ice from Johnny Mack Brown without any reason. The cutting room used more than their imagination. Good show and heavy draw. Have you heard this one? Aside from the levity, Mae did not take as well as in previous effort. Numbers frankly said they did not care for it, that her shows were all too much alike—mannerisms, etc. Personally, I think too over-advertised and patrons expect more than they really get. They come out of curiosity anyway, so. Played Nov. 18-19-20.—C. C. Klutts, Glades Theatre, Moore Haven, Fla. Small town patronage.

BELLE OF THE NINETIES: Mae West, Roger Pryor, John Mack Brown, Katherine De Mille, Duke Ellington and his orchestra—A good picture, but not as good as "I'm No Angel." Mae West sings some good numbers. We did not hear any comments, but think it pleased. Played Nov. 8-9.—Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Tex. General patronage.

BELLE OF THE NINETIES: Mae West—A good show. All entertainment from start to finish. Not quite as good as "I'm No Angel" and did not draw one-third as well. I made the mistake of raising prices on this one. Nothing will stand a price raise in this town. But Paramount deserves credit for this picture. It is better than the average.—J. O. Smith, Paramount and Dixie Theatres, Ashland and Lineville, Ala. Small town patronage.

CLEOPATRA: Claudette Colbert, Henry Wilcoxon, Warren William—This is a big picture and drew the best Monday night crowd in several months. Had many good comments on it. Did extra advertising and it paid. You won't go wrong booking this and advertising heavily. Played Nov. 26-27.—J. O. Smith, Paramount and Dixie Theatres, Ashland and Lineville, Ala. Small town patronage.

HERE COMES THE GROOM: Jack Haley—Crazy farce comedy that drew fairly well on a tough mid-week spot and pleased 100 per cent.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

LEMON DROP KID: Lee Tracy, Helen Mack—One of Damon Runyon's stories made into a picture with race track opening, shifting to small town locale. Light story, but seemed to please. Clean. Played Nov. 11-12.—P. G. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

LITTLE MISS MARKER: Shirley Temple, Adolphe Menjou, Dorothy Dell—By all means pick this up. Temple steals the picture. However, this type story is much too rough for her and the song she sings is, to say the least, very inappropriate for such a delightful little girl to be using. Played Nov. 1-3.—Hollis Drew, Temple Theatre, East Jordan, Mich. General patronage.

MANY HAPPY RETURNS: Gracie Allen, George Burns, Joan Marsh, Veloz and Yolanda, Guy Lombardo and his Royal Canadians—This picture is composed mostly of Gracie Allen's shrill chatter, which caused some to roar with laughter and others to walk out in disgust. Lombardo only appears a couple of times; but his incidental music continues throughout the picture. I personally thought it fair little picture; but the box office reports said "No" very distinctly. Running time, 60 minutes. Played Oct. 21-22.—Ray Baker, Grand Theatre, Littleton, Colo. Small town or suburban patronage.

MISS FANE'S BABY IS STOLEN: Dorothea Wieck, Alice Brady, Baby LeRoy—Starts a little slow, but picks up speed and averages up as one of the very best shows from Paramount on the 1933-34 group. The last three reels made great small town entertainment and has everyone shouting or wanting to. If you passed it up, get a date now.—L. V. Bergtold, Opera House, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

MRS. WIGGS OF THE CABBAGE PATCH: Pauline Lord, W. C. Fields, Zasu Pitts, Kent Taylor, Evelyn Venable—I advertised this heavier than any picture this year. Ran it to pleased audiences. After checking up gross, I wrote out a check (I had already paid for its rental) for a considerable sum in favor of Paramount—almost mailed it—however, at the last minute, I remembered that I was an exhibitor—I summoned all my resolution, said to myself, be a man. Fellow exhibitors, I am proud to say I was a man—my moral stamina returned after a moment of weakness. I was every inch an exhibitor. I tore up the bonus check. The picture did all right.—Herman J. Brown, Majestic Theatre, Nampa, Idaho. General patronage.

MRS. WIGGS OF THE CABBAGE PATCH: Pauline Lord, W. C. Fields, Zasu Pitts, Kent Taylor, Evelyn Venable—A picture that drew and pleased. Many satisfied comments from patrons. Work of everyone in cast outstanding, but the boys playing Billy and Jimmy, and the little girl, "Europeana," especially pleasing. W. C. Fields and Zasu Pitts shared adult honors with Pauline Lord. Played Nov. 18-19.—P. G. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

MURDER AT THE VANITIES: Carl Brisson, Victor McLaglen, Jack Oakie, Kitty Carlisle—As much as I dislike to, I cannot give this a good report. Nearly every report I have read on this has been complimentary, but this did not make a hit here. "Forty-Second Street" is the only musical that I have played that really pleased. Comments on "Murder at the Vanities" were mostly unfavorable.—L. V. Bergtold, Opera House, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

NOW AND FOREVER: Shirley Temple, Gary Cooper, Carole Lombard—A splendid, clean picture that was liked by all. Rain hurt business. Running time, 82 minutes. Played Nov. 25-26-27.—A. B. Jeffers, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Small town patronage.

READY FOR LOVE: Richard Arlen, Ida Lupino—Clean, clever romantic comedy drama. Pleased Friday-Saturday patrons. Played Nov. 23-24.—P. G. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

SHE LOVES ME NOT: Bing Crosby, Miriam Hopkins—Played on Sunday night to better than average attendance and pleased. Running time, 85 minutes. Played Nov. 18.—Dennis J. Mooney, Princess Theatre, Ordway, Colo. Small town patronage.

SHOOT THE WORKS: Jack Oakie, Ben Bernie, Dorothy Dell, Alison Skipworth—Played right after a school play and business took a terrible dip. Lots of clean comedy and a show that will please almost everyone. Ben Bernie and his boys are especially good. Would rate this several notches above an ordinary programmer.—L. V. Bergtold, Opera House, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

TRUMPET BLOWS, THE: George Raft, Adolphe Menjou, Frances Drake—Used this with Rube Tenson (WLSJ Barnyard review.) Rube brought them in to establish the highest single night we ever had. The picture is O. K., too. The comments were mostly favorable.—L. V. Bergtold, Opera House, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

WAGON WHEELS: Randolph Scott, Gail Patrick—Nice out-of-door picture that drew well and pleased old and young. Used the theme song just enough and at the right times to please. Played Nov. 4-5.—P. G. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

WAGON WHEELS: Randolph Scott—Superwestern of "Covered Wagon" type. Will stand up under any amount of plugging. Pleased 100 per cent. First western I have run in about two years. A few like this will pull them out of the doldrums where they drifted a year or two back. Good picture and good patronage. I felt good about it. Played Nov. 22-23-24.—C. C. Klutts, Glades Theatre, Moore Haven, Fla. Small town patronage.

FIVE MORE REPORT FROM FOUR STATES

Reflecting the fact that contribution to "What the Picture Did for Me" knows no geographical boundaries, this week's mail brings comment from five new reporters in four states, from New York to Colorado, from Florida to Texas. They are:

GEORGE RECKTENWALD, Playhouse, Clyde, New York.

J. K. BUCKNER, Palace Theatre, Grapevine, Texas.

DENNIS J. MOONEY, Princess Theatre, Ordway, Colorado.

C. C. KLUTTS, Glades Theatre, Moore Haven, Florida.

RAY BAKER, Grand Theatre, Littleton, Colorado.

Read these exhibitors' box office comment in the department in this issue.

RKO

AGE OF INNOCENCE, THE: Irene Dunne, John Boles—Some liked this picture; others did not. Personally, I did not care for it. I like John Boles, but I prefer him to sing in his pictures and not play the same parts all the time. Played Nov. 13-14.—Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Tex. General patronage.

ANNE OF GREEN GABLES: Anne Shirley, Tom Brown—A sweet dish, my masters, a SWEET dish.—Herman J. Brown, Majestic Theatre, Nampa, Idaho. General patronage.

BY YOUR LEAVE: Genevieve Tobin and Frank Morgan give an excellent payoff of a middle-aged married couple who agree to take a marital holiday—no questions asked. Everything natural and no scenes forced. Lots of good, clean comedy and director deserves praise for refraining (that's the word, refraining) from smutty dialogue and for delicate handling of some intimate situations. Boys, I really believe we are threatened with some clean shows now. Frankly, I can just as well do without filth on my screen. Good picture. Will get over both big and little towns. Played Nov. 11-12-13.—C. C. Klutts, Glades Theatre, Moore Haven, Fla. Small town patronage.

COCKEYED CAVALIERS: Wheeler and Woolsey—We wouldn't call this anything to brag about. Just fair. No build-up on the second night on this one.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

DANGEROUS CORNER: Virginia Bruce, Conrad Nagel, Melvyn Douglas—Very, very poor. Clean enough, but the story purporting to be what happened; then cut back to "What actually happened," repeating scenes for some footage. Confused and annoyed patrons, some of whom walked out. Played Nov. 2-3.—P. G. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

DANGEROUS CORNER: Melvyn Douglas, Virginia Bruce—Slow, draggy and too talky. A rather unusual twist of flashback showing highly imaginative of "what might have happened," then the real "what really did happen" story. Conrad Nagel turns in a good performance. Poor business. Played Nov. 1-2-3.—C. C. Klutts, Glades Theatre, Moore Haven, Fla. Small town patronage.

DOWN TO THEIR LAST YACHT: Mary Boland, Polly Moran, Ned Sparks, Sidney Fox, Sidney Blackmer—This is the lowest thing we have had the misfortune to run in the past year. If either you or your patrons have an ounce of self-respect, shelve it. When a picture like this is prefixed with the stamp of the industry's approval, it is no wonder we are threatened with censorship. Played Nov. 8-10.—Hollis Drew, Temple Theatre, East Jordan, Mich. General patronage.

DOWN TO THEIR LAST YACHT: Mary Boland, Polly Moran, Ned Sparks, Sidney Fox, Sidney Blackmer—A much ballyhooed picture to us and in turn we ballyhooed it and stung our people on the poorest of the 1933-34 contract. We asked for rebate on rental. Played Sept. 30-Oct. 1.—P. G. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

FINISHING SCHOOL: Frances Dee, Ginger Rogers, Billie Burke, Bruce Cabot—Was afraid of this on account of title, but was quite surprised at the number of patrons it drew from the lower classes. Total gross was about average, and with that title, well, you never can tell. Picture is good entertainment, even though we find it on the condemned list. (As a matter of fact, the shows on the "black list" are mostly all good entertainments).—L. V. Bergtold, Opera House, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

FLYING DOWN TO RIO: Dolores Del Rio, Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers, Gene Raymond, Raul Roulien—A marvelous offering when first released and still is. Has a tremendous draw at the box office and extraordinary entertainment.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

GRIDIRON FLASH: Eddie Quillan, Betty Furness—Cast not known, but it is the best football picture we have ever run. Drew well and seemed to please all. Running time, 64 minutes. Played Nov. 2-3.—J. K. Buckner, Palace Theatre, Grapevine, Tex. Small town and rural patronage.

KENTUCKY KERNELS: Wheeler and Woolsey—Usual performance from this team and the folks seem to get a great deal of kick out of it. The draw looked good at the start but would not hold up and reduced admission prices last part of week. I forgot to tell you Noah Beery sings a song and just about steals the show. Don't miss hearing him sing.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

KENTUCKY KERNELS: Wheeler and Woolsey—Believe it or not, here is a Wheeler and Woolsey picture that is a clean picture. Result is that it gets more business and stands up better than any in many a day. It took the Methodists to do it and we owe them a hearty vote of thanks. I always felt like I was peddling dope to school kids when I ran some of their other pictures. This team will build to good box office if the churches hold back the producers who were killing them off.—Herman J. Brown, Majestic Theatre, Nampa, Idaho. General patronage.

LIFE OF VERGIE WINTERS: Ann Harding, John Boles—I understand this has been taken off the "black list." And it certainly should be—one of the best from RKO this year. Although classed as a sob show, it is really fine screen entertainment. You don't have to be afraid of this, and I would say O. K. for Sunday.—L. V. Bergtold, Opera House, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

LIGHTNING STRIKES TWICE: Benny Lyon, Pert Kelton—Wow! And is it a box-office comedy natural? Grab it, fellows, and pat yourselves on the backs. Fair crowd against strong competition, but it was hysterically funny in a natural way. The scenes just naturally worked into each other. Fellows, when your audience laughs till it cries and the ladies begin to give up that falsetto gasp, you know they enjoy the show. Grab it and plug it hard. Played Nov. 29-30.—C. C. Klutts, Glades Theatre, Moore Haven, Fla. Small town patronage.

RICHEST GIRL IN THE WORLD, THE: Miriam Hopkins, Joel McCrea, Fay Wray, Reginald Denny—Clean and clever romantic drama. Pleased. Played October 7-8.—P. G. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

RICHEST GIRL IN THE WORLD, THE: Miriam Hopkins, Joel McCrea, Fay Wray, Reginald Denny—A very pleasing picture; good work by all the cast. Miriam Hopkins very well liked here. The women will like the fashions displayed by Fay Wray and Miss Hopkins. Running time, 79 minutes. Played October 28-29.—Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Tex. General patronage.

SING AND LIKE IT: Zasu Pitts, Pert Kelton, Edward Everett Horton—Amusing comedy drama.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

STINGAREE: Irene Dunne, Richard Dix—One of the real surprise pictures of the year. I let this one in without any extra "noise"—and the gross was within a dollar of "It Happened One Night"—which I gave a lot of extra attention to. It also gave general satisfaction. Will rank among my 10 highest grosses for 1934, and against Fox, Paramount, Universal and Columbia, RKO is actually going to get half of these 10 places.—L. V. Bergtold, Opera House, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

THIS MAN IS MINE: Irene Dunne, Ralph Bellamy—Triangle plot with a happy ending that pleased an average Sunday crowd.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

WEDNESDAY'S CHILD: Karen Morley, Edward Arnold—A forceful old picture featuring Karen Morley and Edward Arnold, but the child actor really walks away with honors showing reaction of divorce upon a sensitive child. This kid reaches high drama to which older heads too often fall short. Enough action and comedy to relieve dramatic scenes. It's a real show and should prove good drawing card. Played against adverse weather. Played Nov. 4-5-6.—C. C. Klutts, Glades Theatre, Moore Haven, Fla. Small town patronage.

WE'RE RICH AGAIN: Marian Nixon, Billie Burke, Reginald Denny, "Buster" Crabbe, Edna May Oliver—A good clean comedy that sure got the laughs from the Saturday night crowd. Seemed to please all. Attendance good. Marian Nixon certainly does her part well and in all features we have had her in. Running time, 72 minutes. Played November 16-17.—J. K. Buckner, Palace Theatre, Grapevine, Tex. Small town and rural patronage.

WILD CARGO: Frank Buck—This is a very intertaining picture, although there are some shots of the big snakes that don't please the ladies. It did a fair Saturday business.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

WILD CARGO: Frank Buck—The kind of show that is hard to comment on. This back screen talk is not satisfactory to most patrons. Buck's voice does record well and people either liked this or it was more or less of a pain. No middle ground. On the third night I had to go out of town to see something more entertaining. Of course, there are some who appreciate screen education, but they are in the minority.—L. V. Bergtold, Opera House, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

WOMAN IN THE DARK: Fay Wray—Just good average entertainment. Fay Wray and Ralph Bellamy do good work together. Smut could have been used in some scenes, but those Hollywood directors are beginning to get smart after so long. The public does not demand filth for entertainment. Fair picture and fair crowds. Pleased with no adverse comments. Played November 25-26-27.—C. C. Klutts, Glades Theatre, Moore Haven, Fla. Small town patronage.

Tower

RED HAIRE ALIBI: Merna Kennedy, Theodore von Eltz, Grant Withers, Shirley Temple—Another poor independent film which is mildly entertaining. It is slow and talky with practically no action. Shirley Temple has a very brief part in it. Obviously this film was made when she was much younger as she is babyish and does not display the talent we expect of her today.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty Theatre, Ft. Worth, Tex. General patronage.

United Artists

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN: Lee Tracy, Sally Blane, Isabel Jewel, Judith Wood—Not as bad as the title indicates and did not lose as much on it as I feared. Seemed to please most people and with a better title might have done fair business. Played November 22-23-24.—B. R. Johnson, Orpheum Theatre, Kerrobert, Canada. Small town patronage.

BULLDOG DRUMMOND STRIKES BACK: Ronald Colman—Good mystery with comedy.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

HOUSE OF ROTHSCHILD, THE: George Arliss, Loretta Young, Boris Karloff, Robert Young—Failed to draw on return engagement. Wonderful picture and it had a pretty good drawing power on first engagement.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town and country patronage.

LAST GENTLEMAN, THE: George Arliss—Arliss has a certain following by what we might call the upper class. There is no question but that he is a good character actor, but he needs a vehicle like "Rothschild" with a strong cast as he had in that one to make him popular with the regular run of patrons. He is not strong box-office in pictures such as this one, and while the picture is good of its type, there are a lot of our patrons that are not Arliss fans but did come in on "Rothschild" and would again if he were cast in the same type that "Rothschild" was.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

LAST GENTLEMAN, THE: George Arliss—Stormy weather held the grosses down on this, but how it pleased those who dared to venture out. Has a surprise ending that is new and startling to say the least. Advise your patrons to see it from the start for the fullest enjoyment. Arliss is in a class all by himself and always delivers distinctive entertainment. Running time, 72 minutes. Played November 25-26-27.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town patronage.

LOOKING FOR TROUBLE: Spencer Tracy, Constance Cummings, Jack Oakie—If you need a good action program picture, this is an excellent choice. It has action, comedy and romance all skillfully blended and good production. Jack Oakie and Arline Judge as a wisecracking couple kept our audience in an uproar. They are the bit of the picture and some producer will be wise if he teams these two funsters again. Sound and photography are excellent.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty Theatre, Ft. Worth, Tex. General patronage.

OUR DAILY BREAD: Karen Morley, Tom Keene—One sweet picture for small town exhibitors and patrons. Holds the interest from start to finish and builds up to a smashing climax that sends them out talking. Lack of stars is the one stumbling block to exploitation, but you can figure out other ways to put it across to your patrons and the picture will merit all you can do along those lines. Business fine and the patrons pleased. Running time, 76 minutes. Played November 16-17.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town patronage.

PALOOKA: Jimmy Durante, Lupe Velez, Stuart Erwin, Marjorie Rambeau—This is a very good picture that pleased all of my patrons. This is straight comedy set in an atmosphere of prize fighting and is fast moving with plenty of action and spicy dialogue. This will make an excellent Saturday picture in the small towns. The entire cast play their parts splendidly. Played one day (Saturday) to a very good business and pleased all. Running time, 86 minutes. Played November 24.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

Universal

BIG CAGE, THE: Clyde Beatty, Andy Devine—Failed to draw on bargain nights. Picture is real good and, although it is old, if you haven't played it, use it on a Bargain Night and please your people.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

BLACK CAT, THE: Boris Karloff, Bela Lugosi, David Manners—They overdid the weirdness on this thing and made it simply preposterous.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

BLACK CAT, THE: Boris Karloff, Bela Lugosi, David Manners—Used this on Halloween and drew some above average. The picture got plenty of comments, all in "reverse." One of those dizzy things with a foreign setting. No one seemed to know what it was all about. Personally, I rather liked it, but I had very few on my side.—L. V. Bergtold, Opera House, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

EMBARRASSING MOMENTS: Chester Morris, Marian Nixon—Excellent program entertainment. Played November 12-13.—Hollis Drew, Temple Theatre, East Jordan, Mich. General patronage.

GIFT OF GAB: Edmund Lowe, Gloria Stuart, Ruth Etting, Phil Baker, Alexander Woolcott, Ethel Waters, Paul Lukas, Binnie Barnes, Bela Lugosi—Comedy drama with screen and radio stars. Considerable music and singing and a fairly good story. Pleased. Clean entertainment. Played October 14-15.—P. G. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

HALF A SINNER: Joel McCrea, Sally Blane, Berton Churchill—This is good entertainment and drew a lot of compliments. I believe the original title of the play would have been a better draw.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

HALF A SINNER: Berton Churchill, Joel McCrea, Sally Blane—One of the very best from Universal in a long time. All reports on this have been from good to excellent, and this is as it should be. Many comments, and all, of course, very good. We did not get average business, but are reaching the time of year when people have too many other interests.—L. V. Bergtold, Opera House, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

HALF A SINNER: Joel McCrea, Sally Blane—A swell programmer. Plenty of the old hokum, but the customers liked it. Played October 29-30.—Hollis Drew, Temple Theatre, East Jordan, Mich. General patronage.

HONOR OF THE RANGE: Ken Maynard, Cecilia Parker—More than two years ago, we started Tuesday-Wednesday bargain nights. And here is Maynard's record on these nights: The three highest grosses on bargain nights in this more than two-year period are all Maynard's—"Gun Justice," "Strawberry Roan" and "Honor of the Range"—and this record against every Zane Grey, Buck Jones and many outstanding programs played on these nights. My hat is off to this good looking cowboy!—L. V. Bergtold, Opera House, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

I GIVE MY LOVE: Wynne Gibson, Paul Lukas—Sob stuff; seemed to get by with the women.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

LET'S TALK IT OVER: Chester Morris, Mae Clarke—O. K. program picture. Played November 20-21.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

LOVE BIRDS: Slim Summerville, Zasu Pitts—No better or worse than the others by this combination. This drew O. K., but at a time when everything seemed to draw (October) regardless of title or stars.—L. V. Bergtold, Opera House, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

MILLION DOLLAR RANSOM: Mary Carlisle, Edward Arnold, Phillips Holmes—Better than average program offering—but with a gangster theme that is no help at the box office right now. Used on a surprise preview, this pleased. Running time, 67 minutes. Played November 10.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town patronage.

SATURDAY'S MILLIONS: Robert Young, Leila Hyams, Johnny Mack Brown, Andy Devine—Missed a date on this last fall, so held over for the football season this year. More about the gambling racket than the gridiron. Comments were satisfactory, although I wouldn't rate it any above par.—L. V. Bergtold, Opera House, Kasson, Mich. General patronage.

SMOKING GUNS: Ken Maynard, Gloria Shea—Played this one night—Wednesday—to the biggest Wednesday in more than three years. Who said westerns were a thing of the past? Dandy story in this and one of the year's best all-around cowboy shows.—L. V. Bergtold, Opera House, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

THERE'S ALWAYS TOMORROW: Frank Morgan, Elizabeth Young, Lois Wilson, Binnie Barnes—Used this on a surprise preview and how the patrons liked it. A picture you can sell your patrons and they will thank you for running it. Universal did themselves proud on this one. Running time, 87 minutes. Played November 24.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town patronage.

WAKE UP AND DREAM: June Knight, Roger Pryor, Russ Columbo—Pleasing little show for the whole family. Played November 18-19.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

WAKE UP AND DREAM: Russ Columbo, June Knight, Roger Pryor—This musical nice, clean show that we used as a benefit with lodge. Pleased. Played November 7-8.—P. G. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

WAKE UP AND DREAM: Russ Columbo, June Knight, Roger Pryor—This failed to draw for us, though it did please the majority of those who came. It's a good program picture the best feature of which is the singing of the late Russ Columbo. Hope you have better luck with it. Running time, 79 minutes. Played November 18-19-20.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town patronage.

Warner Bros.

AS THE EARTH TURNS: Jean Muir, Donald Woods—A rather somber story of farm life. Needs a lively comedy on the bill for contrast.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

CASE OF THE HOWLING DOG, THE: Warren William, Mary Astor—It did all right.—Herman J. Brown, Majestic Theatre, Nampa, Idaho. General patronage.

DAMES: Ruby Keeler, Dick Powell, Joan Blondell—A nice musical comedy which seemed to please the customers. Fair Sunday business.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

DAMES: Dick Powell, Ruby Keeler, Joan Blondell, Zasu Pitts—Good Warner musical—catchy tunes—nice chorus routines, but, as usual, Warner drags out the chorus numbers with a dozen formations which becomes boring. Played November 29-30.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

DAMES: Ruby Keeler, Dick Powell, Joan Blondell—This one proves that one good turn does not necessarily deserve another. A good picture of the type, but the type is getting tiresome to the public. They are fed up on dance scenes that depend for their effectiveness on overhead shots and on spectacular numbers that are supposed to be presented on a theatre stage—but manage to take in sweeping panoramas of outdoor scenes that no stage could accommodate. Running time, 91 minutes. Played November 11-12-13.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town patronage.

FIREBIRD, THE: Verree Teasdale, Ricardo Cortez, Lionel Atwill, Anita Louise—Ordinary semi-mystery. Played December 1.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

HERE COMES THE NAVY: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, Gloria Stuart—We gave this one "the works" and were amply repaid. Contains much salty humor, well-balanced by action and suspense. A navy boy told us that it was the most realistic navy picture filmed yet. We're inclined to believe it. Played October 28-29-30.—Ray Baker, Grand Theatre, Littleton, Colo. Small town or suburban patronage.

KANSAS CITY PRINCESS: Joan Blondell, Glenda Farrell, Robert Armstrong, Osgood Perkins—A good picture, but did not do half the business I thought it would. Patrons seemed to enjoy it very much. Played November 7-8.—George Recktenwald, Playhouse Theatre, Clyde, N. Y. Small town patronage.

SMARTY: Warren William, Joan Blondell—Joan Blondell as the dame who can't choose between husbands and Warren William and Edward Everett Horton are the two distraught makes who struggle to control her whims. Horton does get laughs; but they are all too obviously acting. Play it if you wish. You'll get average business—which is generally conceded to be poor. Running time, 64 minutes. Played October 23-24.—Ray Baker, Grand Theatre, Littleton, Colo. Small town or suburban patronage.

Short Features Columbia

MEN IN BLACK: Broadway Comedies—Fair comedy with The Three Stooges. Too silly.—J. O. Smith, Paramount and Dixie Theatres, Ashland and Lineville, Ala. Small town patronage.

STABLE MATES: Sidney and Murray—A slapstick comedy that really went over. Every one got a kick out of it and that is what counts. Running time, 2 reels.—B. A. McConnell, Emerson Theatre, Hartford, Ark. Mining town patronage.

Educational

BIG BUSINESS: Musical comedy—Not a laugh and nothing to it. We have had about two good comedies from this company.—Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Tex. General patronage.

DREAM HOUSE: Bing Crosby—Not much to this one. The shorts Bing has made have not been so good, but he is so popular here in features.—Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Tex. General patronage.

EDUCATING PAPA: Frolics of Youth series—Educational, so far this season, has released the unfunniest comedies I have ever seen. However, I notice some favorable comments on some later releases. We'll be grateful.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

GOOD LUCK—BEST WISHES: Pickens Sisters—This one will pass. The Pickens Sisters sing quite a few numbers. It has a few laughs.—Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Tex. General patronage.

HIS LUCKY DAY: Ernest Truex—A high-class two-reel comedy; good comedy and story; good for best nights. Running time, 20 minutes.—J. K. Buckner, Palace Theatre, Grapevine, Tex. Small town and rural patronage.

HIS LUCKY DAY: Ernest Truex—Fair comedy.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

I SURRENDER, DEAR: Bing Crosby—Bing sings a few good numbers in this, but no one will hardly recognize him as he doesn't look natural. A few laughs.—Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Tex. General patronage.

MAGIC FISH, THE: Terry-Toon—Good.—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. Small town patronage.

MANAGED MONEY: Shirley Temple—Old, but plenty entertaining. We have played two of these from the "Frolics of Youth" series; the other was "Pardon My Pups," and they not only drew extra business, but were pleased. Running time, 19 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town patronage.

MOUNTAIN MELODY: Song Hit Stories—Hill Billy orchestra and singing that's entertainment in a number one shape. A contest between two Hill Billy bands to see which one goes on the radio, and do they go to town? Running time, 9 minutes.—P. J. Lees, Majestic Theatre, Lake Mills, Wis. Small town patronage.

MOUNTAIN MELODY: Song Hit Story—Very, very good. Running time, 10 minutes.—I. W. Rawley, Ward Theatre, Pismo Beach, Cal. General patronage.

SHE'S MY LILLY: Musical Comedies—Here's a comedy that's worth a feature's comment. Mahoney could entertain all night and they wouldn't get sick of him. Plenty laughs and some neat tap dancing in Mahoney's own style. Running time, 20 minutes.—P. J. Lees, Majestic Theatre, Lake Mills, Wis. Small town patronage.

SHE'S MY LILLY: Musical Comedies Series—Excellent. Running time, 20 minutes.—I. W. Rawley, Ward Theatre, Pismo Beach, Cal. General patronage.

SLOW BUT SURE: Terry-Toon—Just a cartoon.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Small town patronage.

THEN CAME THE YAWN: Treasure Chest Series—Educational must have run out of story material and they are now following Metro's Gooey Movies. Running time, 7 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

TRAV'LING THE ROAD: Song Hit Stories—A very interesting one-reel subject. The scenery and singing very good. Running time, 8 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

Fox

PICTURESQUE PORTUGAL: Magic Carpet Series—The best of this series which hasn't been so hot.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

MGM

CARETAKER'S DAUGHTER: All-Star Comedies Series—This is only fair entertainment of the slapstick variety. Metro should discontinue this series of two-reels or get some new stars and better story material. A few laughs and that is about all. My patrons walked out on this and I don't blame them. Running time, 19 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

GRANDFATHER'S CLOCK: Musical Revues—We apologized for showing this. A fool and his money soon parted. Running time, 17 minutes.—Geo. F. Smith, Lyric Theatre, Lapeer, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

GRANDFATHER'S CLOCK: Musical Revues Series—We had some compliments on it, but personally thought the color the best and only redeeming part of it. It tries to be different, which is something.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

MIKE FRIGHT: Our Gang—The best Our Gang in a long time and more power to them if they keep up the good work. Running time, 18 minutes.—P. J. Lees, Majestic Theatre, Lake Mills, Wis. Small town patronage.

MOVIE DAZE: All-Star Comedy—Impossible. Buck up, Hal. Running time, 20 minutes.—I. W. Rawley, Ward Theatre, Pismo Beach, Cal. General patronage.

NOSED OUT: Irvin S. Cobb—If this comedy was funny, I failed to see it. I'd say if they don't get any better, Cobb had better stick to writing. Running time, 18 minutes.—P. J. Lees, Majestic Theatre, Lake Mills, Wis. Small town patronage.

ONE-HORSE FARMERS: Todd-Kelly—Had the house in an uproar from beginning to end. Will build up any weak feature. Running time, 19 minutes.—P. J. Lees, Majestic Theatre, Lake Mills, Wis. Small town patronage.

ONE-HORSE FARMERS: Todd-Kelly—Here is a comedy that will furnish plenty laughs and should please any audience that likes comedy. Patsy Kelly better than Zasu Pitts.—Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Tex. General patronage.

OPENED BY MISTAKE: Todd-Kelly—Ordinary Todd and Kelly comedy.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

RASSLIN' ROUND: Willie Whopper Series—This is a very good cartoon comedy with Willie as the prize-fighter. These cartoons are good entertainment for the kids, but the adults do not care for it. Running time, 7 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

SOUP AND FISH: Todd-Kelly—Up to usual standard of this entertaining couple.—B. R. Johnson, Orpheum Theatre, Kerrobert, Canada. Small town patronage.

YOU SAID A HATFUL: Charley Chase—Fairly amusing Chase comedy. Charlie, gather in the singing boys and make another good comedy.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

Paramount

BETTY BOOP'S LITTLE PAL: Betty Boop Cartoon—Fair cartoon. Betty has made much better ones.—John H. Forrester, The Pines Theatre, Waldron, Ark. Small town patronage.

COLD TURKEY: Joseph Cawthorn—Fairly good.—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. Small town patronage.

A DREAM WALKING: Popeye, the Sailor—Extra fine. Each Popeye seems to get better. By far the best series of cartoons on market.—John H. Forrester, The Pines Theatre, Waldron, Ark. Small town patronage.

GOLD NUGGETS: Walter Catlett—Average.—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. Small town patronage.

HA! HA! HA! Betty Boop—Only fair. Running time, 7 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

HOLLYWOOD ON PARADE: No. 11—This is very poor entertainment and not up to the standard set by the previous issues of this series. There are only a few movie stars in this and they are not very interesting. Running time, 9 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

MADHOUSE MOVIES: No. 1.—Not so good. My customers don't like this kind.—John H. Forrester, The Pines Theatre, Waldron, Ark. Small town patronage.

MAN ON THE FLYING TRAPEZE: Popeye, the Sailor—This is one of the best cartoons we played so far. All the Popeyes are good. Running time, 6 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

PICTORIAL REVIEW: No. 3, new series—Fine. Amusing shots of cub bear. Interesting shots and dialogue of Death Valley. Knockout girl orchestra.—John H. Forrester, The Pines Theatre, Waldron, Ark. Small town patronage.

POOR CINDERELLA: Betty Boop—The first of the Color Classics that has the most beautiful color I've ever seen. Nothing but good remarks from the patrons. Running time, 10 minutes.—P. J. Lees, Majestic Theatre, Lake Mills, Wis. Small town patronage.

POPEYE CARTOONS: As good a cartoon as they have on the market. The adults even ask for them, so they must be good.—P. J. Lees, Majestic Theatre, Lake Mills, Wis. Small town patronage.

RADIO ANNOUNCER'S REVIEW, THE: Headliners—Good. Pleased generally.—John H. Forrester, The Pines Theatre, Waldron, Ark. Small town patronage.

RKO

GOOD KNIGHT: Cubby the Bear Cartoon—An average cartoon. Running time, 7½ minutes.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Small town patronage.

HOW'S CROPS: Cubby the Bear Cartoons—Terrible.—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. Small town patronage.

IN THE DEVIL DOG HOUSE: Clark & McCullough—Just another poor one from RKO.—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. Small town patronage.

MILD CARGO: Cubby the Bear Cartoons—Terrible.—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. Small town patronage.

NO MORE WEST: Bert Lahr—Bert Lahr should learn some new comedy. Rather coarse.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Small town patronage.

SINISTER STUFF: Cubby the Bear Cartoons—Just a fair cartoon comedy. Running time, 6 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

Universal

GINGERBREAD BOY, THE: Oswald Cartoon—Nice cartoon.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

Warner Vitaphone

GOOD MORNING EVE: Broadway Brevities—A dandy, good two-reel color musical comedy that could be used with a weak feature and save the show.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

ISHAM JONES AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters Series—Good. Running time, 10 minutes.—I. W. Rawley, Ward Theatre, Pismo Beach, Cal. General patronage.

PAREE, PAREE: Broadway Brevities—This was my first of the series of Broadway Brevities and it's a very weak sister.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

PHIL SPITALNY AND HIS MUSICAL QUEENS: Melody Masters Series—The best short subject I've played in a long time. It is positively grand. Tell them it's extra super special, etc. They really raved about this short. I really hated to return it to the exchange.—Harold Haubein, Cozy Theatre, Lockwood, Mo. Small town patronage.

RHYTHM IN THE BOW: Merrie Melodies—This is an excellent cartoon comedy with good music and will appeal to both the young and old. This entire series of cartoons are very good and the music adds much to the entertaining value. Vitaphone always produces good shorts. Running time, 7 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

SYNCPATED CITY: Hal LeRoy, Dorothy Dare—A very good musical short that pleased 100 per cent. They liked it and told me so. Running time, 20 minutes.—Harold Haubein, Cozy Theatre, Lockwood, Mo. General patronage.

SYNCPATED CITY: Hal LeRoy, Dorothy Dare—This is one of the best shorts of the year and is sure to please. It is a musical comedy with plenty of beautiful girls, good music and beautiful scenes. The tap dancing by Hal LeRoy is very good and all of my patrons liked it. Running time, 20 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

SYNCPATED CITY: Hal LeRoy, Dorothy Dare—Very good. Hal LeRoy is very good with his tap dance.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

STUCK, STUCK, STUCCO: Pepper Pot—Thank goodness I am through with these Pepper Pots. They are no good. Running time, 7 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

J. C. JENKINS--His COLYUM

Oklahoma City

Dear Herald:

They came very near locating this city on top of an oil dome. At the southeast edge of the city the oil derricks are as thick as the hair on a skunk's grandfather. When this country was first discovered it was thought so worthless that the government moved a lot of Indians down here from Nebraska and settled them here, but that's where the government pulled a boner, for they settled them on oil land that has made some of them so rich they don't know what to do with their money, although the whites are trying to show them.

Oklahoma City looks a whole lot like some other towns we have seen. She has a street railway, electric lights, traffic signals, a post office and several filling stations, besides about 145,000 Sooners and "Alfalfa Bill" the governor, but Bill won't be governor very much longer because a guy by the name of Marland over at Ponca City was elected governor at the election by a majority so large that the boys stopped counting the votes. He would probably have gotten a million if there had been that many votes in the state. Marland must be a pretty popular guy.

We read about two boys talking about their fathers snoring. One boy said his father snored so loud that he woke everybody up. The other boy said "Hub, that's nuthin', my pop snores so loud that he'd wake himself up if he didn't sleep in another room."

Then again we read about that "Timber-belt" the government is going to plant to "bring rain." The boys in western South and North Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma and Panhandle will be glad to learn of this for they have been trying for years to get timber to grow and haven't been able to do it. If you want some expert advice on how to run a Texas stock ranch, an Oklahoma cotton plantation, a Nebraska cornfield or how to bring rain, just ask the gentleman in the black alpaca gown with a mortarboard on his head, who probably has never been off the campus, and he will tell you. What he doesn't know about it is nobody's business.

"To Him Who Hath . . ."

We find here in Oklahoma and Texas quite a number of theatres that have closed because they were unable to pay rent and film expenses. There is a verse in the Bible which reads: "To him who hath shall be given, but from him who hath not shall be taken, even that which he hath." We don't know as this is an exact quotation, as we are not very strong along these lines, but anyhow, you exhibitor boys will know what we mean.

Jevver eat an Oklahoma persimmon? You didn't? Well you hain't never et nuthin yet. We used to think that a Georgia watermelon wasn't bad to take, but an Oklahoma persimmon will make a Georgia watermelon

CHIC SALE TO

J. C. JENKINS

From Charles "Chic" Sale, via the Herald, comes a letter to Colonel J. C. Jenkins, the Vagabond Columnist, in which the MGM player thanks J. C. for his appreciation of Sale's short subject, "Old Shep," and notes that he has been signed by MGM for a series of similar subjects, to be called "Chic Sale Miniatures." Incidentally, Sale expresses the hope that J. C. will soon come west again, "so that we can get together for a good old fashioned gabfest."

WHEN SUMMER COMES

*When summer comes, we hope that we Will feel strong enough to climb a tree.
And feel so frisky every day
We'll help "Maude Muller rake her bay."
And if the judge should pass that way
And see us raking Maudie's bay
And stop his nag, she knows so well,
We'd tell the judge to go to—
When summer comes.*

This is the next day after it rained all night and most of the following day, but it has been a pretty busy day for us, for we have slipped up on a number of the boys when they weren't looking, and thereby hangs a number of tales, but we are not going to tell any out of school, except to say that we called on S. R. Simpson branch manager for Paramount, H. O. Stark, district sales manager for RCA; H. K. Buchanan, branch manager for Allied; R. C. Willam, branch manager for RKO, and R. K. Hogdon, branch manager for Fox, and not a one of them offered any resistance or called the police. Oh, yeah, then we called on the Griffith Amusement company and met H. J. Griffith, one of the firm who is largely responsible for the selection of the managers for their string of theatres throughout Oklahoma and Texas, and who is held in the highest esteem by these managers wherever we have gone. When you meet Mr. Griffith you can easily understand why this is. Then we also met C. O. Fulgham, who is assisting Mr. Griffith in the managing of these houses. Mr. Fulgham is a native Sooner and has been connected with the theatre industry, in various capacities, the better part of his life, and he is not so old either, and we are informed that he has been appointed as general manager for the eastern division of the Griffith circuit of houses, and we give it as our opinion that in this appointment Mr. Griffith is to be again complimented for his excellent judgment.

After that we got ourself a couple of hot dogs and went and called on Paul Townsend, who operates the Liberty theatre. The Liberty is located right down in the canyon where the street cars and beer trucks will run over you if you don't watch out (we followed one truck six blocks and couldn't catch up with it), then we went back and called on Paul, and we were glad we didn't catch that truck, for we found Paul an excellent chap running an excellent house, and that makes an excellent town out of Oklahoma City. But listen, Phoebe, we can't spend all of our time here in Oklahoma City when all the boys out in the state are laying for us with a shotgun, no matter what "Alfalfa Bill" thinks about it. Now, for instance, you take Alfalfa Bill, Ma Ferguson and Charlie Bryan and shake 'em all up together in a sack and they will all come out at once.

Henrietta

At Holdenville we met R. D. Howell, who manages the Grand theatre. We might have thought that he was our ex-senator, R. D. Howell of Nebraska if he hadn't passed away about a year ago. Holdenville fits right into the hills in fine shape and the Grand theatre fits right into the Holdenville community like a cousin to our Uncle Jake, although we haven't any Uncle Jake. T. H. Wilson manages the Blaine and Morgan theatres here in Henrietta, and Henrietta looks to us like a live community and Mr. Wilson gives the impression of knowing the theatre business without instructions.

Gainesville, Texas

When you go to Gainesville, Texas, be sure to call on A. V. Wade, the manager of the Majestic, Texan and Lyric theatres, and if he isn't down on the Red River fishing for bullheads, you will find him an excellent Longhorn ready to accommodate you at any time. Mr. Wade was born in the light of the moon when the sign of the zodiac was in the head, and that's the reason for his excellent knowledge of the theatre business.

H. E. Hargrave manages the Texas and Washington theatres in Sherman. He told us that he was remodeling the Gem at a cost of $15,000 and that it soon would be ready to open. Three theatres ought to be aplenty for Sherman, but then just see who is managing them.

Back with the Robins

H. S. Cole manages two theatres in Bonham. H. S. is a brother of Colonel H. A. Cole of Dallas, who is connected with the Allied States Association, and that is proof sufficient that he comes from an excellent family.

We have an H. S. Cole up at Neligh who is the manager of our Junior Legion baseball team, and listen Lucy, we've got some team, too. They lacked two runs of being the champions of the western half of the U. S.

It's warm down here today, just like a May day up at Detroit Lakes, Minnesota, except that there is no bass fishing down here.

Please tell the boys up north that we will be back with the robins in the spring.

Roach Strengthens Staff For Dual Bill Competition

Hal Roach, in a move to combat the double feature policy is lining up feature comedy writers and directors at his Hollywood studio, according to Fred Quimby, short subject sales manager for MGM, on his return last week from the Coast. MGM distributes Roach product. "Roach appreciates the necessity for better stories, writers and players for his new productions and is making every effort to meet the demand," said Mr. Quimby.

Harmon-Ising, cartoon producers, are working on a third dimension cartoon, tentatively titled, "Bosco's Mother Goose," said Mr. Quimby. "We have increased our production budget 50 per cent higher than at any time since we have been in the short subject field. Of this percentage 35 per cent is allowed for color," he said.

AN ACKNOWLEDGMENT

With gratifying reports of my appearance in "COLLEGE RHYTHM" coming in from various parts of the country, it makes me happy to express my appreciation to the executives and staff of Paramount Pictures Corporation and my fellow players for the many courtesies shown me and the helpful co-operation extended without which, I am certain, such an enthusiastic response would have been impossible.

The BLUEBOOK School

By F. H. RICHARDSON

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 252.—(A) Name the various items involved in screen image dimensions and explain each one in detail. I shall ask no other question this time because of the fact that this one involves many things, and if your answers are complete they will require considerable space.

Answer to Question No. 246

Bluebook School Question No. 246 was: (A) Is it essential to best performance that motor-generators having no sub-base, but coupled armature shafts, be set in perfect alignment perfectly level, and that they be held immovable by securely anchored anchor bolts? (B) Is it advisable that the projectionist make certain electrical connections when a new set is installed? (C) What oil should be used for M. G. sets, and why? (D) What precautions must be taken in selecting grease for lubrication of ball bearing sets?

The following made good: C. Rau and S. Evans; G. E. Doe; D. Danielson; D. Ferguson; R. J. Arntson; J. T. Seiler; C. Oldham; A. F. Sprafke; G. A. Artley; J. Wentworth; T. Van Valkenburg; H. Edwards; Bill Doe; K. Arrington; R. D. Oberleigh and J. Lansing; D. Breaston and H. Haber; B. R. and M. Walker; F. Ferguson and D. Lally; G. N. Guidotti and F. L. Saylor; L. M. and C. B. Traxler; L. I. Miner; L. Grant and R. Geddings; R. and K. Wells; N. L. Simms; S. Spooner and B. H. Thaller; T. L. George; C. Umphrey; D. Johnson; P. L. McIntosh; R. Crawford, G. E. Osborn, C. B. Murray and D. T. Bennett; P. and L. Felt; F. Simms and O. L. Daris; L. Henderson and B. I. Henderson; T. Turk; L. M. Goss, D. L. Madison and T. Danielson; N. L. Tomlinson and G. Lathrop; D. L. Sinklow; F. H. and L. Klar; N. L. Haynes and A. Richardson; T. N. Onby; M. and J. Devoy; E. L. Dodson and F. L. Benton; K. L. Knight; G. Samuels; M. F. Fallon; D. Davis and J. Sackett; D. Stellegos and G. Wayne; L. and F. R. Russell; G. Johnson and N. T. Kane; O. Thum and I. D. Ackertly; C. and J. Hawken; H. Pitchkey and M. C. Mellinger; H. R. Binnings; K. Erwin and L. F. Erwin; H. D. Schofield; A. and D. Porter; R. Suler and R. Wheeler; C. N. Lindsay.

Answering Section A, L. M. and C. B. Traxler say, "It is important that M. G. sets having no sub-base, but coupled armature shafts, be placed in perfect alignment and so fastened that they will remain that way since otherwise both vibration and noise will result.

"The foundation upon which the motor and generator are placed must be solid, without vibration. Its upper face should be finished smooth and perfectly level. When the machines are placed on this face their shafts must be in perfect alignment, which may be accomplished by drawing up the shaft coupling bolts tight before finally tightening down on the anchor bolts, afterward seeing to it that doing so has not caused the machines to bind on the anchor bolts at any point in a way that might prevent them from aligning perfectly. It is of course assumed that the coupling faces and the washer that usually goes between them are true. If they are not—well, that is ample grounds for rejecting the set right off the bat.

"We have found it a good scheme to cut in the power before tightening down the anchor bolt nuts, and let the set run at full speed for a moment. This will cause the set to settle into position and eliminate any possible slight inaccuracy in alignment there may be. When this is done, tighten down the anchor bolt nuts firmly. There should then be no vibration at all."

I selected this answer because the suggestion of running the set a moment before tightening down the anchor bolts seemed to me to be a mighty excellent one. Assuming there is some play in the anchor bolt holes, it certainly would serve to perfect the alignment, assuming the coupling itself to be true—which we would of course have every right to assume it to be.

(B) H. Edwards says, "Not an easy question to answer because of the fact that the new theatre may be in a location so far removed from any seat of operations that it would cost a lot to send a man to make the necessary connections. In such circumstances I would hold it would be very possible to so instruct the projectionist (if he be one really) that he could do the job without any very serious chance of trouble. This is the more true because of the fact that such a theatre would hardly be a large one requiring a complicated system of wiring.

"However, where it is not too expensive it would seem best that a competent electrician who is familiar with the particular set (a factory man if possible) do the installing. Some installations are such that it would be very difficult, if not impossible, for any but a very competent electrical worker to follow the wiring diagrams and make the necessary adjustments for best operation with surety.

"Answering in still another way, if there be an experienced electrician accustomed to work from diagrams within reasonable distance, unless the projectionist himself be of equal ability it would be best to call in the electrician and have him work with the projectionist."

(C) G. A. Artley says, "The particular oil to be used will depend largely upon climatic conditions. An oil that is best for low temperatures is not best for high ones. But the oil used for lubricating the local power plant generators surely may be depended upon as suitable."

Rau and Evans say, "Oil used for M.G. sets should be the kind recommended by the makers of the set, but if the same for some reason cannot be had, then the oil used by the local power plant will serve very well. If this, too, is not available, then select a good grade of medium dynamo oil, which may be changed to light dynamo oil in winter."

(D) D. Danielson says, "A grease for ball bearings must be absolutely free from acid and be of sufficient texture to stand up under heat, but light enough not to hinder the action of the balls. A fibre grease is best."

Rau and Evans say, "It is essential that grease for ball bearings be wholly free from either acid or animal fat, since otherwise the polished surface of the balls will be roughened and in time destroyed, whereupon the bearing must be replaced to avoid serious trouble. Manufacturers of ball bearings sets make careful tests of various greases and put their okay on such as they find suitable for use. Their recommendations should therefore be followed."

To which latter I would add: If the manufacturer's recommendation is not followed, it is very likely the transgressor will have ample opportunity to regret not having done so—his regret being expressed in dollars and cents—mostly dollars.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

*An international association of showmen meeting weekly
in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress*

ONE STEP FORWARD

Although there is still a long distance to go, Columbia Pictures makes a stride in the right direction by changing the type of press book ads on "Mills of the Gods" to conform somewhat with the wishes of the men in the field. It is not altogether unreasonable now to expect other changes for the better not only in this company's future press books but also those of other producers. And that finally an effort has been made by the home office men to remove some of the theatreman's immediate advertising obstacles speaks well for further cooperation between producer-advertisers and managers.

Incidentally, by encouraging expressions of the various members who are participating in the press book discussions, your Managers' Round Table Club again proves its unique value as the showman's only mouthpiece for criticisms and suggestions.

"WON'T BE — CAN'T BE"

In editorializing the Quigley Award efforts of a previous winner, this department had occasion to recall the deathless words of the late Bill Roper who uttered the famous classic—"a man who won't be licked, can't be licked." We used the saying to illustrate the determination of the finally successful showman who, undeterred by seeming failure, crashed through to win.

The Quigley November decisions, listed on another page, allow us another opportunity to clarify the above brave words that have brought hope to many a man. They describe aptly the spirit of Sig Solomon, of the Regent, Newark, N. J., who with three Firsts and two Honorable Mentions was not to be appeased until he had brought home the bacon. And in the November competition Sig came through.

In addition to aggressive showmanship, ingenuity and plain savvy, dogged courage is another quality that brings concrete returns at the box office.

ON GETTING AHEAD

Another Round Tabler moves up. To a high operating post with Neighborhood Theatres, of Virginia, goes Elmer Brient, formerly Loew manager in Richmond. His new duties comprise direction of advertising and exploitation, assisting in the reorganization of the corporation's theatres and supervision of a general expansion program, now under way.

No easy assignment is this, but Elmer's long and successful years in the theatre will stand him well. Godspeed, oldtimer.

GOOD WILL AND GROSSES

Often it has been stressed that what managers do to forward civic progress in their communities is proportionately as important as the direct effort put forth to stimulate grosses. The case of Manager M. L. Ashmann, of the Capitol, a Brooklyn, N. Y., neighborhood theatre, is offered in further evidence.

This Round Tabler, located in a highly competitive metropolitan section, recently accepted the post of director on a drive to organize a Better Business Association, membership confined to merchants situated on his street. At this writing general enthusiasm is reported and definite progress has been made. However, most significant in Ashmann's campaign is what he has to say about the benefits of this cooperation:

"... Prospects for the furthering of our objectives are very bright and you can see that the contacts available to me are valuable in the way of tie-up advertising. . . ."

Increased business stemming from the building up of theatre prestige through participation in outside activities is not to be discounted. Successful showmen will bear this out.

MANAGERS—COLUMNISTS

From Sales Promoter Gene Curtis, of Famous Players Canadian, comes word of approval from headquarters giving the circuit managers permission to use their names over picture publicity material planted in local newspapers. Among those reported to have already promoted this desirable feature are Walter Davis, Orpheum-Fort William; Ernie Smithies, Capitol-Kingston; Jimmie Lynch, Runnymede-Toronto, and C. G. Smith, Empress-Penticton.

Readers have been educated to the extra importance of newspaper by-lines and managers who thus become columnists are wisely giving their conventional stories an added value that no doubt is contributing somewhat to the grosses. The personalization of picture news in this manner is to be encouraged.

Once upon a time, there was a press book which did not offer jumbo telegram tieups, cigarette, soap or cosmetic endorsements, classified page, star identification or essay contests, double truck ads and newspaper features that "your editor will surely go for". Yes, once upon a time—

ADS IN PRESS BOOKS CHANGED BY COLUMBIA

Herschel Stuart Responds to Theatremen's Suggestions Published in Round Table

As a result of the discussions in these pages on press book improvement, Columbia Pictures, in a letter to the Round Table Club from Herschel Stuart, director of advertising and publicity, announces the adoption of a number of the suggestions made by the members. States Mr. Stuart:

"In response to exhibitor requests through MOTION PICTURE HERALD and to Columbia direct, we are changing the type of press book ads with May Robson in 'Mills of the Gods,' a Columbia release for December.

"We hope these ads will make it easier for exhibitors and we have left room in each ad for the name of the theatre, price and policy, second feature, shorts or extra show. The proofs of the new type ads are attached hereto."

The ads to which Mr. Stuart refers are a generous assortment of one, two, three and four-column displays of varying depth, each containing space for extra attractions and theatre slug. Theatremen who have been requested to state an opinion regarding the changes express themselves as pleased with the attitude of the Columbia ad head and look forward to the adoption of further press book improvements by other home office advertising departments.

Before coming to Columbia, Mr. Stuart served for many years in the exhibition field, his last theatre assignment being general manager of RKO.—A-MIKE.

Puts On Campaign For Double Feature

With "Caravan" and "Peck's Bad Boy" on one bill, Manager Don Ross, Palace, Hartford, Conn., fired his ammunition at two targets, scoring many hits. On "Caravan," Don hooked up advertising beauty shop for layouts on both Loretta Young and Jean Parker, ads carrying two column cuts of stars.

For "Peck's," essay contest on "why I would like to have a Jackie Cooper dog" was planted for prize of pup, papers carrying stories on this and photo of winner receiving the canine from Don, Jr. Free orphan show in connection was also publicized.

Toups Sponsors "Widow" Dance at Leading Hotel

Taking advantage of "College Night" at one of the leading hotels in New Orleans, La., Rodney Toups and his assistant, Moise Bloch at the State arranged for one of the couples to do the "Merry Widow" waltz. M. C. introduced the dancers and gave the picture a good plug. Bulletin boards in high schools and colleges carried cards with theatre credit.

Few days prior, to each gentleman accompanied by a lady was handed envelope in feminine script reading, "Don't show this to her." Inside was endearing greeting from Jeannette MacDonald asking that the recipient meet her at the theatre.

Shoe store window display carried huge cutout of Chevalier and MacDonald doing the waltz and tying in with dancing slippers. Replicas of $2.00 tickets used at Astor were handed out, preview for critics held ten days before and bannered Liberty trucks called attention to date.

Binstock Ties Schools Up On "Temple" Essay Contest

Paul Binstock at the Republic Theatre in Brooklyn for his "Now and Forever" date sponsored a children's essay contest on "Why I would like to own a Shirley Temple Doll." Enlisting the aid of the public schools, one of the principals was selected to act as judge and announcements regarding the picture and contest were made in school auditorium.

Department store contributed the dolls which were on display in the lobby. Shirley Temple stills were promoted, paid by merchant, and distributed on poorest matinee of week after school. A tieup with furniture store brought window display of child's bedroom with six sheet cutout of Shirley.

Hellinger Explains Racing Trophies

Turf Tiein Features 'B'way Bill' Showing

By arrangement with Turf and Field Club, Jockey Club and other prominent racing organizations, an exhibition of racing trophies worth many thousands of dollars was shown at the Radio City Music Hall in conjunction with the date on "Broadway Bill." Mark Hellinger, New York Mirror columnist and author of the story from which the picture was made, was guest of honor during preview, after which he presided at the exhibit (see photo) explaining the history of many of the famed trophies.

Other Hellinger angles that brought attention included bannerling of special railroad car to the Army-Navy game in which the writer and a group of Broadway celebrities traveled to Philadelphia, the car being designated as "Broadway Bill Special." On his broadcast of the game, Hellinger mentioned the New York picture a number of times. Other stations also made announcements.

The Mirror printed and distributed 11 by 14 cards for newsstand display, Postal Telegraph inserted leaflet in all local wire deliveries and a special Helen Vinson collar was also featured in many style windows. This tieup is being effected nationally. The Furness Bermuda Line distributed photographic enlargement display cards to all tourist agencies in the territory and Macy's tied this in to their Cinema Shop with newspaper ads and special radio hour.

Campaign was handled by Hazel Flynn and Jim MacFarland, of the Music Hall, working with Columbia's exploitation staff.

Mayor Proclaims Ice Cream Week on "Kid Millions"

Herb Morgan and Bill Saxton, Century, Baltimore, Md., tied up with a leading ice cream distributor and arranged with the Mayor to declare an "ice cream week" in honor of "Kid Millions." Delivery trucks carried banners, special ice cream booths were erected and free cream given to each kid attending special showing. To clerk in chain drug store selling most Cantor ice cream a prize was given, and ice cream dealer got out cooperative ads in which theatre received billing.

Lux tieup brought distribution of window streamers, Chase and Sanborn used window strips announcing opening and other merchants participated in a cooperative ad page.

Larson's Hanging "Caravan" Sign

Larson Inaugurates Novel Banner Idea

Hanging banners in an unusual form and offered as an original twist by Manager Frank Larson, Paramount-Idaho Falls, Idaho, are illustrated above, and were responsible, states this member, for more excitement than has been aroused lately by his varied theatre activities.

The gag was used on "Caravan," and the banner attached to ordinary manilla rope which was thrown over wires holding the traffic signals on street corners. Banners were hung so as not to interfere with traffic and copy read: "This rope is 15 feet long. Multiply it 1000 and you will have some idea of the thrills and entertainment coming to you when you see, etc., etc." Frank says the stunt was costless and recommends it for use in any spot where the location can be obtained.

Also helpful was a gypsy tent in lobby, girls in costume handing out ordinary playing cards in center of which were pasted slips containing fortunes, topped by title and date.

Sixth Entry from New Jersey Warnerite Selected as Best of Month by Three Judges

Let's say it again—"a man who won't be licked, can't be licked." Let's say it again and still again, for Round Tabler Sig Solomon of the Regent-Newark, N. J.

Sig wins the Quigley Award for November and wins it on his sixth attempt for his sterling campaign on "Judge Priest." The decision was unanimous, each judge listing this entry at the top of the heap. And well does he deserve the honors. His campaign featured three important contests, among other highlights, details of which will be run in the next issue.

Finishing a comfortable second and rating the only First Mention given in November, Manager Fred Weimar, Orpheum, Sioux Falls, S. D., bows in with a fine effort on "Little Miss Marker." Weimar is the first member from the Minnesota Amusement Company ranks to enter into the charmed circle, and the fact that he played this attraction second-run entitles him to an extra bow.

The next five to finish take down well won Honorable Mentions, this group including Don Nichols, Charlotte, N. C.; Leo Henderson, Twin Falls, Idaho; Matt Saunders, Bridgeport, Conn.; Harry Charnas, New York, and Roscoe Drissel, Wilmington, Del.

In addition, seven other entrants were rewarded also with Honorable Mentions, and their names are listed in the next column. All in all, the judges agreed that those finishing in the November money turned in a representative showing of high-light exploitations that could well hold its own in most any company.

Again newcomers to the Awards competition are listed this month with a number of showmen who have won previous Mentions in the past months. That new names are being included in each Award period indicates undoubtedly that more and more showmen are participating in the Competitions.

This interest extends even to foreign lands as proven by the Honorable Mention won by A. L. Caplan, South China manager, Fox Films, who entered an excellent campaign on "Baby, Take a Bow" at King's theatre, Hong Kong, China.

The Last Month

Only a few weeks remain in December. Showmen as yet unrecognized have notified headquarters they intend making their entries for this month the best they have yet offered in an attempt to crash through. Increased enthusiasm is also evident among previous winners who are cooperating to wind up the final competition of the year in a veritable blaze of glory.

A final 1934 invitation is extended to showmen everywhere to get aboard. Circuit and independent theatremen are tearing down the home stretch. Another keen struggle is looked for to wind up the year. Here's hoping.—A-MIKE.

CHINESE STUFF. The lobby of the Fifth Avenue, Seattle, Wash., was given an exotic touch on "The Catpaw" with dragon tapestries bordering the sides. John Hamrick's ad crew is credited.

Walter Davis Went For Those Cabbages on "Wiggs"

The good old dependable cabbage has played a prominent part in many of the campaigns reported on "Mrs. Wiggs" and on the Canadian premiere of this attraction at the Orpheum, Fort William, Walter Davis planted the headlined vegetable in many ways.

For instance, a street bally, consisting of bannered wagon filled with cabbages pyramided artistically to the top and supporting a section of wooden fence. Unusual but nonetheless effective was Davis' idea of placing the cabbages as atmosphere in merchants' windows with theatre copy.

The vacant lot cutout was another neat bit of work, and other hookins were made with bookstores and libraries. Birthday invitations in the form of special cards were extended, these used regularly by this member to build up children's attendance and described in these pages some time ago.

Girls Brought to New York To See "Dames" at Strand

One of the contests engineered by Larry Graver, Stanley Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa., on "Dames" broke in Daily News three days prior, when girls from leading swimming pools were assembled to act as court of beauty (see photo) to welcome "Dames" to the Stanley. These girls were taken to New York to see the picture at the Strand. The swimming pools publicized the event.

Ten most popular girl employees at four of the leading department stores were chosen and invited to opening. One of the girls from the picture made a tour of the night clubs at which she was introduced and called upon to do a number from the picture. Girl also visited key theatres on circuit telling about the picture and singing hit songs.

Announcement of the opening was made at end of Borden's coast-to-coast "45 Minutes in Hollywood" broadcast and the Borden dealers distributed window streamers. A preview for radio singers, announcers and orchestra leaders netted plugging over air and night clubs.

Hurdy Gurdy Bally Clicks on "Caravan"

Bicycle club with members in riding costume and riding to theatre on bikes to see "Six Day Bike Rider" clicked well for Harry Brown, Jr., who arranged the stunt for the date at the Paramount and Fenway, Boston. Many of the Quaker Oat tie-ups were also made for full window coverage and imprinted contest cards distributed.

In addition to the other slants on "Caravan" on the same bill which were recorded in a recent issue, Harry put out an old fashioned hurdy-gurdy as suggested by Mr. Taylor, of M and P. This bannered street bally (see photo) sent out with couple costumed as leads in picture made all sections of town and suburbs, and was used one day ahead and five days of picture.

Also commanding attention was bicycle parade, riders carrying theatre signs.

Other bike stunts included trick rider on streets, bike riders in Montgomery-Ward window, with passes given to those guessing nearest mileage covered in three days and parade on opening day headed by high school band in which bike riders were mounted on bannered trucks.

Erie Paper Sponsors Bike Rider Road Race

Many excellent breaks were secured by Manager Jim Totman, Warner, Erie, Pa., on bike race between that town and Warren, Pa., 64 miles distant, on day prior to opening of "Six Day Bike Rider." Erie paper cooperated on the gag, as did Manager George Sarvis, Library-Warren, and with the help of the local Quaker Oats and Ivor Johnson bicycle representatives, Totman did a very complete job.

Lobby stunt that clicked was a bicycle on rollers attached to speedometer, patrons invited to try their speed and endurance. Rider on bannered old-time high bike made an effective street bally and another local paper contributed to the campaign with a Goofy Gram contest. Joe E. Brown yell contest on stage during Saturday morning kid show also drew.

As an extra award to the contestants in the road bike race and highly prized by the recipients were personal letters from Joe E. Brown to all riders expressing the star's appreciation for their efforts in the race and their part in helping to bring attention to the local showing.

Girls Dance Continental On Golden's "Divorcee" Float

Lou Golden, manager, and Harry Reiners, publicist at Proctor's, Newark, N. J., are responsible for stunt in the accompanying photo of street bally on "Gay Divorcee." Dancing girls, cut-outs of Astaire and Rogers and loudspeaker playing hits were features of the float.

A walk on the 32-foot truck was background for girls from local dancing school. Revolving cylinder operated by bicycle gears kept figures in center of truck dancing the "Continental." Sides of float decorated with atmospheric scenes, title and names of stars were in raised letters with lights playing behind them.

"I Talked With NEWTON PERKINS"

Lobby Display Should Be Planned to Sell Tickets and Not Fame of Artist, Lionel H. Keene Is Told

by NEWTON PERKINS

Lobby Artist, Loew's State, New Orleans, La.

This business of writing about lobby display isn't so easy to one accustomed to doing his thinking with a yard-stick in one hand and a lettering brush in the other. I'm quite sure the more I think of it, the more doubtful I become of any ability to offer suggestions that haven't already been offered more times than either you or I would care to count.

After a number of years steady employment with the major exhibitors in different sections of the country, one becomes more or less conscious of a certain uniformity and purpose in theatrical lobby display. After all, the real job is to sell tickets, or at least carry out the management's wishes along that line.

I used to rather think of myself as one of those smocked fellows who painted heads and figures of Hollywood's luminaries, upon which I could mount a neat shield of copy, not forgetting of course the none too shrinking signature of creation in the lower right hand corner. But that, although I occasionally break out with something of the sort even now, was quite a long time ago. This idea of "art" in lobby display was a hard thing to discard. It indulged the ego, bolstered prestige among fellow artists and, in short, was rather pleasant all around. Eventually, hard-hearted and callous managers, both local and district, sold me on the idea that all this was more or less a gentle pastime which had no bearing. The thing to do, they said, was sell the show—not me! I now agree.

Today I no longer think of myself as an artist at all. After all, art is creative or at least that is a general interpretation of that much maligned word. There is certainly nothing creative in projecting a star-still upon a nice clean bit of wallboard through the aid of a balopticon lantern. But—and here's the important thing—I do rather fancy the thought that I am an advertising artist, one who is given a piece of merchandise to sell, in my case motion pictures, through the medium of lobby display. If my lobby is intelligently planned and as intelligently executed, it should, in the nature of things, sell tickets.

Says Patrons Neglect Displays

Countless times in a number of cities I have carefully observed the behavior of theatre patrons when they approach my theatre. Sadly enough, the majority of these patrons looking for entertainment, don't give a hang about your front. They merely rush up to the box office and hurriedly have done with the business of buying a ticket. They were already sold before they reached the theatre, either through that advertising top-dog, the newspaper, or else through reputation of star or story. Some of them, in whom doubtless the shopping instinct is strong, stop and shop your front if you know what I mean. But they do not stop and gaze in awe upon your beautiful opaque head, pastel or oil. They very brutally ignore this stuff that took the very heart out of you, and concentrate upon your stills instead. Stills mean something to them. They are a concrete indication of what is to be seen within. They'll sell more tickets than anything else in your lobby, provided there is carefulness in selection, variety in presentation and generosity in exhibition.

Now if this, then, is so, and 20 minutes in your own lobby will prove it, what are we going to do with this sometime vast expense that is called our front? Junk it in favor of a giant still-board? No. Design your front around your stills, simplify your color and design. Announce your attraction in bold but simple lettering, coupled with some punch catchlines and by "punch" I do not mean "The Greatest Attraction of 1934" nor even that other tried and true friend, "Such and Such Magazine Gave It Ump-teen Stars," but catchlines that hint strongly of the type of attraction to be sold, something the wary patron can get his teeth into, something that will tend to make him say to himself: "This should be good!"

In discarding all attempts at the laborious hand-painted poster, today's alert theatre artist has embraced the use of the photographic enlargement and the better lithographic paper, as major illustrations for his front. The photo-enlargement, or "blow-up," is really less expensive than the so-called "art work." A still of merit can be used in any size desired and there is certainly no guessing as to who it is supposed to be. They are very alive and commanding, besides lending a certain class and distinction to your lobby. Most of the litho paper today is made up by far more skillful and talented artists than I can hope to be. Moreover, this better paper is designed with the thought of lobby display in mind, so why not use it, saving yourself both time and trouble. A panel carefully designed with this new time on your hands, looks pretty swell on the whole. Highlight this paper here and there if necessary, but restraint is the word.

Is No Authority on Art

As for color and design, I'm afraid I'm no authority on either. Common-sense, here as elsewhere, pays dividends. I know nothing of the subtleties and whimsicalities of color, but a moment's reasoning wouldn't connect the same color scheme and design to an Arliss and a Harlow. The thinking theatre artist, and if your front sells its share of tickets, you certainly are an artist, subconsciously thinks in terms of lettering, color and design in connection with each type of attraction he has to sell. Today the trend is to soft-pedal the front both in coloring and design. The old, feverish days of "cover the wallboard at any cost" has served its doubtful purpose and gone its way.

Personally, I think that the larger publications in their national advertising, advertising designed and lettered by experts, can serve as my textbook for theatrical lobby display, 1934 model. I try, as well as I am able, to adjust their ideas to my own job.

We learn something new every day in this business, and though none of us will admit to ourselves that we've turned out the pinnacle in lobby fronts, the need for new and fresher ideas is urgent. I am quite sure that I've never used an idea that was entirely my own. If it was good, I surely stole it somewhere, from some one who very probably stole it from some one else. Like a theft of second-base, it's all a part of the game. So if you see something of which you become enamored, some trick of design, some combination of colors, some alphabet of graceful swing, grab it. It may help hold your job, secure you praise, and, perhaps, a raise.

SARA VIRGINIA WINS NATIONAL PRIZES

Round Tabler Willis Grist, Jr., Paramount, Charlottesville, Va., reports that coincident with the first birthday of baby daughter Sara Virginia, the young lady has won a First and Fourth in the National Photographers' Contest. Christmas Eve will mark the sixth anniversary of the Grist nuptials. Congrats, folks!

GOOD "SORRY" AD. A smart two-column newspaper flash that sold the holdover on the current show and the advance on the next is illustrated above. Jack Goldstein, Boston RKO ad head, is responsible.

40-FOOT MICKEY MOUSE. Featured in the Macy New York toy parade was this helium-filled Mickey. Kay Kammen of Disney Enterprises engineered tieup.

ARTIST IN WINDOW. Eddie Dowling, Palace, Pittsfield, Mass., engaged artist to do oil paintings in window as part of his drive on "Man With Two Faces."

SANSON FLASH. Another of those distinctive inside lobby displays at the Roger Sherman, New Haven, Conn., as conceived by Jack Sanson on "Flirtation Walk".

Lanning Circularizes Teachers on "Widow"

Mounting the stills of Chevalier holding Jeannette MacDonald's shoe, Livingston Lanning, Wisconsin Theatre, Milwaukee, Wis., used them in all local shoe stores. Special screening was held for newspaper picture and music critics and orchestras placed with radio and dance orchestras. With the teachers of the State having their annual convention, letters were sent to them calling attention to picture. Heralds were placed in every hotel key box and serial story planted in paper.

Much Coverage Reported On "Transatlantic" Dates

The youth of Memphis was employed by Manager Cecil Vogel to plug "Transatlantic Merry-Go-Round" at the Palace, 50 youngsters being given signature cards containing the picture's full billing. For each complete card turned in with 34 legitimate signatures, one pass was given. Jack Benny's radio popularity was publicized widely, the Jello tune-in slips being distributed by grocers who also used window streamers and special displays. Imprinted match books were available at drug stores and cigar counters.

And in Columbus, Ohio—

Manager Taylor Myers promoted a series of "Transatlantic Nights" at various hotels and night clubs, one leading hostelry offering a cup for best dancing couple, the event being widely publicized by the hotel, also carried by papers.

Among the other ideas that proved helpful was a want ad tiein whereby guest tickets were given to all readers engaging the services of any of the advertisers under the various classifications. Theatre in exchange obtained a series of gratis display ads, box also being carried on classified page.

To Dayton, Ohio—

Where Manager M. C. Burnett, at Loew's, made a successful tieup with merchants in leading market arcade wherein small cards containing one letter of Jack Benny's name were distributed by all cooperating dealers. Passes were given to those securing complete set, Burnett reporting 40,000 cards given out, the snapper being that only 150 contained the letter "e," with 5,000 printed, each bearing the rest of the letters. Stores took large newspaper ads to plug idea.

Postal Telegraph used stickers with theatre copy on all incoming messages, General Foods representatives arranged for window strips and displays and co-op ads from radio stores were obtained in addition to fashion tieins.

Then to Rochester, N. Y.—

Where Manager Les Pollock, at the Rochester, obtained the commendable total of over 6,000 lines of free publicity on his date. Contributing to this total were classified tieups in two papers, advertising by Benny's radio sponsors, radio dealer co-op ads and picture of newsboys attending theatre as guests of Lester.

A special effort was made to plug the date to the Jack Benny radio fans with spot announcements on the Benny hour, radio transcriptions, etc. Pollock reports an unusual radio feature wherein the two leading stations plugged Jack Benny at one time.

Imprinted heralds were promoted for distribution at all filling stations of leading oil chain and copy on the picture written in Gregg shorthand was handed out to stenogs and secretaries. Photos of Frank Parker were made available and Les further smartened up the imprinted napkin idea by having these carry a lot of smart copy.

"NAVY" LOBBY DISPLAY. M. Braze, Highland, Chicago, Ill., promoted this 24 sheet from Sinclair Refining. Real preservers and flags were used.

ATTRACTIVE "DIVORCEE" CURTAIN. W. Lee Byers, Ritz, Clarksburg, W. Va., treats his main curtain in an eye-arresting fashion for his Astaire date.

Wide Range Installation Receives Strong Advance

The installation of the new Wide Range sound system was coupled with the advance campaign on "One Night of Love" by Manager George Cavanaugh and publicist Henry Fisher, Bardavon Theatre, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., the new installation topping the picture in a number of ads.

Wide Range was also advertised in special advance trailer, heralds, three sheet boards, window cards, in addition to a strong plug via sound truck that cruised the city and surrounding areas three days ahead.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Running times are those supplied by the companies. Asterisk indicates running time as made known by West Coast studio before announcement by home office in New York. Variations also may be due to local censorship deletions. Dates are 1934, unless otherwise specified. Letter in parentheses after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers.

1935—AND AIR CONDITIONING

Before another issue of Better Theatres is duly delivered unto its far-flung family of readers, a new year will have begun. We admit the arbitrariness of this, but yielding to custom, are quite willing to regard January 1, 1935, as more than Tuesday of another week, willing to call it the end of an epoch, see in it the obliteration of all that is Past, the arrival of all that is immediately the Future. We accept the whole form and ritual of New Years in every phase—every phase, that is, save one. In rejecting this one we are probably minimizing the significance of the entire occasion, eschewing the most delightful of its privileges. Nevertheless, we will not indulge in prophecy. Too much do we fear its more certain, its more implacable hangover.

Yet if we were, thus prematurely, to endow 1935 with some special characteristic relevant to this business, we should say that it will be the year when complete air conditioning in motion picture theatres becomes general. The reasons for believing this lie in recent technical and commercial developments. An adequate technology has been available for many years, but costs were prohibitive to the average theatre. During 1934, however, the technologist brought the equipment to a stage warranting large-scale exploitation, and commercial organization is making the necessary adjustments to the price.

The theatre auditorium, of course, requires very special mechanical arrangements for the provision of healthful, comfort-assuring atmospheric conditions. Equipment necessary for the co-ordinated control of temperature, relative humidity and air pressure for every day of the year is therefore mandatory wherever and whenever it is financially accessible. Knowing that by now this is generally realized, and appreciating the significance of technical and commercial developments now underway in the air conditioning field, we believe that such equipment will be installed in hundreds of theatres during 1935. That, of course, will be just a beginning. And if this be prophecy, make the most of it.

SAVING ON ELECTRICITY

Mr. Charles S. Bassin, who has been a theatre manager for many years and is now in charge of the Oriental in Mattapan Square, Boston, offers some suggestions in this issue on the reduction of lighting costs. Mr. Bassin has the right of experience to speak with authority in such matters, yet we cannot go the whole way with him.

We do not believe that frugality always means good economy, and with respect to theatre lighting, we think that brightness is essential at all costs. It is true, as Mr. Bassin implies, that "the play's the thing," but plays come and go and not always with the same measured tread, while a theatre is a community fixture.

Without going into details of the matter, one is justified in inquiring at the outset whether electric energy costs are not more importantly a matter of demand charges, rather than of energy charges. Neglectful and haphazard operation frequently shares the guilt for high power costs, but any attempt toward genuine reform should begin with an examination of the entire electrical plan.

CHANGING FACTORS IN THEATRE VISION

By BEN SCHLANGER

How developments in cinematography are affecting auditorium design—an analysis by a motion picture theatre architect

IN TWO PREVIOUS articles in BETTER THEATRES I presented some studies dealing with cinematographic practices as they affect use of the screen area and, thereby, also the design of the motion picture auditorium. Studies were made of about fifty representative films, both European and American, dramatic, musical, spectacular, etc. The films were all made within the last few years, and most of them quite recently. These studies showed definitely that the complete area of the screen was valuable, even as far as the extreme edges, to interesting, dramatic, dynamic cinematography.

The extreme edges of the screen have not only become as important as the central area, but even in a great many instances, they are the most effective for highly dramatic action placement. It is now important in the field of motion picture theatre design to establish whether or not this greater use of the screen area is to be continued and perhaps extended as a source of dramatic and pictorial quality in cinematography. It has a definite effect on the structural and physical lines of the motion picture theatre auditorium.

Following are some of the factors which indicate that this development in screen usage is not merely a temporary fad, but rather a natural evolution in the art of cinematography:

1. Greater flexibility in cinematographic expression.
2. Wide film photography (abandoned temporarily for economic reasons only) showed the effectiveness of spreading the action horizontally.
3. The more popular use of extra large closeups, which must necessarily extend to the extreme edges of the screen.
4. Successful European cinematography.
5. Exterior and panoramic shots.
6. The movement of figures across the entire screen, thereby revealing the background, rather than fixing the figures in the center and, in effect, moving the background.
7. Showing figures at different elevations at the same time, which requires use of the extreme top and bottom portions of the screen.
8. Showing a greater amount of detail that can be seen clearly within a single frame, thereby increasing the effective size of the screen.
9. The patron now looks for good cinematography, and to some extent follows the credit lines.

At the last spring convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, I was invited to deliver a prepared discussion for an open forum on the subject, "What is Wrong With the Shape of the Motion Picture." The studies which I made for the articles in BETTER THEATRES were utilized in preparing this discussion. In addition, I made a very interesting study, showing how the field of vision as seen by the human eye in real life, should be reproduced in effect while viewing a motion picture. This also showed the importance of the use of the extreme edges of the screen, and, incidentally, recommended a wider screen. The open forum discussion which followed at this convention showed a great interest, not only in the more extensive use of the screen, but also in the advantages of a wider screen. It is more than likely that there will soon be some developments toward the use of a wider picture.

CHECKING GOOD VISION FACTORS

When sound first came in, there was a wild scramble to correct the poor acoustics which most theatres proved to have. Correction in this case was accomplished by the application of fabric or other acoustic material to the existing structural forms. The cost of this acoustical work was not at all excessive. Now the change that is taking place in the cinematographic phase of the motion picture is not such a sudden change which would call for immediate correction as in the case of the addition of sound. But the fact remains that a change is gradually but consistently taking place and that in the very near future it will prove absolutely necessary to adjust the faults of motion picture auditoriums to accommodate better cinematography.

Unfortunately, correction in this instance, in most auditoriums, will not be accomplished as easily as in the case of the addition of sound. The very structural and physical lines of a theatre are affected by changes made in the size, shape and use of the screen. Floor construction, supporting and enclosing walls and roof levels, may prove troublesome in existing structures.

Figure 1 (left) illustrates horizontal angles of vision. No seats should be placed at an angle greater than 40° to the picture. Note that the farther away from the screen the seats are placed, the smaller becomes the recommended tolerable angle to the screen. The side seats of the rear third portion of the auditorium are fixed by angles of from 25 to 30° to the picture. Cutting down the tolerable viewing angle as the distance from the picture increases is advisable to compensate for the remoteness of the rear seats, and also as forming a more practical shape for planning. Keeping in mind the necessary practical considerations and the maximum angles shown, minor modifications of the outline plan can be made to meet special conditions encountered. — THE AUTHOR.

VIEWING CONDITIONS

It would be good judgment on the part of every exhibitor to check the screen vision requirements of his theatre now. For him to ignore the existence of poor viewing conditions in his theatre is to accept, in effect, a low standard of exhibition, because every film shown under such conditions is not portraying the full force of the original production. Specifically, the viewing conditions to be checked are:

1. Viewing angles (avoidance of image distortion).
2. Obstruction of the screen (by the heads of the preceding spectator).
3. Projection angle.
4. Viewing angles affecting posture (comfort while seated).
5. Viewing distances.

IMAGE DISTORTION

The first viewing condition to be dealt with here is that of avoidance of image distortion. To be seated in such a position which affords only a distorted view of the screen image is most undesirable. Figure 1 shows the angles at which distortion occurs. Back in 1932 BETTER THEATRES published a somewhat similar diagram, along with a study of distortion, which I prepared. Later, in 1933, Mr. Clifton Tuttle of Eastman Kodak, a member of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, made a similar study, and in both cases the angles where it was claimed distortion occurs, agreed. Note how in this diagram (Figure 1) a greater width of screen causes more seats to come within the area where the screen image is distorted. It therefore follows that if the entire width of the present screen is cinematographically used from edge to edge, rather than only a limited area in the center, there will be in most existing theatres an increased number of seats having an undesirable and distorted view of the screen.

In the past, a screen which was, for example, 16 feet wide in actual physical dimension, was being used only to an extent of from 10 to 12 feet of width for important action placement. Many existing theatres have distortion seating areas even when only this proportion of the screen is used. Obviously, the amount of seats which become undesirable when the full screen width is cinematographically used, will increase rapidly. Now should a physically wider screen be introduced, still more seats would become undesirable from the standpoint of good vision.

The exhibitor may justifiably ask at this point, "To which shall my theatre be adjusted—the present shaped screen or a wider screen?" Before the exhibitor will be willing to make costly alterations in his theatre, he will want to know whether it will not become necessary within a year or so make an additional expenditure.

EXISTING SCREENS

At the present time it is important to take care of the immediate demands of the full use of the present screen width, and while this is being done, it would be wise, wherever possible, to take care of future additional screen width. Just how much extra width should be expected, is at present debatable. However, it can be safely assumed that by providing for an additional screen width amounting to one-fourth of the present screen width, all needs will be satisfied (assuming that your present screen size is the proper one for your theatre).

This calculation is based on the fact that even if the screen were made still wider than this, which is not very likely, such additional width would be used only for supplementary picture composition, and not for important action placement. In some theatres, it will be very difficult to provide for additional screen width; however, in these instances, it is necessary at least to make vision with the present screen size satisfactory.

OBSTRUCTION OF VISION

The second viewing condition to be considered is that of obstruction of the screen by the heads of preceding spectators. The greater use of the entire area of the screen has considerably increased the amount of effective screen area obstructed by preceding heads, along with causing more distorted views of the screen. This is due to important action placement on the lower half of the screen right down to the very bottom edge. The lower half of the screen, and in many cases even more, is obstructed from view in the rear half of the orchestra level of most existing theatres. This part of the theatre holds some of the best seating locations as to viewing distance. It is common knowledge that it is necessary to look between the heads of preceding spectators to see the lower half and more of the screen from these seats. In the past this may not have been so much of an annoyance to the patron when important action did not occur on the lower area of the screen, but it is today.

Looking between heads might be satisfactory but for the fact that the spectator is not always looking at the same point on the screen, and also that the spectator directly in front does not keep his head in a fixed position. The patron behind him actually misses important action detail on the screen.

MOTION AND DETAILS

The factors of unlimited motion and visibility of details account for a main advantage that the motion picture has over the stage. The director and cinematographer in production take full advantage of the opportunities in portraying detail. The fine results of days or sometimes weeks of careful study and good work in a film production may be lost to the spectator in the theatre because of obstructed vision. At a stage performance the action is more or less fixed at one point for quite some time, while the action and detail on a motion picture is apt to be in a great many parts of the screen in a very short space of time.

Another comparison between stage and motion picture vision requirements is found in the fact that a better part of the height of a stage performer may not be, and in many cases is not, seen, yet nothing of real importance is missed by the spectator. With

MAKING THEATRES SAFE FOR WINTER

By J. T. KNIGHT, JR.

Holiday and seasonal hazards and how they may be effectively guarded against by each theatre staff

BUSINESS is improving in the theatre! It may be slow progress in some localities, and it may not be consistent nor show regular improvement each week, but conditions are improving. The larger companies are making great progress in untangling their legal and financial problems, and this is a boon to the entire industry. Pictures have been and are improving so that the pressure of the reformer group has been alleviated to a large extent. There are many more signs of progress, and the industry and every person who is a part of it should be full of enthusiasm, renewed energy and faith in the immediate future.

But with all the brightening of the sky there is one cloud, the cloud of increasing accidents in theatres and as a consequence mounting liability insurance ratings. One major catastrophe in any theatre, regardless of how large or how small, would bring the municipal, state and federal authorities down on the entire industry. Such an event would upset the progress of every company and every individual. The annoyance of repeated inspections by the authorities and the thousands of dollars that they would require to be expended to put new "locks on the door after the horse was stolen," would be of the smallest and least important consequence. The important loss in such cases is the thousands of people that become fearful of all theatres and permanently become non-theatre-goers. It takes years to overcome the result of just one such calamity.

During the holiday season theatre managers are hosts to millions of people. When these millions are in the theatre, we, the industry, have a great responsibility for their safety and well-being, as well as to furnish entertainment for them. Are the theatre managers and their staffs prepared to shoulder such a responsibility? Are the theatres in condition to receive this great mass of people, many of whom will be children?

Each manager and each operating executive owes it to himself and to the industry to answer these two questions before the holiday season breaks upon us. This is no time to take chances, no time to "fix things up" with the inspector. No one will excuse negligence. Good intentions of saving a few dollars for the theatre or the company will sound pretty weak as an explanation of serious accidents. Accidents occurring to people when they are happy and carefree, enjoying life, and at the holiday season of the year, always seem more tragic and emotionally disturbing than when they occur to people while they are at work, in the office, factory or warehouse. Consequently catastrophes in theatres always have a very far-reaching effect.

MAKING STAFF SAFETY-MINDED

IT SEEMS reasonable to suggest that each manager set aside some time for the discussion of safety in the theatre, especially with reference to the holidays. Properly organizing for safety is of equal importance to the mechanical and structural safe-guarding for safety: The first, organizing for safety, costs nothing in dollars and cents (unless your theatre is under-manned), but does require intelligence, forethought and enthusiasm; the second, mechanically and structurally preparing for safety, does cost money in proportion to the hazards the theatre presents. It follows that if either of these two steps cannot be done because "it costs too much," it is an indictment that the theatre is hazardous and the management knows it is unsafe. So, as a consequence, every theatre that is justified in being open to the public, cannot side-step, first, organizing for safety, and second, expending for mechanical and structural safe-guarding.

The manager of a theatre is the theatre safety man, his staff the safety "crew" or safety committee. The people who put the admission prices on the counter of the box office form the theatre's most valued asset; the staff that operates the theatre the second most valuable asset. Two such assets demand protection in the eyes and mind of any business man. If the manager believes this, and every man worthy of the name manager must believe it, he will create within the four walls of the theatre such an atmosphere of safety that every employe and every visitor to the theatre will be permeated with the idea of safety.

EMPLOYE ALERTNESS

When this has been accomplished, every employe will become alive and awake to hazardous conditions. They will report the spots where people trip, stumble or almost fall. They will examine and determine the cause and will persist until the cause is remedied. Bad or dangerous seats, unusually dark spots, dangerous steppings and loose hand rails will so repeatedly be brought to the manager's attention that something must be done to correct them. In such a theatre, when employes are alert to the necessity for safety, they will be quick to step to the assistance of patrons and help them over or around any dangerous spots. This type of service will awaken within the patron a sense of safety and he will be more careful.

Enthusiasm is very necessary—enthusiastic belief that a safe theatre is a commercial asset, enthusiastic acceptance of the responsibility to safe-guard the life and health and limb of every person entering the theatre. Combine such enthusiasm with a common-sense recognition of the various problems presented by the particular theatre, the problems of human nature, the habits and customs of the patrons, and the general groundwork leading toward a safe theatre has been created.

SAFETY MEETINGS

Safety meetings of employes are necessary from time to time. Every theatre staff should assemble at least once before or during the holidays to hear and take part in a discussion of safety. Meetings seem to play an important part in theatre operation. Many writers have poked much fun at the American business man because of the many meetings made necessary by business; yet none of them have suggested a better method of uniform instruction or understanding of common problems. So another type of meeting is suggested—a safety meeting.

The most justifiable complaint about meetings is that the great majority are so everlastingly stupid. Some men conduct meetings as if they were necessary evils of the business—well, in such cases they are evils, all right, and absolutely detrimental. Any meeting that is worthwhile must be carefully thought out, controlled and guided. Fundamental and enthusiastic unity in response must be built up—in brief, hearty cooperation. When a manager can conduct such meetings he need not worry about his authority; he will have all that he needs.

FORMULATING SAFETY METHODS

HERE IS just a suggested procedure which the manager might follow:

(1) Call to his office the assistant manager, the chief projectionist, the stage manager, the engineer, the chief usher, the head doorman and the chief janitor or night superintendent. Start with this small group and instil a safety conscientiousness into them. Tell them the importance of it. Each one will be given a period of time, three days or a week, to present a safety plan for the theatre, especially in reference to the particular part of the theatre in which the individual works most of the time.

ANALYZING RECORDS

(2) Before the next meeting the manager should get out all of the accident reports for the past year, analyze them and classify them, noting the similarity of accidents, the locations where they occurred, the times of day, whether they occurred in a part of the house normally covered by an attendant. All of these phases of the year's records should lead to some opinions or ideas of steps that might be taken to minimize or eliminate them.

Next get out the past year's insurance file, analyze and classify all of the recommendations that have not been strictly complied with. See if any of these cases of non-compliance coincide with the corrective ideas gained from the analysis of the accident records. If they do, this should be conclusive that the corrective recommendations should be complied with.

RECOMMENDATIONS

(3) The second meeting of the group heads should be productive of many ideas covering practically the whole theatre and every phase of operation. After a careful discussion of each idea and plan, decide upon or formulate a definite campaign. This should include a comprehensive letter to the theatre owner or the circuit management, as the case may be, listing in detail the dangerous conditions and definitely requesting an appropriation for correcting them. It should further include a general employees' meeting, plans for emergency and safety drills, periodic bulletins, weekly inspections by a different individual each week, so that no one person becomes indifferent to hazards and fails to report them because they were not corrected as the result of previous reports.

INVESTIGATING

(4) Follow all of this with a careful and serious investigation of any accident that occurs. If for instance a woman fell because of a ripped carpet, determine when the carpet was ripped, what ushers had noticed the rip, to whom they had reported it, what action was taken by the individual who received the report, etc. If there is blame or censure to be placed, place it squarely on the right individual's shoulders. If the accident was the result of negligence, it is serious. The negligent one must be made to realize his negligence, else some day a worse situation is going to bring no end of embarrassment to the manager (embarrassment is a mild word!).

This plan is a suggestion, presented here not as the only approach but as one that might be worth a trial. Any other inclusive scheme, thought out by the manager to fit the particular theatre, should work well. This point is positive: Any plan, regardless of its detail, will fail unless hard, intelligent and persistent effort is put into it. Safe theatres do not result from good ideas unless those good ideas are followed up by action.

SPECIAL SEASONAL SAFETY FACTORS

WITH the coming of winter and the holidays there are a number of things that are always done by theatre managers, or not done by them, which cre-

AIR CONDITIONING METHOD (Answering E. S. F.): The heating condition in your theatre can be overcome very nicely by the installation of two unit type steam heaters. They could be located on either side of your picture and would blow the air toward the rear of the auditorium. These two unit heaters would probably replace all of the radiators now in the auditorium. I should estimate that these could be installed for about $125 each.

With regard to air conditioning, you really cannot do anything under about $6 per seat, which means about $2,000 for your theatre. Anything less than this would be inadequate.

However, if you must forget air conditioning, consider improved ventilation. I would suggest that one fan be located in one of the small dressing rooms to take air from the outside and deliver it into a duct, which in turn would deliver it into the auditorium on either side of the picture.

Such a fan should be selected to work against a static pressure of 1 inch at about 1,160 revolutions per minute, and it would deliver about 4,730 cubic feet per minute, which would mean a complete air change in the auditorium every 4 minutes. This fan would require a motor of about 3½ horsepower. Its dimensions would be approximately 22 inches wide, 28 inches deep, and 30 inches high. I believe this installation could be made for a sum between $600 and $800.

The best information that I have shows that your town has about 1,200 population. How much more business do you estimate might be done with these improvements? Putting the question another way: How much do you calculate you are losing by not having these improvements? The answer to this question would be an important consideration in making your decision.

Just as a suggestion, if you have a sufficiently long lease the funds might be obtained through the Federal Housing Act. This governmental agency was explained fully in the September 22d issue of Better Theatres. If this is not feasible, the lodge from which you rent might participate in these improvements, or at least finance them for you and accept payment made through slight increases in rent during the balance of your lease.

• KNOW-OR FIND OUT: Don't take conditions in your theatre for granted. If you believe a condition is wrong, don't pass it over because it's been that way for years, but get the opinion of someone who knows and who can advise you. Be persistent and consistent in letting the owner know about conditions that should be corrected; make such reports in writing, then you are to some extent covered in case of emergency. This department will be glad to help, and only your initials will be used to identify any published reply to your questions.

• FUEL OILS: The following table might be of some assistance in clarifying the classifications of fuel oils met with in theatre operation:

No.	Grade of Oil	Baumé Gravity	Specific Gravity	B.T.U. per pound
1	Light domestic	36-40	.83	20,045
2	Medium domestic	32-36	.85	19,820
3	Heavy domestic	28-32	.88	19,580
4	Light industrial	24-28	.90	19,340
5	Medium industrial	18-20	.94	18,920
6	Heavy industrial	10-18	.97	18,620

The flash point of fuel oil is the temperature at which the oil begins to give off inflammable gas in sufficient quantities to ignite. Pre-heaters whether electrical or steam, should be so regulated that the oil is never pre-heated higher than 10 degs. below the flash point; 20 degs. below the flash point is the safer limit.

ate hazardous conditions. Lobbies, fronts and marquees are usually decorated with greens, light garlands and paper Christmas decorations. Paper decorations and real foliage are not permitted in many localities and should not be used. In their place, fireproof artificial foliage should be used, and there are many holiday ornaments that

[This discussion of a new and instructive example of shrewd modernization has been prepared by the architect, Mark D. Kalischer of Chicago. The Adelphi theatre, which is owned and operated by Mr. Ludwig Sussman, is located in the Rogers Park section of Chicago.—THE EDITOR.]

WHEN I RECEIVED the commission of remodeling the Adelphi theatre, I determined to forget as much as possible the stereotyped ways of designing and decorating a theatre and to approach the problem from a purely logical and functional standpoint. The marquee I decided must be an integral part of the design of the front, as must also the display cases for coming attractions—not be just after-thoughts tacked on to the building after the architectural work was completed.

REMODELING AND STEEL

Design from my viewpoint is merely the placing of masses of lights and darks, or shadows, in such a way that the resultant forms and proportions are pleasing. Accordingly the thought behind the design of the Adelphi front is the alternating of two bands of light—the marquee and the coming attraction cases on the front, with two bands of black, carrara glass on the facade of the building

The black glass was used because of the permanence of its finish and because of the life of the material. It was put on the facade in a series of vertical strips each 6 inches wide and ground to a perfect convex surface and polished to a mirror reflecting surface. The fountain-like reflections from the light troughs in the soffit of the marquee alone justify the expenditure of money necessary to produce this material.

The front doors, frames of the display cases on the front, and the entire marquee are all of stainless steel. This material was chosen because of the beauty of its contrast against black glass, its resistance to scratches, and because it is impervious to the action of the weather, retaining its blue-white color under all conditions.

The function of a theatre marquee is twofold—to protect the patrons from the weather, and to illuminate the front of the theatre and proclaim the name of the theatre and the attraction shown. The entire front of the Adelphi marquee is a band of white light before which large stainless steel trough letters, illuminated with two rows of 10-mm. red neon tubing are supported on two stainless steel rods. The two ends are also a sheet of white glass illuminated from behind with silhouette letters proclaiming the current attraction. An upper and lower band of vertical tubes of red neon flash progressively from the center of the front to the facade of the building and back again.

The corner and end posts consist of drums of stainless steel with alternate tubes of red and blue neon arranged in horizontal bands spaced as near together as possible and connected so that the red tubes come on progressively from the top, washing out the blue tubes as they come on until only red tubes are burning. Then the reverse action takes place, the blue color washing out the red.

The ceiling is a series of stainless steel troughs, with bulbs spaced 6 inches on centers. The troughs immediately in front of the entrance doors curve downwards to meet a sign of 3/4-inch white glass letters, flashed to the black glass background.

The sidewalk is of terrazzo with an admixture of alundum to prevent slipping in wet weather, and has designs worked into it with white metal strips and varicolored marbles. Along the curb there is a strip of film that says "No Parking," and at either end of the film a bowing usher greets the customer.

Inside the theatre I have endeavored to obtain effects not by means of a lot of superficial ornament, but rather by the use of well adapted materials and particularly of color and light. The walls are covered to a height of 6 feet, with blue polished plate glass. The only decorative effect is achieved with light. Three plaster troughs with fluted backs illuminated by concealed lights cross the ceiling parallel to the transverse axis of the room and extend down the side walls, terminating in rosewood pedestals. These troughs contain approximately 2,000 bulbs in four colors independently switched so that various color combinations may be attained—red and green for Christmas, green for St. Patrick's day, etc.

Housed behind the alumite-finished attraction boards on the side walls, coloramas throw an everchanging pattern of varied colored lights on the panel above. Cases have been built above the outside doors and foyer doors in which coming attractions are featured. The foyer has been redecorated in yellows ranging from a deep ochre to a light chrome, trimmed with green and silver.

Before remodeling the men's and women's retiring rooms consisted in two very small rooms at one end of the foyer. Realizing the need of additional space for the increased comfort of their patrons, the management rented the store adjacent to the theatre lobby on the north, and this store was converted into a women's lounge, powder room and toilet rooms as shown

REDUCING THE ELECTRIC LIGHT BILL

By CHARLES S. BASSIN

How one manager viewed his illumination costs and the adjustments he made in order to cut them

ELECTRICITY is a most elusive little profit robber that worries the cost conscious showman no end. Unwatched, it nibbles pennies by day and devours dollars at night. To the average man it is an unknown quantity. He simply knows that a large lamp consumes more current than a small one and that an impressive looking motor uses more electricity than one of diminutive size. But is that knowledge enough? Hardly! In this grand old business of supplying people with amusement, where electricity is necessarily used in abundance, it is essential to gather more than a layman's knowledge of current and its cost in order to keep one's finger in the electrical pie and thereby preclude a waste of light and power giving energy.

Before attempting to save any electricity at all, it is of vital importance to learn whether or not burning less current will bring your consumption under the minimum demand set by the power company. If such is the case, the difference between the actual amount of electricity used and the kilowatt hours called for by the demand will have been saved in vain. Whether you use less than your demand or not, you must pay for the pre-determined amount until an adjustment is made. If you find that your consumption is always considerably under the minimum demand, then you are buying current at the wrong rate and a change should be made without delay. It is advisable to take your own meter readings each month for comparison with power company invoices.

DEMAND SYSTEM

The unfortunate part of the demand system is the lecherous method employed by the power companies in its determination, which is given by an electric service company as follows:

The average load supplied by the company will be determined for half-hour periods by suitable instruments. Either the average kilowatt load, or 80% of the average kilovolt-ampere load, whichever is larger, will be the demand for each period. The average of the twenty highest demands so determined in the month, not more than two from any one day, will be the monthly demands. The highest of the twelve monthly demands preceding the date to which the bill is rendered, will be the demand for that bill, but in no case less than 50 kilowatts.

From the above one may readily conclude that the power company, leaving no avenue of consideration for the buyer, favors itself. Irrelevant to our subject, but of sufficient interest to warrant notice here is the fact that attempts are being made to enact legislation that will take the electrical whip out of the hands of the power companies and make a more equitable situation for the consumer. But in this, as in all other legislative disputes with public utilities, the consumers' representatives are hampered in their desire to do the right thing by very persuasive lobbyists, and therefore the outcome is dubious.

STAGGERING USE

From the determination of demand as outlined, we can deduce a valuable practice that will help the theatre in maintaining minimum costs. If lighting and other current consuming schedules can be staggered in such a way that all equipment is not used at one time, the readings for the determination of demand at any given period can be kept at a lower level than would be possible if all equipment were used at once. In other words, if heavily horsepower ventilating equipment can be shut down while the vertical sign is burning, the load at a particular time will be considerably less than it would be if both units were used simultaneously. As a result the power company readings from which the demand is set will be lower, and the resulting compilation of figures will necessitate their setting a smaller demand. Staggered systematization of lights and power equipment will unquestionably put a big crimp in the electrical octopus.

After assuring ourselves that we were not saving electricity solely for the benefit of the power company (by consuming less than called for by our demand), we started conserving in the orthodox manner by issuing instructions to the house staff to the effect that light must be turned off when not in use, but this accomplished relatively little. There were bigger fish in our electrical pond that were teasing our well baited hook of economy at the end of the line. Tricky angling was needed to bring our light bills down in line with the times.

SIGN FLASHING

After weighing the matter carefully, it was decided that our shows, not our vertical sign, were selling tickets at the box office, and that the upright was merely a desirable supplement that warranted elimination at all but peak periods. We found that eliminating the vertical sign chaser saved enough to make foregoing its use more than worthwhile. At present, we are planning to put the upright on a single flasher, thereby saving between 30% and 40% of its present consumption.

WATTAGE REDUCTION

Wherever possible, we replace burned out lamps with bulbs of a smaller wattage. It is surprising to find the number of fixtures in which this can be done without noticeably affecting illumination. We have found that white light can be cut 40%, and colored light 20%, without visibly impairing illumination. As 10-watt lamps burn out, we replace them with the comparatively new 6-watt bulbs. Being of identical size and shape, both of these lamps can be used side by side. It is difficult to believe that a lamp using 40% less energy can replace a 10-watt bulb without a difference visible to the naked eye, but such is the case. A comparison follows:

	10-Watt	6-Watt
List price.....	25c	30c
Life	1,500 hrs.	1,500 hrs.
Net cost of current (Life x Wattage x cost per KWH — cost per KWH arbitrarily estimated at 3c)	45c	27c
Operating cost, 1,500 hrs.	70c	57c

From the above, it is readily seen that although the original cost of the smaller lamp is slightly higher, the ultimate saving makes the 6-watt bulb worthwhile.

LIGHT FOR CLEANING

Instead of burning house lights or 200-watt work lights during cleaning hours, we equipped our vacuum cleaners with 50-watt pilot lights that operated simultaneously with the power switch of the cleaner. This not only saved current, but it enabled the cleaners to do a more thorough job with the light directed on the immediate work. Our dry mops and push brooms are similarly equipped with flashlight pilots. These are fastened to cleaning tool handles with a bicycle clamp. The flashlight pilot saves little current, but it eliminates the drag of a cord.

Instead of burning all color circuits of our foots and borders, we burn just one in the former and one in the latter. The combinations are changed from time to time and the effect of less illumination resolves itself in increased richness of color.

VOLTAGE INCREASE

All lamps are ordered through at 125 volts rather than at 110 or 115 volts. This

THEMES AND SETTINGS FOR A NEW YEARS FROLIC

THE NEW YEAR'S midnight show has become somewhat of a custom. At least one theatre in a town boasting two or more houses commonly puts on a midnight show, or Frolic, as this sort of entertainment is popularly called. Serious thought and consideration should be given the midnight show. The fact that the public is out for a "good time," that your patrons are inclined to be boisterous and good-natured, is no reason why just "anything" should be considered good enough for the entertainment.

On the contrary, the Frolic should be just as carefully staged as your other presentations. The best talent that the exhibitor is in a position to obtain should be engaged, and the show should be presented in an artistic and showmanlike manner. Your patrons look forward to something different, something novel and equal to, and certainly not inferior to, your usual stage show. The Frolic is more or less a criterion, to be referred to for comparison, and it should therefore compare favorably with the stage shows your patrons are accustomed to seeing.

The midnight show can be staged in a manner embodying the night club idea, or it can be a unit show or a straight variety bill. The night club idea requires, in addition to soloists and other turns, a stage band and a master of ceremonies. Of the two requisites, the latter is perhaps the more important. It is comparatively easy to obtain the services of a good, or at least a fair, stage band which, with intensive rehearsing, can be fashioned into a desirable unit. A master of ceremonies must be good, must be able to "sell" the show, to "get it across."

The master of ceremonies can make or break the show. He is in front of the audience continuously. He must be ready and capable of directing the band. He must be an artist, a comedian, and last but by no means least, he must possess a winning personality. If you have a man who measures up to these requirements, make your midnight show a "night club" and you can be reasonably certain that your efforts will be well received.

TYPES OF SHOWS

The program should be carefully arranged and well balanced. Singers, soloists and a trio or quartette, dancers in solos and ensembles, comedians and "nut stunts" are essential to a well-balanced bill. Needless to say, the very best material that can

The third article of a series on stage presentations with which to augment the screen program be secured and afforded should be used. A peppy chorus or pony ballet is a desirable unit. Again we want to suggest the use of selected local talent, especially in dance and musical numbers, in preference to doubtful, professional pick-ups.

By O. T. TAYLOR

The unit show differs from the "night club" in that the master of ceremonies may be dispensed with. The band could furnish the accompaniment to most of the acts in addition to its own program. The entire program is closely connected and interwoven. Performers in one act could fill in on some other act, one act leading directly to and into the following offering. An afterpiece—a sort of ensemble or finale in which most of the performers take part—usually closes the show.

The variety idea is a straight vaudeville bill, the performers appearing only in their own act, each act in its own setting. At least one flash act should be incorporated in the bill. Usually this is a dance, singing, musical act, a combination of any two, or all three of these.

A special setting should be provided for the flash act, and the routine and setting should, in some manner, carry out the New Year's idea. Other acts work in their own scenery or house pieces, such as olio, street, etc. A number of acts will of course make the construction of special pieces for each act prohibitive. Early booking may make possible the selection of good acts which carry their own setting. The night club idea makes it possible to stage the entire show in one setting. The unit idea makes possible a reduction in the number of scenery changes over the straight bill.

THE SETTING

The suggestion for a New Year's Frolic setting as illustrated in Figure 1, is prompted by four things—atmosphere, adaptability, flash, cost.

Atmosphere of the carnival, supplied in the balloons, augmented if desired with serpentine suspended from battens, is indispensable in an offering of this type. The illuminated buildings in the background suggest the time, night. The large window suggests that the entertainment is staged indoors, in a studio, or perhaps a roof-garden. Potted plants and palms could be used to dress the set.

Adaptability: The setting can be built on a large or small scale, to accommodate an orchestra of thirty pieces, or a band of five or six.

Flash: A riot of colors, sparkling with metallic flitters, a blaze of light.

Cost is the bugaboo of most theatre managers but can be almost forgotten in so far as materials are concerned. Labor is the greater item, and even this can be held down to a minimum. If you employ a lobby artist, turn the work over to him. Get a handy schoolboy for a helper during the holiday vacation. A bright, ambitious boy will be well worth his wage. He can do most of the building and plain

LATE DECISIONS IN CONTRACT SUITS

By LEO T. PARKER

Reviewing new cases involving recent interpretations of law concerning contracts of special interest to theatre management

A FEW DAYS ago I received a letter from a theatre owner, as follows: "I have been informed that recently the courts have been rendering decisions in contract cases which contradict old decisions. Is this true, and if so what is the reason? Also, please give me details of a few of the latest higher court cases that have come about because of theatre contracts."

The answer to the first paragraph of this letter is that some of the most recent higher court decisions have varied from the older ones. Probably this change may be the result indirectly of the present abnormal business conditions during which many new laws, rules and regulations have been enacted affecting every industry.

It is well known that monopolistic practices and price fixing were restricted by the Sherman Act of 1890 and the later Clayton Anti-Trust Law. Section 1 of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act provides in part that "every contract, combination in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy in restraint of trade or commerce, among the several states or with foreign nations, is hereby declared to be illegal."

Section 2 of this law provides that "every person who shall monopolize, or attempt to monopolize, any part of the trade or commerce among the several states, or with foreign nations, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor."

The Clayton Act provides that it is unlawful for any person to enter into a contract for sale of goods, wares, merchandise, machinery, supplies, or other commodities, whether patented or unpatented, for use, consumption or resale within the United States or any territory thereof, if any provision of the contract may be interpreted to mean that either of the contracting parties agree to substantially lessen competition or intend to create a monopoly in any line of commerce.

FORMER AND PRESENT LAW

OBVIOUSLY any combine or contract by which parties agree to perform certain acts which tend to eliminate competition, and uphold the price for a commodity, has been held to be illegal.

For example, in the leading case of Eastern States v. United States (234 U. S. 600, New York) the owners of the same kind of business organized an association and reported to the secretary, for distribution among its members, the names of wholesale dealers who sold directly to consumers. These wholesalers were black-listed and all of the members of the association refused to transact business with them. This was held to be a violation of the Sherman Act.

Also, in American Column v. United States (257 U. S. 377, Tennessee), an association adopted a plan for the gathering from its members daily, and disseminating among them weekly, reports of all sales and shipments actually made, giving the prices, names and addresses of the purchasers, the kind, grade and quantity of the commodity sold and shipped. Its plan also provided for a monthly report giving details of the production of its members during the previous month. Price lists were sent regularly to the members. Monthly meetings were held at which the extensive interchange of reports were supplemented by further exchange of information as to production, costs, etc., at which active and concerted efforts were made to suppress competition by the restriction of production. Particularly in view of the fact that the secretary of the association communicated regularly with the association members and urged curtailment of production and increase of prices, the Supreme Court of the United States held this concerted effort to be unlawful.

Recently, however, the restrictions of these two United States laws have to a great extent been raised with a view of increasing commodity prices, increasing wages and improving unemployment conditions. Obviously, many other old established laws have been changed directly and indirectly as a result of these same reasons.

PRESENT REQUIREMENTS OF VALID CONTRACTS

AFTER A COMPLETE review of the most recently decided higher court decisions it may be held that on this day a contract is valid providing (1) the obligations assumed by the contracting parties do not violate an industrial code agreement, or a valid United States emergency regulation, or other effective state or city law not superseded by recently enacted emergency laws or regulations; (2) the obligations of both parties are definitely fixed; (3) both parties have proper authority to make the contract and are of legal age; (4) the object or purpose of the contract is legal in consideration of presently effective old laws and new laws and regulations; (5) neither party practiced fraud to induce the other to make the contract; (6) the period of the contract is definite; (7) both parties are mutually obligated; and (8) the quantity, quality and price is definite.

Another important rule of the law is that all contracts are void where only one of the parties promises to perform a service or obligation. A contract is void which has no valid consideration, as each party necessarily must be obligated to perform a definite service.

BLOCK SELLING CONTRACT LEGAL

THE COURTS recently have held that the method of distribution by sale or lease, or the practice of selling through a common distributor, is open to every producer, large or small, to the extent of his pictures produced. Moreover, in the absence of combination or agreement, the fact that the method of negotiation tends to exclude other independent producers is of itself insufficient to establish any probable tendency toward monopoly.

CASE

For example, in Federal Trade Commission v. Paramount Famous-Lasky Corporation (57 F. [2d] 152, New York), it was shown that complaint was made of the "block booking" system of leasing films by a producer and distributor to exhibitors. Under such plan films were offered in blocks only.

After hearing all of the testimony the Federal Trade Commission rendered a judgment against the producer and distributor directing it to cease and desist "from leasing or offering to lease for exhibition in a theatre or theatres motion picture films in a block or group of two or more films at a designated lump sum price for the entire block or group only and requiring the exhibitor to lease all such films or be permitted to lease none."

However, the higher court said:

DECISION

"Where a practice is not inherently unlawful and unfair, and its legality depends upon its effect, a finding that it has a dangerous tendency unduly to hinder competition or create a monopoly, must be based upon its effect as demonstrated upon the experience of competitors. . . . The mere fact that a given method of competition makes it difficult for competitors to do business successfully is not of itself sufficient to brand the method of competition as unlawful and unfair."

Also, it was argued that since the producer had its films copyrighted that this tended to complete an unlawful monopoly. However, the court held otherwise, saying:

"It is true that respondent's pictures are copyrighted and that one cannot use them except under lease or license, but by reason thereof no monopoly in the pictures has been created, and moreover the respondent's pictures are not indispensable to any exhibitor."

COURTS ON UNFAIR COMPETITION

UNFAIR COMPETITION ordinarily consists in the imitation by one person, for the purpose of deceiving the public, of the name, symbols, or devices employed by a business rival, thus falsely inducing the patronage of the public and thereby obtaining for himself the benefits properly belonging to his competitor.

The rule of law is generally recognized that no one shall by imitation or unfair methods induce the public to patronize his business and thereby appropriate to himself the reputation which the other or competitor has acquired.

CASE

For illustration, in Schwannecke v. Genesee (247 N. W. 761, Flint, Mich.), it was disclosed that a corporation had for more than 27 years been engaged in a business under the name of "Genesee." Another company adopted the name "Genesee" with other words thereafter. The original user filed suit and in holding the latter user liable, the court said:

DECISION

"The question here presented is whether the defendant by using the word 'Genesee' in its assumed name thereby became engaged in unfair competition with plaintiff. . . . It seems apparent that its purpose and design in the use of this name was to secure to itself a part of the business theretofore enjoyed by the plaintiff, and, in the language above quoted, 'they have no right, by imitative devices, to beguile the public into buying their wares under the impression they are buying those of their rivals.'"

ACCORD AND SATISFACTION

PROBABLY the most common source of litigation, involving payment, arises when a purchaser disputes a seller's account. Litigations of this character are legally classified as "Accord and Satisfaction."

Accord is the legal expression used when the debtor offers to settle an old account under a new agreement. Acceptance of the offer by the creditor is Satisfaction.

An important question presented to the court, in litigations involving accord and satisfaction is whether the account was disputed by the customer, and whether the creditor accepted the payment under circumstances which indicated that the debtor was making it in full payment.

Numerous cases are on record disclosing that a theatre owner may file suit and collect the balance due on an undisputed account, although he accepts cash or a check with a notification from the debtor that the amount is being paid in full settlement.

The same law is effective with respect to a receipt given by mistake for "full" payment, when a balance remains due.

However, if the account is disputed a quite different situation arises. Acceptance of any payment by the theatre owner, who knows that the debtor intends that it shall be full payment, actually is legal full payment.

For example, in a leading case it was shown that a theatre owner contended that he did not owe the amount shown on a seller's bill. Later the theatre owner sent approximately one-half of the full amount due on the account with an explanation that it was being paid to fully extinguish the debt. The creditor accepted the money and then filed suit to recover the balance. The court promptly held the theatre owner not liable for further payment.

Therefore, it is quite apparent that when a claim is in dispute and the debtor sends the theatre owner a remittance stating that it is in full payment of the claim, and the latter accepts the remittance without objection, it is generally recognized that this constitutes a good accord and satisfaction and, therefore, cancels the debt.

DISSOLUTION OF PARTNERSHIPS

By M. MARVIN BERGER

Member New York Bar

THE OUTLINE of partnership law, which has been the subject of my last two articles, is completed with a statement of how a partnership is brought to an end. A partnership is dissolved—

First: By the expiration of the period of time for which it was formed. If the partnership continues as a going business after the end of the term for which it was fixed, or no definite term was originally agreed upon, the partnership continues at will of the partners and may be dissolved by any one of them at any time.

Second: By mutual agreement among all the partners, regardless of whether or not the time for which a partnership was formed has expired.

Third: By the withdrawal of any of the partners even though the term of the partnership has not expired. A partner wrongfully withdrawing, while he does not forfeit his interest in the firm, becomes liable to his partners for any damage he may have caused them by his withdrawal.

Fourth: By the death or bankruptcy of a partner.

The following acts, while they do not of themselves dissolve a partnership, may be grounds for a dissolution:

First: Misconduct of any partner affecting the firm business or credit, or breach by one or more partners of the agreement of partnership.

Second: The sale by a partner to an outsider of his interest in the partnership. Such a sale will not entitle the outsider to participate in the partnership affairs, but will entitle him to receive the profits to which the selling partner would be entitled.

The process of dissolution consists of winding up the business of the firm, selling its assets, paying off the creditors, and dividing among the partners the profits and returning to them their investments. Losses are shared in the same proportion as profits and are deducted from the investments of the partners.

Ordinarily a partnership is dissolved by agreement among the partners as to the method of dissolution and as to the disposing of the firm property. However, should the partners disagree among themselves, the courts will step in and supervise the dissolution, and if necessary will order an accounting to determine the proportions in which profits, losses and investments of the partners should be distributed.

The winding up of the affairs of a dissolved partnership is usually left to one or more partners who are known as liquidating partners. They have the authority to continue to conduct the firm business insofar as it is reasonably necessary to do so for winding up the firm affairs. Ordinarily this does not include the power to make new contracts or transact new business in behalf of the firm.

As to all obligations of the firm made before dissolution, the individual partners still remain liable for their payment, unless the creditors agree to discharge the individual partners and look for payment exclusively to the liquidating partner or to a person or persons continuing the business. It is quite important to know that even after dissolution of the firm, the partners are still bound by the transaction of any partner with a party who had extended credit to the firm before dissolution and had not been given actual notice of the dissolution.

As to all others, with the exception of such old creditors, no notice of dissolution need be given except the publication of a notice in a newspaper of general circulation in the place where the partnership did business. Therefore to prevent a partner from binding the other members of the firm after dissolution, all creditors should be notified of the dissolution, or of the retirement of a partner.

PROJECTION WITH THE "SUPREX ARC"

What engineers find to be the best operating conditions for the new d. c. high-intensity carbon

THE NEW developments in projection light sources representing the culmination of efforts to improve screen illumination in theatres where this has been inadequate, were importantly considered, really for the first time from the point of view of operation, at the fall meeting of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers. They occupied the entire attention of the Projection Practice Committee, the report of which now becomes available, while D. B. Joy and E. R. Geib, National Carbon Company engineers, also discussed later phases of the new method, which is based upon the use of the so-called Suprex carbons for the production of a non-rotating high-intensity d. c. arc.

The method itself has of course been generally discussed since its introduction, but both the Projection Practice Committee report and the Joy-Geib paper represent an intensive consideration of the method in the light of experience obtained from practical experience over a substantial period. As the committee report points out, the problem of inadequate illumination becomes particularly acute with the greater use of color, which is beginning a renaissance after its retirement to the laboratory for further development.

The committee report is based upon a series of practical tests, all made under actual operating conditions with the co-operation of manufacturers of motor-generators, single- and three-phase rectifiers and arc lamps. The tests indicated that the consumption of the 6-mm. negative carbon was constant for currents between 40 and 50 amperes, the rate being $3\frac{3}{4}$ inches an hour. However, the burning rate of the positive carbon varied with the current, the rates being $6\frac{3}{4}$ inches an hour at 40 amperes, $10\frac{1}{8}$ inches at 45 amperes, and $13\frac{1}{2}$ inches an hour at 50 amperes.

For the 6.5-mm. negative carbon, the tests showed that the burning rate was $3\frac{3}{4}$ inches an hour at from 50 to 57 amperes (identical to the rate for the 6-mm. negative carbon at 40 to 50 amperes). At 65 amperes, however, the 6.5 burned at the rate of $4\frac{1}{2}$ inches an hour.

The 8-mm. positive carbon was found to burn at the rate of 6 inches an hour at 50 amperes, $8\frac{1}{4}$ inches an hour at 55 amperes, $10\frac{1}{2}$ inches an hour at 60 amperes, and $13\frac{1}{2}$ inches an hour at 65 amperes. The rate of consumption of the positive carbon is greatly affected by the current density, the tests disclosed.

Best results in Suprex operation are to be obtained, it was found, by operating with the trims near the upper limits of their rated capacities.

EFFECT OF ARC-GAP

Other tests were made to find the exact effect of the arc-gap on the burning time and burning ratio of the carbons. These disclosed that if the arc-gap is increased while the arc current is held to the same value, the burning time remains unchanged—the burning rate is practically independent of the arc-gap when the current remains constant.

But if the arc-gap is increased, the current automatically decreases, and the positive carbon burns at a somewhat lower rate. Similarly, if the arc-gap is decreased, the arc current increases, and positive carbon burns at a higher rate. This demonstrates that since a change of current changes the burning time of the positive carbon while only slightly affecting the rate of the negative, change of arc-gap will change the current and therefore the ratio between the burning of positive and negative.

"This change of ratio," points out the report, "tends to move the arc out of focus with the mirror. It is of the utmost importance, therefore, that the arc control mechanism be sensitive enough to hold the arc-gap constant ($5/16$ to $11/32$ inch), and that the current also be held constant if frequent focusing of the arc is to be avoided."

Tests were also made with 6- and 7-mm. carbon combinations to determine any differences in the voltage across the arc when various sources of power were used. In the tests the committee employed single- and three-phase rectifiers and motor-generators, and of course the same carbons, same lamp and same arc-gap. It was found that there was a difference of from $3\frac{1}{2}$ to 6 volts across the arc when using a single-phase rectifier, and of $\frac{1}{2}$ -volt with a three-phase rectifier, as compared with results when a motor-generator was employed. This difference, it is pointed out, is due to the a. c. component of the rectified current.

Applying the same tests to 6.5-mm. and 8-mm. carbon trim, the committee found that the d. c. arc voltage for a given arc-gap depends upon the source of the current, while the voltage for the 6-mm. and 7-mm. carbons ranged between 30 at 40 amperes, and 35 at 50 amperes. For the 6.5-mm. and 8-mm. combination, the range was between 30 volts at 50 amperes, and 39 volts at 65 amperes.

The investigation showed further that single-phase rectifiers do not deliver current of the same smoothness as the three-phase rectifiers. In tests made to determine the visual effect of an alternating component upon the projected light under normal operating conditions and with the shutter running at 90 feet a minute, flicker resulted from the use of a single-phase rectifier, while no flicker could be noted with either the three-phase rectifier or motor-generator.

The committee also examined reflector mirrors in theatres where Suprex carbons had been in use for a substantial period and consistently found them pitted, indicating that it is necessary to watch for pitting and to replace pitted mirrors if proper illuminating is to be maintained. The committee recommends the use of a "mirror guard," which is made of optical glass, has the same curvature as the mirror, and fits exactly inside it.

SCREEN ILLUMINATION

The findings of Messrs. Joy and Geib impinged at some points upon those of the Projection Practice Committee, but reveal other phases of the matter. They found that if the current is increased, but the arc length and the position of the arc with respect to the mirror is held constant, there is a very definite increase in the screen light but very little change in light distribution. This increase in light is accompanied by an increase in crater depth and carbon consumption. If the arc current is too small, the crater is very shallow and the light is not uniform in color. If the current is too great, the consumption is excessive and the light is unsteady. Thus to obtain good distribution of light upon the screen in Suprex-type operation, it is necessary to hold the position of the positive crater within close limits.

They found that the stability of this type of arc is very materially affected by the source of power and the magnetic flux. A steadier light is available with the use of rectifying devices other than the commonly used 80-volt motor-generator sets or 115-volt d. c. line power, they declare. Stabilization of the arc is further aided by the use of an auxiliary magnetic flux, as explained in the following passages by Messrs. Joy and Geib:

"The lamps developed for burning the new small size, high-intensity, non-rotating positive carbons are of altogether different design from that of the older types of high-intensity lamps, and since there is no necessity for rotating the carbon or feeding the current into the carbon close to the arc, the carbons are held and aligned just as in the low-intensity mirror arc lamps. In other words, the angle of the negative carbon has been increased until the negative and positive carbons are directly in line. The lines of force generated by the arc current are distributed uniformly about the carbons, and there is no resultant force in the upward direction, except that caused by natural drafts in the lamp. The tail-flame therefore surrounds the arc in almost a uniform layer.

"Unless the lamp design is such as to eliminate extraneous drafts or other disturbing conditions, a slight misalignment of the carbons causes the crater to burn off to one side. This in turn, particularly with a power source such as a 115-volt d. c. line, causes a noticeable change in the depth of the crater and light upon the screen. If, however, a supplementary magnetic flux is provided to increase the flux density below the arc and decrease it above, an upward force is established which materially changes the shape and characteristics of the arc. This magnetic flux has been introduced in some lamps by means of a magnet.

"The flux generated by the current in the carbons surrounds the carbons uniformly, but superimposed upon it are the lines of force emanating from the magnet. This flux from the magnet is in such a direction as to tend to neutralize the flux above the arc, generated by the arc current, and increase the total flux below the arc. The tail-flame from the arc lengthens and is driven upward, becoming comparatively stationary and constant in length and direction. The negative carbon should be lowered slightly to compensate for this direction of the arc stream."

These authorities strongly point out that the effect of the power source, and that of the auxiliary magnetic flux, upon the arc and the screen illumination, are so important that successful projection with this type of light source largely depends upon these two factors.

The authors of the paper emphasize, however, the need for co-ordination of the light source, optical system, lamp mechanism, power source and projectionist for the attainment of proper screen illumination.

Both of the discussions will be published in full in the S.M.P.E. Journal.

MISSING CHANGEOVER CUES AND THE 2,000-FOOT REEL

CHARLES S. EDWARDS of the Queen theatre in Pilot Point, Tex., tells of a trouble he and many, many others have, sending along a letter he had received from the film exchange. He says:

"My Dear Friend Richardson: Attached find letter just received from our exchange. It is self explanatory and is in itself an admission of guilt in sending out films it knows have no changeover cues. I suggested to the exchange manager that the reason for their absence lies in the fact that the exchange permits operators to double up reels. I say 'operators' for the reason that that is what a man is, in my opinion, who would destroy cues.

"It is extremely embarrassing to me, as well as to my projectionist, to have the screen go white. True, it could be avoided by pre-screening the pictures, but that costs money and is out of the question with us as we are just getting by as it is.

"True, we could scratch in a changeover mark, but we know nothing looks worse than a lot of such marks affixed by 'operators.' If we affix a mark the next man wants his own, and soon it would be one sweet mess."

I thoroughly agree with you in the matter of cue marks, but you seem to have the idea that I do not agree with doubling reels. In that you are in error. I believe thoroughly in the 2,000-foot reel, and regard it as very bad business that films are not delivered to theatres in 2,000-foot lengths, except of course newsreels and other short subjects.

I recently talked with Mr. Gordon Mitchell, manager of the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, who assures me the 2,000-foot reel is coming, and that in his opinion it will be here in the very near future. That, of course, will put a definite stop to the trouble.

Meanwhile it is quite possible for your projectionist to avoid a white screen, although the method violates the "laws made an" pervided" in that it is necessary to open the upper magazine door. That is no novelty in projection practice, but is not to be approved of. During the first run the projectionist has paper and pencil handy. As the end of the reel is approached he watches the action closely, occasionally opening the magazine door to take a peek at the reel. Just before the film is run out, he makes the changeover, noting the precise action in the picture as he does so.

For example, suppose that at the point of change an actor does some particular thing—raises hand to face, for instance. That act is recorded on the paper and is the changeover signal for that reel.

I'm not saying this is a perfect method. I'm not saying it doesn't require close attention by the projectionist, but I am saying it can be done, and the danger of a white screen avoided. It so happens that every day hundreds of careful, wide-awake projectionists make their changeovers exactly that way when cues are missing.

As to the missing cues, theoretically we could dam up the Mississippi river. Practically we cannot do it. In theory we can stop doubling reels. In practice we cannot do it until we have larger reels, for more than one reason. First (especially in one-man projection rooms), the average projectionist resents receiving film on 1,000-foot reels and proceeds to double up. Secondly, many exhibitors and managers insist that the reels be doubled, presumably to provide additional time for the projectionist to attend to other duties than threading up projectors.

I have not condemned reel doubling, though I deplore the condition that causes it. I believe firmly in the larger reel—the 2,000-footer, if you please, as that seems to have the favor of the Projection Practice Committee of the S. M. P. E. and of the majority of projectionists. Hollywood is endeavoring to ascertain just what is best, and what particular type of reel will best serve the needs of the heavier strain involved in protecting 2,000-foot film rolls. Until the 2,000-foot reel arrives there is but one possible way in which the missing cues may be replaced, and that is by having exchanges add a replacement strip to the end of each reel just as soon as a certain number of frames are cut off. That is no tremendous item of either expense or bother, provided the exchange, knowing what will inevitably happen, orders a supply of film-ends containing the proper action. Half a dozen 2-foot lengths would probably see any reel through its normal life of bookings, or very nearly so, and until the 2,000-foot reel arrives it would seem good practice for producers to supply them for the proper reels of each production shipped out to exchanges.

I'm assuredly not approving of cutting out frames. I am dealing with things as they are, with full knowledge that until the larger reel comes they can't and won't be much changed. I am rather excusing a practice of which I certainly do not approve because of the fact that I hold the 1,000-foot projection reel to be the worse evil of the two.

LACQUERING SOUND TRACK SPLICES

PROJECTIONIST R. S. Slagle of Marion, Ohio, sends some splices for examination. It seems he and his co-worker, H. J. Seekle, entered a protest concerning the failure of the exchange to lacquer properly splices at the sound track, only to receive a reply to the effect that some special process was employed by the exchange making lacquering unnecessary.

Mr. Slagle sends a total of seven splices they had cut out of two productions, one an M-G-M and one a Universal. Commenting upon the general condition of the film, he says, "So far as has to do with oil and dirt, these two were far worse than those you commented on and called the manager up to see when you were here a short while ago. They sent this picture after the letter of protest attached had been sent to the exchange manager. Do you think lacquer is necessary on the sound track of these splices?"

Of the seven splices, every one was very stiff and more or less curled. Some of them were badly smeared with cement. Not one would go over an intermitted sprocket or over an aperture without making its presence visible to the audience. Several luloid at the back end of the stub. One had a smear of lacquer fully $\frac{5}{8}$ -inch long, entirely obliterating the sound for that distance. Another one had the sound entirely obliterated for 1/16 inches. None of the rest had any lacquer at all. Two of them would certainly be heard from in the loud-speakers.

Apparently most, if not all, of them were made in projection rooms. At least whatever their sins—and they are plenty—I could hardly imagine such perfectly punk splices being made by even the worst exchange inspector. Two questions arise: First, why in the name of all the gods I can think of, do even the rankest machine operators commit such outrages against their own profession, even though they do not deem it a profession? Secondly, why in the name of all the other gods I can't think of, do exchanges permit their property to be thus outraged? The damage is easy to detect if the film is in good condition when sent out, and really inspected when it returns.

Right there, of course, is the colored gentleman in this particular woodpile, or one of them, anyhow. In entirely too many exchanges it is not nearly so much a matter of really inspecting the films and recording the various faults found, as it is one of how many reels can an inspector chase through in a day, merely being certain the film is mostly all in one piece.

And that is no fabrication or flight of imagination! I have myself watched farcical exchange "inspections" which could not possibly detect anything more than a pretty bad rip or a splice loose halfway across. The films I examined in Marion were a disgrace. They were literally smeared from end to end with oil and dirt. The exchange that sent them out was not delivering a show to the theatre. Rather it was delivering a "holy show." The manager of the Marion theatre, Mr. Track Barham, impressed me as an understanding, live-wire manager. I am sure he would put a stop to the outrage if he could, but he said, "What can I do? Exchanges are most all tarred with the same stick," or words to that effect. And the shame of it is, he is exactly 100% right insofar as concerns a large percentage of exchanges.

If producers had the respect they should have for either their own production or the theatregoing public, they would certainly take some steps to compel exchanges to send their productions out in a condition of cleanliness permitting their presentation to audiences in good form. I am quite certain producers could force reform did they really make the attempt. Moreover, I am certain they should make the attempt.

AS A WORKER SEES CONDITIONS

EDMUND M. BURKE, projectionist of Fort Plain, N. Y., writes, "The co-worker with me in this theatre is the Bluebook, as it has always been. As others have so many times said, I too have been benefited and helped by your Comments on projection matters and by your editorials. Theatre patrons appreciate well projected pictures and excellence in sound; also, they appreciate clean pictures—believe it or not, the day of sexual filth is passing.

"The projectionist is only able to put into the show those things contained in the films handed him. If those things are bad, his work must necessarily appear to be bad also, regardless of what his ability and desire to put on a good show may be. He is at the mercy of the bum actor, if any, whose acting he must perforce portray as bum. He is at the mercy of the exchange, whose dirty, scratched-up film (if it be so) he must accept. He is at the mercy of the manager (if he is that sort, mine is not) who won't supply those various things necessary to keep the equipment functioning up to the mark.

"In a very large percentage of theatres during these times, projection equipment is not being kept up as it should be, which means that shows are not what they should be just at the time when they should be at their very best in order to coax the coins out of reluctant people—people who must and do count every nickel.

"Sound service contracts are mostly a thing of the past. Because of inability to meet service charges on first-class equipments, many theatres have installed cheaper equipments. The two-man projection room too is gradually fading into the limbo of things that have been. No one is able to confidently predict what the final outcome of the New Deal will be, but there is just one right thing to do and that is look up and stick together. In this, as in other things, united we may stand, divided we certainly will fall—and great would be the fall of us, only we are going to stick together and stand."

A good letter. It is quite true the two-man room is ebbing, except in a relatively few large theatres and in places where organization has for the present won the issue. And it is wholly, or at least very largely, the fault of the men that it is so. Times almost without number I have cited the utter foolishness of their attitude.

Hundreds of times managers have entered projection rooms only to discover both men doing absolutely nothing that could by any stretch of imagination have anything to do with projection, one of them perhaps calmly reading a paper. I have myself seen it time, time and again, and in no case I ever have heard of has any union taken any effective steps to put a stop to such procedure. Well, gentlemen, you have reaped, and still are reaping, the logical fruits of such procedure. It is too bad. There should be two men in modern projection rooms, but two men, both of them doing nothing, very naturally does not appeal to the exhibitor. To projectionists in those theatres still having two men, I would once again suggest that one man stay at the working projector, keeping his eye and his mind on the work, except in some rare emergency which demands attention of both men momentarily. To those unions that have succeeded in retaining the two-man projection room I would 'umbly suggest that means be taken—very effective means—to prevent their members from reading papers, building radio sets, etc., while on duty, compelling one man to be right on the job beside the working projector while it is working.

DIAGNOSING RASPY REPRODUCTION

RAY BARTLET, an exhibitor in Artesia, N. M., writes, "We have RCA sound equipment, now four years old. Up to about one month ago the sound was perfect. Then a raspy, tin pan sound developed on all medium and high notes, especially violin music and soprano voice. Have replaced all tubes, photocells, etc., but Mr. Trouble still is camped on our trail. It doubtless is in the amplifier or loudspeaker, but we have gone over both to the best of our ability, without effect. Will you be good enough to tell us what you believe the seat of the trouble may be? Our RCA service contract expired some months ago and we are 'on our own'."

Diagnosing a sound equipment trouble is something like a doctor attempting to make a diagnosis at long distance. It is a very hard thing to do; and there is not sufficient information contained in the letter to permit of making a sure-fire deduction. I have myself examined into the matter and have submitted it to a very competent sound engineer. The conclusion is that—

First: Symptoms are entirely consistent with the possibility of flutter in both projectors, which is easily tested by using a different source of pickup, say a microphone, or better still, a non-sync phonograph. If neither is in the theatre, either may be borrowed from the nearest radio store and wired to the input of the first voltage amplifier. If the input impedance of the amplifier is not known, phone the nearest RCA station for it. However, an exact impedance match is not necessary for the temporary test. If the non-sync sound does not show the same trouble, flutter in both projectors is the probable answer.

Second: There is a possibility of an open-circuited by-pass condenser in the amplifier. The by-pass condensers are shorted across the B-supply lines to each tube. An open circuit in any of these might cause this trouble. Check with an a.c. source and a

Attention Mr. D. H. Wright

Gentlemen:

You will be interested to know that Wright-DeCoster speakers have proven even more successful this year in Hollywood at A Century of Progress than they did last. I have used your new Model 309 unit and its exceptional tone quality, faithfulness of reproduction and rugged dependability have made me feel that Wright-DeCoster speakers are the best possible that can be used in work of this type.

The actual installation of these loud speakers was used in a large theatre for carrying to the audience the sounds of an act on the stage, illustrating how sound motion pictures are made. Since the theatre was in a Fair, it was constructed with a vaulted ceiling, open sides and no acoustical treatment whatever. The reproduction necessarily had to be faultless. Your speakers fulfilled every requirement and gave complete satisfaction. I can heartily recommend them to anyone.

Very truly yours,
(Signed) J. D. KEENER

testalite, or with an a.c. meter. Your local radio man can make the test if you cannot.

Third: The difficulty may be due to a loose diaphragm in the loudspeaker. If you have more than one speaker, listen to them separately. If you have but one speaker, does the same trouble appear in the monitor horn? If there is no monitor, then either borrow one or use a pair of head phones.

Fourth: In case your system is equipped with a tone control, it may have broken down, thus throwing too much power into the medium and high notes.

These are merely suggestions as to the most likely causes of the trouble, if you have described it accurately.

REARRANGING GEAR TRAINS

FROM Bruce H. Denney, projectionist of the Sobota theatre in San Jacinto, Calif., comes this remarkable letter:

"Dear Mr. Richardson, thanks (honestly) for your criticism in the October 20th issue of BETTER THEATRES. Possibly I should have called the effect a "ghost" rather than a travel ghost. The flywheel was out of balance dynamically. The different position may have balanced with some vibration already in the mechanism, but it did cure it. A new flywheel was okay without my tricky adjustment.

"But with regard to vibrations in general, many projectionists have fought them. Since my letter to you I have assisted several in rearranging the gear trains of their projectors to transfer little bumps and quivers into time with the shutter cut-off periods, a thing not always easy to accomplish. Sometimes it is difficult to secure the necessary replacement gears, etc., to cure vibrations—lack of necessary funds.

"An easy method for determining direction and amount of movement of optical axis is to place a thin sheet of metal containing a pinhole over the projector aperture, so that an image of the hole may be focused upon a piece of cardboard placed in proper position on the stage [or attached to the screen if there is no stage.—F.H.R.].

"In place of the regular rotating shutter, construct one of cardboard having only one opening, and only $\frac{1}{4}$ -inch wide. With the projector mechanism at rest, the light on and the pin hole focused on the cardboard, outline the spot of light with a pencil. Start the projector and outline the spot again. Usually it will be found to have been displaced a bit.

"Outline this spot and give it some identifying symbol or number, after which rotate the improvised shutter about 10° on its shaft. Start the projector and again outline the spot. Do this while moving the shutter about 10° each time until a complete rotation is made on the shaft.

"Some queer geometrical patterns will often be made by the spot outlines. Those that do not concur exactly with the first (rest position) indicate a movement of the optical axis. Such circles as are considerably 'out' with relation to the rest position spot indicate the direction and amount of vibration which, if checked with the fly-wheel or degree of shutter shaft rotation, will indicate the exact position of the mechanism at the peaks of vibration.

"A careful study and analysis of the patterns formed by the spots will indicate the bent shaft, the worn gear or the bound spot in which the vibration has its seat. A pattern that indicates a vertical vibration or movement might be expected to have its seat in the main drive gears or associated shafts. A horizontal pattern would of course indicate a lateral movement that might be associated with the governor or shutter shaft.

"Any vibration having its seat in the intermittent movement itself usually occurs during the cut-off period, hence is kept from the screen by the regular shutter. Incidentally, the practice of placing blocks of $\frac{3}{8}$ -inch rubber composition material under a very popular sound system base to minimize transmission of noise into the floor, usually permits just a bit too much ghost, halo or what-have-you to reach the screen. In cases of projector vibration, the small screen image at long projection distance suffers much more than its large-screen-image-short-distance brother.

"Here is one very common problem and one method of cure: Center frame base of Simplex projector warped by continued and excessive tightening down. Weight sometimes supported by bosses under base and little or no support on machined faces under base. Cutting down boss projections would merely cause base to buckle or sag downward, and on some types of drive the P-331-X pinion (or its equivalent) would be pulled out of proper mesh with the (G-112-G) main driving gear.

"This is a very common trouble on older type Simplex projectors. A new base is expensive and not too easy to install. Metal shims about 2.5 inches long by 1 inch wide, piled to proper height under center of the base to serve as a center support, will permit the base to be tightened down to any necessary degree without any tendency to separate gears as above set forth.

"As regards my slit azimuth, that name was tacked to it by a machinist at one of the major studios and the name has stuck. By its use a mask may be moved in from either side of the sound aperture to mask out any noisy part of the sound track. In event of a scratch down the exact center of the track, a triangular mask moves down into the light beam until the objectionable sound is removed. True, as you say, the sound volume is more or less reduced, according to the amount of area it is necessary to cover, and the gain must of course be raised to compensate. It works fine on variable density. On variable area the only thing it is possible to do is cut off exactly half the sound track, double the gain and get by on half-wave film pickup. The sound will not be hot, but it will at least be clear, with no machine gun or boiler factory effect. It is necessary to use it only occasionally, but when needed it surely is a life saver!"

It is very evident the foregoing letter comes from a projectionist in the best sense of that term. Brother Denney plainly is a man who devotes real thought and study to his profession.

Projectionist Denney's analysis and study of displacement of an optical axis by vibrations in the projector mechanism, may well make some of you sit up and take notice. Such displacements would of course have their effect upon definition of the picture. I wonder how many projectionists are sufficiently interested and enterprising to test the matter out on their own projectors? I'll be real glad to have reports of any tests made, together with representations of the patterns made by displacements.

As to the base support, it is laid before users of projectors having base supports that might be thus affected, though with the remark that the remedy suggested should only be supplied after the manager has refused point-blank to supply new, up-to-date projectors. However, if the remedy be tried out it will undoubtedly work, provided the floor immediately under center of base be perfectly firm and unyielding, as is usually though not always the case.

A MESSAGE FROM NEW ZEALAND

FROM H. A. Tootell (not certain as to the initials), manager of the Prince Edward theatre in Woburn, Lower Hutt, New Zealand, comes this letter:

"Dear Mr. Richardson: Will you be good enough to send me details of what I term the 'strange as it seems' effect. This effect is on titles and subtitles of a short feature of that name. I believe it is being used on some theatres in the U. S. A. and Canada.

"I have built for myself a double-effect projector from which I get some very good results, using various sorts of fancy glasses and a color wheel. However, I wish to introduce something a little better. Enclosed find sketch of my projector, which may aid you to advise me [sketch was not inclosed.—F. H. R.].

"I have two Ernemann two's equipped with [Can't make the name out for sure. Looks like "Teissikon."—F. H. R.] soundheads and a local amplifier. The sound is excellent. Have a theatre of my own at Plimmerton, where I show Wednesday and Saturday of each week in winter, and Monday, Wednesday and Saturday in summer. Made the plant at Plimmerton myself. Results are very good, except that I get a bit of wows in the music. Dialogue results are excellent. Will forward photo of equipment next mail. The projectors are Powers 6Bs. Great busses, those Powers! Have bought a Baird projector which will be used in another place, to open in a month from now. Will forward photos and details later.

"I have been a reader of the Herald for a few years. It may interest your readers to know something of conditions here. Projectionists within ten miles of Wellington P. O. get £4-10/, less one shilling in the pound wage tax. Hours are 30 per week.

NEW TYPE OF FILM SPLICER

ROSCO LABORATORIES of Brooklyn, N. Y., have developed a new and quite novel film splicer. It was shown at the last meeting of the S. M. P. E., where I examined it. The device consists of a concave reflector mounted on or "in" block perhaps 4 inches square, the reflector (parabolic in form) rim being flush with the top of the block. This reflector is designed to enable users to examine a splice or film ends in magnified form.

Across the center of the mirror, its lower edge flush with the rim, is a metal bar a little less than 1/2-inch wide. Centrally located over the mirror, on top of this bar are two sets of metal locating pins (two pins each) close to opposite edges of the bar. Attached to the top of one end of the bar by means of a metal pin, in such manner that it may be turned over or moved from side to side, is a thin bar of spring steel which serves not only as a straightedge for scraping stub ends, but also as a pressure clamp after the splice is completed.

Attached to either side of the bar are cutting blades, they and the bar edge forming shears by means of which both the frame line and stub end cuts are made exactly right when the film is on locating pins. Whether the frame line or stub end cut is made is dependent upon which blade is used.

There is also a combined emulsion dampener and scraper, the dampener holding sufficient water for several splices. To refill it, one merely dips the end in water.

As a matter of fact the whole assembly impressed me as a very practical and efficient one.

WHERE SHOULD REWINDING BE DONE?

FROM John L. Cassady, an Alabama exhibitor (who asks that his location be not divulged) comes this:

"Have just had a rather sharp argument with local officer. Finally it was agreed that the question be referred to you for adjudication. The question is this: Is it necessary in the interests of safety to have rewinding done outside the projection room, in this case a room immediately adjoining the main room and opening directly into it? It has been mutually agreed between us that your answer will be accepted as final. In the event you say there is no added safety involved, I believe it would be best that you set forth the reasons on which you base such opinion."

Friend Cassady, from the wording of your letter it would seem you are on the yes side of the matter, but I don't think that can be. However, be that as it may, my answer is a flat no! In my opinion, all things considered, it is just as safe to do rewinding in the main projection room as elsewhere, provided the projectionists, or one of them, do the rewinding. My reasons for saying that are as follows:

We now have a heavy percentage of one-man projection rooms, which percentage is increasing. In such a room one of two things must occur if rewinding is done in a separate rewinding room: Either rewinding must be done after the show is finished on what may be justly termed the projectionist's own time, or the projectionist must leave his projector, go into the rewinding room and do the job, leaving the projector to run out of sight.

Now, you may suppose the average man will not go into a separate room and leave the projector alone; that he will remain after the show and do the rewinding. However, he won't. And what do you think will happen if a film breaks while the projectionist is in the rewinding room? You may reply that rewinding in a separate room is okay in a two-man room—one man could remain at the working projector while the other rewinds. Certainly, and it usually would work that way, but I have myself on more than one occasion visited a two-man projection room to find both men in the rewinder room examining film damage or doing something else. So you see while the condition and danger is not nearly so bad in the two-man room, still it is not always any too safe.

And where is the danger in rewinding in the projection room if the room is properly equipped for emergencies?

ELIMINATING VIBRATION

G. L. FLETCHER of Chicago writes, "Well, Old Timer, like others, I read your articles and even sometimes try to work out answers to the questions you ask in the 'Bluebook School,' but never actually write until I want something. For a long time I wouldn't write anyhow. You roasted us good and plenty once upon a time, and I—in fact, almost all of us here in the first (naw, not second) city in the U. S. of A., were good and plenty sore. Looking back, though, Rich, I can now see you did the right thing.

What do I want? Well, Rich, our motor-generator sets on a castiron base that rests on the cement floor, and there is a jar communicated to the floor that is not so good. Like most folks and theatres we are a bit hard up these days, and while the manager is willing to do anything he can to help us, still he really can't spend much coin. We talked the matter over yesterday. He suggested that I ask you if you knew of any way the vibration could be stopped without much expense, so I'm doing it. Can you help us?"

There are several methods by which such vibrations may be absorbed. Thick rubber or several layers of thick felt will do the trick, but this is not recommend very highly by me for the reason that under steady pressure the material gradually loses its resiliency. Another practical method is to obtain a couple of heavy hardwood planks, say 3 inches thick, and 2 or 3 feet longer than the foundation base of the set. Lay the ends of these planks on a hardwood two-by-four and set the base on the planks, central as to their length, of course. The planks will absorb the vibration.

Still another way, and the one I personally regard as best, is to use a frame or trestle that any carpenter can build at small cost, of about, say 4x4-inch hardwood timber, well braced, and a platform of planks the size of the base of the set. This platform is suspended under the trestle by four iron rods about 3/4-inch in diameter, with threads and nut at the top. These rods are located near the corners of the platform. They pass through the upper timbers of the trestle, and under the nut at the top of each of them is placed a heavy coil spring, say 6 inches long, the stiffness of the springs being of course dependent upon the weight of the set. Any dealer in springs should be able to advise you as to the required stiffness.

TAKEN IN THE RIGHT SPIRIT

RECENTLY I received a letter from a young projectionist, no matter who or where, in which he said things which induced me to write, giving him a real warm but constructive talking-to. His answer is before me. I am printing it for the reason that it may be read with profit by many.

"Dear Mr. Richardson: Received your letter this morning. Must confess what you said burned me up. It is all my fault, though, because I gave you a wrong impression, so I guess the 'roast' was deserved.

"Before ever I touched a projector I had read the Bluebook through from cover to cover. Now I very often refer to it to check up on myself. We subscribe to Motion Picture Herald and BETTER THEATRES. One copy is not sufficient. We take two. The Bluebook I have is a few years old.

"You ask me what I have done to improve my knowledge. I visit other theatres and talk with older, more experienced projectionists. They are supposed to know more than I do about projection, but very often I find they really do not! I wrote you about the sprocket because I was unable to get any really helpful information from them about the question I asked. They just did not seem to know.

"I am taking your 'lecture' good naturedly, Mr. Richardson, but just can't resist the urge to throw up my hands in self-defense. I do not wish to seem to be conceited, but since taking over the position of projectionist in this theatre I have greatly improved screen illumination, cleaned up the equipment and am keeping it in much better condition than did my predecessor, who has had ten years of experience and put on the worst show for a town and theatre of this size I have as "I try to make changeovers that cannot be detected by the audience. I keep the prints in good shape and return them in as good condition as they are received. My one 'crime' is that I mount them on 2,000-foot reels, but in separating them for shipment I am careful to do it properly.

"What is your opinion of the 'projectionist' who makes big, ugly changeover marks in the prints? Why cannot they learn to use the marks provided?"

"I appreciate your letter, Mr. Richardson. You told me what I wanted to know as well as some things I should have known."

Now, gentlemen, that is the right spirit. Here is a young man who is able to accept a "roast" and assimilate its good points. He takes real pride in the fact that he has worked hard and has improved.

FAULT DUE TO FILM OR PROJECTOR?

FROM C. C. KLUTZ, manager of the Glades theatre in Moore Haven, Fla., comes a letter in which film damage is described and advice is asked as to what or who is responsible. The damage is described as follows:

"Some while back I received a production print accompanied by a cartoon comedy. In this small town I do not preview prints. The show started with the cartoon. The sound was sweet and clear (had just installed a new amplifier and speaker two weeks before and was quite enthusiastic about it), but when the feature came through there was an unusual noise. It was not exactly 'motor boating,' nor was it a frying or popping sound. Rather it was in the nature of a pronounced purr or flutter very similar to the sound of a flag flapping in a stiff breeze.

"Hurrying to the projection room, an examination showed nothing apparently wrong with the equipment. It so happened that a service man was near, so I called him. Result: Just exactly nothing! The second reel showed the same fault. To make a lengthy story short, the equipment seemed O.K., but in the sound track of the first reel we found a distinctly white or clear spot in each frame for a considerable distance. Further examination discovered these spots throughout the reel.

"We then examined a reel not yet projected and found it to be the same. There was nothing else to show, so we had to run the print that day, and all the time the cartoon sound showed up fine.

"I notified the exchange that the print was unfit for use and told them to send something else. They wired information that the print was brand new, the first time in any projector, etc., etc., to which I replied demanding that an exchange representative be sent to examine my equipment. They sent no one and the print was returned. To date the net result is a long letter from them explaining how utterly impossible it would be for a print to leave a laboratory containing a fault. As yet

I have not been asked to pay for the film, but—well, note the 'as yet.'

"That's the history of the case. Now here is my side: That print may have been a new one. I don't know as to that, but certain indications seemed to raise a serious doubt. The exchange theorized that the tension of my projectors were not loosened as they should be for a new print, and that there was foreign matter adhering to a sprocket that caused the injury. If I am responsible I desire to be fair and pay for the damage, but first I want to be convinced by something more tangible than theories that I really did cause it, hence I come to you. You helped me solve a problem years ago. My thought is that you can help me now. Will you do so?"

I'll do my best, but the fact that I have no sample of the film makes it impossible to express a positive opinion. Had I such a sample, a microscope would doubtless settle the matter as to whether the damage was done mechanically, or was a fault contained in the print itself. In other words, while Manager Klutz's description (not nearly all of which is given) is excellent, still without personal examination of the damage through a powerful microscope I can only say what is likely and what is very unlikely.

It seems the exchange admits that the spots you describe constitute the fault, but claim they were made by your projector. Well, if that be true let the exchange explain (exchanges usually have a stem winding "explainer" that usually explains in their favor) how those spots got on the sound track of a reel you had not yet projected.

Then, too, is it reasonable to suppose both projectors would do the same damage in exactly the same place in each frame and do no damage to the cartoon film? Moreover, let the exchange explain how a projector could make those spots in each frame when at each revolution of a sprocket four frames pass over it? Must have been four deposits in exactly the same place in some sprocket in both projectors! True it could be, but—well, things don't happen that way more than perhaps once in 6,492 years, and the industry is still young.

Another thing: If they were new reels with soft emulsion, which would require "loosening up the tension" (a job that might and probably would require at least two hours to do correctly on two of most present day projectors), why did not notice of that fact accompany those reels?

As to it being impossible for such a fault to get out of a producer's laboratory, I really must indulge in a chuckle. Faults that make perfection in projection results absolutely impossible are turned out by producer's laboratories not infrequently, but quite often, so the exchange's plea on that score falls on the ground with a thud.

As I have said, I cannot say positively that the damage was the fault of the laboratory, but if your description is correct I would be quite willing to wager a substantial sum that it was not produced by a projector.

CARRIER HONORED

● The 1934 medal of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers has been awarded to Willis H. Carrier at a ceremony of the society in New York in November. Mr. Carrier is head of the Carrier Engineering Corporation of Newark, N. J., developers and manufacturers of air conditioning equipment and a pioneer organization in this field.

Willis H. Carrier

Willis H. Carrier was born at Angola, N. Y., November 26, 1876. He received his early education in the district schools of Erie County, Angola High school and Central High school, Buffalo. He entered the Engineering College of Cornell University in 1897, with a state scholarship.

Upon leaving Cornell in 1901, Mr. Carrier became research engineer with the Buffalo Forge Company, a concern originally engaged in the manufacture of blacksmith's hand forges, but at that time entering into the manufacture of large fans for the mechanical movement of air, as well as the manufacture of various forms of heating surfaces.

In the course of his first trip to the Buffalo Forge plant he accosted, on the street car, a man only slightly older than himself. He asked whether he knew just where the Buffalo Forge plant was located. The reply was, "Yes, I work for the Buffalo Forge Company and I'll take you there." This man was J. Irvine Lyle, now associated with Mr. Carrier in the air conditioning field.

While research engineer and chief engineer of the Buffalo Forge Company, Mr. Carrier contributed notably to the design of the now commonly used conoidal fan, and centrifugal water pumps. He also established a method of estimating heating capacities and requirements on the British Thermal Unit basis. Through experimental work he formulated and tabulated the capacities of heating surfaces of air velocities and their inter-relations. He discovered and formulated a number of laws governing the relation of moisture in the atmosphere and of evaporation.

One of his very important studies, "Rational Psychrometric Formulae," was presented in 1911 before the American Society of Mechanical Engineers. This has since been translated into many languages and has formed the basis for much of the present exact knowledge in the science of air conditioning. In recognition of this work he was elected to the National Scientific Society, Sigma Psi, in 1914.

His research work brought a number of fundamental inventions. Among these was a dew point control system which automatically fixes, at any desired point, the quantity of moisture carried in the air delivered to a room through an air conditioning system. He also invented the differential hygrometer, an instrument for controlling the relative humidity within a room in its effect upon materials which are sensitive to the humidity of the atmosphere, such as tobacco, textiles, etc.

Mr. Carrier saw the need of a group of air conditioning engineers available for the investigation and solution of the weather problems of manufacturers in many fields. Therefore, in 1915, in company with J. Irvine Lyle, who, at that time, was sales manager for the Buffalo Forge Company in New York City, and six younger men from the same organization who had advanced with them, they founded the Carrier Engineering Corporation. Today these eight men are the heads of this international organization designing and constructing air conditioning systems.

Most recent among Mr. Carrier's contributions to the science of air conditioning has been the invention of the centrifugal refrigeration machine, which uses a harmless liquid defrigerant for cooling in conjunction with an air conditioning system.

Mr. Carrier is Past-President of the American Society of Refrigerating Engineers, and is now First Vice-President of the American Society of Heating & Ventilating Engineers, which means, according to the custom, that he will succeed to the next presidency of that organization.

VACUUM SWITCH

● A vacuum switch made almost entirely of steel and designed to take advantage of the absence of an arc when breaking a circuit in a high vacuum, has been developed by the General Electric Company. This switch is about $\frac{3}{4}$ of an inch in diameter and $1\frac{1}{2}$ inches long and can be operated by a fraction of an ounce of pressure. It is capable, however, of interrupting as much as 5 horsepower as fast as thirty times a second. Designated as the Type FA-6 vacuum switch, this device is rated at 10 amperes, 250 volts, d.c., or 440 volts a.c., or 5 amperes at 500 volts d.c.

Previous switches of this nature have involved a fragile glass construction, but the FA-6 vacuum switch is made of steel, hydrogen-copper-brazed and exhausted to a high vacuum through a hollow steel operating stem. This operating stem passes into the vacuum contact chamber through a thin steel end-wall whose flexibility permits the slight motion necessary for operation of the contact. The leading-in wires to the contacts are sealed in tiny glass beads inside small Fernico alloy thimbles which are inserted through the heavier opposite end-wall of the chamber.

HEARING AID

● A device for theatre patrons with impaired hearing has been brought out by the Trimm Radio Manufacturing Company of Chicago. It is light in weight and may be connected with the general amplification system of the theatre. According to the installation plan, outlets may be distributed rather than closely grouped, and this the manufacturer recommends. The system incorporates volume controls individually manipulated.

For theatres, this device employs a choice of pickup methods. A microphone may be suspended in front of the speakers, or the system may be connected with the amplifiers through a transformer of proper impedance. The actual wiring consists in the running of wires from the amplifier to the outlet boxes. The headphones are generally connected in parallel.

LIGHTING BROCHURE

● A new booklet on stage lighting equipment has been issued by Kliegl Brothers of New York. It contains 16 pages carrying descriptions, specifications, ordering directions and photographic illustrations of the Kliegl line, including the new Klieglights and several other units recently introduced. Prominent among items described are sunlights, floods, mobile stands, portable floods, strip floods, spotlights, plugs and plugging boxes, connectors and lamps.

VENTILATING BOOKLET

● A condensed catalog on the ventilating, cooling and air conditioning equipment of the Ilg Electric Ventilating Company of Chicago, has been issued by this company. It is a small book measuring but $3\frac{1}{2} \times 5\frac{3}{4}$ inches, but it nevertheless covers the product of this company intensively and is also profusely illustrated. Descriptions, installation specifications and other data are given for shutters, fans, ventilators, blowers, etc.

MANUFACTURERS' MEETING

● At a convention in May in Chicago, the Theatre Equipment and Supply Manufacturers Association and the Independent Theatre Supply Dealers Association will get together in joint sessions calculated to effect closer co-ordination in the activities of these two groups. Tentative plans call for the gathering to be held at the Edgewater Beach Hotel.

PLANNING THE THEATRE

A SERVICE CONDUCTED BY PETER M. HULSKEN, A. I. A.

The Question:

I AM enclosing plan of my theatre. I want to enlarge seating capacity and put in a sloping floor. I do not want a balcony. I have a lodge room above the theatre, so it is hard to raise the ceiling. My theatre seating floor is 60 feet long, 30 feet wide, 12 feet high.

I cannot lower the floor at the stage end of the theatre as that is on ground level. I expect to leave floor level from stage back about 16 feet or so, and then build up the balance of about 44 feet. What would be the proper rise on this length floor. And would I have enough room between top of rise and ceiling? I have plenty of room out front for bringing the rise back to ground level as I am 40 feet from street.

I also want to put in new heating ventilating system at the same time and I may want to do the entire job under the Federal Housing Act. Please advise me regarding same.—P. C.

The Answer:

TO DETERMINE the slope of the auditorium floor it will be necessary to start at the projection room. To prevent any interference with the proper projection the portholes in the projection room should be at least above the high point of the auditorium floor at the bottom. The average height of the bottom of these portholes above the floor in the projection room is generally 3 feet. Basing the ceiling height in this room at 7 feet, there will be left enough room to make the slope in the auditorium room 2 feet.

This, however, is not enough—the slope should be between 2 feet, 8 inches and 3 feet, so you must either decrease the ceiling height in the projection room or lower the front part of the auditorium floor from 6 to 12 inches, if possible. Do not make the slope in the lobby more than 1 foot in rise to 12 feet in run.

If you intend to extend the lobby to property line, which is 40 feet, you will not experience any trouble. Leave ceiling in auditorium level and do not fur down as shown on your sketch. Since several state codes governing theatre buildings allow 14 seats between aisles, I believe it to be more satisfactory to do so than the way you have shown on your layout. Use wall aisles only, as they will give you the maximum amount of the best seats in the house.

I understand that if you receive federal aid in excess of $2,000 you will have to submit complete plans and specifications, so I advise you to engage an architect.

The Question:

WE HAVE an outmoded lobby and intend to remodel to meet present conditions and derive some comfort and conveniences.

The present lobby extends from wall to wall and is entirely open. We have two balcony entrances (or exits), one on each side and two main entrances, one between the balcony entrance and the boxoffice, which is in the center and about twice as large as it needs to be. Our building is 24 feet from wall to wall, and the lobby extends about 8 feet in the building. Then we have a small foyer that is 6 feet wide and partitioned off from the auditorium.

We want to move the boxoffice out to the street line and make the foyer and lobby all in one, with the entrances on the lot line (or street line). Would you make the balcony stairs open and part of the lobby, or enclose them? How would you remodel the back wall of the auditorium, and would you use curtains or doors? We have wall cases for advertising display and some easel boards for current attractions. We plan to move the partition, but that would leave an offset that might not look so good. Will you please advise?—R. W. M.

The Answer:

MY INTERPRETATION of your inquiry is that you intend to move the entire front to the sidewalk line. Since you state that the present ticket booth is about twice as large as it should be, build one of standard size. By this reduction in width you may be able to obtain ample space between entrance and balcony exit doors for poster cabinets.

It will be quite effective to plan for open stairs to balcony. Provide these stairs with well designed wrought iron railings. This treatment will make the lobby look larger.

I advise you to plan for doors in the wall between lobby and auditorium, if it is only for the reason to keep out the street noise. These doors should have solid panels so that the penetrating daylight will not interfere with good projection.

I do not quite understand why there should be an offset created by moving the partition between lobby and auditorium. Why not carry this partition up to the soffit of the balcony and extend the present ceiling in lobby to this new partition? If this is impossible, I am sorry that I can not advise you, unless I am made more familiar with existing conditions.

The Question:

THE POPULATION of this town is about 2,200. It is a county seat town. It has one small theatre. A man here owns a lot in a good location which is about 40 feet wide by 120. Before I can interest him in a proposition to build a new theatre he insists upon having expert information concerning probable size of building, seating capacity necessary, approximate cost of building using brick front and tile walls and back, and what size building would be necessary to seat 500 people on one floor and insure maximum efficiency in sound, vision and ventilating. Also whether addition of balcony would materially increase cost of construction.—J. C. W.

The Answer:

A TOWN of 2,200 population which is also a county seat, generally has quite a large surrounding territory from which to draw people, especially when they can go to a modern theatre. For this reason I believe that a theatre with a seating capacity of 500 can be easily supported in such a community. The lot, being 40 x 120 feet, is of just exactly the right dimensions to accommodate a theatre with a seating capacity of 500 seats on one floor. I advise you to plan for a small stage for vaudeville acts and for local talent presentation (such acts seem to draw very well in rural communities). A stage 15 to 18 feet will be large enough for such purpose.

The cost of such a theatre, including heating, cooling, ventilating, electric wiring, marquee, ticket booth and built-in poster cabinets, would run between 18c and 20c per cubic foot, so a theatre of your dimensions will cost between twenty-two and twenty-five thousand dollars.

The cost of a balcony depends a great deal upon its size. If this balcony can be supported on the lobby and foyer walls and does not project too far over the foyer wall so that it would be necessary to plan for a clear span girder, and if there are not too many rows of seats making it necessary to increase the ceiling height, I doubt if the extra expense would exceed $1,200.

The Question:

I HAVE A problem on alterations of our theatre here and would like your advice. Enclosed you will find a rough sketch of theatre auditorium and lobby, giving all measurements. The theatre has a basement under the entire building and it is mostly waste space. Would it be advisable to put the toilets downstairs and make a lounge room there? Would the state laws permit this? (Auditorium floor is wood on steel girders.)

We would also like to put an apartment above the theatre, and the only way to do this would be with an entrance from street as shown in sketch marked "After Alterations." The stairs and entrance would be where the ladies' toilet now is and could also have the space now used as office with only room enough for ticket window.

We could add the space now taken up by the men's toilet to the lobby. The stairs going down to the lounge and rest rooms could start back of the last row of seats and turn left where the ladies' toilet door now is.

Would it be advisable to put in a small balcony and thereby gain a few extra seats? The stairs to same could start where the door to the men's toilet now is, with landing over the door used for auditorium entrance as indicated in sketch. I think the booth ports would be high enough to permit this. The side walls are of brick and cement blocks 12 inches thick. The roof and floor are supported by steel girders.

I think it would be cheaper to put the apartment floor directly on the present roof. The stairs leading to this would no doubt have to turn once or twice. Possibly you can give me an entirely different layout which would work out to better advantage.

lengthens the life of all lamps rated to burn at 110 or 115 volts because they are better able to withstand the ravages of voltage fluctuation. As a result our lamps burn with 88% efficiency in watts; 75% efficiency in light; and show an average increase in life of 250%.

We reduced the wattage of the lamps in back of our marquee letters from 40 to 25, and cut the marquee soffit from 25

Many other smaller economies have been effected, but the foregoing covers those which have helped make appreciable savtage. If possible, I would prefer to have the booth entrance from auditorium instead of from the apartment entrance.—A. M. W.

The Answer:

AFTER HAVING given your sketches considerable study, I come to the conclusion that the best results in remodeling the lobby can be obtained by removing all present partitions. Take enough room off this space to plan for a stairway to the proposed apartment. Use the entire space left for lobby. Place an outside ticket booth in the center of the front wall, with a double entrance door on each side of it. In the wall between the lobby and the auditorium place two doors of the same dimensions of those in front wall, opposite each other, and fill the space between the doors with a large poster cabinet. These doors should have solid panels, and the front doors plate glass panels.

Remove the offset on auditorium side of space now used for exit doors and make the wall straight. A small balcony can be easily planned, but make the rows of seats parallel with the seats in the auditorium. You do not have to build them on a radius, and building them straight across will be less expensive. You can also incorporate the waste space along side of the projection room with the balcony. I advise you to support this balcony construction on an I-beam, carried on I-columns placed along side walls. It will make construction much easier. You understand, of course, that this is to be a clear span girder, as no center column can be used.

I am afraid that you will have to raise the floor and shutters in the projection room. However, this depends on the size of the balcony. The stairway to the balcony may be located as shown on your sketch. I suggest that you plan for two separate stairs to the basement lounge, one to be located under balcony stairs, and the other one under stairway to apartment. I do not know of any one reason why the ladies' and men's toilet rooms and lounge cannot be placed in the basement.

I do not think it will save you much to build the apartment directly on the roof construction, for the reason that roof loads are generally figured a great deal less than floor loads. I advise you to build in an I-beam to support floor joists and rear wall.

ings. It may seem that we have carried our torch of retrenchment beyond the confines of good business, but no, the satisfaction of comparing last year's bills and those of the year before, with today's current invoices, justifies our campaign.

We have sensibly refrained from cutting down illumination where such practice might endanger the welfare of our patrons. Realizing that one accident might well offset everything accomplished and raise our insurance rates in addition, we have not gone looking for trouble.

for less than $20,000.00

CORKANSTELE theatre buildings seating 900 to 1200 can be erected and completely equipped, including refrigerated air conditioning, for as low as $40 a seat. Smaller buildings seating less than 500 can be built complete for under $60 a seat.

All CORKANSTELE theatre buildings have a steel frame with walls and roof of pure CORINCO corkboard. The exterior finish can be stone, brick veneer, stucco or wood siding. They can be erected anywhere in six to ten weeks.

CORKANSTELE buildings can be adapted to your present plans or we will submit suggestions. For full details write CORKANSTELE, DIVISION of CORK INSULATION CO., Inc., 155 East 44th Street, New York, N. Y.

Themes and Settings for a New Years Frolic

coating under the artist's guidance and be of general help around the shop.

CONSTRUCTION

The setting, (see Figure 1) consists of the following drops, constructed pieces and curtains:

A blue sky drop, against which the skyscraper skyline (A) is set. The skyline is a cutout, very similar in construction to the old-fashioned Christmas set described in the November 17th issue of BETTER THEATRES, even to the arrangements for illuminating the windows. The searchlight beams are from pin-spots placed on the back of the skyline cut-out. The toy balloons (B) are suspended from a batten on fine linen threads. The window (C) and the maskings for the platforms, are shown in two different decorative treatments—the left half in horizontal bands, the right half a conventional design. The window construction is shown in Figure 2.

The frame is of 1x2-inch battens, made to hang suspended from a batten on a set of lines. It is not necessary to carry the base finish to the floor, since the lower part is concealed by the platform, hence the legs. If the platforms are dispensed with, obviously the base must be finished to the floor. The window bars are $\frac{1}{2} \times \frac{3}{4}$ -inch parting stops or similar wooden strips. The top of the window unit may terminate with the header, as in Figure 1. Or the panel in which the window is set can be carried above the window, as indicated in Figure 2, A, to any desired height.

The side trim is cut from wallboard, as are the conventional designs, and nailed on to the frame after the latter has been covered (excepting, of course, the window opening) with 45-pound rosin paper or blue plasterboard. The arrangement of the band platforms is optional and dependent upon the size of the stage and the number of pieces in the band. If wallboard is used for maskings for the platforms, a few nails will hold them in place on the latter. The wallboard can then be salvaged for later re-use.

The special border can be of heavy manila paper, or of regulation unbleached muslin for a more permanent job.

The posts (D) are identical with those described in last month's Christmas idea. Another of the Christmas idea suggestions that is adaptable to the New Year's setting is the illuminated greeting on the sky drop. A floor light-strip in front of the skyline will prove effective, creating the impression of a lighted street below the window.

The decorative scheme should be carried out in striking contrasts. Something decidedly novel, and different from the customary flat (dull) calcimines and water-colors is accomplished by using flat paint brought to a high luster with an application of a coat of inexpensive varnish. The grade known as "B-Furniture," a quick-drying rosin varnish, will be found satisfactory for temporary work of this sort. Aluminum paint, silver flitters or metallics, and crumpled tinfoil can be used to excellent advantage for striking effects.

Suggestions: Window bars in aluminum paint. Trim, header, case and still in bright turquoise blue with aluminum edgings. Vertical bands (left) in modulations from orange-yellow (top) to vermilion red (bottom), with stripes between bands of turquoise. Conventional design (right) in aluminum and colored bronzes. Posts turquoise in three tones from a very light tint on the narrow stripe to a deep shade on the wide stripe, or in the same manner in yellow, orange and vermilion. Special border to match general scheme. The colors of curtains and cycloramas must, of course, be considered in the treatment of special settings.

MIDNIGHT FEATURES

A fast dance routine with four dancers makes an ideal midnight feature. A few minutes before 12 o'clock two pages bring a large ornamental screen on to the stage. After placing the screen (not too far downstage) the pages take up positions, one at each end of the screen. The band plays "Auld Lang Syne." The large hand on the clock moves until it reaches 12, when a chime begins to strike. The band goes into a fast dance number as the four dancers break through the numbered panels of the screen to down stage for a snappy dance routine. The pages exit, taking the screen with them. Band goes into "Hail, hail, the Gang's All Here," with audience singing as the dancers finish their number.

The screen is of simple construction. Make the frame (A) of 1x2-inch battens, and of about the dimensions given in Figure 3. Cut the top profile from wallboard. Use lattice or narrow strips of wallboard to shim out the face of the frame flush with the wallboard profile. The two end panels (B) at square angles with the screen, are of wallboard and nailed to the frame at the corners. Nail the lower ends of the panels to cross braces (C), securely fastened to a length 1x3 inches (D). The latter extends about 16 inches beyond the ends of the screen. The pages stand on these ends to prevent the screen from toppling over when the dancers break through. The dancers also assist in steadying the screen while they break through, by standing with one foot on the floor-strip (D). Cover the entire face of the screen with paper—white or colored poster paper will serve for this.

Letter the screen with the old year. The ornamentation can be in colors or metallic flitters. Put metal gliders, such as those used under chairs, stools, etc., under the screen so that it will slide easily on the floor. The dancers, of course, are concealed behind the screen when the pages slide it out on the stage. The dancers walk on the floor in the space between the screen proper and the floor strip.

To move the hand on the clock, attach a fine, strong line or string to the point of the big hand. Pass the string through a small hole in the numeral 12. After the screen is in place on the stage one of the dancers pulls the string slowly, thereby advancing the hand until it stops on 12. Make the hand from a piece of wood and fasten it to the clock with a small stove bolt. The small hand is painted on the face of the clock.

Applied on the costumes of the dancers in correct order are the numerals of the new year. Oilcloth in black, white or any desired color, makes excellent cutouts for appliqué. Metallic flitters in gold or silver could be used for trim or solid covering. Use quick-drying varnish as an adhesive.

The screen idea just described, because of its lightness and easy manner of handling, is suitable for use with almost any type of stage setting. The clock idea, on the other hand, is not practical for use with the midnight frolic setting described here. It is too cumbersome to move on an open stage. Use this novelty with a setting on the order of the Christmas idea described in the November 17th issue of BETTER THEATRES. The clock set can then be placed on the stepped platform with a curtain in front of it, and the dancers posed on the clock for a tableau when the curtain rises. This action should be carried out just prior to midnight. As with the screen, the big hand on the clock moves on 12, except that in this case a person stationed behind the clock operates the pull line.

The year does not appear on the clock until the midnight chime begins to strike, at which time the numerals flash on in lights. The dancers step down from the clock for dance routine.

Frame construction is shown in detail in front and side elevations and plan in Figure 4. First make the stepped platform. It will be noted that the two sets of steps run left and right (1-2-3). If so desired, steps may be added in front as well. The vertical panels (A, B, C,) are a set of five frames arranged in a step-back formation. The step-backs, or jogs (D), are panels of wallboard. The frames can be covered with wallboard, or with the less expensive blue plasterboard.

After the year-numerals have been cut out, cover the entire set-piece with paper of the desired color. Paint clockface and ornamentations, and install movable hand on clock. The year numerals remain invisible until the lamps behind them are flashed on, the light showing up the numerals through the paper covering. In Figure 4, the left half only of the front elevation is shown. The numbers on panels and steps correspond in front and side elevations as well as on the plan.

Remodeling With Light, Steel, Glass in the plan. The old toilet rooms were reconverted into a smoking room for the men and a new men's toilet room.

The women's lounge is decorated in yellow and orange. On one side wall is a large mural designed in the modern manner and depicting the motion picture industry. Directly across from this, set in a niche, is a huge circular rose-colored mirror. All the illumination in the room comes from lights concealed behind a plaster cornice set just below the ceiling. The furniture is of a special functional design upholstered in the finest black and eggshell velour.

Adjoining the lounge is the powder room, with walls of blue veneer and rust-colored carpet. The rosewood dressing tables, with their black glass tops, give accommodation for two women at each end of the room, and the recessed mirrors in the walls above the tables are illuminated by light panels sunk flush in the walls.

Adjoining this is the women's lavatory, with walls of pink and black glazed tile, green and black terrazzo floor, and rouge-colored plumbing fixtures. The toilet stalls are of flush type metal panel partition finished to match the plumbing fixtures.

At the other end of the foyer, a smoking room having walls covered with striped walnut veneer and green carpeted floor, lead into the men's toilets. Here the color scheme is black and yellow, except for the plumbing fixtures, which are white.

the motion picture a head, hands, feet and numerous important inanimate details may appear in a low position on the screen, which level would be unimportant on the stage.

CINEMA PECULIARITIES

These comparisons of stage and motion picture vision requirements (they were more comprehensively stated in an article on distortion that I wrote in BETTER THEATRES of July, 1932) clearly indicate that the motion picture theatre must be designed on entirely different principles from those acceptable for a stage theatre.

It would be no more costly to build a theatre which accommodates the motion picture property, than to build one that does not. The exhibitor must demand more scientific design of the theatre, starting right in with the selection of the site, to make sure it is adaptable. Then in the selection of professional assistance he should be assured that his architect is thoroughly familiar with the vision requirements of ☞ BEN SCHLANGER [CHANGING FACTORS IN THEATRE VISION] has been prominently identified with theatre architecture for a number of years, during which he has been a frequent contributor to BETTER THEATRES. He is an architect with offices in New York City and is a member of the architectural committee of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, before which he has read several papers on theatre forms.

☞ J. T. KNIGHT, JR. [MAKING THEATRES SAFE FOR WINTER] is a regular contributor to BETTER THEATRES on theatre operation, and he also conducts MAINTENANCE TABS, which is a department of practical guidance and service for theatre operators and managers. Mr. Knight is in charge of theatre maintenance for Paramount Publix.

☞ CHARLES S. BASSIN [REDUCING THE ELECTRIC LIGHT BILL] is a theatre manager of wide experience. He is in charge of the Oriental, an M. & P. Circuit house in Mattapan Square, Boston.

☞ O. T. TAYLOR [THEMES AND SETTINGS FOR A NEW YEAR'S FROLIC] is associated with D. & R. Theatres in Aberdeen, Wash. He has been for many years active in theatre work as a stage production manager and designer. He entered the theatre field in 1918 as a lobby display artist and exploitation man for the Weir circuit in Aberdeen. He later became assistant to the general manager of the D. & R. circuit, and, except for a period in the scenic department of the Fox Studio, has been associated with this circuit ever since.

☞ LEO T. PARKER [LATE DECISIONS IN CONTRACT SUITS] is an attorney-at-law with offices in Cincinnati. He contributes regularly to BETTER THEATRES on legal phases of theatre operation.

the theatre. It is advisable, whenever possible, to use the services of a specialist to check the architect's plans for sightlines and floor slopes. Such a vital requirement cannot be given too much attention, especially when the very small cost of assistance in the beginning can more than pay for itself in the form of better income-producing structures.

SIMPLE TESTS FOR VISION

The exhibitor himself can check in very simple manner the condition in any theatre he may be interested in or have access to. Every theatre should be tested to check the amount of the screen obstruction. The test for all practical purposes is simple; it does not require any instruments or devices that an ordinary layman could not make or handle. Each row should be tested separately. Special attention should be given the rows farther away from the screen.

TWO-PERSON TEST

Just two persons of the same physical stature could carry on the test without any measuring device, but this is apt to cause inaccuracy due to the varying positions a person may assume while sitting in a chair.

One person alone can make observations with the aid of a simple wood stand and cardboard cutout attached, as illustrated (Figure 2). This testing method (about to be explained) is thorough except for two factors which are difficult to overcome. One is that all people do not sit in the same sitting posture for the length of the motion picture performance, and the other is that all people are not the same in height. These variations are apt to cause greater obstruction in one instance and greater clearance in another. It is therefore necessary that an average condition be taken as a guide, thereby reducing the amount of inaccuracy to a minimum. Sight line conditions which are capable of passing this test, using the average as a basis, may be considered as meeting the requirements necessary for viewing the motion picture correctly. It is a highly technical problem to design floor slopes to afford such vision, but it requires the simplest effort to see if there really is such vision on existing theatre floors and balconies.

DUMMY PATRON TEST

The test may be made by placing the wood stand in front of the chair back (as shown in Figure 2) of the row preceding the row being tested. The top of the cardboard cutout represents the top of the preceding spectator's head if he were sitting in the average normally comfortable sitting posture. In making the test, note how the amount of screen area not only in height, but also in width becomes more and more obstructed as the distance from the screen increases. (The author would very much like to receive reports from exhibitors who make this test, mentioning the following: Distance from screen to first row, size of screen, distance back to back of chairs; amount of obstruction observed, giving the row tested each time.)

In the viewing conditions to be checked (listed earlier in this article) Numbers 3 and 4 are conditions which are not affected by cinematography. However, Number 5 (viewing distances) is affected. The more popular use of large closeups of figures and inanimate objects, filling the entire screen, has a tendency to increase the distance allowable between the screen and the last row of seats. Such a practice in cinematography would make the effective size of the screen larger than the physical size. Therefore it will be necessary to gauge viewing distances fixed by the effective size, rather than by the mere physical size of the screen.

are not inflammable. Moreover, the use of many electric garlands invariably overload the electric circuits.

ELECTRICAL CIRCUITS

Every electrical circuit is calculated to carry a certain maximum current. When the circuit is seriously overloaded the result is over-heating and rapid deterioration of insulated covering to wires, which finally results in an insulation breakdown with great likelihood of fire.

All circuits are protected by fuses or circuit breakers to protect the circuit by opening when the safe electrical load is exceeded. The engineer, electrician or manager who tries to increase the capacity of any circuit by replacing the proper fuse with a larger one—and there have been cases where copper wire has been used across the fuse clips—is stupid, short-sighted and criminally reckless. Would the manager of any theatre permit his engineer to go into the boiler room and wire down the steam safety valve? This is analogous to increasing the size of fuses in an electric circuit. The fuse is the safety valve of the electric circuit—don't destroy its function. A theatre can't survive such reckless operation.

OUTDOOR DECORATIONS

Holiday signs or banners hung under the marquee, or large cutouts or boards or Christmas trees on top of the marquee, may be subjected to wind, rain and snow. A manager can afford the time to check personally and see for himself just how securely such displays are installed. Remember that marquees are constructed with certain factors of safety to resist weight and wind pressure. Be sure that some discretion is used in deciding upon the holiday front.

LOBBY FLOORS

During some of the wet or snowy days that are to come, lobby floors are going to become slippery and unsafe. Rubber mats, coco mats or matting are a great help in overcoming this condition. Leather link mats, though more expensive, are frequently used in lobbies. If conditions are exceedingly bad it is worthwhile to have the surplus water removed frequently during the day with a mop and pail.

SNOW REMOVAL

Snow presents another problem at this season of the year—on the sidewalk, on top of the marquee, the main roof of the theatre, fire escapes and exit areaways. Remove the snow before it becomes deep and packs down hard, and before it becomes ice. This is the best protection. The use of rock salt and ice choppers are only second best, but they are necessary if the snow packs or turns to ice.

Snow should be removed from the roof of the marquee and the main theatre roof.

It adds an appreciable load which can very quickly become extremely dangerous. Great care should be exercised in removing snow from any paper, composition or tar and gravel roof. The use of steel or iron shovels by careless porters will cause much damage, and leaky roofs will result. The best suggestion is to have on hand two or three of the old-fashioned wooden snow shovels; remove the sheet metal nosing on them.

Remove the snow from roofs immediately; if it forms ice and any attempt is made to chop it off some holes are going to be cut in the roof regardless of how careful the workman tries to be. In clearing a roof be sure that the gutters, the area about the roof drains, and the saddles in the roof are clean, so that in case of a thaw and then a freeze, the down spouts won't be frozen.

SWEEPINGS

In some theatres the janitors carefully accumulate all the paper scraps and sweepings in large burlap sacks and store these sacks in the boiler room, from which they are removed but once or twice each week. This is not good practice. The sacks stored in the boiler room create a real fire hazard. Of course, the boiler room is supposed to be separated by fire walls and equipped with a fire door, but how frequently is this door left open or propped open? During the cleaning of fires or the removal of ashes or the back fire of an oil burner, these sacks of paper become real hazards.

CONFIDENCE

Reports of new theatre building, remodeling, modernizing and large-scale re-equipping come to Better Theatres in increasing numbers as the year draws to a close.

They are evidence of widespread confidence among theatre owners in the future of the business. Good pictures continue to maintain high attendance levels, and theatres must be improved to meet and keep pace with the trade and the times.

Better Theatres, the industry's guide to efficient and economical theatre operation, greets 1935 with an assurance of prosperity for our thousands of theatres.

MOVIES AND COURTS

GOOD showmen will agree with Judge John C. Knox of the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York in his declarations against the invasions of courts by the radio microphone and the motion picture camera.

Judge Knox sees in some current practices the threat that "our national passion for pitiless and sometimes morbid publicity may establish a microphone and a motion picture sound apparatus as standard equipment for American court-rooms." . . . And discussing broadcasts and pictures of trials, he observes that inevitable efforts at audience appeal will not only invade "the court's reputation for justice, but justice itself will suffer."

While declaring for publicity for all judicial proceedings, Judge Knox feels that "the public can confidently depend on the orthodox mediums of publicity."

The place for showmanship is on the studio stage and the theatre screen. The motion picture theatre gains no kudos or following from presenting factual recordings of crime and social mishaps.

IN THE CAN

"RADIO, perhaps more than any other industrial art, can claim kinship with the fine arts," proclaimed Mr. David Sarnoff before the College of Fine Arts of New York University. "On its wings, the messages of music and education speed to uncounted millions. . . . With the speed of light, the ether wave carries art's treasures to all who may wish to receive them."

In other words, Mr. Sarnoff, radio is to art as the can is to the film.

And that's the kinship—when there is any.

IT SMELLS

TO that large American committee of unemployed club women who are out to attend to everything in general, but the motion picture in particular, let us suggest that between times they might take a sniff at some of the current perfume advertising.

Let's consider, for a sample, the copy in last Sunday's newspapers in behalf of "Scandal", reading thus: "Let it tell tales about you . . . let it evoke tales worth telling . . . this golden gorgeous perfume so aptly named, so gloriously effective! If any perfume can transform a woman's whole career, here's the fragrance to achieve it. Created by Madame Lanvin in Paris, 'Scandal' is as sure and perfect as a Lanvin gown. Just prove it! Expose an adamant man to 'Scandal's' persuasion! Judge by the results. A whiff of this odour can change a biography!"

Just fancy a movie advertisement like that!

LENIN'S THIRD SINGER

MAKE room in the Red Square of Moscow for another plaque beside Mr. Richard Watts, Jr., of the New York Herald Tribune and Mr. Andre Sennwald of the New York Times, this one to honor Mr. William Boehnel of the New York World Telegram, who writes of "Three Songs About Lenin": A passionately hysterical cinema tribute to the great Russian leader, which is so brilliantly conceived and executed that it definitely shows the possibilities of the camera as a medium to depict something more than the customary boy and girl romances that originate in Hollywood and Elstree.

"Three Songs About Lenin" has served to show a lot more than that in the New York press. It has contrived to bare to the view of all and sundry with what manner of adolescent dabblers-of-the-typewriter publishers venture to trust discussion of the chief amusement wares of the nation.

No other great American industry would suffer such treatment at the hands of the vendors of pulp-paper and white space. The newspapers have quite another treatment for motors, foods, fashions, markets or even the lowly sports departments.

Does the motion picture have to like it—and take it?

ELECTRIC CIRCLE

DISCUSSING the outlook for the electrical industry for 1935, Mr. Gerard Swope, president of the General Electric Company, the big uncle of RKO, says that in 1934 "consumption of electricity has been approximately 7 per cent greater than in 1933 and is almost up to the consumption of the years 1929 and 1930. This increase has been due largely to the increased use of electrical appliances in the home."

If the powerhouse is doing more and more of the housework, then milady, and her maids, have more time to play—and the U. S. Census department says that the motion picture gets 78 cents out of the American amusement dollar.

So we of movieland are just units in the dynamo cycle, the machinery which gives us nothing to do and keeps us busy doing it.

THIS WEEK ---

CENSORSHIP

Film men of Nebraska are disturbed by reports of the preparation, by an Omaha representative in the state legislature, of the first of the feared censorship bills, for submission to the coming legislative session at Lincoln. Circuit managers and exhibitors will meet next week to formulate a campaign of opposition to censorship and sales taxation. . . .

BUCK, FICTIONIST

Frank Buck, wild animal hunter and film producer for RKO Radio release, is collaborating with Glen Cravath, artist, on an adventure yarn in pictures, "Ted Towers, the Animal Master," which appears each Saturday in the comic and adventure section of the New York Evening Journal and is syndicated by King Features. . . .

NO LOUD SPEAKERS

Kansas City officials have ordered theatre owners to discontinue the use of outside loud speaker ballyhoo devices, following complaint and protest by downtown merchants. . . .

NEW ORLEANS LICENSES

The commission council of New Orleans has fixed license fees for motion picture houses, based on gross receipts, within a range of $2,750, on theatres grossing between $500,000 and $550,000, and $10 on theatres grossing up to $2,500 a year. On a $20,000 gross the fee is $150, on $100,000 it is $625. . . .

PAROLE DENIED

Governor B. M. Miller of Alabama has denied the plea for parole of former Senator E. D. Jordon, serving a penitentiary sentence for soliciting a bribe from Lee Castleberry, Gadsden theatre owner, for support of a Sunday film measure. The court had recommended the parole not be granted. . . .

OPERA TO FILMS

Nino Martini, young tenor of the Metropolitan Opera Company and radio voice, has been signed to a long term motion picture contract by Fox. Leaving for Hollywood following the present opera season, he will appear in a series of musical films.

PRESS BOOKS

The Warner advertising and publicity department has inaugurated a policy of providing press books on new films four weeks in advance of release dates, the plan calling for a new press book ready for distribution each Friday. . . .

MR. RICE AGREES

Last week under the title of "Our Young Millions" MOTION PICTURE HERALD presented an editorial commenting on Mr. Elmer Rice's much discussed abandonment of the Broadway stage and his annoyance at its piffling, with the observation that men grow up, but that the race never does.

And, so, now The Herald has from Mr. Rice a letter in which he remarks, anent our editorial: "May I say that it is one of the most cogent and penetrating observations on this subject that I have yet seen, and that I am entirely in agreement with what you say?"

PUBLIC SUPPORT

Editorially last week the Detroit News made significant comment on "the public's attitude toward clean, wholesome screen entertainment," citing the case of the Fox theatre, which was forced to pull "Anne of Green Gables," one day ahead of schedule because of lack of public support. The paper said: "... the industry must have public support for its efforts at cleanliness; otherwise these efforts cannot be expected to continue." . . .

OHIO TAX

The Ohio legislature last week passed, and the governor signed, a bill for a 3 per cent sales tax which automatically supplants the 3 per cent admission tax, which is suspended for one year. Also passed was a measure increasing the tax on income-producing intangibles from 5 to 6 per cent. Exhibitors will pay the state $1,000,000 per year, instead of $3,000,000, as heretofore. . . .

UNIVERSAL-CONSOLIDATED

An agreement made last week between Universal and Consolidated Film Industries officials provides that Consolidated will take over all of Universal's film processing shortly after January 1, doing all the printing of rush and release prints for the next two years. Universal's laboratory will be closed. . . .

HISTORIC SITE

A gasoline service station is planned for an historic motion picture site at Niles, Cal., purchased by T. T. Champion. On that location was the old Essanay studio, where G. M. "Bronco Billy" Anderson, original screen cowboy; Charlie Chaplin, Marie Dressler, Ben Turpin, Slim Sumnerville, and others had their first taste of motion picture making. . . .

NO ROOM FOR THEATRE

Contrary to a report from one W. L. Gould, the town of Clintonville, Wis., is not only amply supplied with motion picture entertainment but the Grand theatre there, owned by Dr. W. H. Finney, recently was entirely remodeled, with a new front, marquee, lobby, rest rooms, new carpets and additional seats, besides the latest improved sound system. Al Reinke is manager. . . .

SMOKING BANNED

The Detroit city council last week amended the city's anti-smoking ordinance to prohibit smoking in all theatres. Heretofore the ordinance gave the fire marshal power to permit exemptions in special cases, but the qualification was considered of doubtful legality, resulting in complete prohibition. . . .

DISNEY STATUE

For the happiness he has brought to millions, Sir Harry Brittain, at the annual dinner of the Institute of Amateur Cinematographers in London last week, suggested a monument be erected to Walt Disney, creator of the Mickey Mouse and Silly Symphonies cartoons for United Artists release. . . .

HOLLYWOOD 21% AHEAD OF RELEASING SCHEDULE

Distributors Giving Exhibitors 5 Per Cent More Product Than Calendar Calls For; 142 Pictures Already Released

Motion picture product promised exhibitors by distributors is going forward at a pace considerably beyond contractual requirements, Hollywood having completed at the end of the first quarter of 1934-35, on December 1st, 46 per cent of all the features scheduled. Distributors had released to theatre owners 30 per cent—indicating that the producers were supplying product to the distribution machinery at a rate of 16 per cent ahead of release schedules. But with the fact that distributors, in turn, had given exhibitors 5 per cent more merchandise in the first quarter than the releasing calendar called for, Hollywood actually was 21 per cent ahead of the release schedule.

A detailed study of the production status, by companies and feature titles, begins on the following page, with comparisons with last season's promise and performance.

Some 434 feature motion pictures were delivered by the large companies and the principal independents during the previous season of 1933-34, and of these 123 had been released by December 1st. These companies announced 467 productions for 1934-35 when their salesmen in the field visited exhibitors last summer to sell the new product, and in the first quarter—September 1 to December 1—142 pictures had been released, a net increase of product available for booking of some 20 pictures. The status of 1934-35 product as of December 1st follows:

FEATURES	PERCENT- NUMBER OF FEATURES	AGE OF TOTAL
Released in First Quarter	142	30%
Completed in First Quarter but not released by December 1st	76	16
In process of filming	77	16
To be filmed	172	38
Totals	467	100%

The difference between the foregoing totals of whole product scheduled for the entire season and the usual estimate of 500 to 600 features averaged per season is made up by films of small states right companies.

Virtually every studio in Hollywood is now in the busiest production activity on record for any similar holiday period, the reason, according to Benjamin B. Kahane, Radio Pictures executive, being that the producers believe "the motion picture is entering one of the biggest 'boom times' of recent years."

Breen to Stay

On Code Job

Dispatches by the Associated Press and the various other news agencies and correspondents this week conveyed tidings that Joseph I. Breen, Production Code Administrator in Hollywood for the Associated Motion Picture Producers, Inc., was considering an offer to head the story department of Universal Pictures Corporation.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD's Hollywood bureau meanwhile reports that while such a proposal had been made, there was no probability that Mr. Breen would consider leaving his present post at this time.

Arthur To Open House

Harry C. Arthur plans to open the Art theatre, in Springfield, Mass., on Christmas. Charles C. Caballero will manage the 1,000-seat house, which is now being remodeled.

Ohio Theatre To Reopen

The Ohio theatre, Indianapolis, will be reopened shortly by George Settos, circuit operator in Ohio and Indiana.

More Court Tests

On Double Billing

Further court tests, similar to the recent Harry Perelman double feature suit in Philadelphia, may be made against major distributors over the contractual restrictions in their contracts on double featuring.

Chicago, Cleveland and Los Angeles, all committed to single feature programs, probably will be the next centers for such tests, spokesmen for independent exhibitors in New York said Tuesday.

The Cleveland double feature prohibition has been upheld by the Ohio state court following an attack on its enforcement last summer. Edward A. Golden, Monogram sales manager, said the independents' attack would be launched in Cleveland federal court immediately after the first of the year.

Antitrust Suit Launched

Jones, Linick & Schaefer, operating the McVickers theatre in Chicago, started antitrust litigation against Paramount Wednesday in U. S. district court in New York. The hearing was set for December 26.

A PLEA FOR DIALOGUE THAT'S UNDERSTOOD

"Cartoon comedies can enter a new era when they have sense enough to have the spoken lines delivered by voices that don't sound like they were being choked to death on a pipkin of fried mush," writes Herman J. Brown of the Majestic theatre at Nampa, Idaho.

"For some unknown reason, when words ARE necessary to put across the meaning, the words are deliberately made unintelligible. Some day someone will make a clear-cut comedy-drama with real characters in cartoon and have them speak so that a fraction, at least, of the audience can tell what they are talking about. This will make a big hit—it will be the season's big novelty—common sense is always novel."

20 MORE PLAYS IN PREPARATION THAN THEATRES TO SHOW THEM

But Any Broadway Shortage Would Come Only If Shows
Ready or Playing Run for Three Weeks or Longer

By FRED AYER

The annual avalanche of plays which descends upon Broadway at Christmas began this week with 19 openings scheduled within eight days and as many more to come within the first two or three weeks of the New Year. While these figures may not constitute an all-time record for the holiday season, they certainly portend better things for 1935 in the legitimate theatre.

At the same time these scheduled plans have created a situation unheard of for more than six years—a shortage of available theatres. It is estimated that there are 20 more shows being made ready for Broadway premieres than there are theatres to house them.

There are, currently, 23 former legitimate houses along Broadway and 42nd Street which have gone over to other policies, chiefly motion pictures. In addition there are 26 theatres housing productions which may be considered as hits or potential hits, and the remaining 20 available theatres are booked. All talk of possible theatre shortage is, obviously, based upon the supposition that all immediate future openings and all current runs will continue for three weeks or longer.

Openings scheduled during Christmas week are: December 24: "Rain From Heaven," Theatre Guild production with Jane Cowl; "Revenge With Music," reopening after a two weeks' vacation. December 25: "Fools Rush In," Leonard Stillman revue; "Accent on Youth," Crosby Gaige production with Constance Cummings and Nicholas Hennen; "Piper Paid," with Edith Barrett; "The O'Flynn," Russell Janney's operetta; "Hamlet," first of a Walter Hampden repertory season of two weeks; "Slightly Delirious," December 26: "Birthday," a Harmon & Ullman presentation with Louis Calhern and Peggy Wood; "Thumbs Up," an Eddie Dowling revue; "Music Hath Charms," formerly "Annina," an operetta; Ruth Draper, beginning a limited engagement. December 27: "Baby Pompadour."

In Final Rehearsal

Among shows which are in the last stages of rehearsal are "Laburnum Grove," the J. B. Priestley play which Gilbert Miller is presenting in conjunction with the Shuberts; "Gather Ye Rosebuds," Max Gordon; "Point Valaine," Noel Coward; "The Petrified Forest," Gilbert Miller; "Bright Star," Arthur Hopkins; "Music Hath Charms," the Shuberts; "Portrait of Gilbert," Grisman & Oshrin.

The old Sunday show situation has cropped up again in New York, with Equity, after a 15-year struggle to keep the ban in effect, finally conceding the "real proba-

Reviews of the Broadway Stage

DARK VICTORY (Alexander McKaig)

The one redeeming feature of "Dark Victory" is Tallulah Bankhead, of Alabama, New York, London and, lately, of Hollywood. It is a sour piece of business, poorly written, and generally uncomfortable to listen to except when Tallulah is speaking.

For some reason the authors, George Brewer, Jr., and Bertram Bloch, imagined it would be fun to let Miss Bankhead toy around with the thought that in six months she would die, quite abruptly, after first losing her sight. There is a doctor, of course. All his skill cannot save her from "the awful thing." He falls hard for her, then unwittingly tells her of her fate, just after she has confessed her love for him. He runs away to Vermont—after having had a brilliant New York career—to become a country doctor again. Eventually, after trying to drown her sorrow in large quantities of booze, Tallulah follows him. They marry and, as per schedule, she loses her sight. The doctor is conveniently removed from the scene by being called to Montreal on a brain operation. First, however, he leaves all sorts of forwarding addresses and phone numbers. Tallulah, now blind, tears these up, winning her "Dark Victory" by allowing him to go to his great work unhampered. Presumably she dies. The curtain came down too quickly to find out.

It is too bad and, as Evelyn Waugh puts it, very "nausea-making," to watch Tallulah and such a fine actor as Earle Larimore squirm through such a thoroughly unnecessary play. —F. A.

VALLEY FORGE (Theatre Guild)

In "Valley Forge," Maxwell Anderson, whose dramatic histories are well known in the theatre, has created a masterful and stirring enterprise which deals not so much with the glories of the American Revolution as with the difficulties of internal political intrigue faced by General Washington, together with his almost hopeless fight to keep his ragged army from giving up the ship.

The play is a genuinely moving piece of stagecraft from start to finish. Nicely interspersed are glimpses of the romance between Washington and Mary Philipse, but the main theme is Washington's fight against a Congress which has turned on him, against the almost overwhelming odds of physical and human nature.

It is a play which has all the essential qualities of a first class motion picture and, probably because of Mr. Anderson's genius for characterization, it is not the schoolroom type of bility" of passage of a bill legalizing Sunday shows, at the next legislative session.

The 53rd annual Actors' Fund Benefit will be January 20 at the New Amsterdam.

Harold B. Franklin relinquished his rights to the Elisabeth Bergner vehicle, "Escape Me Never," due in New York in January, to the Theatre Guild, because of the cost.

drama which so many plays of similar nature have been.

Philip Merivale, as Washington, is man, patriot and leader rolled into one. His performance, whether he looks like the Father of the Country or not, is a magnificent contribution to the theatre. Margalo Gillmore as Mary Philipse and Reginald Mason as Lord Howe are outstanding among an unusually superior and large cast. Herbert J. Biberman and John Hanseman directed.—F. A.

THE CHILDREN'S HOUR (Herman Shumlin)

Here is a play which Hollywood will have to forget about—if it is to be brought faithfully to the nation's screens. It is, perhaps, unfortunate that its subject deals with that dark secret Lesbianism, for it is apparently true that such things may be discussed openly only on the Broadway stage. On the other hand, it is equally well that the motion picture public, constituting the "other" 78 per cent of the nation's amusement seekers, are not going to see "The Children's Hour," for it is almost certain they know nothing of such things anyway and it would be too bad to spoil what little illusion of life they have left. There are, of course, one or two other factors which would prohibit this play as it now stands from even reaching a dialogue writer's desk.

Despite its tragedy and its subject, "The Children's Hour" is, nevertheless, a beautiful piece of writing, delicately maneuvering its characters from one situation to another, pitched all the time on a hysterical note. It tells the story of a 14-year-old girl who overhears, in her boarding school, the mention of Lesbianism in connection with the alleged infatuation of one of the headmistresses for another girl. The heroine, if she may be so designated, carries the dreadful scandal to her grandmother, who makes plenty of trouble for the school. In the end, after having unsuccessfully sued the grandmother for libel, the accused schoolmistress commits suicide.

The authoress, Miss Lillian Hellman, whose first play this is, has kept her action revolving around the innocence of the two accused teachers. After they have been ruined in every conceivable way—socially, personally and professionally—with one of them committing suicide, the grandmother appears and admits it was all a mistake.

There can be no doubt that "The Children's Hour" is one of the finest pieces of playwrighting to have hit Broadway in many seasons. It is too, too bad that Miss Hellman has launched her first play without benefit of large royalties from California.—F. A.

Sam Harris is talking about reviving "Rain," with Tallulah Bankhead starred in the part made famous by the late Jeanne Eagels.

Lewis Allen, Gilbert Miller's versatile young general manager, is directing "Laburnum Grove." Here for five weeks, he will return in the late winter to stage another for Mr. Miller.

We have heard so much about circuits unloading their theatre holdings the past few years, that when we hear of circuits buying—well, that is news. So, here is a word about a recent purchase by a Florida circuit.

To start with, let's drop back a dozen years or so, for a better idea of the real conditions in the background.

The place: Tampa, Florida. The location: a neighborhood section of the city, known as Tampa Heights. Here on 20th avenue was a small frame church building, which had been abandoned. A man had an idea that a motion picture theatre would click in this section, so he obtained a lease on the church structure, equipped it, named it the Garden, and started the flickers flickering at a schedule of 10 and 20 cents.

Well, the flicker failed to click, and for a number of years it was the joke of the city. At least a dozen different men tried their hands at operating the place and all failed to make much more than the film rental.

Then Came Butler E. Gore

Then one day a young man by the name of Butler E. Gore, who had a weekly one night stand circuit in six different school buildings, had a hunch that he could put the Garden over. He got it at a very low rental, dolled it up and started in with a policy of "a lotta show for a little money." To start with, he played at a straight nickel and dime schedule, except on Sunday when the scale was tilted to 10 cents and 15 cents. Well, sir; one of those things happened—the house caught on and it wasn't but a few weeks before it was laying golden eggs.

With his profits Mr. Gore made a down payment on a purchase of the property. Later, with his profits, he built a new brick building right over the old frame church, and he figured the thing out to such a fine point that the old building was wrecked and everything installed in the new building, without missing a show—and if you think that isn't a real achievement, just try it out on your piano.

A Proposal from Sparks

Business continued fine and Mr. Gore branched out. He took on another "lemon," this time a suburban house called the Nebraska, because Nebraska avenue is the main drag through the suburb, Sulphur Springs. The unexpected happened again. The Nebraska commenced rolling up a weekly profit almost immediately.

Then Mr. Gore took on some houses outside of Tampa, the Bartow at Bartow, the Florida at Haines City, and the Grand at Lake City, and all these houses seemed to take on new life under his management.

Now in Tampa the Sparks circuit has all the theatres in the central section except the Negro theatres, the Garden and a small grind house. Quite naturally this circuit took note of the success of the Garden, and it was mentioned that this circuit would be willing to take the Garden over, but it seemed that

Mr. Gore wasn't anxious to sell, and so the thing rocked along until the month of November, 1934.

Bricks Hauled to Lot

One day under the legal notes of the daily press appeared the statement that a permit had been issued for the building of a theatre at Nebraska avenue and Forest. It then developed that the lot was owned by the Sparks circuit and that the permit was for them. There were two houses on the lot. These were wrecked and some bricks were hauled to the lot. It looked like the circuit had decided to invade the section, that had been under the Garden banner for all this time.

About this time Mr. Gore received an invitation to come to Jacksonville for a conference with the heads of the Sparks circuit. He was tendered an offer for his Bartow theatre, and he accepted it. He was then made an offer for his Garden and Nebraska theatres, which he did not accept, but came back with a counter proposition. Followed several conferences, and finally a deal was consummated. Mr. Gore sold his Garden and Nebraska theatres to the Sparks theatre circuit, and it doesn't seem reasonable that there will be any new theatre built up there on Nebraska avenue to compete with the circuit's own property, so one perfectly good building permit seems to have gone the way of all flesh.

Seattle Film Club to Hold Formal Opening

The Northwest Film Club, Seattle's new social group of exchange and theatre executives, will open its clubrooms on December 27 with a buffet dinner at the Washington Hotel, headquarters of the organization. The membership consists of about 100 film and theatre men from all parts of the state, and it is expected that the group will soon be expanded to almost 200. Weekly luncheons and monthly dances for the members have already been scheduled.

Organizers include Neal East, Paramount; E. A. Lamb, RKO; L. J. McGinley, Universal; Al Oxtoby, Warner; Les Walton, Columbia; Harry Edmund, Fox; Ed Walton, Majestic; Butch Wingham, MGM; J. T. Sheffield, Monogram; Al Finkelstein and Al Rosenberg, Evergreen State Theatres, Inc.; and Herb Sobottka, Coliseum theatre, as director of public relations.

Variety Club Adopts Child

The Variety Club of Columbus, O., has assumed legal guardianship of a three-month-old baby girl, abandoned a month ago. The Pittsburgh club took a similar responsibility not long ago.

Yorke in East

Gabriel Yorke, of the Fox studio publicity division, arrived in New York Monday and will return to Hollywood over the weekend.

Strand Refitting Following Blaze To Take a Month

Repairs estimated to cost nearly $90,000 were being rushed this week on the Strand theatre, Warner Brothers' Broadway house, with the job expected to take a month. The theatre was extensively damaged late last week by fire starting in the ventilating system during an early evening performance. Only about 700 patrons were present and all filed out safely when notified from the stage by Assistant Manager Zeb Epstein a few minutes before smoke began to enter the auditorium.

Inflammable Insulation Blamed

The projectionists, however, were trapped, and escaped only by sliding down a telephone cable accessible from an areaway window. Marcus Rattiner slid to safety, then seeing his partner, Walter Pichert, hanging helplessly to the cable, climbed up again and brought him down on his shoulders. Pichert had been partly overcome by smoke. He was taken to a hospital for treatment.

Fire officials blamed inflammable insulation of the ventilating ducts and a small bonfire of boxes and paper in an adjoining alley. Embers from the bonfire, according to one theory, were drawn into the ventilating system, the ducts of which were insulated, for thermal and acoustical reasons, with a fibrous material instead of one like asbestos or rockwool. Duct openings are ordinarily screened in a mesh calculated to keep out all but very small particles, and another theory is that the air itself, heated by the bonfire, made the metal duct work, as a result of peculiarities in the system, hot enough to ignite the insulation, either directly or after ignition of duct.

Sparks Fire Upholstering

The fire, quickly attacking the roof and spreading along the ventilating system, caused smoke to pour into the projection room and balcony. Heat fused ceiling plaster in the auditorium, and some of this ultimately fell, carrying crystal chandeliers with it. Sparks introduced with the smoke set fire to upholstery, damaging 550 chairs, while stage fabrics were similarly ignited.

The Strand was opened in 1914 as the motion picture's first "deluxe" house on Broadway, with S. L. Rothafel in charge. Warner Brothers acquired it in 1927. Technical practices of 10 years ago, when the air conditioning was installed, may account to some extent for the unusual nature of the fire. It is also pointed out that it may have advanced too far by the time it was discovered to keep smoke and sparks out of the auditorium by timely stopping of fans.

The fire abruptly terminated the run of "Flirtation Walk," which had opened on December 1.—G. S.

Gaumont-British Sales Staff in New York Session

A meeting of 25 representatives of the Gaumont-British sales force in the east was held in New York last week, under the direction of Arthur Lee, vice-president, and George W. Weeks, general sales manager. The group previewed three new films, "The Iron Duke," "The Unfinished Symphony" and "My Heart is Calling."

A similar meeting for western and mid-western sales representatives will be held in about one week in Chicago. Mr. Lee and Mr. Weeks will also preside at Chicago.

PROTESTS AGAINST SCHLESINGERS' SOUTH AFRICAN RULE STRIKE SNAG

Public Calls Programs Mediocre but Independent Film Distributors, Inc., Alone Has Made Noticeable Headway So Far

By H. HANSON
Special Correspondent

South Africa has been listed as one of the small "noises" in the motion picture business of the world, compared with other countries. This is mainly due to the one-sided combine, African Theatres, Ltd., which for many years has controlled virtually every branch of the country's amusement industry. The public, too, has felt the effects of this monopoly in that it has been forced to be content with a very mediocre class of entertainment. Although complaints have been pretty frequent, it is a case of "take it or leave it."

Strong protests have been made by various groups against a single combine ruling show business in South Africa, and several theatrical enterprises have made bids to obtain a share of the country's amusement trade in an effort to break down the African Theatres trust—controlled, as is practically everything in the territory's entertainment world, by the Schlesinger interests. These efforts were doomed to failure, however, due to a lack of sufficient capital, to poor organization and because, in most instances, the would-be oppositionists, owning few if any theatres, were unable to get adequate product.

Within recent years the only concern which gave any prospect of proving a serious competitor to the Schlesinger combine was Kinemas, Ltd. This company built several cinemas of a modern type. Theatres run by African Theatres, Ltd., are of a mediocre construction and poorly operated. Kinemas, Ltd., negotiated contracts with several overseas producers and their prospects looked good.

Then Comes a Merger

Faced with a dangerous opposition, the Schlesinger Trust began to act in an attempt to outwit a concern which not only was giving the public good value for its money but was gaining the confidence of every patron as well.

What was done is well known to those in the business. The news spread quickly that arrangements had been completed for a merger of the two concerns, under the title of African Consolidated Theatres, Ltd. Astute business men had their opinions regarding this amalgamation, but it was an established fact, and Kinemas, Ltd., became only a name, although its 8 per cent preference shares are still quoted on the Cape Town Stock Exchange at a low figure, never rising above five shillings, with little or no trading.

Then Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer came into the market with a film renting business under

C. J. Sonin as managing director. Steady progress has been made since its entrance into the picture and the class of picture imported to the country has shown an improvement all around. A contract was signed between M-G-M and I. W. Schlesinger—as Union Theatres (Rty), Ltd.—to screen M-G-M product at certain cinemas "taken over" by Union Theatres. That Union Theatres was owned by Schlesinger was a known fact.

MGM Plan Awaited

At the termination of this contract there is every probability that MGM will develop some plan over here on its own account. At present, MGM product is shown in about 70 cinemas, which includes 30 subsidiaries of African Consolidated Theatres. MGM has shown its faith in the country by building the Metro, Johannesburg, a handsome structure seating 2,800, equipped in modern and artistic style.

African Consolidated Theatres retaliated by erecting the Colosseum in Johannesburg, which seats 2,300.

In 1933, H. W. Leasin of the RKO Radio Pictures Paris office, and Henry W. Kahn of Fox Film Corp., came to South Africa to look over the field. To date their visit appears to have borne no results.

The latest opposition to the Schlesinger interests is Independent Film Distributors, Ltd., with a capital of 20,000 pounds. This concern obtained a large number of excellent pictures and carries a good list of independent cinema owners who have signed contracts with them. The Ritz Bio-Cafe, Cape Town, is one of this concern's houses and is doing good business despite efforts of African Consolidated to push it out of business.

Other Projects Doubtful

It is known there are one or two men with ambitious plans for getting in line against African Theatres for a share of the film business, but these projects are, as yet, in the air, which makes somewhat doubtful whether they will eventuate.

The production side of the South African film industry has failed to develop to any material extent. It has been repeatedly stated that his country offers unique facilities as regards scenery, atmospheric conditions and coloring, to obtain excellent backgrounds for picture making. As regards talent, this could be found in abundance, if it were encouraged by means of film-acting academies. South Africa has its possible stars, but it needs the initiative of those in responsible positions to encourage the talent.

African Theatres never has taken this matter of production seriously, it being left to outside concerns to recognize the possibilities. There are several American and foreign cameramen over here taking shots of native and wild animal life, and in the near future the film depicting the life of Cecil J. Rhodes, the great South African statesman, will be completed by a British company.

A subsidiary company of African Theatres, African Film Productions, Ltd., is responsible for the weekly production of the

MGM Gets Product into 70 Theatres, Including 30 Subsidiaries of African Consolidated; Also Has Own House

African Mirror, a silent newsreel of events in the country. Occasionally, a picture is made of some special event—otherwise the production side of the business in South Africa is still in its infancy.

Oppose U. S. Distributors

American distributors and theatre executives in New York this week were hesitant to discuss the South African situation. Since sound came into practical usage throughout the English-speaking world, South Africa has presented the most formidable opposition—through the Schlesingers—to development of that field by American film organizations. If terms laid down by the Schlesinger monopoly were not acceptable to distributors attempting to open up the South African market, the Schlesingers went elsewhere for their product—chiefly to minor independents both in this country and in England—which was bought outright and sold to independent theatres in the territory on a plan similar to the state rights method utilized in this country. According to foreign managers of American motion picture companies, little time and effort is spent by the Schlesingers in program building, product being shunted into a company-owned theatre regardless of suitability.

The Schlesingers—who also control the banking, real estate, pineapple, citrus fruit, and radio industries in South Africa—were the first to introduce the cafe or restaurant as an important factor in motion picture entertainment. In almost every one of their houses, the film program is interrupted intermittently with announcements from the screen that refreshments are being served. Nor is there, according to one American executive, any resumption of the film until a sizeable portion of the audience has visited the cafe.

291 Theatres in South Africa

There are only eight cities of any size in South Africa. These are Johannesburg, Durban, Pretoria, Cape Town, Beulawayo, Pietermaritzburg, Bloemfontein and East London. In these, and smaller towns, there are 291 motion picture theatres, comprising all the theatres in the country. Of these, 195 are wired for sound, an indeterminate majority being controlled and operated by the Schlesingers.

MGM has the one theatre, the Metro, in Johannesburg, as mentioned. The company recently signed a contract with United Artists whereby its product will be distributed in South Africa by MGM, the only American distributor handling its affairs in that country from an established office.

Reorganize Inspiration

Reorganization plans for Inspiration Pictures are under way and a new company with capital of $750,000 is to be formed shortly, it was announced this week. Walter Camp will be financially interested in the new company, which, according to tentative plans, will make three specials a year.

Ludington To Coast

Nicholas S. Ludington, president of First Division's production branch, plans to leave New York for Hollywood after Christmas.

Creditors Await Board Completion

Important creditors of Paramount Publix this week said that because they believe the success of the company's reorganization plan will depend almost entirely upon the management of the corporate affairs, they will not give their formal approval to the plan until the remaining members of the new directorate have been definitely selected.

Only nine directors have been selected thus far. They are: Gerald Brooks, Duncan Harris, Percy N. Johnston, Julius Klein, Henry R. Luce, Charles A. McCulloch, Maurice Newton, Frank A. Vanderlip and Adolph Zukor.

The reorganization plan provides for a minimum directorate of 12 and a maximum of 20.

Circuit Adjustments Near

Moving closer to final readjustment of their affairs, the Saenger circuit, comprising 47 theatres, last week submitted a plan of reorganization to Special Master John E. Joyce in New York, and the M. E. Comerford circuit of 61 houses submitted a petition for federal court approval of a revised financial agreement, which was granted.

The Saenger reorganization plan, which includes both Saenger Theatres and Saenger Realty, provides for a five-year operation of the circuit with E. V. Richards. It was taken under advisement by Mr. Joyce following a hearing Thursday.

The plan calls for organization of a new Saenger company which will issue a like amount of bonds to the holders of approximately $1,500,000 of old bonds of Saenger Theatres and $1,000,000 of Saenger Realty. Past due interest on the bonds will be paid, but the new company will not be obliged to make provision for a $300,000 sinking fund for the first three years unless sufficient earnings accrue. After that period, however, fixed provisions for a sinking fund will be effective.

General creditors and lessors of Saenger are to receive subordinated notes payable out of income for their claims. Approximately $260,000 of lessors' claims, however, representing the bulk of those filed in the reorganization proceedings, have been acquired by Arklamiss Corp., Paramount subsidiary, for $35,000.

Trustees Would Drop Claims

Under terms of the plan the Paramount Publix trustees will relinquish their claims against Saenger, pay reorganization costs and turn in their stockholdings in the old Saenger company in return for $1,500,000 of debentures and all the common stock of the new company. Then, under the five-year management agreement with E. V. Richards, the trustees will turn over to him all of the Class A stock, representing a one-half interest in the new company, and will retain for Paramount all of the Class B stock.

Mr. Richards will become president and general manager of the new company, which will be the holding company for subsidiaries operating 47 theatres in Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Florida and Texas.

The Comerford agreement, which was approved by Federal Judge Alfred C. Coxe, provides for retirement of Paramount's obligations remaining from its acquisition of the 61 Penncom theatres from M. E. and M. B. Comerford and Frank C. Walker in 1930. Retirement of 55,330 shares of Class A stock outstanding with a par value of $5,533,000, held by the Comerford group, will be made from net receipts of the circuit. No dividends are to be paid on the stock of the company, the Class B shares of which are owned by Paramount, prior to January 1, 1938. Operation of the circuit by the Comerford group is provided for,

Hal Roach and Schenck Competing in Racetracks

Hal Roach and Joseph M. Schenck are staging a "battle of the century" in the turf racing field on the West Coast. On Christmas day Mr. Roach will open his Santa Anita racetrack and Mr. Schenck will open the gates at Agua Caliente five days later.

This is the first time Mr. Schenck has encountered serious opposition to his sporting pastime; until a year ago he had the field entirely to himself.

Mr. Roach announced the initial race at his track will be for $100,000. He said he intends to take the winter play away from Florida, where the best event carded is a $15,000 derby.

MPPDA Sends Muto to Capital; Boettiger Added

Anthony Muto was assigned this week by the Motion Pictures Producers and Distributors of America to the Washington office for a period. He has been working out of headquarters in New York on the public relations staff.

At the same time an addition was made to the public relations staff of the MPPDA in the person of John Boettiger, former Washington correspondent for the Chicago Tribune, for which publication he has been writing about national politics for some 10 years, more recently covering the White House. Mr. Boettiger arrived in New York late Monday.

In reporting Mr. Boettiger's appointment, the daily press insisted upon taking cognizance of his reputed engagement to President Roosevelt's daughter, Anna, formerly Mrs. Curtis Dall.

Mr. Muto was variously engaged in reporting for New York newspapers and covered the Riff uprising in North Africa for the London Telegraph. Later he was assigned by that newspaper to the Druse Rebellion in Syria and to the Japanese attack on Shanghai. He wrote publicity for the Italian State Airways, coming to New York early in 1933 to the staff of the MPPDA.

Meanwhile in Kansas City colleagues were attending a farewell luncheon to the Reverend Irvin E. Deer upon his departure from an executive post with the Kansas City Council of Churches for New York, where, as announced two weeks ago, he will work for the Hays organization.

Kirchner Variety Club Head

Edgar E. Kirchner of Allied Theatres, and manager of the Family theatre, Detroit, has been elected president of the local Variety Club for 1935, succeeding John E. Flynn. M. J. Caplan was elected first vice-president and J. O. Brooks second vice-president. The annual ball will be held February 23.

Fox Kidnap Suspect Freed

Maurice Monnier, accused of having sent a letter to Mrs. William Fox, threatening to kidnap her two grandchildren if money was not given him, was acquitted in Brooklyn federal court by a jury in a second trial.

Warner Officers Are Re-elected

All officers of Warner Brothers were formally continued in their present posts at the annual election meeting of the company directorate in New York Tuesday. There was only one minor change which resulted in an exchange of positions between Cyril H. Wilder, who had been serving as an assistant treasurer, and Paul A. Chase, who had been an assistant secretary.

The other officers are:

Harry Warner, president; Albert and Jack Warner, Sam E. Morris and Herman Starr, vice-presidents; Albert Warner, treasurer; Samuel Carlisle, W. Stewart McDonald, assistant treasurers; Abel Cary Thomas, secretary and general counsel; Harold S. Bareford, Edward K. Hessberg, assistant secretaries; Samuel Carlisle, comptroller, and Thomas J. Martin, auditor.

Albert Warner presided.

Gering Drops Conspiracy Case Against Companies

Charges of conspiracy against major distributors brought by George C. Gering of the Rosewood theatre in Chicago were thrown out by the Code Authority Tuesday when the adjourned complaint came up for appeal.

The case had been heard the week before by a Code Authority committee and was called again for this week. The case was withdrawn at the request of Harold J. Sherman of Feitelson & Mayer, who represented Mr. Gering, less than one minute after the hearing had started.

Reported Loew Invasion Of Chicago Denied There

A reported invasion by Loew's of the Chicago neighborhood field was denied this week by Aaron Jones, Chicago circuit operator, who said Loew's would find it difficult to break into exhibition there unless it built a circuit of new theatres.

Chicago circuits are opposing MGM's insistence upon percentage and Saturday and Sunday playing time, but Mr. Jones denied that he had negotiated a Loew tieup on his recent trip to New York.

Bomb Cuban Agency

The Midtown Agency, Universal's Cuban representative in Havana, was bombed Monday night, along with 40 other establishments covering a wide range of businesses, by terrorists, according to word received in New York Tuesday by N. L. Manheim, Universal foreign chief.

Hall Makes Bow on Radio

Mordaunt Hall, former motion picture reviewer of the New York Times, has been signed for a series of National Broadcasting Company broadcasts, through WEAf, the New York outlet. Mr. Hall will be heard each Monday at 1:30 p. m. His subject is: "Screen Players and Plays."

Circuit Moves Office

Prudential theatre circuit, New York, has moved its offices from 630 Ninth avenue to the Paramount Building.

ASIDES & INTERLUDES

By JAMES CUNNINGHAM

Venezia Palace in Rome, the dignified edifice where the stern and bombastic Benito Mussolini spends his office hours, was disturbed the other day by the visit of our banjo-eyed comedian, Eddie Cantor, who had arrived for an interview with Il Duce.

Apparently not knowing that the business of running a country in Continental Europe is a serious one in these days of war talk and war threats, Eddie admitted in an Associated Press dispatch that he thought he was going into Premier Mussolini's office "to have some fun." But, added Eddie, "I saw he was interested far more in doing something that was good for Italy than just cracking jokes."

We recall Mr. Cantor's visit with the President at Warm Springs, Georgia, last fall. The President later named him to the motion picture Code Authority to represent the players in code matters. Mr. Cantor sailed two weeks ago for a merry trip through Europe the while these same fellow actors were in the heat of a battle with producers over their rights under the code. Evidently his visit to Warm Springs was in the capacity of court jester.

HOLLYWOOD TRYING HARD TO IMPROVE ITS MIND

Sitting underneath this headline revelation in New York newspapers were some gratifying remarks by little Kitty Carlisle about the progress being made in Hollywood by our film folk toward acquiring enough of an education at least to enable them to read and write.

"The movie stars are all reading and trying to improve their minds," reported pretty Kitty, who had just arrived in New York from a screen appearance at Warners, or Paramount—or someplace. Then, as if she had suddenly remembered that it is good policy to develop the good will of studio executives when one is trying to further a starring career, Kitty added . . . "And the producers are trying to improve their minds, too."

Hollywood's motion picture "extra" players have participated in many weird spectacles, but none more dramatically strange than that staged the other night by the Central Casting Bureau—producer controlled—at the Carthay Circle theatre in Los Angeles. The occasion was supposed to be the final of the series of auditions from which they selected the best dress-type extras, those selected to be permanently recorded in the files of Central Casting; the others probably will starve. The public was invited to witness the parade of players across the Carthay stage, this apparently being intended to demonstrate that in the final selection there was to be no skulduggery, no favoritism and that everything was to be on the up-and-up.

Condemned even before it was presented, the lack of tact and consideration for the lowly extra was anticipated by Ben Bard, actor, who courageously consented to assume the ticklish job of master of ceremonies. In addressing the audience, Mr. Bard, sensing its tenseness, remarked, "Please realize how difficult the ordeal must be to the people, important factors in motion pictures, who will pass before you. For this I extend my sympathy." Then, turning dramatically to the male extras, Ben quipped, "I'd be there with you myself, boys, but I couldn't get a muffler and spats."

Darryl Zanuck, short and skinny cigar-smoking producer of Twentieth Century Pictures, will present to the motion picture theatre on Christmas Day a picturization of incidents in the colorful life of the Prince of Humbugs—Phineas Taylor Barnum.

"P. T.'s" spectacular career in the show world started some hundred years ago. His method at that time was to get the country embroiled in a heated argument over the age and authenticity of one Joice Heth, a wizened old Negress slave who was said to be 160 years old and George Washington's nurse at birth.

Mr. Barnum was exhibiting the old lady in his first side show. Receipts began to fall off in Boston and he instituted a controversy which was picked up in papers and pulpits, having inserted advertisements, signed "A Visitor," in which the anonymous (Barnum) complained that not only was the ancient slave a humbug, but that she was really made of India rubber, whalebone and hidden springs and that the exhibitor was a ventriloquist hidden in the mechanism. Barnum saw to it that the fight over his exhibit's genuineness was prolonged, and crowds stormed his show parlor.

A sharp incision of the scalpel when Joice died revealed the first Barnum fraud—one which lacked by 80 years the 160 years with which Barnum had accredited her.

Lucille La Verne portrays Joice Heth in the Zanuck version. For the part, her face had to be a brown corrugation of wrinkles and deep hollows, acquired by applying a coating of heavy glue over the surface of both face and arms. This was followed by an application of undertaker's wax, which is pink. Over that went the old woman's color—a layer of ordinary brown grease paint. Next came an application of liquid rubber, which, when dry, became transparent enough to show the brown paint. As the rubber dried it broke into countless wrinkles and cracks and drew the skin tight, as in old age. Then brown water color was painted on. Finally, thin silk strips were glued on at the corners of the eyes to narrow them into crone-like slits. The process took six hours to complete. Miss La Verne appears in the makeup for less than six minutes.

Al Greene, supervisor for the Rugoff and Becker independent circuit on Long Island and Brooklyn, calls our attention—with a blush—to a typographical error appearing in the program of their Oceana theatre, at Brighton Beach, where announcement of the giving of chinaware was made in the program in this accidental manner:

FASTIDIOUS HOUSEWIVES

whose panties are filled with choice tableware, are invited to increase their service by adding a

Silhouette
Dinnerware
Set (Free)

"We have been the recipient of an endless stream of telephone calls as well as personal visits of patrons, particularly ladies," wrote Mr. Greene, "who have brought to our attention the non-appearance of the letter 'r' in the word 'panties.'"

Jack Moffitt was describing the party staged recently in Hollywood by the Fox studio for Mr. and Mrs. Winthrop Aldrich, Nelson Rockefeller and an assortment of other bankers and capitalists. The proceedings were stopped for a moment when Stepin Fetchit, Negro player, ran a lazy eye over the plutocratic guests and chirped: "Boy! What a place for a crap game!"

The Santa Fe dining service was deprived of considerable revenue by the enterprise and foresight of Jake Wilk, Warners' eastern story editor, who acted as quartermaster of the Warner party traveling to the coast.

Before boarding the CHIEF at Chicago, Wilk went on a foraging expedition and stocked up on certain gustatory delights well known in some places but not obtainable on the train. As the CHIEF thundered toward Kansas City, the Warner legion, seven in number and including Mr. and Mrs. Harry M. Warner and members of the family, Andy Smith, Charlie Einfeld and Wilk, filed into the dining car and awaited service.

"Pickled herring and pumpernickle for all," was Wilk's order when the steward came around. "You'll find them both in my compartment."

The steward's eyes popped, but he fetched the pungent delicacy and served the party.

"Next course is corn beef, peppered," announced Quartermaster Wilk when the herring was finished, and the steward made another trip to the private commissary.

The corn beef annihilated, Wilk, still acting as master of ceremonies, pronounced: "Now we'll buy some coffee."

A chatter column says Hollywood stars are installing secret panels in their living rooms which permit them to speak to their servants. Which caused Ted Cook to observe, "They ought to perfect a gadget which would permit actors to speak to their wives."

And to old friends who knew them when.

Traveling "Down Memory Lane" in the Hearst newspapers, last Saturday afternoon, six-foot tall and paunchy Wallace Beery told of the days, 30 years ago, when he broke into theatricals as a nursemaid to a troupe of elephants, for which the old Forepaugh-Sells Circus paid him $3.50 per week, plus "grub." One of Beery's best friends in those rough and tumble days of the road was a bull elephant named Maggie, who worked with him in the show. One afternoon a black panther got loose before the matinee. Wallace was in the "big top" when he saw the wild cat coming straight for him. Maggie was out in the menagerie tent and Beery scooted through the runway like a deer, reaching Maggie just as the big cat got to him. Beery's arm was ripped as he dived behind the big bull, but that was the end of the panther. Maggie caught him in his trunk and lifted him clear through the top of the tent.

Last September, when Beery was making "The Mighty Barnum" for Darryl Zanuck, they had a troupe of ten elephants in the picture. One of the elephants was Maggie, and—you guessed it—he recognized his old pal Beery. Mr. Beery is not "hi-hat," nor has he gone Hollywood, but he did NOT take Maggie home with him—Mrs. Beery saw to that.

There's more stirring drama in Louis Sobol's five-line story from life about Gene Lawrence than can be packed into five cans of celluloid. It seems that Lawrence, crack sports writer for International News Service, informed by the doctors that he had only one month at the most to live, kept his fate a secret from his wife and took her and their two children to Florida for one last glorious month together. There he died the other day . . . leaving his children and their mother destitute.

FILMS WITHSTOOD DEPRESSION BEST, CORPORATION TAXES SHOW

1930 Better Theatre Year Than the Four Preceding, Revenue Bureau Reports; Decentraliz- ing Reflected in 1932 Figures

Corporation taxes collected from the motion picture industry for 1932 were at a low level, with comparatively few companies showing taxable income, it was disclosed in figures made public this week by the Internal Revenue Bureau at Washington, reflecting the effect of the depression out of which all businesses now are making headway.

Motion picture theatre corporations, together with a few dozen legitimate theatres, paid taxes totaling $1,961,000, compared with $2,768,000 in 1931 and a high of $4,943,000 in 1930, $4,799,000 in 1929, and $4,649,000 in 1928.

The figures disclosed that, as a result of the large circuit operators' frantic attempts to divest themselves of houses when the depression finally struck home, the number of theatre corporations increased from 2,840 in 1931 to 3,101 in 1932, although in the case of companies operating in 1931 only 1,349 had taxable income, while in 1932 only 765 had taxable income.

It is to be noted that individual theatre companies reporting net income in the tabulations in the adjoining columns are not, necessarily, individual theatres. One such company reporting might control any number of houses.

Withstood Depression Longer

The bureau's report revealed that the theatrical industries withstood the depression much longer than did general manufacturing activities. The peak years of the manufacturers were 1927 and 1928. The stock market tumble came in October of 1929. In the motion picture business, the theatre branch showed 1930 as its best in the five-year period ending with that year. In the production branch 1929 was the best. Gross receipts were heavier in 1930, but expenses increased so sharply as to bring the tax liability down.

The year 1931 was the point where the film industry started to feel the worst effects of the depression.

Gross receipts of 195 film producing corporations in 1932 were $190,795,000, as against $441,948,000 reported by 199 producing corporations in 1931 and $410,700,000 reported by 208 corporations in 1930.

The tables in the adjoining column give in detail the financial position of these groups for 1928 to 1932, inclusive.

Billion Admissions in Britain

Approximately a billion film theatre admissions were paid in the British Isles during 1933, for a total of $201,000,000, according to data presented to a recent meeting of the British Association Economics Section in Aberdeen, Scotland, said a United Press dispatch this week.

Pirandello Wants To Reorganize Hollywood

Luigi Pirandello, Italian playwright and winner of this year's Nobel Prize in literature, announced this week in Praha, Czechoslovakia, that he is going to Hollywood soon to attempt a revolution in the artistic value of pictures.

"I will attempt to give modern films a new impulse, making the idea supreme over material superficialities," Signor Pirandello is reported as saying.

"I am convinced that the theatre need not fear the films, since the films will never become one of the chief sources of culture. They will, however, remain an important part of cultural life and as such must be promoted."

Hollywood will be awaiting his arrival.

POSTER SERIES, FREE TO EXHIBITOR, WILL CEMENT GOODWILL OF PUBLIC

Series of Six Drawings by M. Leone Bracker Will Be Mailed, Once a Month, to 12,000 Theatres by MPPDA

In an unprecedented drive to cement further the goodwill between the industry and the 80,000,000 theatregoers, within the next six weeks the first of a series of six highly artistic posters will be mailed to each of the 12,000 theatres now in operation. The posters will be sent also to other English-speaking countries. It is the plan of the industry, as outlined by the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, to have every theatre exhibit the posters in a preferred position in the lobby. The posters will be released once monthly for six months. There will be no cost to exhibitors.

The posters, created by M. Leone Bracker, one of the country's leading illustrators, are to be of such artistic excellence that the public's appreciation is assured. Each poster will carry a message dramatizing the service of the screen to all types of persons.

Not only is it planned to make this unusual series the highest type of art work, but every exhibitor will be given the entire series at absolutely no expense. The cost of the entire campaign, amounting to many thousands of dollars, will be borne entirely by the MPPDA member companies. In return the exhibitor will be requested to make a display of the poster in keeping with its artistic quality.

Many of the leading theatres in New York have signified their intention of displaying the posters in special gold frames, with spotlights to enhance the effectiveness and beauty of the art work.

It is planned to mail the finished posters direct from the printers to each individual theatre at intervals of about a month. The first of the series, titled "Forgetting a Thousand Cares," is now in the hands of one of the most expert art printers in the land. The first run will be completed within the next few weeks. A month later the second poster will be received. It is believed that many theatre operators will continue to exhibit the earlier poster, too, eventually making an art display of the entire series of six.

For the convenience of the average exhibitor, the posters are to be made regulation one-sheet upright size, 28x42. They will be in four or five colors, with Artist Bracker's drawings in a red duo-tone. The entire job will be executed in a new process insuring the finest art reproduction obtainable.

M. Leone Bracker, the artist, for years has won the admiration of millions with his crayon and charcoal drawings. During the World war he drew a great number of posters for the Government, for patriotic, relief and money-raising purposes. Many are sure to recall his "Keep 'Em Smiling," one of the most widely used posters during the war. Another, "Behold Your Enemy," in the early days of the war, won the Government prize for black and white posters. Bracker created America's national Peace Poster for the Geneva Conference. His war posters hung in the collections of the late King of Belgium and of the Emperor of Japan, and may be found in the archives of all the Allied nations.

Bracker's industrial series have won him no little fame. He created the "Washington Inspirational" series for the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad. The "Lincoln Memorial" of this series was hung in the White House. His General Motors Family series won the Bok-Harvard Award for institutional advertising, and his "Velvet Joe" tobacco series likewise is well remembered. For the Canadian Pacific Railway he did a series which linked the building of the railroad with the building of Canada. Bracker also has done many drawings for church and allied causes. An early poster on women's suffrage was referred to by the Literary Digest as "one of the three exceptional things to bring women's suffrage to New York State."

Following is the official committee in charge of the special poster series:

Howard Dietz, S. Charles Einfeld, Paul Gulick, Robert M. Gillham, Charles E. McCarthy, Hal Horne, S. Barret McCormick, Herschel Stuart, P. L. Thompson, Gordon S. White.

Al Smith Heads Council of Legion In New York Area

Cardinal Hayes of New York has selected a council of 14 prominent Catholic laymen, headed by former governor Alfred E. Smith, to aid in the activity of the motion picture Legion of Decency against objectionable films. The announcement came from the chancery office of the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of New York.

The group will be known as the Council of the Legion of Decency of the Archdiocese of New York, and will formulate plans for the functioning of the organization in the territory, according to the Rev. Dr. J. Francis A. McIntyre, chancellor of the archdiocese.

Besides Mr. Smith, the council includes seven members from Manhattan, and a like number from the remaining counties in the archdiocese, Bronx, Richmond, Westchester, Dutchess, Putnam, Orange, Rockland, Sullivan and Ulster.

The members of the council are as follows:

JAMES A. FARRELL, former president of the United States Steel Corporation.

GEORGE MACDONALD, papal marquis.

JOHN P. O'BRIEN, former mayor of New York.

MORGAN J. O'BRIEN, attorney.

MARTIN QUIGLEY, publisher of Motion Picture Herald and Motion Picture Daily.

JOHN J. RASKOB, former chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

ALFRED TALLEY, former judge of the court of general sessions.

JAMES DONNELLY, for the Bronx.

WILLIAM T. FETHERSTON, former justice of the court of special session, for Richmond.

Justice WILLIAM F. BLEAKLEY, of the supreme court, for Westchester.

JOHN E. MACK, Poughkeepsie, former supreme court justice, for Dutchess and Putnam.

ARTHUR O'LEARY, for Orange and Rockland.

GEORGE COOK, for Sullivan.

JAMES DWYER, for Ulster.

The council was to hold its first meeting in New York on Thursday at a luncheon at the Empire State Building, with Mr. Smith, as chairman, presiding. It is expected the meeting will be for the purpose of organization only.

Roxy-Mastbaum Opens

The Mastbaum theatre in Philadelphia, under the direction of S. L. (Roxy) Rothafel, will be opened formally on Sunday evening, December 23.

Business done in twelve key cities in the first four months of the new seasons of 1932, '33 and '34 is pictured in the chart, based upon Motion Picture Herald's weekly compilation of box office grosses. The period covered starts with September through the week of December 8. The 12 cities are Boston, Chicago, Cleveland, Hollywood, Kansas City, Los Angeles, Minneapolis, New York, Oklahoma City, Omaha, Portland, Ore., and San Francisco. The average weekly gross from these cities during the entire year 1933 is taken as 100 per cent.

Equity Approves Guild Agreement

The voting membership of the Actors' Equity Association on Monday in New York approved the proposed contract with the Screen Actors' Guild giving the Guild complete jurisdiction over motion picture actors. The meeting was attended by 486 Equity members and the oral vote on the Guild contract was passed with but two or three dissenting votes.

The agreement between Equity and the Guild provides, among other things, that Equity retain all its present jurisdiction, except in the motion picture field and that the Guild have complete autonomy, its own officers, basic documents and by-laws.

There is also a stipulation which provides that neither party shall have the right to call a strike of members of the other party, but that in the event a strike is called by either party in its field, the other party will direct its members not to work in such field and will discipline them if they do. In addition, under the contract's terms, members of Equity acting in motion pictures will be required by Equity to join the Guild, and members of the Guild acting on the legitimate stage will be required by the Guild to join Equity.

Fox Metropolitan Plan Is Presented

A reorganization plan was filed for the Fox Metropolitan Playhouses in New York this week. Filing last week failed when Archibald Palmer, counsel for a group of the circuit's independent bondholders, appeared in Judge Julian W. Mack's U. S. district court and said the group had been unable to draw up a plan. Judge Mack ordered an extension.

Both Mr. Palmer and Milton J. Weisman, counsel for claimants of $5,778,000, objected to further delay. Mr. Weisman, however, asked the court for a two weeks' postponement during which he planned to draw up a plan of his own.

Following the adjournment, Mr. Palmer charged that Halsey, Stuart & Co. dominated Fox Metropolitan immediately prior to its receivership in 1932 and now dominates its reorganization activities through control of the bondholders' committee, and asked leave of the U. S. court of appeals to examine officers of the bondholders' committee. Decision was reserved.

On the Coast, National Theatres will continue operation of Paramount's theatres there under a 10-year plan in the circuit's reorganization deal.

MGM NET JUMPS TO $4,702,257; 255% ABOVE 1933'S $1,326,827

Seven Per Cent Preferred Earns $31.26 in Year Ended August 31, 1934, Compared with $8.61 in 1933, $18.78 in 1932

Net profits of $4,702,257, after all charges and taxes, for the 12 months ended August 31, 1934, are announced by Metro-Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, motion picture producing and distributing subsidiary of Loew's, Inc. Last year MGM earned $1,326,827, and in 1932 it reported profits of $2,965,975. The new statement of earnings reflected the continuance, even improvement, of the management's success in operations, and the extent of the progress being made by the motion picture industry in emerging from the business recession.

The 7 per cent preferred stock (par $27) earned $31.26 in the fiscal year ended August 31, 1934, compared with $8.61 in 1933 and $18.78 in 1932, the company's business increasing from $30,297,404 grossed from operations in 1932 and $25,507,508 in 1933, to $31,175,696 in the year ended August 31, 1934. In addition, the company paid common stock dividends—all of the issue being controlled by Loew's, Inc.—of $3,500,000 in 1934, as compared with $3,100,000 each year in 1932 and 1933.

Metro-Goldwyn Pictures and its wholly owned subsidiaries are controlled by Loew's through the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Company, Inc. The parent Loew's company netted $7,479,897 in the year ended last August; of this slightly less than 50 per cent—$3,500,000—was paid in by Metro in fulfilling its common stock obligations.

Current and working assets August 31 were up more than $4,000,000 over 1932 and 1933, when their value was set down as $26,687,000 and $26,257,000 respectively, compared with $30,724,439 last August. Cash on hand this year totaled $1,642,222, slightly less than the $1,981,438 on hand in August of 1933, but $400,000 more than the $1,250,031 cash available in 1932.

Too, the company's production progress at this time, represented by pictures in production, completed and/or in release, is considerably further advanced than in previous years, the report showing such assets as worth $24,001,000, after amortization, as compared with $19,894,000 in 1933 and $20,496,000 in 1932.

Property held was valued at $10,856,218, less depreciation reserves, against net worth of $7,001,000 in 1933 and $7,480,000 in 1932.

Total assets were: 1934, $45,160,000; 1933, $40,617,000, and $41,817,000 in 1932.

Current liabilities of $4,158,000 on August 31, 1934, which were related to current assets at a 7½ to 1 ratio, compared with current liabilities of $3,481,000 in 1933 and $3,067,000 in 1932.

Metro-Goldwyn Pictures Corporation and wholly owned subsidiaries added $4,702,257 to surplus on August 31, increasing surplus to $13,202,547.

Sixth New England Fire Damages House in Maine

The sixth major motion picture theatre fire within five days took place in New England early this week when the Strand at Skowhegan, Me., was damaged to the extent of $10,000. Defective wiring is believed to have been the cause of the blaze, which was discovered after an explosion blasted open the exits.

Denies Chesterfield Is Involved in London Deal

George Batcheller, Jr., sales manager of Chesterfield Pictures, said this week that a London report linking Chesterfield to a proposed new producing, distributing and exhibiting organization in Great Britain is without foundation. "Chesterfield is not involved in any merger move," he said. "I have no idea where or how the story originated."

The report from London declared the new company would include Julius Hagen and Twickenham Productions, the Sound City producing unit of Shepperton, and Oscar Deutch, theatre builder and operator, who has opened approximately 50 houses in England during the past year.

Hoffberg Gets Rights

J. H. Hoffberg has acquired the foreign distribution rights to seven Showmen Pictures and five produced by Willis Kent.

Schenck Denies Selznick Will Leave MGM Position

Nicholas M. Schenck, president of MGM, en route to New York after studio conferences, declared in Chicago early this week that David O. Selznick, associate producer, who had been reported about to leave the company, will remain with MGM. "Selznick definitely will remain with us," he said. "He can be with us as long as the association is mutually satisfactory." Mr. Schenck also denied reports that Irving Thalberg planned a trip to Europe in February, a denial which likewise was made by Mr. Thalberg in Hollywood.

Piazza Named Assistant To Cohen at Paramount

Ben Piazza, formerly in charge of casting at the MGM Coast studio, has joined Paramount as an assistant to Emanuel Cohen, in charge of production. He succeeds Mel Shauer, who will become an advisor on sales problems in connection with the distribution of pictures in the foreign market.

Balaban & Katz Resume Payment of Preferred Stock

For the first time in almost two years Balaban & Katz, Chicago, will resume dividend payments on the seven per cent preferred stock. Three quarterly dividends of $1.75 per share each have been authorized, covering the first three quarters of 1933.

BRITISH FEAR MORE REGULATION FROM PARLIAMENT IN THE SPRING

Proposals for State Censorship and Broader Control of The- atre Wages and Working Conditions Are Expected

By BRUCE ALLAN
London Correspondent

Facing the probability that the Government will introduce in the spring a consolidating Act of Parliament to unify the various laws relating to the industry, motion picture folk here are beginning to talk of the necessity of organizing to see that trade interests are properly safeguarded.

Some of the steps which probably will be taken by the Government have the hearty support of the trade. An instance is the new scope of safety regulations. Assuming that the actual obligations on the exhibitor are unaltered, there is enthusiastic support for the principle of applying the same rule to every building in which films are shown, whether they are inflammable or "non-flam." The regulations are to be sent to trade associations for criticism, and they are likely to encounter less from Wardour Street than from educational bodies.

Not so likely to meet with trade approval are two suggestions put forward at a House of Commons meeting of Members of Parliament interested in film matters. One is that a state censorship should be embodied in the new Act, and the other proposes more definite stipulations regarding cinema staffs. A fixed ratio between possible patronage and the number of attendants was discussed.

Widening Legislation Feared

So far as censorship goes, it seems likely that the British Board of Film Censors, which has survived many political attacks, again will be endorsed by the Government. There is no doubt that it censors at least as effectively as any official department could be expected to do, and that it is always receptive to semi-official suggestions; while it provides the Government with the fact of censorship without the odium, it is unlikely to be sacrificed.

There is more disquiet about the Parliamentary tendency to lay down the law in staff matters. The necessities of public safety justify a degree of interference with the internal workings of a cinema theatre which would not be suggested for any other industry and, on that ground, cannot be resented. What a great many exhibitors fear is that the principle of staff control, once admitted, may be applied in unexpected ways. There is already a strong trade union movement to have theatre wages and working conditions regulated by Parliament. This degree of interference is probably unlikely from the present Government but what if the new Act provides legal means by which a labor government, a few years hence, can enforce wage standards and limit hours?

It is not stated that the vexed question of Sunday opening will be included in the "omnibus" act. To deal with it a repeal of the recent Sunday Entertainments Act also would be necessary. It is significant that many exhibitors are beginning to think that this enactment should either be denounced or rendered inoperative by trade action.

The truth is that the industry is beginning to realize that, in accepting the very partial powers of Sunday opening conferred by this Act, it made a very bad bargain. A public vote has to be won in the first instance and then the exhibitor has to face a heavy deduction from receipts for "charity." Working it out, a number of theatre proprietors believe that, when the lost week day takings are taken into account, Sunday shows represent a smaller instead of a bigger weekly net.

There is now a tendency to suggest a fighting policy of voluntary closure on Sunday and an appeal to the public to support the exhibitor's perfectly logical claim to be allowed to make a full profit by supplying a demonstrated public need. This action has been discussed before; at the time the Sunday Entertainments Act was passed, the answer was that London exhibitors could not exist without Sunday takings and that they must accept them on the most favorable terms available. The argument doesn't seem quite so strong today, with the charity percentage showing a steady upward tendency and weekly receipts in many instances a move in the opposite direction.

Burden on Exhibitors

Unfortunately, the trade's eagerness for half a loaf in 1932 has put on the statute books a law which has given a vested interest in Sunday receipts to various charities and to the British Film Institute, which draws $25,000 a year from this source, and it has left the exhibitor the burden of fighting sabbatarian opposition before he can open at all.

Altogether, it's a pretty kettle of fish, and one can only surmise what would happen if exhibitors declared a Sunday "strike" and demanded a seven days license, subject only to a favorable local poll. There is no doubt that many exhibitors think that a fighting policy should have been adopted in 1932, and that the impending revision of film legislation offers just a possible chance of making it effective now.

There is no getting away from the fact that, in London alone, $100,000 per annum, paid at the box office for entertainment, is taken from the industry's no longer elastic resources.

Confirmation of reports that First Division and Wardour Films, distributor of British International Pictures, are discussing a reciprocal releasing arrangement was given by Arthur Dent of Wardour's. Mr. Dent added that a definite agreement had not yet been reached.

Anne Neagle, as a sequel to her success in "Nell Gwyn," has been cast by Herbert Wilcox for the leading role in an adaptation of Balfe's "The Bohemian Girl," to be made by British & Dominion immediately under the title "The Girl from Bohemia." A

Ostrer Consents to Query

Mark Ostrer agreed to the appointment of a committee to investigate the management of General Theatres last week following stormy scenes at a meeting of stockholders of General Theatres. Holders of preference shares are now in control of General, since the company has fallen in arrears on dividend payments. The condition has temporarily blocked discussion on the Gaumont-British plan for reorganization of the company. The committee will investigate General's financial condition, its accounts and the Gaumont reorganization plan.

The preliminary plans for Mack Sennett Productions, Ltd., include a capitalization of £350,000, made up of five-shilling ordinary shares, of which 300,000 will go to Sennett. His agreement also includes a five-year contract as managing director at £5,000 per year. Six features and one special per year are scheduled, including one featuring Scott and Black, England to Australia fliers. Also planned is an insurance policy on Sennett's life, for £250,000. The company plans its own distribution.

Music in the Air

(Fox)

Operetta

Preserving well all the lively, engaging and highly tuneful melody which characterized the original operetta on the New York stage, the producers have made an enjoyable picture of the adaptation. There is selling fodder in the names of the concocters of that music, and in the numbers themselves. Jerome Kern did the music and Oscar Hammerstein II wrote the libretto and the lyrics.

With the light romantic story, of general appeal, vivacious comedy keeps pace. The appearance, her first for some time, of Gloria Swanson in the nominal lead, may in itself serve as a selling factor, while the manner and variety of style of the clothes she wears is something for exploitation. In support are John Boles, June Lang and Douglass Montgomery. All four sing, in solo and duet, and for the most part sing well. The melody, "Every Little Star," already a hit, runs through the film, and is widely known.

The story has something of a dual romantic theme, with the prima donna, Miss Swanson, and the celebrated lyricist, Boles, in a continuous and rather amusing cat-and-dog-fight romance, and Miss Lang and Montgomery, the unsophisticates from the country, encountering difficulties in the completion of their own idyllic love affair. Smart and sympathy-inspiring comedy and drama are supplied by Al Shean, Reginald Owen and Joseph Cawthorn.

The setting alternates between a village in the Bavarian mountains and the gay and lively city of Munich. The gay melody threads its way through the entire story, imparting a sparkle which adds much to the entertainment value of the picture.

Montgomery, young village school teacher, is in love with Miss Lang, daughter of Shean, local composer, for whom Montgomery writes lyrics, inspired by that love. At the same time that the village council decides to send Shean to Munich to gain recognition through his old school chum, now a famed music publisher (played by Owen), Montgomery accompanies the mountain climbing club to Munich. There, in Owen's office, a battle is raging, as Miss Swanson, singer, and Boles, lyricist, tear the office apart in pursuit of their jealous, excited romance.

When the three from the country arrive, Miss Swanson is taken with the upstanding young man, and Boles with the blond prettiness of Miss Lang. Both the victims are affected by the attention shown them, and four-cornered trouble is in the air. Meanwhile rehearsals go on for the operetta planned, and when Miss Swanson refuses to play the lead, Boles prevails upon the management to permit Miss Lang to take the part. She fails miserably in rehearsal, and she and Shean return downcast to their village, Lang's song having been considerably twisted by Cawthorn, Owen's musical director, who provides laughter and drama in the clever handling of his role.

Montgomery walks out on Miss Swanson, tiring of her sophisticated love-making, and returns home after a final squabble with Miss Lang, when he tells her she is no good as an actress. Having learned her lesson, she and Montgomery are reunited, and Lang hears his song in the operetta, to which Miss Swanson has returned.—AARONSON, New York.

The Little Minister

(Radio)

Drama with Comedy

In this attraction are plenty of the necessities with which to sell it. Likewise there are deficiencies, the successful overcoming of which will test good showmanship ability. Essentially it is a class picture; not in a sophisticated sense, however, as it is built around understandable elements that have proved their ability to interest the mass mind.

Tersely, "The Little Minister" is a story of conflict. It dramatically portrays what the populace of a little 1840 Scotch village thinks its minister should be and the manner in which he should conduct himself. Also it depicts the conflicting and dramatic romance between this minister and the sometimes elfish yet other times very real woman bent on getting what she wants.

There is plenty of action in the picture, but on the whole, dialogue, the sense of which is at times difficult to grasp, carries the story trend. One vivid sequence, early in the production, demonstrates that the age old conflict between employer and employee was then, as now, a difficult question. Although the picture is essentially dramatic, it does not lack for comedy contrast. This quality, as well as the drama which supports the yarn's love interest motif, serves to establish a parallel between the times and conditions of its occurrence and the present.

The atmosphere of the story is on the theme that the minister, Gavin, should devote all his life and activities to the church and its congregation, that love, in an earthly sense, should not be his. Love does come to him in the guise of Babbie, who the townsfolk think is a gypsy, and this serves to intensify the situation when they learn of it. However, with Gavin demonstrating that he can be an upstanding mortal as well as sincere man of the cloth, and with Babbie proving that religion is not confined to the mere lip service of meetings and ceremonies, the parishioners are brought to a full understanding of the love that brought the oddly-contrasted pair together.

Katharine Hepburn is logically the object of most showmanship attention, but John Beal gives a performance that undoubtedly will cause many to talk about his work. It is not to be overlooked that the story is one of James M.

Barrie's best read books. As it makes possible many effective exploitation contacts that accentuate the picture's adult appeal, the value accruing to his name is not to be taken lightly. Quite a bit too serious for juvenile or child consumption, the major business-creating drive is to be directed at the adults. Assuming that the more serious thinkers will grasp the production's moral significance and entertainment merit, special attention is to be devoted to convincing the moderns that in "The Little Minister" they will find all the features that so vividly interest them when portrayed against a more timely background.—McCARTHY, Hollywood.

Limehouse Blues

(Paramount)

Drama

Set in the sinister confines of London's Limehouse, Chinese quarter, this production contains all the melodramatic entertainment elements expected of the setting and characters involved. It has action and, above all, considerable suspense, as the Chinese smugglers carry on their traffic under cover of night and fog on the harbor water, while the police lay plans and watch their opportunity to break up the gang.

There is romance, on the one hand the rather sordid but honest love of a half-white, half-Chinese gangster for a white girl, which brings about the treachery of the Chinese girl who loves the leader, on the other hand the clean cut love of the white girl for a white man.

With everything to hold the attention of the audience, drawing them into the theatre should present no great difficulty, if they are informed of the active and suspenseful character of the picture. There should be drawing power in the cast names, headed by George Raft, Jean Parker and Anna May Wong with Kent Taylor and Billy Bevan in chief support.

There is the possibility, of course, that the patronage may be led to believe, by reason of the picture's title, that this is some form of musical film. It appears important to clear this possible misunderstanding in the selling since, with the exception of a dance interpretation of that composition enacted by Raft and Miss Wong, there is nothing but melodramatic action here.

Miss Parker, Limehouse petty thief, is saved from arrest by Raft, half-breed Chinese from New York, who is the leader of the smuggling in Limehouse and the deadly enemy of his pugnacious rival, Montagu Love, Miss Parker's guardian. Parker is attracted to the girl, and when her guardian learns she has been in Raft's office, he beats her severely.

Raft sees to it that Love is disposed of, completely, when he threatens to inform the police unless he is allowed a cut in the smuggling profit, and Miss Parker goes to work for Raft, living in his cafe, unmolested by Raft, who has fallen in love with the girl. Miss Wong becomes bitterly jealous at the intrusion of Miss Parker, who appreciates Raft's kindness but cares nothing for him.

Accidentally, on an infrequent excursion to the city, Miss Parker meets Taylor, young pet store owner. The two fall in love, but Miss Parker refuses to marry him. He learns of her practical imprisonment by Raft and goes to settle with the Limehouse boss. Raft invites Taylor to visit him that night, an invitation to death. Miss Parker, unable to warn Taylor, is forced to accompany Raft on one of his nocturnal jobs, for which the police, informed by Miss Wong, are ready. At the last moment, Raft discovers Miss Parker's love for Taylor. Pursued by the police, they race to save Taylor's life. They arrive in time, and Raft dies of shots from police guns, still evading capture. —AARONSON, New York.

Propaganda

Taking as his thesis the recently spotlighted idea that wars are largely instigated, and maintained, by the manufacturers of munitions, Monroe Shaff, the producer, has painted in uncompromising strokes a sweeping indictment of the makers and sellers of the tools of war.

No respecter of personalities, this piece of propaganda against war is ably executed, technically good, and has a strong element of general interest, among adults.

There is a strong exhibitor tieup lying open for use by the exhibitor, in the many columns which newspapers are devoting to the present investigation of munitions manufacturers and their war profits, their sales and customers, being conducted by a vigorous and digging Senatorial committee, under the chairmanship of Senator Nye. This film is along much the same lines, with particular emphasis on foreign moneyed interests supplying the sinews of war to any and all, anywhere—who have the price.

There are comparatively few of the customary pictures of battlefields and maimed men, the emphasis here having been placed on the causes, or the single cause, of profit by the munitions purveyors. The exhibitor may well find support among the women's clubs, strongest exponents of peace.

Scanning the latent battlefields of Europe, the picture points out the various major leaders in the gigantic munitions industry of the world. In England it is Vickers-Armstrong, in France it is Snyder-Creusot, in Czechoslovakia it is Skoda, in Germany it is Krupp, in Japan it is Mitsui, each with its hundreds of subsidiaries all over the world, the interlocking directorates, each with its ownership of steel mills, mines, railways. The individuals are pictured, the de Wendel Brothers in France, who conveniently call themselves von Wendel in Germany; Snyder, the Krupps and the man of far flung notoriety and mystery, Sir Basil Zaharoff, international salesman of the materials of war, who is said to have himself, with consummate cleverness, prompted the sowing of the seeds of war in nations, which reacted to the profits of his clients, and Sir Basil. It is charged that during the war French and German munitions makers supplied each other with materials, via neutral countries.

This is, actually, vital material. It appears open for real community support.—AARONSON, New York.

Produced by Monroe Shaff. Distributed by Topical Films. Editorial advisor, Professor Walter B. Pitkin. Author, Burnet Hershey. Film editor, Allyn B. Carrick. Assistant editor, Milton Salzburg. The Czar Wants to Sleep

(Amkino)
Russian Satire

The production forces of Soviet Russia apparently are unable to forbear including some form of propaganda for the workers' state, even in those motion pictures meant as entertainment. This film, smartly satirizing the reign of the mad Czar, Paul I, makes a most complete mockery of its subject, and that mockery is in itself a concoction of propaganda for today's Russia. In picturing, satirically, the mad maneuvering of the moronic Paul, the producers have, it seems obvious, meant to indicate in indirect fashion exactly how meaningless is the idea of an individual, born of a certain name, dictating the lives and liberties of countless people by a divine right—and many whims.

That, actually, is the underlying theme of this Russian production, although superficially it is built of entertaining stuff, its director having made the most of numerous opportunities to draw laugh-provoking sequences from the exaggerated structure of the picture. The dialogue is entirely in Russian, with superimposed subtitle translations making understanding of the thread of the story a simple matter.

Its entertainment qualities, for selling in this country, may be said to be unusually high compared with others of the Soviet origin, whatever may be its underlying theme. The performances are uniformly capable, and technically the film is superior to many of its predecessors to reach this country. The theatre in the metropolitan location, which makes occasional use of foreign product, appears to be the most likely place for exhibition.

The story is concerned with a grand hoax perpetrated on the mad Paul. When the czar is disturbed by a palace outcry, it is necessary to find a scapegoat to appease his ever-ready anger. The real culprit, the czar's own aide, who had been pinched by his sweetheart, is in difficulty. With the connivance of the colonel of the guard, the name of a supposed member of the guard, which is in reality only an error in the writing of a clerk, is used as the name of the disturber of the czar's sleep. Paul orders the man Kidje to be marched to Siberia, then as suddenly orders him returned to the palace to assume officer's rank and marry the sweetheart of the aide.

When Kidje cannot be produced before his majesty, the czar's again recurring anger is appeased by the information that Kidje is dead. An elaborate funeral is prepared, but when the czar discovers that the chest of gold he had given Kidje has been emptied, he orders Kidje buried as a private, and promotes his aide to the rank of general, the sweetheart going with the promotion.—AARONSON, New York.

The Iron Duke

(Gaumont-British)

Historical Spectacle

There is almost every element of audience appeal in this ambitious British production; a typically finished Arliss characterization, spectacular values, vivid reproductions of historical events, costume, action, crowds and humor. It is well done in all details and undoubtedly can be sold as a big picture both as an Arliss vehicle (his first in England) and as an historical spectacle.

George Arliss undoubtedly has added another striking portrait to the remarkable gallery of his studies of great men. Wellington, the victor of Waterloo, and Wellington, the statesman, may neither have been exactly like Arliss' idea of the Duke; the fact remains that in humanizing the character—sometimes to a far fetched degree of sentimentality—the actor has played up to the average patron's requirements. Also, he has made it possible to give "plot" interest to what otherwise might have been a series of brilliant episodes.

"The Iron Duke" nevertheless remains essentially a historical spectacle. It has three outstanding scenes. The first is a reproduction of the Duchess of Richmond's ball, on the eve of Waterloo, from which the officers stole out one by one to rejoin their regiments and march straight to battle. The second is the charge of the Scots Greys and Highlanders at the Battle of Waterloo. The third pictures Wellington's speech in the House of Lords in which, defending himself against Lord Grey's complaint that England received no indemnities, he declares that, in seeking its pound of flesh, England would have "plunged a knife in the heart of Europe."

Each of these historical episodes is magnificently presented by the director, Victor Saville. Their scale is immense, the action vivid and the costumes give them a romantic glamour. They are linked by many other scenes which give a striking picture of the conflicting dynastic and national claims which Wellington had to fight, in conferences and in private council, in his endeavor to prevent the Bourbon lust for revenge from destroying his hopes of a lasting peace.

The story emphasizes this statesmanlike side of the Duke's character. It opens on the eve of Waterloo. The battle itself is shown in detached but realistic scenes. Then comes the real battle between Wellington and the forces of reaction, of which the brains and soul is "Madame," the Duchess of Angouleme, niece of the restored Louis XVIII and daughter of Marie Antoinette. The struggle becomes epitomized in a struggle between them for the life of Marshal Ney, captured after deserting with his forces to Napoleon.

Wellington wishes to spare Ney, an idol of the French nation. "Madame" bribes a London journalist to publish a scurrilous story about Wellington's relations with Lady Frances Webster, an officer's wife. Wellington is forced to go to London. While he is away, Ney is shot. The mob rises, and before he consents to save the French monarchy, Wellington demands the dismissal of "Madame" and the selection of a new government.

Side by side with these public events, Wellington's semi-paternal relations with Lady Frances are pictured, and this emphasizes the human personality of the Duke, with some humor in the scene of his pacification of the irate husband.

"The Iron Duke" is full of selling points. The historic and picturesque figure of the Duke, the parallel between his efforts for magnanimity to the beaten French and the situation in Europe today, the pageant of triumphant royalty after Waterloo, the portraits of Metternich, Talleyrand, Blucher, Castlereagh and other soldiers and statesmen of the historic period; all these elements supplement a pictorial appeal of outstanding strength, which makes this film a definite achievement for British production.—ALLAN, London.

Little Men

(Mascot)

Drama

Mascot has drawn from the top rank of masculine juvenile players for the cast of its adaptation of the famous companion piece to "Little Women," by Louisa May Alcott. The result is something of a showman's opportunity for the juvenile trade, and especially for the Holiday business. It is a story which undoubtedly has been read by thousands of children, and which likewise will be well remembered by today's adults, forming to a large extent a ready-made audience for the picture.

Perhaps the producers have injected a bit too much tear-provoking material, for much of the film seems to move from one tearful scene to another, building heavily the drama and tragedy of the boy who tries to make good but meets continual obstacles, until final appreciation of his merit opens the way to happiness.

Community groups might be attracted to support the film publicly, in view of the present trend toward the simple and the unsophisticated in motion pictures. Schools, as well, might be led to take an interest in community exhibition of the picture.

The principal adults are Ralph Morgan and Erin O'Brien-Moore, who operate the boys' school. The cast of boys is headed by the extremely capable Frankie Darro, and by David Durand, Dickie Moore, Tad Alexander. The other are all able, all natural, and all likable. Junior Durkin is good as assistant instructor.

With careful attention to detail, the producers have brought out those small incidents which serve to excite audience sympathy in the leading characters and at the same time impart as great a measure of action as is possible.

Durand, homeless and an orphan, is sent to the New England boarding school of the 1870's by a benefactor, and early shows a readiness to express his appreciation in good behavior and hard work. The school, over which Morgan presides with a close combination of stern discipline and good heartedness, is notable to the pupils for its mistress, Miss O'Brien-Moore, as Morgan's wife. She collectively mothers every boy in the place, and especially takes an interest in those who are homeless.

Durand is made the object of the tyranny of one or two of the boys who bully him. Accidentally he meets Darro, former chum, a boot-black and newsy, to whom he tells the wonders of the school. Darro accompanies him and, despite the objections of Morgan, Miss Moore prevails upon him to permit the boy to stay, if only for a trial. Slowly, under kindly treatment and good food, the independent spirit of the boy reacts, and he does his best to merit the attention he is getting. He and Durkin finally fight, as a result of Darro's desire to show off, and Darro is better for the beating he takes.

Durand is accused of stealing money from another of the boys and Darro assumes the blame, thinking Durand is really guilty. He is sent to the Page school, an institution for recalcitrants, where the boys are treated brutally. Meanwhile, it is discovered that neither Durand nor Darro was the culprit. Darro escapes and returns to find a ready welcome from Morgan, Miss Moore and the boys.—AARONSON, New York.

Western

Cut largely to the pattern of the formula western, this film has as its most salable point the appearance in the leading role of the engaging and extremely energetic Charles (Buck) Jones, who has an unquestioned following among the western fans, both young and old.

As straight western fare, not extraordinary in any way, with right triumphing in its proper place and in the proper fashion, with romance the concluding note and the old ranch saved and with its full quota of fast riding, quick shooting and hard fighting, the picture is for the action spot, the weekend. With Jones are Sheila Terry, to take care of the romance; Walter Miller, to supply the appropriate unscrupulous villainy, and Stanley Fields to supply the comedy as Jones' Chicago "tough guy" partner.

One sequence appears somewhat unfortunate. Fields, working in the Chicago stockyards, prepares to go west with Jones by dressing in a most exaggerated western cowboy outfit, the result of continuous reading of western story magazines. Jones, laughing at him, pokes fun at Fields' conception of the western cow-punchers, and in doing so tends greatly to destroy a youngster's illusion concerning western atmosphere as indicated in those films.

An unusual action sequence has been added to the film in the legitimate introduction of shots of the spectacular Chicago stock yards fire, which serves no story purpose whatsoever, but does energize the earlier part of the picture.

Jones, with his friend, returns home from his Chicago job when he receives word his father is in danger of losing his ranch property through the activities of Miller, who dominates the Arizona town and surrounding country. The pair come upon Miss Terry, likewise in danger of losing the home which is owned by her elderly father. Jones learns that his father has been killed and that his former pal is accused of the murder. Framed into escaping by henchmen of Miller, the suspected man is killed by another of Miller's men.

Jones goes after Miller, unearthing evidence which proves him at the root of the two murders and the landgrab schemes. When Jones himself is framed into suspicion of the murder of a bank manager, he makes a getaway, gains proof of Miller's culpability. As Miller attempts to blow up Miss Terry's home, Jones rescues Miss Terry and the explosion takes care of Miller. Amusement is afforded in Fields' racketeer language and wielding of a blackjack.—AARONSON, New York.

Jack Frost

(Celebrity)

Good

A lively and amusing subject in the Powers ComiColor cartoon series, with Jack Frost coming down to warn the animals at play of the approach of winter. They all heed his word except the bear cub, who thinks his coat is warm enough for him to ignore the warning. But when Old Man Winter arrives, he realizes his error, and is saved by the kindly Jack Frost. A tuneful and entertaining number.—Running time, 8 minutes.

Three Little Pigskins

(Columbia)

Some Laughs

There are laughs in this comedy effort, featuring the unquenchable Three Stooges, whose maltreating of one another usually brings laughs from an audience. As three down-and-outers, they are unsuccessful as pan-handlers, and by accident are mistaken for three football players, for whom the owner of a professional football team has been searching. They get into the game, knowing nothing about it, and are entertaining as they make all the possible blunders on the field. They are on the wrong end of several revolvers, and moving rapidly, as the short ends.—Running time 20 minutes.

Don Quixote

(Celebrity)

Entertaining

There is genuine entertainment and good color work in this number of the Powers ComiColor cartoon series. The insane asylum inmate reads of the knights of old, and escapes from his padded cell to be a Don Quixote, attacking a windmill, attempting to save a lady he thinks is in distress. But she is elderly and unattractive, and he and the pursuing keeper are glad to escape to the sanctuary of the padded cell. A good short.—Running time, 8 minutes.

ALLIED'S DIRECTORS VOTE CODE CHANGES

Drastic Reorganizing of Authority, Boards Proposed; See Block Sales Fight Aid

The proposals of Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors for a new code structure and a new central administrative organization with equal representation of buyers and sellers—only independent exhibitors classifying as "buyers"—took on an official hue with the return of the association's directors to their cities following a two-day conference in New Orleans at the Hotel Roosevelt last week. The meeting, in which denunciation of the code reverberated the most loudly, went on record for a seven-point program as follows:

1. To petition the National Industrial Recovery Board to make drastic changes in the Code Authority and its representation.
2. To adopt a new constitution which is practically mandatory on Allied units.
3. To go on record as favoring a copyright amendment similar to the Sirovich bill of 1932.
4. To fight for a refund of the so-called excessive charges for service by Electrical Research Products, Inc.
5. To press for legislative investigation and action against the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers.
6. To delay the Tri-Ergon suits until a ruling is made by the United States supreme court.
7. To spread Allied units into every state of the Union.

In addition to issuing statements to newspapers in which the code was denounced as an instrument which worked to the benefit of the producer-owned theatre at the expense of the actual independent, Allied passed a resolution which petitions the National Industrial Recovery Board to make a radical change in the Code Authority set-up. The board would consist of an equal number of buyers and sellers, besides three Government representatives with power to vote. The resolution defined buyers as any bona fide independent exhibitor, while producers, producer-owned or affiliated theatres and theatres which hold membership in organizations which have as members producer-owned or affiliated theatres were defined as sellers. Asked if a direct blow at the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America was meant, an Allied official did not deny it.

Grievance Board Changes Asked

The resolution further places the membership of the grievance board at five, to consist of two buyers and two sellers, as previously defined, with the Industrial Recovery Board appointing a chairman who has power to vote. The clearance and zoning boards would consist of seven, with three buyers, three sellers and one Government representative as chairman, the Government representative to vote.

Selection of these members would be determined by balloting in each exchange territory, the sellers to nominate the sellers, the buyers to select the buyers.

The new Code Authority then would be directed by the Government decree to investigate charges of unfairness on the part of the code and report within 90 days. Afterward the Code Authority would investigate and report whenever necessary.

Allied's new constitution has yet to be ratified by each member unit, but units which do not accept it will drop out of Allied, it is understood. The new constitution calls for a board chairman, a president, several vice-presidents, a secretary and a treasurer; a directorate to consist of one member for each unit, and an executive committee to be appointed from the directorate by itself. The directorate elects its chairman, its president, its secretary and its treasurer. The president in turn appoints his vice-presidents. The directorate also appoints its executive committee, to consist of not less than three or more than five, who will have full powers when the organization has no meetings. Directors must meet once a year, according to the new constitution. Vice-presidents will be selected to represent the various sections of the country.

Copyright Law Fight Urged

Action on the copyright law was considered the most effective way of fighting the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers. In addition to requesting a congressional investigation, a bill similar to the Sirovich bill of 1932 will be backed by Allied.

Compulsory block booking was frowned upon and some action is expected. Allied leaders are reported confident that on the block booking problem women's clubs and the like will exercise such force that a bill will pass easily.

President Sidney Samuelson frankly said he would not reveal the legislative program, as this would be giving ammunition "to the enemy."

During the evening sessions the Allied directors were guests of the local Allied unit, over which Henry Lazarus presided.

At the second day's session, H. S. McLeod, president of the Gulf States Theatre Owners' Association, was the principal outside speaker. The Gulf states organization is expected to remain independent of either Allied or the M.P.T.O.A.

Vice-president H. A. Cole told the daily newspapers that a 25-cent minimum subsequent-run admission, "forced down the throat of Texas exhibitors," soon would be the national policy unless Allied could defeat it. President Sidney Samuelson told the press that the code was forcing the public to pay more for amusement than exhibitors willingly would charge.

Abram Myers, who said the present code will be scrapped, told newspapermen that it authorized practices which could be prosecuted under the Sherman anti-trust act, the producers especially being liable under the law.

The Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America came in for attack in speeches and discussions.

Western States Buys Into Griffith

Western States Theatres, Inc., a Delaware corporation capitalized at $500,000, has purchased the interest of Universal Chain Theatres Corporation in the Griffith Amusement Company. Western States was organized about a year ago to buy, build and operate theatres in the Midwest, but no theatres were acquired. This action is the first step in the theatre field.

The deal was concluded by Foster McSwain, of Ada, Okla., acting with corporation directors. Mr. McSwain is president of Western States, A. R. Powell of Guthrie, Okla., is vice-president, and W. T. Spears, Altus, Okla., is secretary and treasurer. These three, with Harry Lowenstein, form the board of directors.

All of the stockholders in Western States are affiliated with the Griffith Amusement Company, Consolidated Theatres, or with R. E. Griffith Theatres, operating theatres in New Mexico. The Griffith Brothers will continue to have active management and supervision of all the theatres involved.

MPTOA Annual Convention Feb. 25

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America this week announced its annual meeting and election of officers will be held February 25-27, inclusive, in New Orleans. The session will come to a close on the day prior to the Mardi Gras.

It is anticipated that Ed Kuykendall will be reelected president. The foremost topic of discussion is expected to be the attitude of the 74th Congress toward the film industry. Congress will have been in session nearly two months by the time the MPTOA meets.

In New York this week, Harry Brandt, president of the Independent Theatre Owners' Association, and Charles L. O'Reilly, head of the New York Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce, announced they would make a joint tour of the country in the near future to organize independent exhibitor units on the plan to form a new national organization with representation from all states. The plan has been favored by the three New York units, including Allied of New Jersey. Sidney Samuelson, Allied president, denied Tuesday that Allied plans a merger with the ITOA or TOCC.

In the field, the Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware MPTO announced it has set its annual meeting and election of officers for December 28 at the Hotel Adelphia in Philadelphia.

The meeting of the MPTO of Delaware and Eastern Maryland was postponed until after the holidays.

HEARINGS ON CODE START JANUARY 9

Minority Interests Which Appeared Before Darrow Board Are Expected to Renew Fight

Paving the way for consideration of new industrial policies, the National Industrial Recovery Board on January 9 will begin a series of hearings on operation of major code provisions, it was announced this week in Washington.

The first hearing will be devoted to price control, but thereafter a number of problems will be discussed, including small businesses and minorities, employment, and code and general NRA administration.

Board members said it probably will be necessary to devote as much as a week to each major subject.

While the board has emphasized that the hearings are solely for determining whether the more generally adopted code provisions should be amended or dropped, the move is seen as an attempt to avert any general effort to force the dropping of any codes, which, it was indicated last week, might be provided for in the new recovery legislation to be sought.

Code policies were the subject of lengthy discussion by the board, which resulted in adoption of resolutions calling for the hearings.

Hear Darrow Hearings Echo

The recovery administration, the resolutions set forth, has "accumulated considerable experience with respect to the functioning of our industrial system under codes and the appropriate relationship of government thereto" and, it was added, "any major policy should not be finally modified or confirmed until a full opportunity has been afforded all interested parties to supplement existing information."

Observers in Washington view the proposed hearings as a continuation of the Darrow board investigation, particularly concerning minorities, following the collapse of which General Hugh S. Johnson, then recovery administrator, set up an industrial appeals board of which little or nothing has since been heard. It is expected the interests which appeared before Mr. Darrow again will seek to air their grievances.

Continuance of recovery codes after June 16, 1935, will hinge upon the form of legislation for revision of the industrial recovery act to be enacted by the Congress, which convenes two weeks hence.

It is believed that the actual legislation will not go before Congress for some time, particularly as the United States supreme court now has under consideration several cases involving codes.

Several Drafts Prepared

While the final decision as to what the new recovery act shall contain will be made by the President, it is known that several drafts have been prepared for his scrutiny by economists both within and without the NRA.

These drafts agree that the new law should contain the labor provisions of Section 7-A of the present act and the ban on child labor. They do not, however, agree as to the trade practice provisions, one draft being said to provide that where any industry desires to continue its code it may do so, with the Government aiding in enforcement, but where a code is no longer desired it may be abandoned.

Stabilization of wage levels will eliminate the need for price-fixing in the forthcoming revision of the NRA, S. Clay Williams, chairman of the National Industrial Recovery Board, said in New York last week in a talk before the American Arbitration Association. Mr. Williams declared that compliance with wage provisions, the guarantee of collective bargaining, the ban on child labor, and regulation of hours of labor, will prevent unfair trade practice.

The Code Authority said this week that none of the clearance and zoning schedules submitted to date can be approved for some time and that the only immediate solution to clearance and zoning problems is for exhibitors to continue filing individual protests against competitors with local boards.

All proposed schedules submitted to the Code Authority, it is said, have had price-fixing clauses, penalizing exhibitors either by setting back protection where admissions are reduced, or by automatically designating time of release for certain type houses. This is considered unfair by some exhibitors, while distributors maintain that under these provisions the power to sell protection is taken away.

Judge Hits Films Publicizing Trials

Judge John C. Knox, senior judge of the United States district court for the southern district of New York, last week assailed the modern tendency to exploit sensational court trials by the introduction of radio announcers and sound apparatus into the court room. The judge told 850 lawyers of the New York County Lawyers' Association at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel that so long as he remained senior judge in the district he would tolerate no motion picture cameras or radio announcers in the federal courtrooms.

"So far my cause of apprehension is but a small cloud on the sky," Judge Knox said. "Small though it be, it is dark and forbidding. To me it carries the ominous threat that our national passion for pitiless and sometimes morbid publicity may establish a microphone and a moving picture apparatus as standard equipment for American courtrooms."

He pointed out that although the gamut of human emotions is often run in the litigation in the court, and that lawsuits give portrayals of life as it is lived, "under no circumstances should trials serve as a medium for the exploitation of the imagination of a movie director from Hollywood. The actors in a courtroom drama should play their parts upon the stage which the law provides, and not upon the silver screen."

John Flinn Defines Clearance Status

Until zoning and clearance schedules—"headache" of the code—free of inequality and avoiding fixing of prices to be paid by the public can be worked out, none will be approved by the Code Authority, declared Code Secretary John C. Flinn this week in Buffalo. Mr. Flinn was honor guest at a luncheon in the Buffalo Athletic Club, given him by the Buffalo grievance and clearance and zoning boards.

"A schedule approved by even 90 per cent and objected to by 10 per cent is no good," Mr. Flinn said. "This industry has operated successfully for 20 years on a buy-and-sell basis. Unlike some NRA administrative bodies, we are determined to keep competition wide open and we would rather not a single zoning schedule ever should be adopted than to have one become law under the NRA and then find it wouldn't work."

Mr. Flinn said that Wednesday's hearing in Washington on the vaudeville angle of the code was to set up a new complaint and grievance committee to regulate hours and wages of vaudeville and presentation house performers and employees, taking such matters out of the hands of state compliance directors. On the new board, he said, will be representatives of vaudeville actors and chorus girls, theatre operators, theatrical agents and unions.

Pointing out that the administrative budgets of several NRA agencies run more than $1,000,000 a year, Mr. Flinn declared the Code Authority has kept within its $300,000 annual budget and that assessments on 1,400 theatres will be lower for the next half year than for the six months just closed.

Dr. Peter C. Cornell, Milton C. Guggenheimer and Francis D. Di Bartolo, government representative on the Buffalo boards, were guests with Mr. Flinn at the luncheon. Sidney Samson, Fox exchange manager, and Ted O'Shea, MGM branch manager, were in charge of arrangements.

Motion Picture Council Formed in Berkeley, Cal.

For the purpose of uniting the organizations of the community to influence producers to work with local exhibitors for better programs, and to develop an appreciation of better motion pictures, a group of Berkeley, Calif., women has organized the Berkeley Motion Picture Council.

Herbert L. Beach, Oakland city councilman, former part owner of the Uptown, Lorin and Strand theatres, and at one time president of the Northern California Moving Picture Exhibitors' Association, spoke on "Pioneering in Motion Pictures." Mrs. R. C. Bowman, and Mrs. Earl Brown, president and secretary, respectively, of the East Bay Film Council, assisted in organization.

SOVIET SUSPICION OF PROPAGANDA FOUND BAR TO AMERICAN PICTURES

Arthur W. Kelly Declares Wariness Against Foreign Influence, Not Credit Problem, Closes Market, Despite Recognition

Establishment of a fruitful market for American motion pictures in Soviet Russia today appears as distant as at any time since the World War—this despite the much discussed possibility of obtaining at least a slice of that market by American distributors as a result of United States recognition of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

Arthur W. Kelly, chief of United Artists' foreign operations, returned to New York this week from an eight months' tour of the world. Although in this most recent itinerary he did not include Russia, his business contacts so closely impinged upon latest developments in the USSR that he summed it all up cinematically thus:

The All-Russian Congress of the Councils of Workmen's, Soldiers' and Peasants' Deputies, directing every phase of international commerce since that seventh day of November, 1917, when the masses overthrew the Kerensky government, is not even touching the seal on the door which it closed against admittance of any foreign influence which might undermine Soviet morale. The motion picture, as well as every other outside "propagandist" medium, with few exceptions, is definitely excluded.

"Before Russia, and the Russians themselves, will permit general importation of foreign conceptions of life, whether through motion pictures, art or literature, they must radically change their own ideas of life," said Mr. Kelly, naming that suspicion of propaganda as the sole obstacle.

Says Credit Is Not Factor

One year ago H. M. Idashkin, then acting head of Amkino, official Soviet film distributor in this country, told a HERALD interviewer that the chief difficulty was the inability to arrange credit, that Americans could look forward to considerably simplified negotiations, provided that terms were satisfactory.

Credit terms, Mr. Kelly said this week, have little or nothing to do with the question, for in the past, when in individual instances American companies extended credit to the Soviet, negotiations and payments were satisfactory to all concerned.

"Less than 5 per cent of all film product turned out in this country was suitable for distribution today in Russia," the United Artists' executive said. "This is based absolutely on the record of past experience."

Charlie Chaplin films—vintage of 1917—still are shown extensively in Russia, and several of the even older silent pictures, chiefly slapstick comedy. Most theatres are silent and there is much free motion picture entertainment under the heading of public education.

Mr. Kelly's trip took him primarily to Australia and the Far East, including Java, Singapore, the Federated Malay States, Siam, French Indo-China, the Philippines, China and Japan.

He was enthusiastic about the conditions in Australia. General business has vastly improved, he said, and the greatly increased demand for wool has been reflected at the box offices. He negotiated a franchise with General Theatres for booking 1934-35 product in 150 Australian theatres. There is no feeling against American films, he found, but Australia is eager to build up its own industry, production and exhibition.

"They realize more and more that they must spend money on their productions. At the present time, the average negative cost ranges between $25,000 and $50,000.

"If the picture is in any way a hit, the producer can get back his costs out of Australia alone," Mr. Kelly said. "If not, they are sent to England as quota pictures, and usually return a good profit."

Land of Double Featuring

There are only three producers in Australia, each turning out an average of five features annually. These are Cine-Sound, Thring Productions, Ltd., and F. Beaumont-Smith.

There is no market for short subjects in Australia, according to Mr. Kelly, who explained that double and in some instances triple featuring is the general order.

United Artists now has eight Australian offices—in Sydney, Perth, Melbourne, Brisbane, Tasmania, Wellington and Adelaide.

Skipping from Australia up to Java, Mr. Kelly said that in that country, one of the most highly developed agriculturally in the world, film business has fallen off 50 per cent because the country still is on the gold standard and merchants cannot export to advantage.

"We are getting stiff competition from China and Japan," he said. "Japan has made from 200 to 300 pictures already on the new season schedules, for its 1,500 theatres. Of these 400 are wired for sound. Each of the Japanese producers makes from 30 to 40 talking pictures each year and most theatres show one sound and one silent picture on the same program."

Mr. Kelly appeared most favorably impressed with the exhibition status in Australia. "Their first-run theatres are certainly on a par with our finest Class 'B' houses, insofar as general operation is concerned, and in many instances their construction is superior to many of the American de luxe houses."

New Company Formed

Preferred Pictures has been incorporated under the laws of Pennsylvania by Murray F. Beier, E. S. Waters and H. L. Taylor, with offices at 1316 Vine street, Philadelphia, and in Washington, D. C. The company has closed with Dave Mountain of Spectrum Pictures for distribution of "Frontier Days," the first of a series of eight westerns, and with Exploitation for "The Birth of a New American."

Laboratories Rush Patent Substitutes

The Bell Laboratories this week were working at top speed rushing completion of several different types of recording and reproducing devices designed to serve as substitutes for those covered by the American Tri-Ergon patents. Final tests of all such developments, which have been ordered by Electrical Research Products, Inc., are scheduled to be completed by February 1, which Erpi has set as the deadline, in anticipation of a United States supreme court hearing on the pending review Tri-Ergon litigation being reached the week of January 14 and the highest court's decision being handed down within a month following.

If the supreme court were to uphold validity of the Tri-Ergon patents, it is understood that six to eight additional months would elapse before the William Fox company could bring to conclusion an action against Erpi. In the interim, attorneys point out, replacement of those parts held to infringe could be made.

Wilmer & Vincent and Publix Altoona are involved in the actions under review, both of them for use of the flywheel device, while Paramount is under review for use of the double print method.

In the case of an adverse decision the February 1 deadline for completion of substitute developments would permit replacements in the limited number of reproducing and recording sets involved. Erpi, it is said, has approximately 11,000 reproducing equipments in use—on the basis of two machines to a theatre—and approximately 1,500 sets of recorders. Replacements for all these would be required, should a subsequent action against Erpi be filed by Tri-Ergon.

Erpi has at least two devices in work to substitute for the Tri-Ergon flywheel, in the event the patent is upheld, and tests of one of these are in progress in nine New Jersey theatres. It is said that, in addition to the already proved "hill and dale" method of recording, Erpi has several substitutes for the double print method in hand.

Former Attorney General William D. Mitchell has been retained by Erpi as legal consultant pending the supreme court hearing.

Federal Judge Marcus Campbell Wednesday gave American Tri-Ergon 20 days after the supreme court decision on the review to furnish Warner and Vitaphone with bills of particulars in Tri-Ergon's patent suit against them.

John F. Meek, operator at the Princess, Topeka, Kan., inventor of a new sound projector, claims elimination of the flywheel and improvement in equipment now in use are possible with his invention, already patented. Mr. Meek claims his invention will reduce the cost of manufacturing equipment by $100 each.

IS THE NAME OF YOUR THEATRE HERE?

THIS MAKES HISTORY

IN ALL your experience as an exhibitor have you ever heard of a motion picture being deluged with fan mail before anyone has even seen it on the screen? Yet, on the announcement of this picture, people all over the country wrote and telegraphed asking and demanding that THE MARCH OF TIME be shown in their favorite theater.

Look for the name of your theater in these letters, Mr. Exhibitor, (the copies of those printed here are on file at our office—you can see them any time) read them carefully. You don't have to be told what a reception like this means at the box office.

Arliss Is Choice Of School Pupils

George Arliss is the most popular motion picture actor, in the opinion of the students at the Manlius School, Manlius, N. Y., as expressed in a poll designed to select the most popular screen actor, actress, motion picture and radio star.

Myrna Loy placed first among the actresses. In second place among the actors John Barrymore and Clark Gable were tied; Lionel Barrymore and Dick Powell in third place; Fredric March, Robert Montgomery in fourth place, and Walter Connolly in fifth. Behind Miss Loy were Mae West and Ginger Rogers, second; Jean Harlow, Claudette Colbert and Carole Lombard, third; Katharine Hepburn, and Joan Bennett, fourth; May Robson, Constance Bennett and Elisa Landi fifth.

The films most enjoyed, in the order of their choice, were "The Count of Monte Cristo," "It Happened One Night," "Gay Divorcee," "Flirtation Walk," "The House of Rothschild." The radio choices were Bing Crosby, Annette Henshaw, Lorette Lee and Rudy Vallee.

Mercy Opens New House in Walla Walla, Wash.

Frederick Mercy and his son, Frederick Mercy, Jr., pioneer Washington exhibitors, have opened a new theatre, the New Roxy, in Walla Walla. Seating approximately 2,500 the house has been built on the site of the original Roxy theatre, with the most modern equipment throughout. Wide range sound is included in the new installation. J. E. Wright is manager of the theatre.

Cine-Mundial, Fan Magazine, Celebrates 20th Anniversary

Cine-Mundial, Spanish language motion picture fan publication, last week issued its twentieth anniversary number, that for January, 1935. Published by the Chalmers Publishing Company, New York, of which F. Garcia Ortega is president, the publication circulates in Mexico, Cuba, Brazil, Argentina, Spain and the Spanish colonies chiefly, as well as in the United States.

Colonial Amusement to Remodel Illinois Houses

The Colonial Amusement Company plans to remodel the Grand and Orpheum theatres in Harrisburg, Ill., and the Eldorado and Lyric in Galatia, Ill. New marquees of latest design, new interior decoration, seating, cooling plants and projection equipment are included in the plan.

Film on Oil Available

The United States Bureau of Mines, with the cooperation of the oil producing industry, has made a four-reel silent educational picture, "Petroleum, the Liquid Mineral," recounting the production and distribution of petroleum and its products. The film is available without charge, other than the transportation cost, from the Pittsburgh Experiment Station of the Mines Bureau.

Report on St. Louis Houses Is Filed by Special Master

Nelson Cunliff, special master for the federal court in the matter of the Ambassador, Missouri and Grand Central theatres, St. Louis, reveals, in his final report, that the holders of bonds against the three buildings received a total of $2,272,430 in cash and credits on their bonds, which had a total face value of $5,955,400. The properties, sold at a foreclosure sale, were bought in by the bondholders' protective committee. Under the reorganization new bonds, maturing in 15 years, and bearing five per cent interest, payable out of earnings, have been distributed to those bondholders who joined the plan.

Begin Men's Wear Tieup With Stars

Men's Cinema Fashion Clothes, Inc., New York, has secured exclusive rights to the use of motion picture players for style purposes. This is said to be the first instance of tying in the motion picture with men's clothes merchandising. The basis of the idea lies in the fact that after a big picture is released, it is not unusual for the producer to receive several thousand letters from young men asking where the clothes worn by the star may be purchased.

The advertising and promotion of the new sales plan is being handled by Griffin Advertising, Inc., of Cleveland. Class and trade publications, as well as direct mail, will be used as soon as distribution is arranged. The plan is said to have already been put in operation in several large cities. Arrangements have been made with Hollywood producers through the Modern Merchandising Bureau, New York, for sole rights on the use of stars for the plan.

Mascot to Cease Code Violations

Mascot Pictures, independent producer, through Al Levoie has signed a compliance agreement on the Coast to carry out the provisions of the motion picture code, following decision of the Studio Labor Board on 12 complaints filed against the company, for alleged violations of minimum wage scales, as provided in the code.

The company agreed to pay scale wages for work in the future and to eliminate the practice of hiring workers for one classification of work, who double in another classification which calls for higher or lower wages. The Studio Labor Board ordered Mascot to make restitution in certain instances.

Mr. Levoie, acting for Nat Levine, president of Mascot, contended he did not understand that workers hired for one type of job could not be employed otherwise if the scale differed. Mr. Levoie said only two of the 12 complaints had to be adjusted, the other 10 complaints having been dropped by the board.

The various organizations of studio crafts are said to be seeking affidavits from members pointing out code wage scale violations which are to be placed before the board for action.

Projectionists Buy Licenses, Is Charge

Charges that prospective projectionists have paid from $500 to $1,000 each for passing their examination in New York City were laid this week before Accounts Commissioner Paul Blanshard. Mr. Blanshard submitted a report on this condition to Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia, who, it was announced, will take drastic action.

The charges were made in the course of a two-months' investigation of the licensing bureau of the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity, by Mr. Blanshard. This department has charge of licensing New York City projectionists.

Witnesses, whose names were not revealed, charged that applicants for licenses were told they must pay sizeable bounty "to the proper person" if they wanted to pass the oral examination required. The witnesses, it was said, also stated that a very perfunctory examination was given to anyone who paid his "fee" in advance. The law provides that, upon passing the examination, the applicant pay a $10 fee.

Members of the fact finding committee on operators' wage scales, appointed for the New York territory by Compliance Director Sol A. Rosenblatt, this week commenced work on a second report, with each member making an individual study of the local booth situation for submission to Mr. Rosenblatt.

Temporary relief to independent exhibitors in New York was granted by Local 306 of the IATSE last week, terms of the agreement being kept secret.

Full Academy to Select Best Films

The awards committee of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences in Hollywood has set February 27 as the date for presentation of the annual awards. Nominations for the best picture have been raised from eight to 12 and the entire Academy membership will be permitted to choose from the 12, instead of the choice being confined to the producers' branch, as in the past.

Recommendation of a special committee of the sound section of the Academy Technicians' branch, covering a change in the method of making nominations for the sound recording award, were presented to the Academy awards committee last week by Carl Dreher, chairman. The recommendation provides for nomination of one film from each studio, with the entire Academy membership voting for the final award.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

By VICTOR M. SHAPIRO

Hollywood Correspondent

THE question whether the Production Code Administration has been of any money value to the industry struck Hollywood vividly this week, as Dow-Jones Financial Agency reported profits for most of the film companies during last year, and Loew's declared an extra dividend of 75 cents, above their regular disbursement.

While the Production Code office in no way is credited with making profit for any company, the part played by the PCA in money saved the industry is significant.

More Than Million Saved

In the launching of the Code Administration there was no expectation that cash would accrue from the self-regulatory process of placing seals of approval on films. Nevertheless, a news ferret with a penchant for figures has unearthed the fact that since the inception of the Code authority four months ago, there has been retained in the coffers of the industry an estimated amount of over a million dollars which in years previous had to be expended to adjust films before presentation.

This astounding saving is accounted for by scanning comparative figures of the number of films granted seals by the Production Code Committee and reviewed by more than 250 local and state censor boards, as against the same number of films reviewed and cut last year by the local and state boards, before the Production Code Administration came into being.

Joseph Breen, head of the code administration, had given seals of approval to 227 films already released. Of this number, 167 were passed by local and state boards without a single cut or deletion. Sixty films were cut by local and state boards.

Last year, before the Production Code Agency operated, out of 227 films leaving Hollywood, selected at random, the local and state boards cut 197 productions. In other words, due to the vigilance of the Production Code Administration, local and state boards cut only 60 films, or 137 productions fewer than in the comparative period of last year.

Hollywood comptrollers and New York treasurers have found by experience what it costs to cut and alter films. Money is expended for retaking scenes, for shipping censored and remade prints back and forth, for extra screenings before, after and while changes are being made, and for sundry other reasons.

Furthermore, the box-office that never can be estimated takes place when a dissatisfied public stays away in droves from tampered shows if advertised features of entertainment are snipped out of films.

Using 137 films as a constant and multiplying it by the number of cuts and changes in each film, and multiplying that figure again by 250 local and state boards, then computing the various costs itemized, the sum is staggering.

The Production Code Administration in its short period of functioning has eliminated at least two-thirds of the costs of outside censorship and in the same movement reduced a loss at the ticket window.

Nor has the board as yet hit its full stride. Furthermore, Hollywood authors, directors and producers have yet to become fully acquainted with its genuine purpose.

British Picture Theatres Looking Up

Al Santell, director of "Daddy Long Legs" and "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," returned from abroad this week, bringing picture impressions from England, France, Germany and Austria.

In the British Isles, gay again, picture theatres are packed with long lines of customers. Some practicable mind set an example and now those waiting in queues bring their own collapsible seats with them and sit, read or chat while waiting for the show to let out. If a person leaves his chair he writes his name on a card, fastens it on the seat, and the standing-sitting-room is reserved. It's all done good-naturedly, and everybody observes the reservations of others for at least a half hour.

Associated Talking Pictures, according to Santell, is as well equipped as any studio in Hollywood. Its lighting facilities are a distinct departure. All illumination is from overhead.

English production, as a whole, is about where America's was ten years ago, Santell

BRITAIN LOOKING UP: SANTELL
EIGHT FILMS START; FOUR END

said. The industry is reflecting Britain's upturn in general business conditions.

In Germany no English newspapers are sold. The film industry is struggling through difficulties. Austria is depressed, but smiling. Paris is quiet.

Santell undoubtedly will direct at least one film for Columbia. His ultimate intention is to freelance.

Eight Productions Start

With production taking a slight upward turn, eight new pictures were placed in work; only four were completed. With three new features before the cameras, Radio led the week; the remaining five were distributed equally among Sol Lesser, Paramount, Fox, Universal and Goldwyn. Half the finished product is credited to Columbia; Paramount and Universal each check in with one.

Probably most interesting of the Radio starting trio is "Becky Sharpe," adapted from William Thackeray's novel, "Vanity Fair," which is being made entirely in color by Pioneers Productions under Lowell Sherman's direction. The cast features Miriam Hopkins, Nigel Bruce, Frances Dee, Allan Mowbray and Mrs. Leslie Carter. Also started was "Captain Hurricane," a Cape Cod story in which James Barton makes his feature screen debut, supported by Helen Mack and Helen Westley. The third starting feature, "Puzzle of the Pepper Tree," again teams Edna May Oliver and James Gleason, with Gregory Ratoff in support.

Started in Hollywood, but immediately moving to location in Utah, was the Sol Lesser production, "When a Man's a Man." The cast includes George O'Brien, Dorothy Wilson, Paul Kelly, Perry Woods and Richard Carlisle.

Paramount's new feature, "Win Or Lose," stars Joe Morrison with Dixie Lee (Bing Crosby's wife) and marks the screen return of Burns and Allen.

At Fox, the second edition of "George White's Scandals" got under way, with Lyda Roberti, James Dunn, Stuart Erwin, Cliff Edwards and Eleanor Powell.

Universal's contribution to the new activity is "Transient Lady." In this, Gene Raymond, Henry Hull, Frances Drake, June Clayworth, Clark Williams and Spencer Charters will be seen.

At United Artists Studio, Sam Goldwyn started "Wedding Night." Anna Sten and Gary Cooper co-starred, with Ralph Bellamy and Helen Vinson the principal supports.

"Passport to Fame" Concluded

Long in production, Columbia's "Passport to Fame" finally was brought under the wire. In this Edward G. Robinson is featured in a dual role. The support includes Jean Arthur, Etienne Girardot, Arthur Hohl, Fred Keating, Donald Meek, Douglas Dumbrille, Paul Harvey and Ed Brophy. The second completed feature, "Alias John Law," is a Tim McCoy with Billie Seward, Robert Allen, Frank Sheridan, Jack Clifford, Tom London and Alan Sears.

Paramount's completed production, "The Gilded Lily," features Claudette Colbert with Fred MacMurray and Ray Milland.

Rounding out the completed quartet is "I Murdered a Man," Universal. Players appearing are Charles Bickford, Sidney Blackmer, Helen Vinson, Onslow Stevens, Dudley Digges, John Darrow, Evelyn Selbie and Alice Ardell.

SHOWMEN'S LOBBY LAUGHS!

Al Sindlinger Wins Quaker Oats "First"

Announcement of results in the Warner-Quaker Oats "Six Day Bike Rider" contest finds Manager Al Sindlinger, Appleton Theatre, Appleton, Wis., winner of the first prize of $500.

Second money of $250, goes to Manager Bill Hendricks, Warner Theatre, Memphis, Tenn., and third prize of $150 to Manager Ed M. Hart, Oxford Theatre, Plainfield, N.J. Also in the money was Manager Wally Akin, now at the Paramount, Abilene, Texas, for his campaign at the Melba, Dallas, Texas, which brought him the fourth prize of $100.

On account of the high grade of the entries that finished close behind the winners, the Quaker Oats people decided to award additional prizes of $50 each to Dewey Mouson, Knickerbocker, Nashville, Tenn.; Ken Grimes, Warner, Morgantown, West Va.; Will Conner, Music Box, Tacoma, Wash.; Glen Riggins, Ellany, El Paso, Tex., and a $25 prize to Walter F. Davis, Orpheum, Ft. William, Ont., Can.

A number of honorables were also awarded.

The prize money was given for the best exploitation on "Six Day Bike Rider" in which the words "Quaker Oats" or "Mother's Oats" were published or pictured.

All of the above winners are members of Managers' Round Table Club, as are most of those who rated the mentions.

"Toyland" Premieres Strong in Cleveland

An answer by telephone in person by President Roosevelt to an offer to give the proceeds of a midnight show to the Warm Springs fund was the topper in the campaign put over under the supervision of district manager Harry Long, by Manager Jack Lykes and ad head Milt Harris for the premiere of "Babes in Toyland" at the Stillman, Cleveland, Ohio.

The first showing, the midnight performance, was preceded by band parade to the theatre with red flares, banners and marchers wearing papier-mache heads of the characters in the picture. Front was illuminated with giant lights, and a sidewalk broadcast had the cooperation of Mayor Davies, Governor-elect Davey and other celebrities who spoke over the mike. Invited guests received jumbo Postal telegrams.

Illuminated float was used in advance, two scenes from the picture mounted on a flat truck, the bally also taking part in the monster holiday parade staged by one of the leading papers. Extra publicity was obtained on this. Football heralds were distributed at two important local games, and stickers were placed on guest copies of all newspapers at the big hotels, as well as on delivery bags from dry cleaners.

Advertising toys were given to all children at schools and "Babes in Toyland" ice cream cones were made up by large drug store chain. Book marks in all branch public libraries and Laurel and Hardy "reserved" cards at tables in restaurants and hotels were additionally effective.

The entire advertising and publicity newspaper campaign was out of the ordinary and many store tieups were made for toyland windows and other holiday angles.

Brient Plants Giant Stand On Richmond "Parade" Date

Elmer Brient finally catches a few moments to himself in his new assignment with Neighborhood Theatres, down in Richmond, Va., to send along a line of what he put on with "The White Parade" at the State, in that spot. The giant stand illustrated in the accompanying photo consisted of four boards in the best location in town, which Elmer says took a bit of selling before General Outdoors went for the idea.

On opening day Elmer smashed with a full page in color on "Parade" and also "Imitation of Life" at the Capitol, his other ace house. Listed on the page also were coming shows at both houses.

Cleveland Libraries Cooperate on "Gables"

Practically a replica of the farmhouse in the picture was the lobby display on "Anne of Green Gables" at the RKO Palace, Cleveland, the layout being built without cost by local lumber company in exchange for mention in lobby card. The flash and rest of campaign was conceived by Manager Ken Means and ad head Al Gregg.

Reported as outstanding was the tieup with the public library, comprising window displays, bulletin board announcements in fiction and children's rooms. Special library one sheets, bookmarks, book jackets, stills and date cards were distributed in the main library and over 100 branches in the city.

Special 15-minute sketch of scenes from the picture was broadcast by popular station under the personal supervision of program director. Letters of endorsement were forwarded to school principals, troop captains and lieutenants of Girl Scouts and to group leaders of Camp Fire girls.

Further cooperation was obtained from Miss Gertrude Savage, motion picture chairwoman of International Federation of Catholic Alumnae, who made personal calls and addressed students of parochial schools.

BOB SUITS HONORED AT AWARD CEREMONY

Postmaster Farley Is Present While Winner Receives His Plaque from Senator Guffey

Within view of America's number one political personalities, and on the occasion of a gala political celebration of unusual significance, Pennsylvania's Democratic leader of the day presented the Quigley Award for October to Pennsylvania's showman of the day.

Bob Suits, enterprising young managerial head of Loew's Theatre in Reading, Pa., accepted both the Quigley plaque and the congratulatory words of Senator-elect Joseph F. Guffey of Pennsylvania. The presentation was made on Monday, December 10, in the Mayflower Hotel, Washington, with Postmaster-General James A. Farley at Senator Guffey's side, looking on in thorough acknowledgment of the honor that was being bestowed upon the first Loew manager to win a Quigley Award. (See photo on picture page.)

Presentation of the award to Suits was made immediately preceding a Victory dinner in honor of Senator Guffey. Present for this occasion, and swelling considerably the presentation ceremony were outstanding figures of the nation, including Governor-elect Earle of Pennsylvania, David Lawrence, Pennsylvania Democratic leader, and a score of others.

Competition among showmen, with appropriate recognition of outstanding showmanship, was termed an excellent idea by Pennsylvania's new Democratic Senator. And this seemed to be the implied sentiment of Postmaster-General Farley, himself, without doubt, an acknowledged showman of the first water.

Suits braved one of the year's most miserable days, cold, wind and sleet, to drive to the Capitol in time to receive his plaque which he had won on the basis of his unusually excellent campaign in October in connection with the showing of "What Every Woman Knows."

But with the Quigley Award firmly secure in his hands, and the kind words of the Nation's leading democracy ringing through his head, Suits forgot the disagreeable elements to drive back to Reading determined to soon show his fellow-showmen that Reading can consistently maintain what it has once started.

May your chairman intrude at this point to express his appreciation for the unflagging efforts of Carter Barron, Suit's division manager. It sure took a lot of doing to get all the celebrities in line, but Carter did it.

Perry Plugs Parade On "1st World War"

A "first time" is chalked up by Fred Perry, General Manager, Capitol, Binghamton, N. Y., who was reported to have put over successfully the first Sunday parade in that city, the stunt being part of the buildup on "First World War."

Fred sent out invitation to march to 2,000 local members of American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, and in the line of march also were city officials, state and city police on motor cycle and horseback, VFW drum and bugle corps, gun carriage carrying the print of the picture. Additional units comprised ambulance corps, stretcher bearers, U. S. Army trucks. In uniform were the various members of the units, and bringing up the rear were families of Legionnaires and others in autos.

Thousands were reported to have viewed the proceedings, the parade disbanding at the theatre where the lobby was decorated with flags from all nations involved in the recent war. On arrival at the theatre, the print was formally escorted into the house while the band played appropriate selections. On duty in full uniform during the entire run were sentries carrying rifles with fixed bayonets.

The stunt was put on just before the opening of the picture, and newspapers carried full publicity in advance. Officers of the army organizations also cooperated ahead, and gratifying returns were said to have been obtained on this unusual bally.

Not only was such a wide participation of army units unprecedented for such an elaborate street bally, but the fact that it was put over on a Sunday entitled Fred to an extra bow.

Perlin Ties Ballroom Into "Continental" Dance Contest

Sid Blumenstock, Atlantic City, publicity head, reports the campaign put on by Iz Perlin of the Colonial Theatre for "The Gay Divorcee" by tying in with Million Dollar Pier ballroom for a "Continental Dance" contest. Pier announced the event, also paying for printing and distributing heralds plugging event, and orchestra played tunes from picture.

Dancing school was contacted and they gave window display to contest, cooperating merchants contributed prizes and the theatre offered $10 to swell the ante.

SIG SOLOMON

Booster Club Tops Winner's Campaign

Four smash stunts distinguished Sig Solomon's Quigley prize entry on "Judge Priest" at the Regent, Newark, N. J., most unusual no doubt being his human interest story contest in which scores of seekers after cash awards thoroughly canvassed Sig's drawing area plugging the picture.

Based on the human interest stories from which the picture was made, the idea functioned as follows. Adults and children were invited to canvass for the two $25 prizes, one given for the best story secured and the other to the canvasser bringing it in. Entrants had their photos taken free in the theatre lobby every evening, prints of each attached to an identification card, seven inches wide by four deep, with copy stating the holder was an "official Will Rogers Booster." Name and address were filled in.

Each contestant was then given a certain residential section to canvass exclusively in soliciting stories from householders and over 500 stories were turned in. Prizes were promoted from merchants in return for mention in advertising and trailer. Stunt, started 10 days ahead, was carried in local press.

A week ahead, two other gags were started, the first a coloring contest for prizes of toys, with the Woolworth stores, which drew nearly 700 entries, and ballot stunt put on the first day in which patrons were asked to rate the picture along the lines of the star system. Ballots were distributed at theatre and box planted in lobby for votes. Sig announced the results in lobby next morning.

Commendable also was a street photo idea, on tieup made with outfit specializing in snapping photos of passersby. Snaps were planted in lobby, 25 of which were tacked upside down (see photo), and those identifying themselves received passes.

Taylor Myers, Loew's Broad, Columbus, Ohio, disproved the old adage—you can't have your cake and eat it—when he played "College Rhythm." Break Stages "Limberlost" Show for Crippled Kids Staging a special show for crippled children's school was one of the highlights of P. O. Break's campaign on "Girl of the Limberlost" at the Post Theatre in Battle Creek, Mich. Cards were passed out in Kresge's calling attention to engagement and store plugged pressbook needlecraft tieup.

Classified ad contest was run and heralds were inserted in outgoing packages at leading department store. Special Marion Marsh dress was advertised by same store and photographic enlargements of star were used in display.

Allen Promotes His Atmosphere on "Navy"

Although nowhere near a seaport, Wally Allen, Keeney Theatre, Elmira, N. Y., promoted nautical instruments from boat owners at nearby lake to use as lobby atmosphere for "Here Comes the Navy." Wally also borrowed a bell from the fire department, which usher in sailor suit would ring every half hour announcing "8 bells and all is well," etc., etc., in nautical manner. Ship lights were hung from marquee.

Other promotions were sailor suits for staff contributed by recruiting officer and travel films which Wally used before trailer were secured from same source. For street bally a stuffed dummy was dressed in uniform and hung from building with sign reading "Waiting for 'Here Comes the Navy,'" etc., etc.

THOSE NEWSREEL SHOTS

What should be shown in the newsreels? Do shots of slain bandits and murdered children bring money to the box office or do they shoo away the more sensitive customers? These questions are brought up in view of the letters below in which two Round Tablers express themselves differently. Harry Black, of Glens Falls, N. Y., reports a distinctly adverse effect, while Louie Charninsky, of Dallas, Texas, states these shots tilted his grosses. What do other members think?

Louie Publicized Death Shots And Reports Extra Business

Dear Mike:

Enclosed find writeups from every paper in Dallas about a newsreel shot that I went after and I will do some business on it. I go after anything that looks like money in the box office.—Louis Charninsky, Manager, Capitol Theatre, Dallas, Texas.

Here are some expressions from the newspaper stories Louis forwards with his letter. Names of papers were not attached:

"Followers of the chronicling of crime in the contemporary scene will be interested in the shots of the killing of 'Baby Face' Nelson until recently Public Enemy No. 1, at Niles Center, Ill., which will become a part of the program at the Capitol Theatre, starting Friday.

"The Universal News Sound News unit will be explained by Graham McNamee. The scenes depict the end of the killer when he was found in a ditch after fatally wounding two federal officers who rained seventeen slugs into him, thus bringing about his death after an attempted escape.

"A man and woman companion deserted the wounded terrorizer of the Middle West, but not until after a rain of miniature shrapnel shells riddled the nearby trees and electric light poles.

"Following a trail of blood-soaked clothing, the body, wrapped in a blanket, was discovered by federal men, would-be avengers of the two brave officers, one of whom was partly responsible for the apprehending of John Dillinger. Newsreel will be shown Friday in connection with 'Student Tour,' and Saturday and the remainder of the weekend.

"Finding of the deserted body of 'Baby Face' Nelson and the wiping out of the late Public Enemy No. 1 are shown in the new issue of Universal Sound News, Graham McNamee announcing, which will reach the screen of the Capitol Friday, with the last day's showing of 'Student Tour.' Scenes depicted include the fatal wounding of two federal officers at Niles Center, Ill., by the terrorizer of the middlewest, his escape with a man and woman companion after receiving 17 slugs in his body, and the rain of miniature shrapnel shells which sprayed trees and electric light poles. . . ."

Lane Ties In With Red Cross

Harry Says Audience Reaction Is Against Newsreel Morbidity

Dear Mike:

Just a few words to advise you of the reaction against the prevailing and increasing tendency on the part of the newsreel companies to inject morbid scenes in their releases.

During the past few weeks, almost every release came through showing gangsters riddled by bullets laid out on slabs. After observing audiences' reaction, particularly women, these scenes were deleted after the opening performance. However, there seems to be no let up on such scenes, and in the current issue of Universal News, two such scenes are paraded before the eyes of theatregoers. Namely, "Baby Face" Nelson, and the three little girls recently murdered. I did eliminate Mr. Nelson, but against my better judgment decided not to cut the scene of the girls, assuming that perhaps the sight of the unfortunate kiddies might result in pity rather than revulsion. I was wrong!

Today I received a number of phone calls (and from prominent, well-meaning friends) condemning me for showing such a scene, as it not only upset them, but had a terrifying effect on the children they brought to see "Girl of the Limberlost."

I believe there is food for an article condemning the practice of showing the dead in newsreels. I remember just a few years back that a corpse was rarely exposed to public view. Theatregoers are not calloused, worldly newspaper or newsreel men, and harrowing scenes make an indelible impression that even a light, enjoyable feature cannot eradicate. After viewing such scenes, it is inevitable that the average moviegoer will leave with a peculiar slant on the theatre. They came to be refreshed mentally and leave feeling as though they attended a wake!

I am sure that there are many exhibitors and showmen who will agree with me on the above, and appreciate anything you do to overcome this unnecessary and uncalled for realism in newsreels.—Harry Black, Manager, Rialto and Empire Theatres, Glens Falls, N. Y.

Proclaims Happiness Week

Atlanta Campaign Complete On "Anne of Green Gables"

To advertise the opening of "Anne of Green Gables" at the Fox, Atlanta, Ga., City Manager E. E. Whitaker, aided by the Lucas and Jenkins publicity forces, and H. M. Lyons, RKO Radio's Atlanta branch manager, put on a thorough campaign, one of the featured slants being the decoration of lobby of the closed downtown Georgia Theatre.

Some issues back, an account was carried of Whitaker's activities at the closed Georgia to publicize the dates at the Fox, situated out of Atlanta's amusement section. The tieup on "Gables" was equally effective, what with a lobby flash that combined the appeal of the coming holidays with the fame of the book from which the picture was made. Girl, in Anne Shirley costume, distributed advertising at the closed house during rush hours.

As the feature has no outstanding names, the fame of the book was utilized by special showing before the Better Films Committee. Stamped opinion cards were given out at the preview, and when filled in by the audience were mailed to their friends. Library accepted imprinted bookmarks, and placed the cardboard cutouts in children's books.

Heralds including a coloring contest were given out at schools three days ahead, elaborate street float put out in advance and during run, and in addition to the other press book tieups, many of the leading downtown windows were promoted for tieup displays of one kind or another.

THE PRESS BOOK—FOR AND AGIN'

*Canadian Quigley Award Winner
Continues Discussion; Analyzes Press Book Faults and Virtues*

by GENE CURTIS

Sales Promotion Director, Famous Players - Canadian Circuit

Generally speaking, I believe that press sheets do about fifty per cent of the job that they might be able to do and I say this after having had experience in a New York home office preparing press books and also in the field using them.

The first thing to be borne in mind is the fact that from necessity, press sheets are usually rush jobs and in some cases are prepared in whole or in part before the picture has been seen. This may account for some of the far-fetched ideas.

Managers must also bear in mind the fact that press books must be a blanket proposition to cover all theatres large and small, and while designed primarily for first run theatres, must also take care of subsequent runs.

This applies to the point made by the writer in the November 10th issue where he criticizes press sheet newspaper contests. Yet every week brings me evidence that there are newspapers that will take these contests. The same thing applies to serial stories, for in some cities I have had absolutely no luck in placing these, while in others the newspapers would accept them. However, I do wish that press book editors would omit the phrase "Your newspaper editor will welcome this with open arms."

Says Newspaper Mats Poor Quality

Regarding newspaper ad mats, the biggest trouble we have is from the poor quality of the mat itself. Further trouble is encountered because of the fact that photographs are not sufficiently re-touched, or because the mat has too much detail. Line drawings are usually very poor and do not resemble the stars they are supposed to represent. We also have the trouble of not having sufficient variety of mats in the large and small sizes and in Canada this is aggravated by the fact that because of the heavy duty, the exchanges do not always bring in a complete set of mats.

Another great trouble is encountered by theatres who prepare their own ads and this is due to the fact that there may be an excellent illustration in the press book but when we go to make up our own ads, we find that the particular still or stills are not available. I believe that Metro and Paramount furnish special ad stills which include the illustrations used in the press books.

The problem of advertising double bills as mentioned by your writer, is often quite difficult to overcome and here is a suggestion for press sheet editors. If the ad mats were made slightly smaller than newspaper's column width, it would enable the manager to have room enough to put a rule around the two mats of his double bill without sacrificing any essential part of the mat.

Regarding paper, I agree that often the selling quality is lost through too much art

Evidently the press book argument is still a live topic, to judge from the continued interest shown by the members. Following the opinions published in the past weeks, we present on this page a splendid article from Gene Curtis, who served long on the theatre front before taking over his present assignment. More on the subject next week.—A-MIKE.

work. I remember one situation where as manager, I used 200 Three-Sheets every week and many a battle I had with the exchanges because I used block printed paper instead of exchange paper. For instance, if your picture is Eddie Cantor, that is the whole story in itself and illustrations of Cantor's banjo eyes would help, but otherwise a lot of art work is unnecessary.

There is no doubt that the exploitation sections could be greatly improved, but here again I wonder if the managers are not partly to blame. Recently I was talking to a prominent politician and he commented on the number of people who criticize politics and yet do not even take the trouble to vote. This same thing might be true of managers who criticize press sheets but do not take the trouble to report their own excellent merchandising so that it might be passed on for the benefit of their fellow managers. As often pointed out in your columns, managers do a double injustice by hiding their light under a bushel. In the first place they do not get for themselves the personal credit and publicity to which they are entitled and secondly, they do not make their ideas available to other managers. If managers would report their outstanding stunts to the trade papers and to the exploitation departments of the producers, I am sure that it would be a better world for all of us.

Criticizes Lack of Material

I cannot agree with your writer that no manager would use such old but still good gags as tie-ups on music, fashions, perfumes, books and so forth, as I know from personal experience and in reading the reports from our managers that some of the very best tie-ups have been on these same subjects. But on this same subject again comes the problem that often ideas are suggested but apparently no effort is made to supply the necessary material to complete the plan. Just yesterday I read a press book which suggested a hair dress tie-up, although the press sheet frankly admitted that no stills were available. How can a manager be expected to get co-operative windows and newspaper ads if he does not have the proper material? I have found that in practically any city there is at least one beauty parlor willing to feature cinema beauty fashions. Yet it is almost impossible to get stills showing back views or even side views of the star's head dress.

Another help to managers would be the omission of "etc." which sometimes seems to be the editor's substitute for ideas. A further help would be to include sample newspaper stories for contests. Instead of just advising that a story should be run every day, give actual suggestions as to the story. A good manager is not necessarily a writer and if he has these stories prepared for him it is easier for him to get started on a contest and to sell his editor.

And here's another suggestion for press book editors which would benefit our entire industry. If the extravagant use of superlatives in ads and readers was cut down, newspapers would be more apt to use theatre publicity and those who read the papers would have greater faith in what they read. If we use all our big adjectives on an ordinary program picture, what is there left to say for a really big picture?

Favors Adopting Actual Stunts

In general I agree with your recent writer that unfortunately a great many press sheets are simply carbon copies of former books with the only change being in the name of the picture. There certainly is a big need and opportunity for better press books and this could be accomplished through three means. The first would be to edit the books from the Coast where those concerned would actually know what is going on and have an opportunity of working closer by seeing actual sets, costumes and scenes, as well as rushes, and to really get the "feel" of the picture. The second suggestion is that those working on press sheets should have had actual experience operating theatres. This may be true now but a great many press books do not indicate it. The third suggestion is to establish a clearing house of ideas and an incentive for managers to contribute. This would be similar to the work you are doing or the contests run by some companies for the best exploitation campaigns. If ideas from previous pictures were adapted to new pictures, managers could be given credit and would be glad to get this international publicity for themselves in the press books. The producers could even pay managers a small sum for each idea which is used in a press book. A further advantage of crediting managers with ideas is to show other managers that these things have actually been done and are not merely a press book editor's idea of what might be done.

J. C. JENKINS--His COLYUM

Fort Worth, Texas

Dear Herald:

Some of your readers may not know where Ft. Worth is, and for their information we will state that it is in Texas. It is bounded on the north by the aurora borealis, on the east by Dallas, on the south by Uvalde, Vice President Garner's home town, and on the west by "Shades of evening twilights gathered from the slopes of long ago," as Opie Reid said. As near as we can guess it there are about 160,000 folks here, all Democrats except three—old man Jones and his wife and their son Abner.

There is only one thing that holds Ft. Worth back from being the principal city of the west, and that is Dallas, but they should not charge that up to Dallas, because over there they have something like 250,000 folks, mostly Americans, and excellent people. We are not acquainted with many of the Dallas people, but we know one, and he is a most excellent friend of ours, by the name of Wallace Walthall, and when we tell you that he is a brother of Henry Walthall, the screen star, you will require no further recommendation.

We have been here for two days and we doubt if over three-fourths of the Ft. Worth folks know we are in town. We have driven all over the place and haven't seen a penitentiary yet, which makes us doubt if they need one. The Ft. Worth folks refer to Dallas as "That cross-roads village on the east", and Dallas calls Ft. Worth "That cow town on the west", and if both towns will permit us to comment on it we might say that there is no doggone sense in one town slamming another like that, especially when they are both good towns.

According to the legend, Texas at one time was claimed by the boys on the south side of the Rio Grande, but the boys on the north side got their necks bowed and stuck their horns in the sand and said no. Santa Ana took some of his Mexican bean shooters and waded the Rio Grande and came up to establish a boundary line, but Sam Houston had already established the Rio Grande as the boundary line on the south and when he got through with Santa Ana he made that Mexican look like something the pup drug in. After things got quieted down they cut a chunk off of Texas and made the balance of the United States out of it. If it hadn't been for that, Texas would have been quite a good sized state. Well, anyhow, now you know where Ft. Worth is, so don't ask us anything more about it.

Longhorn Memories

It beats all what a wonderful memory some of these longhorns have. When we walked into the Iris theatre L. C. Tidball, the manager, looked up and said, "Hello, Colonel, when did you blow in?" and he hadn't seen us for four years. We know why we are remembered, it's our mug; nobody could forget that. Then we had a real old fashioned gabfest, after which he persuaded us to renew his subscription to the HERALD. Mr. Tidball and the Iris are two of the reasons why Ft. Worth is so prominent in business circles all over Texas.

Then we drove up to the New Liberty theatre, where we met L. B. Lewis, the manager. At first L. B. was going to get his shotgun, until he took the second look at us and then said, "Well, I'll be doggoned. Are you here again? You were here only four years ago." We said to him, "Brother Lewis, it is a pleasure to us to know that the authorities are still allowing you to run at large. We can't understand it." Then we shook hands and he said, "Welcome to our city." But before we got to Ft. Worth we called on our old friend Henry Sparks, who runs the Grand theatre at Cooper. When we called on Henry before, his wife was superintending his labors raking the leaves off of the front yard. Henry knew us as soon as we got out of the car, which shows you what a good memory he has. He didn't threaten us with any violence, which proves that these Longhorns have a very mild disposition, as a rule, but they are all pretty quick on the trigger.

On to Dallas

Dallas, Texas

It is just 35 miles, six rods and 17 inches from Ft. Worth to Dallas by actual measurement. That makes Dallas too close to Ft. Worth or Ft. Worth too close to Dallas, we don't know which. We went from Ft. Worth over to Dallas today and met a number of prominent people, among them being John L. Franconi (a Swede), who is an American exchangeman for Gaumont British films, and Claude Ezell, a distributor of independent films and operator of several houses in San Antonio. Claude reminded us very much of a very dear friend of ours who is a swell guy. We hope to see him again sometime. Then we walked out of the Fox office and butted right into Harry E. Nichols. Harry, you know, is another hound that the HERALD allows to run loose without a collar.

We went into a cafe with Nichols to get a lunch and who should come in but Wallace Walthall, the very man we wanted to see, but he could only talk with us while we were eating a sandwich because he had to catch a train for Little Rock, Arkansas, but he gave us a lot of valuable information about Henry B. Walthall, the screen star, and his family, that we were very glad to get. Sorry we couldn't have a long chat with him. You boys who don't happen to know Wallace had better get acquainted with him right away, for he is 100 per cent plus and his word is as good as any man's note or a government bond.

Just a Little Yarn

Nichols said he would come over to our room in Ft. Worth that night and have a talk with us. There was once he told the truth. He came over and entertained us until 1:30 a. m. telling of his experiences when he was on the Pacific coast recently. He told about shooting deer, cougar and mountain lions with an air rifle and catching Marlin and Hammerhead sharks with an 8 ounce fly rod, and then he said, "You know how to handle a shark with a fly rod, don't you, Colonel?" and we replied, "Well, not exactly, but we remember being up in Alaska during the hard winter of 1849 and we ran out of meat, so we took our gun and started out to get a caribou. The snow was six feet deep on the level and it was hard going, and after we shot three or four caribou and was about tuckered out, a polar bear came along and we grabbed onto him and rode him back to camp." Nichols got up and put on his coat and said, "Let's see, how long have you been with the HERALD, Colonel?" and we replied, "Something like ten years." Then he said, "Well, well, it seems to me that with that much experience you could have gone a little stronger than that." And we recalled that Nichols had been with the HERALD some little time himself. But then, what's the sense in letting a guy like that beat you anyhow?

Over at Grand Prairie is an operator of a theatre by the name of J. S. Walker. He doesn't claim to be related to Jimmy Walker, and we don't blame him for that. He runs the Texas theatre and the Dallas folks and Ft. Worth folks never go to his theatre without seeing a good show.

Walker told us that going without the Herald was like going without socks on in the wintertime; he just simply couldn't do it. And that's the reason why he wrote us a check that is worth 100 cents on the dollar.

A visit to Texas without visiting Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Cooper of the Alvarado theatre at Alvarado would be about as satisfactory as trying to poke warm butter up a flea's left ear with a red hot awl. We tried it once and the fleas have had it in for us ever since. Mr. Cooper thinks that the HERALD comes as near being 100 per cent as it is possible for magazines to be. Mr. Cooper is right, just as he always is. We hope to visit him sometimes when we have time to do the job up right.

It's a Fact

Over at Stephenville we met Mr. Gerhard, one of the Gerhard brothers who operate the Palace theatre. They were putting up a banner across the street when we called, announcing "Bank Night," but Mr. Gerhard stopped long enough to visit with us and tell us that the HERALD was as necessary to operating his theatre correctly as the boy in the booth. That's going pretty strong but it is a fact.

Then we met Thomas Donnell who runs the Majestic. We suggested that originally they wrote "O" in front of Donnell and he said we were correct. Then we told him that if we could stay there overnight we too could have a real nice time and he said we were correct again, because his wife had gone to Dallas that day and wouldn't be home until tomorrow. What's the sense of a woman coming home so soon anyhow?

We are in Strawn tonight, and that's going to be tough on Strawn, but if we run out of meat we are going down on the Brazoo river and catch us a polar bear, and maybe some sharks.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

AMONG THE MISSING: Richard Cromwell, Billie Seward—This is a plenty good picture for any man's town. Although it did not go over so big at the box-office, we have no complaint to make. Played Nov. 6-7-8.—Ivan Ashcraft, Midway Theatre, Protection, Kan. General patronage.

CAPTAIN HATES THE SEA, THE: Victor McLaglen, John Gilbert—Drew fairly well but did not please the majority. Personally we liked it. Running time, 92 minutes. Played Nov. 28-29.—Geo. F. Smith, Lyric Theatre, Lapeer, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

FIGHTING CODE, THE: Buck Jones—All the western fans turned out to see this one. It is a good western and is full of thrills and has plenty of action. Played Nov. 2-3.—Ivan Ashcraft, Midway Theatre, Protection, Kan. General patronage.

IT HAPPENED ONE NIGHT: Clark Gable, Claudette Colbert—This is without doubt the best picture of the year. Drew fine even if we did play it old.—J. O. Smith, Paramount and Dixie Theatres, Ashland and Lineville, Ala. Small town patronage.

JEALOUSY: Nancy Carroll, Donald Cook—If you knock off the first three letters of the title its description is just about right.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

JEALOUSY: Nancy Carroll, Donald Cook—A fairly good picture with a surprise ending. Should have played it on bargain night instead of Friday and Saturday. Running time, 69 minutes. Played Nov. 30-Dec. 1.—Geo. F. Smith, Lyric Theatre, Lapeer, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

LADY BY CHOICE: Carole Lombard, May Robson—It is a swell picture. Grab it and play it at the earliest possible date. Advertise this one highly. Once inside your theatre the picture will take care of the rest. Played Nov. 4-5.—Ivan Ashcraft, Midway Theatre, Protection, Kan. General patronage.

TEXAS RANGER, THE: Buck Jones—Another excellent western. Buck Jones always draws and pleases. This is one of Columbia's reissues and I was just a little afraid of them until we ran the first one. They are just as good, if not better, than any of the newest westerns today.—J. O. Smith, Paramount and Dixie Theatres, Ashland and Lineville, Ala. Small town patronage.

THAT'S GRATITUDE: Frank Craven, Mary Carlisle—This is only fair entertainment of the comedy drama type. Craven may go over well on Broadway, but here he was just another flop at the box-office. Our patrons don't care for this type of entertainment and they didn't hesitate to tell us that. The cast performs wonderfully, but that was not enough to pull up the story. Played on late Saturday night show to only fair business. Running time, 64 minutes. Played Nov. 24.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

WHAT PRICE INNOCENCE?: Willard Mack, Jean Parker—This picture sure brought them in. It's old but what does it matter if you haven't played it. Thanks, Columbia, for another swell show.—J. O. Smith, Paramount and Dixie Theatres, Ashland and Lineville, Ala. Small town patronage.

WHITE EAGLE: Buck Jones—Columbia sure deserves compliments on their high class westerns. "White Eagle" is one of the best. Play it.—J. O. Smith, Paramount and Dixie Theatres, Ashland and Lineville, Ala. Small town patronage.

First National

BRITISH AGENT: Kay Francis, Leslie Howard—This did not draw because people were afraid it was a foreign picture. I am guessing at the cause but the fact remains that they didn't come out to see it and it didn't do business.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

BRITISH AGENT: Leslie Howard, Kay Francis—Two of my favorite stars in a show that made me wish I had never heard of them. Another of those foreign headaches that the producers persist in wishing off on the long suffering exhibitor. The patrons don't suffer long—they walk out. Couldn't understand more than half of it but guess that is just as well. Pay for it and don't run it. Running time, 81 minutes. Played Nov. 17-18.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

BRITISH AGENT: Kay Francis, Leslie Howard—Fine picture that drew well the first night due to the popularity of Kay Francis. The second night was a bust. Running time, 81 minutes. Played Dec. 2-3.—

In this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

What the Picture Did for Me

MOTION PICTURE HERALD

1790 Broadway, New York

Geo. F. Smith, Lyric Theatre, Lapeer, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

CIRCUS CLOWN: Joe E. Brown, Patricia Ellis—Yes, mam, he's done it again. Joe's given us another real comedy, even better than "Son of a Sailor." It's perfect family entertainment.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty Theatre, Ft. Worth, Texas. General patronage.

GENTLEMEN ARE BORN: Franchot Tone, Jean Muir—This is really a good picture. It is well acted, all six of main characters do exceptionally well. It would have pleased me more if Jean Muir would have had more to say and do, but parts are rather evenly divided. It is a forceful, dramatic picture, concerning youth just out of college. It should please the greater percentage of any audience. Running time, 78 minutes. Played Dec. 1-3.—Harold Haubein, Cozy Theatre, Lockwood, Mo. Small town and rural patronage.

HAPPINESS AHEAD: Dick Powell, Josephine Hutchinson—This was a swell show. Had music and a good plot and no unreasonable dragging in of a chorus. It was a very pleasing show. The new girl makes friends and has personality. You and your folks will like her.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

I SELL ANYTHING: Pat O'Brien, Ann Dvorak—This proved a dandy Friday-Saturday show. Clean comedy and a nice plot and people were unanimous in praising it.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

LOST LADY, A: Barbara Stanwyck—The best thing about this production is the title. And this star is just being hidden behind such stories. A good plot to hold interest but not to sell people, and the little lady has been punished so much on the screen that people react sadly when you show her pretty face at the front door.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

MIDNIGHT ALIBI: Richard Barthelmess, Ann Dvorak—This is a good finale for the star and a good one to skip. Title is bad and picture just fair.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

SIX DAY BIKE RIDER: Joe E. Brown—This is a typical Joe Brown picture and one that you can sell to his friends and keep them. It is good fun.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

SIX DAY BIKE RIDER: Joe E. Brown—A very good comedy and typical Brown hokum but the rank and file like it. Running time, 69 minutes. Played Dec. 2-3.—M. W. Matthecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Small town patronage.

Fox

BACHELOR OF ARTS: Tom Brown, Anita Louise—A nice little program picture that pleased a preview crowd.—C. M. Hartman, Liberty Theatre, Carnegie, Okla. Small town patronage.

BABY TAKE A BOW: Shirley Temple, James Dunn, Claire Trevor—A little extra business and everyone pleased. Story good and the director used rare judgment in his handling of this marvelously sweet little girl; giving neither too much nor too little of her on the screen. The resulting well balanced picture satisfied old and young. Played Dec. 9-10.—P. G. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

BABY TAKE A BOW: Shirley Temple—A swell show. Drawing power fine. Pleased everyone. Since the first run we have brought this back for a return date and did fair even on second run. You can't go wrong on this one.—J. O. Smith, Paramount and Dixie Theatre, Ashland and Lineville, Ala. Small town patronage.

CARAVAN: Loretta Young—Just fair. Too long, too much repetition and moving cameras makes it hard on the eyes. Did a very poor business for us. Running time, 98 minutes. Played Dec. 5-6-7.—M. W. Matthecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Small town patronage.

CARAVAN: Charles Boyer, Loretta Young, Jean Parker, Philips Holmes—Here is a grand picture that offers a variety of entertainment that should please everyone. It is a dramatic romance, located in rural Hungary at the grape harvest time. The musical atmosphere of light opera adds much to the entertainment. The gypsy band with their music practically puts the show over and the spectacular groupings are great. Business good one day. Running time, 100 minutes. Played Nov. 29.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

CAROLINA: Janet Gaynor, Lionel Barrymore—A swell picture, liked by all. The box-office was above average. Played Oct. 19-20.—Ivan Ashcraft, Midway Theatre, Protection, Kan. General patronage.

CAT'S PAW, THE: Harold Lloyd, Una Merkel—Lloyd seems to be forgotten, but this was a good picture and was enjoyed by those who saw it. Plenty of comedy and good action. Played Nov. 12-13.—A. E. Christian, Wayne Theatre, Monticello, Ky. Small town patronage.

CAT'S PAW, THE: Harold Lloyd, Una Merkel—Just as exhibitors have reported, this is decidedly different from the usual Harold Lloyd production in that it has less gags and more story. It is clever and replete with action-filled situations that kept our audience in an uproar.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty Theatre, Ft. Worth, Texas. General patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN IN LONDON: Warner Oland—The best Chan for a long time. It pleases because it entertains. What more could you ask for in a program picture. Played Nov. 28-29.—Harold Haubein, Cozy Theatre, Lockwood, Mo. Small town and rural patronage.

DAVID HARUM: Will Rogers, Louise Dresser—A very fine picture, liked by everyone. The best picture that Will Rogers has ever made. A very good show for the entire family.—J. A. Dushinberre, Red Bud Theatre, Red Bud, Ill. Small town patronage.

FIRST WORLD WAR, THE: In cooperation with our local American Legion we got behind this one in a big way and put it over with a capital BANG. Picture fair. No kicks.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

GEORGE WHITE'S SCANDALS: Rudy Vallee, George White, Alice Faye, Jimmy Durante—A very good picture. We played this one too late to do much business but it was no fault of the picture. Played Nov. 16-17.—Ivan Ashcraft, Midway Theatre, Protection, Kan. General patronage.

GRAND CANARY: Warner Baxter, Madge Evans—Wish we had not played it. Took a loss. Nothing but highbrow English brogue. Running time, 74 minutes.—G. Carey, Strand Theatre, Paris, Ark. General patronage.

I AM SUZANNE!: Lilian Harvey, Gene Raymond—This picture was fine but too long. The adult group liked it better than did the younger set. It went over very well and good print and recording clear. Lilian Harvey is a good actress. I wish they would put her in Edith Wharton's "Ethan Frome" as the character of mother in the story. Running time, 98 minutes. Played Dec. 7-8.—Albert Hefferan, Owl Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. Children and college students.

JUDGE PRIEST: Will Rogers, Anita Louise, Tom Brown, Rochelle Hudson—This is one of the finest pictures ever produced and should please the masses. It is Rogers' best picture and drew out patrons who had not been out in years. It is a comedy drama, based on the Irvin S. Cobb story. It is located in a small Kentucky town in 1890. This is wonderful entertainment for the entire family. Played two days to best business ever on Rogers picture. Running time, 78 minutes. Played Dec. 3-4.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

LAST TRAIL, THE: George O'Brien, Claire Trevor—This is a good western picture based on the story by Zane Grey. It is full of action, thrills, and the comedy is furnished by El Brendel. This picture combines the gangster theme with the straight western story and should please everyone. O'Brien always draws well here and we played one day to best Saturday business in several weeks. Running time, 60 minutes. Played Dec. 1.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

LOVE TIME: "Pat" Paterson, Nils Asther—This is a wonderful picture that should please every one. It is a romantic drama of the life and love of Franz Schubert, the noted Austrian music composer. The beautiful music by the composer forms the background for his romance with a simple country girl, who turns out to be of noble birth. Great entertainment for the entire family. Played one day to very good business. Running time, 73 minutes. Played Nov. 28.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

MARIE GALANTE: Spencer Tracy, Ketti Gallian—A great picture with a fine cast. Ketti is one of the most natural actresses to make a recent appearance. Tracy and Sparks are good for me any time. Fetchit takes honors too. Picture has good story and interesting setting. But why tack a woman's name on for a title and ruin some box-office value. Will get business if cast and story are given space. Running time, 87 minutes. Played Nov. 28-29.—Martin S. Lane, Manager, Logan Theatre, Noblesville, Ind. Small town patronage.

MARIE GALANTE: Ketti Gallian, Spencer Tracy—Nothing there. Our opinion is that it is poor entertainment and no box-office draw. Why not use our own actors? Running time, 88 minutes. Played Nov. 23-24.—M. W. Mattechek, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Small town patronage.

MR. SKITCH: Will Rogers—Will Rogers sure packs our house for us. All we have to do is just say Will Rogers and in they come. They all say Will Rogers is getting better. This one is a good picture and we had an unusual business both Friday and Saturday. Played Nov. 9-10.—Ivan Ashcraft, Midway Theatre, Protection, Kan. General patronage.

SERVANTS' ENTRANCE: Janet Gaynor, Lew Ayres—Everybody seemed satisfied with this Gaynor offering. Did a little above average business. Very poor title. This kept many away. Janet and Lew make a clever team. Running time, 91 minutes. Played Nov. 24-26.—Harold Haubein, Cozy Theatre, Lockwood, Mo. Small town and rural patronage.

WORLD MOVES ON, THE: Madeleine Carroll, Franchot Tone—Too long. No one to see it on second day. Another "Power and Glory" here. Running time, 93 minutes.—G. Carey, Strand Theatre, Paris, Ark. General patronage.

Mascot

YOUNG AND BEAUTIFUL: William Haines, Judith Allen, Wampas Baby Stars of 1934—This is absolutely the sorriest and biggest flop we have ever run in our theatre, unless it is Paramount's "Crime Without Passion." I would say that it is a toss-up between the two pictures for the worst possible honors. Played Nov. 25-26.—Ivan Ashcraft, Midway Theatre, Protection, Kan. General patronage.

MGM

BARRETT'S OF WIMPOLE STREET, THE: Norma Shearer, Fredric March, Charles Laughton—A wonderful picture that brought people from adjoining towns and people here who seldom go to a movie. Comments ranged from wonderful to "the bunk," but it pleased practically all the adults. Not so good for the young folks but it is the kind of picture the exhibitor is glad to run for the prestige it brings to the theatre. Blizzard two nights or I think it would have been very satisfactory at the box-office. Running time, 111 minutes. Played Dec. 1-3.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

CHAINED: Joan Crawford, Clark Gable—Excellent. Joan Crawford and Clark Gable are always popular here and they give a fine performance in this one. Stuart Erwin in a comedy part is excellent and furnishes all the humor. Struck bad weather two nights but that was not the fault of the picture. Pleased all who came. Running time, 74 minutes. Played Nov. 23-25.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

DANCING LADY: Joan Crawford, Clark Gable—This is a swell show. Dancing scenes fine. Am looking forward to their new release, "Forsaking All Others."—J. O. Smith, Paramount and Dixie Theatres, Ashland and Lineville, Ala. Small town patronage.

DEATH ON THE DIAMOND: Robert Young, Madge Evans—Excellent. Pleased the baseball fans and all the other patrons. Action, suspense, romance. Just the kind of show the small town needs. No complaints about this one. Running time, 72 minutes. Played Nov. 14-15.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

EVELYN PRENTICE: William Powell, Myrna Loy—A good picture that pleased those who saw it, but for some reason did below average business. Not near as good as "Thin Man."—C. M. Hartman, Liberty Theatre, Carnegie, Okla. Small town patronage.

GIRL FROM MISSOURI, THE: Jean Harlow—This is a good show. Entertaining from start to finish. If you can get a crowd the first night, they will surely advertise it. Played Dec. 10-11.—J. O. Smith, Paramount and Dixie Theatres, Ashland and Lineville, Ala. Small town patronage.

HAVE A HEART: James Dunn, Jean Parker—Another good one from Leo. Pleased everyone, young and old. Running time, 82 minutes. Played Dec. 5-6.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

HIDEOUT: Robert Montgomery, Maureen O'Sullivan—Another one of these it-might-have-happened-in-Kansas pictures that please the patrons and make expenses. Good acting, good story; good recording, good photography and good comments. If we could get more pictures like this the depression would not be so depressing. Running time, 82 minutes. Played November 28-29.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

HIDE-OUT: Robert Montgomery, Maureen O'Sullivan—This is a grand picture that pleased all of my patrons. It is a romantic comedy with Montgomery at his best. It is the story of a big-shot racketeer, who is forced to hide out on a farm and falls in love with a beautiful country girl. There is nothing objectionable in this show and it is excellent family entertainment. Played one day to very good business. Running time, 82 minutes. Played Nov. 30.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

HOLD YOUR MAN: Clark Gable, Jean Harlow—This picture holds our high record now for Thursday and Friday. We played this late instead of "The Show Off," which we have heard was not so good. Everybody pleased.—J. O. Smith, Paramount and Dixie Theatres, Ashland and Lineville, Ala. Small town patronage.

HOLLYWOOD PARTY, THE: Jimmy Durante, Lupe Velez—This is only fair. No one likes Jimmy Durante here and he has too big a part in this picture. I think the best bit is the Mickey Mouse sequence and, of course, Laurel and Hardy are always good. Played with vaudeville to fair receipts. Played Dec. 5.—J. O. Smith, Paramount and Dixie Theatres, Ashland and Lineville, Ala. Small town patronage.

LAZY RIVER: Jean Parker, Robert Young, Ted Healy—Nothing outstanding about this one, but everyone who saw it liked it. It was so much different, scenes on the Mississippi River, and water looks good to anyone in dry western Kansas. Played Nov. 23-24.—Ivan Ashcraft, Midway Theatre, Protection, Kan. General patronage.

MEN IN WHITE: Clark Gable, Myrna Loy—We had many good comments on this picture, although we had such a slim crowd. It did not seem to draw for us. Played Nov. 20-21-22.—Ivan Ashcraft, Midway Theatre, Protection, Kan. General patronage.

MERRY WIDOW, THE: Jeanette MacDonald, Maurice Chevalier—Another million dollar flop. I just can't get this kind of stuff over in my town. Business below average, only a few of the cash customers pleased.—C. M. Hartman, Liberty Theatre, Carnegie, Okla. Small town patronage.

MURDER IN THE PRIVATE CAR: Charles Ruggles, Una Merkel—This is about the best thrill picture of the year. Everyone liked it. Drawing power not so good but no fault of the picture. We expect to play a return date on this.—J. O. Smith, Paramount and Dixie Theatres, Ashland and Lineville, Ala. Small town patronage.

MURDER IN THE PRIVATE CAR: Charlie Ruggles, Una Merkel—Whoops! I've just had a pleasant surprise. I thought the good old train melodramas with the runaway coach died with the silent pictures, but instead these stories have been hibernating on producer's shelves waiting until the public would begin to clamor for action instead of talk. This has all the old ingredients—the comedy detective, the mysterious villain, the lovely young heiress, the frightened negro porter, and a loose gorilla all on a fast train. The picture starts out rather silly but it gains momentum until it is screamingly thrilling. Our audience enjoyed every moment of it.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty Theatre, Ft. Worth, Texas. General patronage.

MYSTERY OF MR. X: Robert Montgomery, Elizabeth Allan—It is a very good mystery play. The people liked it because it was so much different than the mystery stories they have seen before. Box-office average. Played Oct. 26-27.—Ivan Ashcraft, Midway Theatre, Protection, Kan. General patronage.

OUTCAST LADY: Constance Bennett—Good story and well acted. But didn't click on Bargain Night. They don't seem to care for Bennett. Running time, 79 minutes. Played Nov. 27.—Geo. F. Smith, Lyric Theatre, Lapeer, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

QUEEN CHRISTINA: Greta Garbo, John Gilbert—Just another program picture that failed to draw. Most people in our town do not like historic pictures such as this and maybe that's the reason for our failure. Played Nov. 13-14-15.—Ivan Ashcraft, Midway Theatre, Protection, Kan. General patronage.

RED DUST: Clark Gable, Jean Harlow—This is a good show. Played old but the print was still good. Everyone pleased on bargain night.—J. O. Smith, Paramount and Dixie Theatres, Ashland and Lineville, Ala. Small town patronage.

SADIE MCKEE: Joan Crawford, Franchot Tone, Edward Arnold, Gene Raymond, Esther Ralston, Jean Dixon—This is truly Joan Crawford's masterpiece. Most of them claimed that this was her best picture. This one pleased 100 per cent to the Friday and Saturday crowd. Played Nov. 30-Dec. 1.—Ivan Ashcraft, Midway Theatre, Protection, Kan. General patronage.

TARZAN AND HIS MATE: Johnny Weissmuller, Maureen O'Sullivan—This was an outstanding picture but it did not seem to draw but it was not the fault of the picture. No gross at box-office. Played Oct. 30-31-Nov. 1.—Ivan Ashcraft, Midway Theatre, Protection, Kan. General patronage.

TREASURE ISLAND: Jackie Cooper, Wallace Beery—A good show. Especially for the children. We had more school kids on this than any picture in the last six months, and they brought the old folks. Receipts above average.—J. O. Smith, Paramount and Dixie Theatres, Ashland and Lineville, Ala. Small town patronage.

WHAT EVERY WOMAN KNOWS: Helen Hayes—No good for small towns. The idea for the story is good but as produced is overdrawn. I imagine this was produced to sell in Europe, which is okay, but why make us run it. Audience reaction! Did not please. Business very poor.—C. M. Hartman, Liberty Theatre, Carnegie, Okla. Small town patronage.

Monogram

GIRL OF THE LIMBERLOST: Marian Marsh, Ralph Morgan—The "Girl of the Limberlost" is one of the cleverest pictures that I have seen on the screen. No one actor had to spoil it by over-acting doing his part. Instead of acting, they seemed to have lived their parts. To my estimation this one was perfect for both small and large cities or towns. We have gained some new patrons since this one. Book this one at your earliest date. Played Nov. 27-28-29.—Ivan Ashcraft, Midway Theatre, Protection, Kan. General patronage.

GIRL OF THE LIMBERLOST: Marian Marsh, Ralph Morgan—Pleased all those who care for good, clean entertainment. Drew up to par with other specials. Running time, 86 minutes.—G. Carey, Strand Theatre, Paris, Ark. General patronage.

TRAIL BEYOND, THE: John Wayne—An outstanding western. John Wayne is fast becoming one of our leading western stars. The story of the Northwest Mounted Police, with beautiful scenery, action, and romance. Played Dec. 8.—J. O. Smith, Paramount and Dixie Theatres, Ashland and Lineville, Ala. Small town patronage.

Paramount

BELLE OF THE NINETIES: Mae West—Good picture, although the zip has been taken out of Mae's dialogue. Compared with her previous pictures it seems tame. Did satisfactory business here. Running time, 75 minutes. Played Dec. 1.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

BELLE OF THE NINETIES: Mae West—This picture sure will make her next picture a success. It will be so much better than people are expecting. I had more unfriendly remarks made about this production than any I have run for months. Sure they came to see it because it lives on the reputation but it certainly killed Mae here. They will come once more to see if this was normal or an accident and if she can give them a story next time, perhaps she can "come back."—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

BELLE OF THE NINETIES: Mae West, Roger Pryor, John Mack Brown, Katherine De Mille, Duke Ellington and his orchestra—Good business in spite of keen competitive pictures. Same old Mae in a suitable background. Personally, could do without West from now on. Solicited and other opinion seems to point to a Mae West black-out in the near future. Running time, 72 minutes. Played Nov. 25-26-27.—Martin S. Lane, Manager, Logan Theatre, Noblesville, Ind. Small town patronage.

BELLE OF THE NINETIES: Mae West, Roger Pryor, John Mack Brown, Katherine De Mille, Duke Ellington and his orchestra—This is a very good picture that pleased all who saw it. It is a typical Mae West picture, with plenty of comedy, drama, music, thrills and excitement. There is nothing objectionable about the show, but this does not come up to the last work of Miss West. Mae seems to be losing out since her last picture. Good entertainment for adults. Played two days to only fair business. Running time, 76 minutes. Played Nov. 26-27.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

CLEOPATRA: Claudette Colbert—A typical De Mille production and a good one which failed miserably at the box-office. Running time, 106 minutes. Played Dec. 5-6.—Geo. F. Smith, Lyric Theatre, Lapeer, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

CRIME WITHOUT PASSION: Claude Rains, Margot—Being a great admirer of Ben Hecht's writing and philosophy, naturally we'd be for anything he does. But many of our customers remarked "great." "so different," "very exciting," "a natural," "just how people would act under the circumstances." When you can hear a pin drop at anytime during a picture you know you've got something. Hecht and MacArthur are away out in front. However, we do not say this picture will please children or certain classes. Running time, 70 minutes. Played Dec. 11.—Geo. F. Smith, Lyric Theatre, Lapeer, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

ELMER AND ELSIE: George Bancroft, Frances Fuller—A few enjoyable sequences, but on the whole, poor entertainment. Karns is okay here, but not in his role in this picture. Barber is good in his usual type. Good shorts helped some. If you have to run it, try mid-week or on double feature program. Running time, 62 minutes. Played Dec. 5-6.—Martin S. Lane, Manager, Logan Theatre, Noblesville, Ind. Small town patronage.

LADIES SHOULD LISTEN: Cary Grant, Frances Drake—A fair picture with a few laughs. Failed to draw on Bargain Night. Running time, 63 minutes. Played Dec. 4.—Geo. F. Smith, Lyric Theatre, Lapeer, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

LITTLE MISS MARKER: Shirley Temple—This is the best picture that Shirley Temple has ever made. Broke our all time high record. Many came back a second time. We expect to play a repeat run on it. —J. O. Smith, Paramount and Dixie Theatres, Ashland and Lineville, Ala. Small town patronage.

MRS. WIGGS OF THE CABBAGE PATCH: W. C. Fields, Pauline Lord, Zasu Pitts—Swell picture. They all came out with a smile and praise for this one. Did more business on this than 90 per cent of the so-called specials. Running time, 75 minutes. Played Nov. 24.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

MRS. WIGGS OF THE CABBAGE PATCH: Pauline Lord, W. C. Fields, Zasu Pitts—This is an outstanding picture. Pleased everyone. Failed to draw for us on account of bad weather. This one will stand extra advertising. Played Dec. 3-4.—J. O. Smith, Paramount and Dixie Theatres, Ashland and Lineville, Ala. Small town patronage.

MURDER AT THE VANITIES: Carl Brisson, Kitty Carlisle—Though this is above average and most of our patrons seemed to enjoy it, we picked it up late, but it did better than some newer ones. Some good music and some pretty scenes. Also a fairly good mystery murder—in fact, two or three murders. But think the murder hurt the title. Played Nov. 28-29.—A. E. Christian, Wayne Theatre, Monticello, Ky. Small town patronage.

NOW AND FOREVER: Shirley Temple, Gary Cooper, Carole Lombard—Our patrons ate this up and do they go for Shirley. Used this as our Thanksgiving special and had splendid business. A mighty good picture and a splendid performance by Cooper and Lombard. Carole Lombard should be more popular and she is developing into a real actress. Gary Cooper better than usual and Shirley Temple grand. Played Nov. 28-29.—A. E. Christian, Wayne Theatre, Monticello, Ky. Small town patronage.

NOW AND FOREVER: Shirley Temple, Gary Cooper, Carole Lombard—A dandy show. Some thought it better than "Little Miss Marker" and some not as good, but all were pleased. The little gal can sure draw them in, young and old. My draw was spoiled by only two days advertising because of change of booking, but given the proper exploitation, the picture will do top business in any man's town. Played Nov. 25.—B. J. Vanderby, Palace Theatre, Doland, S. D. Small town patronage.

OLD-FASHIONED WAY, THE: W. C. Fields—This was a box-office disappointment but the picture was fine. I liked it a lot and many said it was the most entertaining thing this star has turned out. Boost it, as it will please them.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

PRIVATE SCANDAL: Zasu Pitts, Phillips Holmes, Mary Brian—An unusually fine program picture and made short enough so you can put in shorts. Running time, 65 minutes.—G. Carey, Strand Theatre, Paris, Ark. General patronage.

PURSUIT OF HAPPINESS: Joan Bennett, Francis Lederer—Swell entertainment. Sends them out happy and laughing. Don't duck behind the curtains after you play this—look 'em in the eye.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

SHE LOVES ME NOT: Bing Crosby, Miriam Hopkins—A fair musical comedy to a little above average business. Miriam Hopkins a little too silly. Had some nice comments on Kitty Carlisle. This is not a musical with any spectacular ensembles, but a comedy drama with some singing by Crosby and Carlisle. Played Nov. 14-15.—A. E. Christian, Wayne Theatre, Monticello, Ky. Small town patronage.

SHE LOVES ME NOT: Bing Crosby, Miriam Hopkins—A nice picture. I believe the best yet by Crosby. The fellow is a really good actor, but they always spoil his pictures by having him get up and sing for no reason at all at any time when one is least expecting it. However, he does less of that in this picture than in any other that he has made. Played November 18.—B. J. Vanderby, Palace Theatre, Doland, S. D. Small town and rural patronage.

THIRTY-DAY PRINCESS: Sylvia Sydney, Cary Grant—It won't drive business away as the story is pleasing, but nothing to rave over.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

THE ANSWER, AREHART, IS: "LET GEORGE DO IT"

E. C. Arehart, of the Princess theatre, Odebolt, Iowa, who joins "What the Picture Did for Me" this week as a regular contributor, wants to know why, when everyone reads the reports, not all write them. Then he answers his own question, thus:

"Why is it about 999 per cent of us exhibitors like to read 'What the Picture Did for Me' but are too darned lazy to report on them ourselves?"

"That's a fine feature of your publication and the only comment is: Why not pass up reports on pictures released more than five or six months? It takes up space for later releases that most of us are really interested in. It would give you more space for the later ones."

To put it in other words: Report on a picture the same week you play it.

TO THE LAST MAN: Randolph Scott—We played this late, but it sure brought them in and proved one of the best westerns in a long time. Had a splendid cast including Esther Ralston, Noah Beery, Fuzzy Knight, Jack LaRue and a few glimpses of Shirley Temple. If you need a good western and have not used this, pick it up. You'll be glad. Played Nov. 30-Dec. 1.—A. E. Christian, Wayne Theatre, Monticello, Ky. Small town patronage.

YOU BELONG TO ME: Lee Tracy, Helen Mack, David Jack Holt—An exceptionally well presented feature with wonderful work on the part of David Jack Holt. Thanksgiving brought us business a little above the average. Played November 28-29.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodas, N. Y. Family patronage.

YOU BELONG TO ME: Lee Tracy, Helen Mack—A swell picture that pleased every one. Running time, 70 minutes. Played December 7-8.—Geo. F. Smith, Lyric Theatre, Lapeer, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

RKO RADIO

AGE OF INNOCENCE, THE: John Boles, Irene Dunne—I would like to tell you some way that you might make money with this wonderfully well done photoplay. It is perfect in production, with a splendid cast including acting so real by Boles and Dunn that you almost believe it is really happening. In spite of all this, it is a box-office flop. RKO had better begin to start.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

ANNE OF GREEN GABLES: Anne Shirley, Tom Brown—I liked this better than "Little Women" and so did my people. You can promise every one a pleasant evening and you will disappoint no one, so what more can you ask? The story is the thing and they gave this production and cast and fine direction. It is great business building entertainment.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

BY YOUR LEAVE: Genevieve Tobin, Frank Morgan—A fairly amusing program picture. Clean, but hard to place, as it is not strong enough for Sunday and this domestic comedy drama stuff rarely pleases a majority of the Saturday patrons. Played December 7-8.—P. G. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

DANGEROUS CORNER: Melvyn Douglas, Virginia Bruce, Conrad Nagel—Just another picture and one that will make no money for any one excepting only the purchasers who have it sold on the "average" basis and thus get more than it is worth from those who must try to sell it to the ultimate consumer. Cancel it if you can.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

DOWN TO THEIR LAST YACHT: Mary Boland, Sidney Fox—I didn't see it, but some of my friends and patrons said I left town purposely to miss it. From all reports and judging from the box office report, it must have been terrible. We had poorest business in six months. How RKO could make one as good as "Flying Down to Rio" and one as bad as this is beyond me.—A. E. Christian, Wayne Theatre, Monticello, Ky. Small town patronage.

DOWN TO THEIR LAST YACHT: Sidney Black-

mer, Sidney Fox—This is a good picture and it is the big picture they hoped. Plot is weak and fails to hold interest, so good music and cast have work making it a big picture.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

FINISHING SCHOOL: Ginger Rogers, Frances Dee, Bruce Cabot—This proved a dandy Friday-Saturday show. The cast seems youthful and the plot is interesting and my people liked it.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

FINISHING SCHOOL: Ginger Rogers, Frances Dee, Bruce Cabot—It's a shame to waste a good star like Ginger Rogers with such material as this. Played on a double feature bill to fair business.—J. O. Smith, Paramount and Dixie Theatres, Ashland and Lineville, Ala. Small town patronage.

FOUNTAIN, THE: Ann Harding—You can lay your last dollar that I will never play another picture like this one in any spot of the week. It drew good business Sunday night opening, but fell to poorest Monday night since I opened this new theatre. I took the picture off without finishing the run and set in "Little Women," which is a very satisfactory picture.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

FLYING DOWN TO RIO: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers—If you want to capitalize on the widespread publicity given Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers for their performance in "The Gay Divorcee" and you can't get this film just yet, I suggest you play "Flying Down to Rio." Our patronage thoroughly enjoyed "Rio" on a repeat engagement. It is an excellent introduction for this dancing pair.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty Theatre, Ft. Worth, Tex. General patronage.

GAY DIVORCEE, THE: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers—This is one of the finest musical shows to come to our talking screen. Ginger Rogers is a star from now on and Fred is also box-office. The little lady has a real part in this and proves that a beautiful girl is made more beautiful by dressing the part. She sold herself to my folks as being the sweetest dancer of them all and never came on the screen with a skirt that was shorter than her ankles. Clean and beautiful and lovely and box-office.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

GRIDIRON FLASH: Eddie Quillan, Betty Furness—Good program picture with just enough football to make it interesting. Story O. K., and the football was authentic. Of all things that make our patrons sad is the football picture that is a wild burlesque after it has been ballyhooed as a great sport classic. Played November 28-29.—P. G. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

GRIDIRON FLASH: Eddie Quillan—Fair program. Our hero saves the football game in the last minute of play as per the time-honored formula. I wonder when the producers will think up something different for a change. This one did just fair business here. Running time, 64 minutes. Played November 21.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

GRIDIRON FLASH: Eddie Quillan, Betty Furness—This has but little to recommend it and if not run during the football season is a weak picture. Not bad—weak. Should run "Songs of the Colleges" with it as that little two-reeler has a lot of fine football scenes in it and the feature show disappoints the football fans as it doesn't have enough playing in it.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

HAT, COAT AND GLOVE: Ricardo Cortez, Barbara Robbins—This satisfied at least 90 per cent of our patrons. Ricardo Cortez made new friends. A little less than regular Saturday night business. Played November 24.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodas, N. Y. Family patronage.

HIPS, HIPS, HOORAY: Wheeler and Woolsey—These stars are still funny, but absolutely dead at the box-office. Played on Bargain Day and we grossed only $12.40, so it surely must be the picture. Several years ago, Wheeler and Woolsey could be counted on for a full house, but not now. Columbia made the best picture these stars ever played in.—J. O. Smith, Paramount and Dixie Theatres, Ashland and Lineville, Ala. Small town patronage.

HIS GREATEST GAMBLE: Richard Dix, Dorothy Wilson—Richard Dix and a good cast in a very interesting story that pleased the older folks more than the regular Dix fans. It was a nice show and will fit any day of the week.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

KENTUCKY KERNELS: Wheeler and Woolsey—This is the best for a long time of the Wheeler and Woolsey pictures. We played this Friday and Saturday, but it was worth a Sunday spot. Played November 30-December 1.—P. G. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D.

LIFE OF VERGIE WINTERS, THE: Ann Harding, John Boles—RKO actually made a good show out of his. Very heavy, so better book plenty of shorts. Drawing power below average.—J. O. Smith, Paramount and Dixie Theatres, Ashland and Lineville, Ala. Small town patronage.

LIGHTNING STRIKES TWICE: Ben Lyon, Pert Kelton—We had to use this as a short-time substitute and we were glad it snowed, so that few came. Not bad morally, but just nothing. Liberty gave it half a star and he was right. Played December 2-3.—P. G.

Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

LITTLE WOMEN: Katharine Hepburn—Brought this one back for one day, and it proved the biggest flop in months. Almost an empty house. Everybody must have seen it on the first run.—J. O. Smith, Paramount and Dixie Theatres, Ashland and Lineville, Ala. Small town patronage.

LOST PATROL, THE: Victor McLaglen, Boris Karloff—Eleven guys go out into the desert and get lost, one by one. The Arabs, supposedly hiding behind the sand dunes, knock them off. Bang and another is gone, bang and another, and so on for 10 times. Then there are five minutes at the ending, a little different because they don't get the last guy. Same thing over and over. Too gruesome for a small town and too slow for any town. Certainly not entertainment. Played November 15.—B. J. Vanderby, Palace Theatre, Doland, S. D. Small town and rural patronage.

MURDER ON THE BLACKBOARD: James Gleason, Edna May Oliver—Very ordinary picture. We tried it on Saturday night and the patrons stayed away. Running time, 71 minutes.—G. Carey, Strand Theatre, Paris, Ark. General patronage.

MURDER ON THE BLACKBOARD: Edna May Oliver, James Gleason—Satisfactory, although it was not as much of a comedy as heralded. Fair business. Played November 21-22.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodas, N. Y. Family patronage.

MURDER ON THE BLACKBOARD: James Gleason, Edna May Oliver—A nice show. Plenty of comedy and plenty of suspense and mystery, all of which is all put together in nice sequence to make a fast-moving comedy-mystery. Played November 22.—B. J. Vanderby, Palace Theatre, Doland, S. D. Small town patronage.

OF HUMAN BONDAGE: Leslie Howard, Bette Davis—Here is one that I stayed away from as long as I could, but be sure your sin will find you out, and if you put your name on a contract to run a bunch of heavy dramas you must force them down the throats of a laugh-hungry crowd whether you want to or not. It is a fine show if you want something heavy.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

RICHEST GIRL IN THE WORLD, THE: Miriam Hopkins—Good picture. Everyone liked it. Did average business. Running time, 77 minutes. Played November 28.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

RICHEST GIRL IN THE WORLD, THE: Miriam Hopkins—This is swell entertainment and you will find that the people universally enjoy it. It is a catchy title and a pleasing plot, so I shot it on a Sunday to very good business.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

RIGHT TO ROMANCE, THE: Ann Harding—This is a very poor picture. No drawing power. Just the type like most all of RKO's last season. Leave it in the can if you have it booked.—J. O. Smith, Paramount and Dixie Theatres, Ashland and Lineville, Ala. Small town patronage.

SCARLET RIVER: Tom Keene—No good. A semi-western with a lot of behind-the-scenes of shooting a western picture. The poorest Tom Keene picture we ever played. Print terrible. Better skip it.—J. O. Smith, Paramount and Dixie Theatres, Ashland and Lineville, Ala. Small town patronage.

SPITFIRE: Katharine Hepburn—Plenty of kicks on this and then a few said they liked it. Personally, thought it was very poor. Receipts above average.—J. O. Smith, Paramount and Dixie Theatres, Ashland and Lineville, Ala. Small town patronage.

WEDNESDAY'S CHILD: Karen Morley, Edward Arnold—This was a pleasant surprise. I was expecting just another picture and found one that was so well directed that the audience got all hot and bothered about it and sent their friends back to see it the second night. It is not a child's picture, but an anti-divorce picture with a real lesson very interestingly told.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

WE'RE RICH AGAIN: Edna May Oliver, Billie Burke, Reginald Denny, Joan Marsh, Marian Nixon, Buster Crabbe—This seemed to please our patrons; at least, we had no kicks. Business normal. Played December 1.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodas, N. Y. Family patronage.

WOMAN IN THE DARK: Fay Wray, Ralph Bellamy—A good mystery drama. Well liked. Running time, 70 minutes. Played December 4.—M. W. Mattechek, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Small town patronage.

States Rights

HALSINGAR: (Swedish)—If you play Swedish pictures don't pass this one up.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

BIG CHANCE, THE: (Eagle)—Merna Kennedy, Mickey Rooney, Natalie Moorhead, John Darrow—This is a very cheap and ordinary picture which has practically nothing to recommend it to any theatre patron. It tells the story of a crooked young prize-

MIDDLEWEST LEADS WEEK'S ENROLLMENT

The Middlewest wins the honors this week in new regular contributors to "What the Picture Did for Me." Joining are these, from Illinois and Iowa:

J. A. DUSINBERRE, Red Bud Theatre, Red Bud, Illinois.

E. C. AREHART, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa.

Read their reports. They start in this issue.

fighter who falls in love with a good girl and decides to go straight, winning the big fight at the last moment. This might do on a double feature program with a very good western.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty Theatre, Ft. Worth, Tex. General patronage.

United Artists

CATHERINE THE GREAT: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Elizabeth Bergner—No excuse for this picture. Another foreign importation that makes me feel like a chump. I run one of these pieces of intellectuals about every six months and then swear not to do it again. Like buttermilk. It is fine for them what like it.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

COUNT OF MONTE CRISTO, THE: Robert Donat, Elissa Landi—Received more pleasing comments on this one than any picture that has slipped through our old wrecks.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

COUNT OF MONTE CRISTO, THE: Robert Donat, Elissa Landi—We were afraid of this one for a small town, but to our great amazement the picture was good—excellent. During the feature the theatre was absolutely noiseless. A picture has to be good to hold the crowds so intensely. If you can get them in to see it everyone will enjoy it, both young and old. Played November 18-19.—Ivan Ashcraft, Midway Theatre, Protection, Kan. General patronage.

COUNT OF MONTE CRISTO, THE: Robert Donat, Elissa Landi—This is my excuse for buying and running "Born to Be Bad" and "Catherine the Great" for one fine show. If you can buy this alone you can pay top for it and be very happy. It will please everyone. The story has an interest that will keep them all on the edge of their seats. Well produced and something that you can be proud of.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

KID FROM SPAIN, THE: Eddie Cantor, Lyda Roberti—We played a repeat engagement on this clever comedy and found that there were many patrons who had not seen it or who wanted to see it again. I consider it Eddie's best picture as it has a novel plot and wonderful production. And, as usual, there are lovely girls and catchy songs.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty Theatre, Ft. Worth, Tex. General patronage.

LAST GENTLEMAN, THE: George Arliss—George Arliss always makes entertainment and this is above the average in general interest of story. Will come closer to pleasing the average run than some of his more pretentious productions.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

OUR DAILY BREAD: Tom Keene, Karen Morley—We did a little extra advertising and had good business. It is a good Friday and Saturday picture. It is down to earth entertainment with some thrilling scenes and is a good small town picture. It is not a western, but a story based on the drouth-stricken Northwest. Would suggest as good for week-ends if you use something besides westerns. Played November 23-24.—A. E. Christian, Wayne Theatre, Monticello, Ky. Small town patronage.

SORRELL AND SON: H. B. Warner—This is a good draggy show with a star who fits in nicely, but the fact that it was English-made should be enough to keep you from showing it. They just don't put that into a picture that the American audience wants. I guess it was too draggy. Anyway, the story was fine, but the picture disappointing.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

TRANSATLANTIC MERRY-GO-ROUND: Jack Benny, Nancy Carroll, Gene Raymond—Swell Sunday show. Pleased the great majority.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

Universal

I'LL TELL THE WORLD: Lee Tracy, Gloria Stuart—Pleased all my Sunday and Monday crowd and will please yours. Running time, 76 minutes.—G. Carey, Strand Theatre, Park, Ark. General patronage.

LET'S BE RITZY: Lew Ayres, Patricia Ellis—Just another picture that will get by if you are not expecting too much. Played October 23-25.—Ivan Ashcraft, Midway Theatre, Protection, Kan. General patronage.

ONE MORE RIVER: Diana Wynyard, Colin Clive—We were afraid of this one because it was rated as a high-class picture. Everyone who saw it here went for it in a big way. We feel that the picture is good enough for any man's town. The box-office was average. Played October 21-22.—Ivan Ashcraft, Midway Theatre, Protection, Kan. General patronage.

ROMANCE IN THE RAIN: Roger Pryor, Heather Angel—This picture pleased about 50 per cent of our patrons. Some were fully bored with it and some even went so far as a walkout. This much to our surprise, for we had expected an A Number One show that would please. Played November 11-12.—Ivan Ashcraft, Midway Theatre, Protection, Kan. General patronage.

THERE'S ALWAYS TOMORROW: Binnie Barnes, Frank Morgan—Perfect entertainment for a small town. Good business, better than a lot of supposed to be super pictures. Binnie Barnes is okay. Played October 28-29.—Ivan Ashcraft, Midway Theatre, Protection, Kan. General patronage.

WAKE UP AND DREAM: June Knight, Roger Pryor, Russ Columbo—Not a big picture, but plenty of good entertainment. Pryor gets better with each picture. Good tunes with Columbo singing, but song sequences not handled very well. Armetta and Devine good for plenty of laughs. June Knight just fair. Played on Sunday with plenty of advance advertising and did above average business. (Believe Columbo would have meant box-office). Running time, 75 minutes. Played December 2-3-4.—Martin S. Lane, manager, Logan Theatre, Noblesville, Ind. Small town patronage.

Warner

DAMES: Dick Powell, Ruby Keeler, Joan Blondell—This is another musical splurge and good entertainment, though not as good a plot as some and must be sold.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

DESIRABLE: Jean Muir, George Brent—Good. Jean Muir is fine, and the balance of the cast give a mighty good performance. Recording good. Worth twice the rental of such specials as "British Agent" and "Madame Du Barry." The kind of picture the public wants. Running time, 68 minutes. Played November 21-22.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

DR. MONICA: Kay Francis, Warren William—This is a fine picture of its type. Woman doctor and her troubles and it pleased an adult crowd on a Wednesday and Thursday night showing.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

FIREBIRD, THE: Ricardo Cortez, Verree Teasdale—This is a very good picture of the murder mystery type and pleased my patrons. This is a story of a mother sacrificing her honor to shield her child. This is a typical woman's show and if you can get them out—they will bring the men. It is strictly adult entertainment. The direction and acting are perfect. Played on late Saturday night show to very good business. Running time, 74 minutes. Played December 1.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

HERE COMES THE NAVY: James Cagney—Picked this one up and did more business than on "What Every Woman Knows" and "Merry Widow" put together. Pleased all. No, "Red" Slocum of the Oklahoma City office didn't buy me a cigar to write this.—C. M. Hartman, Liberty Theatre, Carnegie, Okla. Small town patronage.

HERE COMES THE NAVY: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, Gloria Stuart—This was swell entertainment. Title gives the right slant on the kind of picture and the production is put on so well that you enjoy every minute of its fun and action. Pat O'Brien is a box-office star in my community.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

HERE COMES THE NAVY: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien—Perfect, gentlemen. Just perfect. Real comedy, down-to-earth situations, careful production, and expert casting make this a picture you should be proud to show. Our patronage enjoyed every minute of it and in many instances the comedy caused laughter that drowned out the following dialogue. You can't find better family entertainment.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty Theatre, Ft. Worth, Texas. General patronage.

KANSAS CITY PRINCESS: Joan Blondell, Glenda Farrell—Not as good or funny as we expected, but it did a very nice business and we were satisfied. Just a program picture and not much comment, good or bad. A good trailer from Warners helped to get them in. Played November 19-20.—A. E. Christian, Wayne Theatre, Monticello. Small town patronage.

KANSAS CITY PRINCESS: Joan Blondell, Glenda Farrell—Not a special, but it pleased most everyone. I did not like it, but most of my patrons did, and that is all that counts. These two blondes are mighty popular with my patrons. Running time, 64 minutes. Played December 8-9.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

MADAME DU BARRY: Dolores Del Rio, Victor Jory—Good laugh on somebody. They checked this picture on me and found out that it was just as poor as they must have known it was. The big boys back in New York may think this stuff is good, but you can't fool a horsefly. Plenty of money lost in this production and I don't think the story or the cast warranted anything like the production, and now the Warner Bros. agree with me. I'm the only one in town who enjoyed it and the checker gave me my kick.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

PERSONALITY KID, THE: Pat O'Brien, Glenda Farrell—This is another good entertainment with Pat O'Brien. Not big, but pleasing and fits into the Saturday crowd okay.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

CONCERT KID: Scrappy—This is a good cartoon comedy, but not as good as some of the others. However, it is good entertainment and will please everyone, especially the kids. Running time, 7 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

ELMER STEPS OUT: Walter Catlett—This is good entertainment of the slapstick variety with plenty of laughs. This is the best two-reeler we have played from Columbia this season, but there is still plenty of room for improvement. Running time, 19 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

MEN IN BLACK: Broadway Comedies—Terrible. Running time, 20 minutes.—M. W. Mattechek, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Small town patronage.

ALLEZ OOP: Buster Keaton—There are many laughs in this clever comedy. Running time, 20 minutes.—Harold Haubein, Cozy Theatre, Lockwood, Mo. Small town and rural patronage.

DOCTOR, THE: Helen Morgan—Awful. The kind patrons applaud because they are over. Had one or two of this series that were good, but some of them, including this number, terrible.—A. E. Christian, Wayne Theatre, Monticello, Ky. Small town patronage.

DOG-GONE BABIES: Ernest Truex—A comedy to bolster any program. Lots of good laughs and crazy situations on the baby question. Truex a popular comedian here. An adult comedy. Running time, 20 minutes.—Martin S. Lane, Logan Theatre, Noblesville, Ind. Small town patronage.

PICK-NECKING: Terry-Toon—Very unusually good. Enjoyed the entire short and a good one for any theatre to play. Print in perfect condition. Recording fine. Running time, 6 minutes.—Albert Hefferan, Owl Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. Children and college students.

SECOND-HAND HUSBAND: Tom Howard—As poor as the average Tom Howard comedy. His appearance usually brings a polite razzing from audience. Running time, 19 minutes.—Martin S. Lane, Logan Theatre, Noblesville, Ind. Small town patronage.

TERRY-TOONS: These are just average cartoons.—A. E. Christian, Wayne Theatre, Monticello, Ky. Small town patronage.

MGM

BOSCO'S PARLOR PRANKS: Happy Harmonies—Another of the Harmonizing series in color that is excellent. This series is great. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

BOSCO'S PARLOR PRANKS: Happy Harmonies Color Cartoon—Good. Oh, how happy are we to be able to offer our patrons Metro's Happy Harmonie Cartoons, thus enabling us to rid our theatre of the atmosphere created, in the last two years, by Willie Whopper and Flip the Frog. Running time, 9 minutes.—Geo. F. Smith, Lyric Theatre, Lapeer, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

FLYING HUNTERS: Oddities Series—This is a very good one-reeler full of interest and should please every one. This presents coyote hunting by plane in the snow-covered fields of Montana, with excellent photography. The remarks by Pete Smith are good and add much to this. Running time, 8 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

DAVY JONES' LOCKER: Willie Whopper Series—A nice cartoon in color that was well received. Running time, 1 reel.—B. A. McConnell, Emerson Theatre, Hartford, Ark. Mining town patronage.

TALE OF THE VIENNA WOODS, A: Happy Harmonies Color Cartoon—A beautiful number. Swell recording. Running time, 9 minutes.—Geo. F. Smith, Lyric Theatre, Lapeer, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

THEM THAR HILLS: Laurel and Hardy—Exceptionally good. Great entertainment. Running time, 20 minutes.—M. W. Mattechek, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Small town patronage.

Paramount

A DREAM WALKING: Popeye the Sailor—Popeye a favorite here. These cartoons are second to none. Running time, 8 minutes.—Geo. F. Smith, Lyric Theatre, Lapeer, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

BETTY BOOP'S PRIZE SHOW: Betty Boop Cartoons—Another good cartoon from Paramount. They make the best on the market.—J. O. Smith, Paramount and Dixie Theatres, Ashland and Lineville, Ala. Small town patronage.

LITTLE DUTCH MILL: Color Classic—Splendid! A fine short that will fit on any program. Watch out, Walt Disney! Running time, 9 minutes.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Small town patronage.

LITTLE DUTCH MILL: Color Classics Series—Another color cartoon that is excellent. Paramount's new process for color films makes them the best on the market.—J. O. Smith, Paramount and Dixie Theatres, Ashland and Lineville, Ala. Small town patronage.

SUPERSTITION OF THE BLACK CAT, THE: Paramount Varieties—Something different. A good novelty reel.—J. O. Smith, Paramount and Dixie Theatres, Ashland and Lineville, Ala. Small town patronage.

THIS LITTLE PIGGIE WENT TO MARKET: Singin' Sam—This is a very good one-reeler presenting a very popular song by Singin' Sam and a good cartoon comedy in connection. Good entertainment and pleased all of my patrons. Running time, 8 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

RKO-Radio

BIG MOUTHPIECE, THE: Chick Chandler, Tom Kennedy—A weak comedy.—J. K. Buckner, Palace Theatre, Grapevine, Tex. Small town and rural patronage.

BUBBLING OVER: Ethel Waters—These musical specials are a pain in the neck. This one has better recording than the previous numbers, but this story of Negro life in Harlem is a total loss in my town.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

DUMBBELL LETTERS: No. 1—This series will have to beat the first one if they go over here. About the length of a trailer, and this one was just nothing.—Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Tex. General patronage.

FERRY GO ROUND: Gene Austin, Betty Grable—If you are looking for something that will please every one, do not pass this one up. They will want to see it every time it is shown. The music was grand; Gene Austin perfect.—Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Tex. General patronage.

JOLLY GOOD FELONS: "Little King" cartoon—These King cartoons are grotesque, but not funny.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

MILD CARGO: Cubby the Bear Cartoon—Just what the name suggests, a take-off on "Wild Cargo." Its funny.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

STRANGE CASE OF HENNESSY: Cliff Edwards—Brother exhibitors, here are two reels of the worst entertainment ever produced. If Van Beuren cannot make a better comedy than this one, he should stop making them. RKO should discontinue their shorts, if they cannot improve them. Running time, 20 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

TRAILING ALONG: Gribbon-Kennedy-Stanton Comedies Series—Amusing comedy.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

Universal

GINGERBREAD BOY: Oswald Cartoon—Another clever cartoon from Universal. Lots of laughs. Our patrons like these cartoons as well as Mickey Mouse or even better. Running time, 7 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town patronage.

JOLLY LITTLE ELVES: Cartune Classics series—Beautiful cartoon and color. Good music. Advertise it strong.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Small town patronage.

PLEASEING GRANDPA: Sterling Holloway—Poor comedy that is never funny. A waste of time to run. Running time, 19 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town patronage.

Vitaphone

CABINET MEETING: Radio Ramblers—This short is good.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

HAIL COLUMBIA: See American First Series (E. M. Newman)—A good announcer would help this one.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

NO CONTEST: Ruth Etting-Clever, entertaining musical that will please your patrons. Running time, 21 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town patronage.

SMOKED HAMS: Shemp Howard, Daphne Pollard—It has a few moments of amusement, but it won't panic the audience.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

SMOKED HAMS: Shemp Howard, Daphne Pollard—It's just as well they labeled this a comedy. You could never guess by looking at it that it was supposed to be funny. Running time, 18 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town patronage.

'TIS SPRING: Allen Jenkins, Hugh Herbert, Ruth Donnelly—Excellent color subject. Running time, 20 minutes.—B. R. Johnson, Orpheum Theatre, Kerrobert, Canada. Small town patronage.

CHICAGO

The local code office has sent notice to exhibitors in the city and metropolitan district advising that January 9 is the final date for ballots on the question of premiums. Filing of the form provided by the code board is a vote against premiums. A form received by an exhibitor and not returned voting negatively on the provisions as provided in the code will, in the final analysis, be tantamount to a vote in favor of premiums. So, if you do not want premiums, fill in the form. If you want them just forget to vote.

The local clearance and zoning board last week began to hear individual protests, following the shelving of the clearance and zoning schedule originally drafted and returned by the Code Authority. In the case of the Lexington theatre operated by Max Sachs against the Lawndale, operated by Charles Nelson the board determined that the clearance held by the Lawndale on Paramount, United Artists, First National, Warner and Columbia is unfair and also found that the Lawndale is not fairly entitled to any clearance over the Lexington as long as the Lexington plays in second week of city release. In another case George Settos, Rialto theatre, Plymouth, Ind., against Colfax and Palace, South Bend, operated by Publix Great States, the determination of the board is that the time limit in which the prior run down state had to play the pictures, 42 days after Chicago Loop run, was proper and fair.

"NIT-WIT" CHARGE DRAWS MORE FIRE

SAME EXPERIENCE AS ADAMS, HE SAYS

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:

I have read, with very much interest, the article "They Can't Take It," or "Crime Without Passion," in the current (December 15) issue of MOTION PICTURE HERALD.

That Mr. Roy W. Adams is anything but one of the nit-wit exhibitors (which the very unkind Messrs. Hecht and MacArthur refer to) is evidenced by some of the very authentic and helpful reports which he continues to contribute so faithfully to your "What the Picture Did for Me" column. Furthermore, his ability as a showman is in very strong evidence in his account of how he placed on exhibition in his lobby the very uncouth letter of the aforementioned Messrs. Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur. I am sure that A-Mike Vogel would term that nothing less than a very smart piece of showmanship.

My experience with "Crime Without Passion" was very similar to that of Mr. Adams, and I have talked with at least a half dozen other exhibitors (to say nothing of comment from scores of my patrons) and the opinions all seem to be very much the same. Personally, I didn't gross enough on this one to pay for the paper! We had at least two dozen walk-outs and probably half that many refunds.

In closing, Mr. Editor, let me say that if "Crime Without Passion" is "art," then I shall be very frank in admitting that I am certainly eligible for membership in that group of exhibitors which the thrice mentioned Messrs. Hecht and MacArthur term the nit-wits.—PAUL O. KLINGLER, Manager, Rialto Theatre, Lewiston, Pa.

APPRECIATES SERVICE IN RELEASE CHART

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:

I for one wish to express my appreciation and thanks for the extra service that you are rendering exhibitors in denoting the audience classifications and production numbers of pictures listed in the release chart. This is indeed very helpful.—A. F. SAMS, JR., Statesville Theatre Corporation, Statesville, N. C.

FAN MAGAZINES AND THE EXHIBITOR

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:

Is it possible they cannot stop these "movie fan magazines," with the complete story of every picture made being panned. Such a few receive favorable mention that many of us had to go into the hamburger business a long time ago, and are paving the way for our brothers to follow—knowing it won't be too long.

It has been such a short time back, that we would receive our program, put out the front, and open up like any other kind of business, knowing that out of curiosity and anxiety the public would pay us a visit—and also purchase a ticket. Oh yes, sometimes they would come out and holler "not too loud," but call us off to one side and say, "Old man, that was a rotten show." But this party bought a ticket. But now, this same party goes to a newsstand and for a dime he buys a beautiful, colored and star covered magazine. He reads the story, history and scandal of all the stars in the business, including a dozen raps on several 50c pictures.

There is nothing left for the imagination nowadays. The showman, "Like old man Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," just sits and thinks about getting cheaper service. The producer just dishes out the gossip, through these beautiful all-colored fan movie magazines, and then wonders why film rentals get cheaper, and where all the hamburger stands come from. To clinch my argument, I submit any boy or girl of high-school age. They know more about the picture business than the managers. And we, not having any goods to wrap up for the few patrons we are still able to get and our only show asset gone, namely, to create a desire to see, will just "Wiggs" it back on the box.

The NRA did us a real favor by making us use more people. We are making front artists out of our doormen, so we are able to paint banners and lobby displays, to change the atmosphere of the picture. To fool them? No. We are trying to compete with the "movie mag" publicity wizards, in protecting ourselves by not using photos, etc., of the picture playing.—FRED C. SMITH, F. G. Smith Amusement Enterprises, Tulsa, Okla.

ADDITIONAL THANKS FOR NEW SERVICES

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:

We notice in your issue of December 1st that you are giving production numbers as well as classifications in your release chart of features. We feel that you are to be congratulated in this new feature. We have thought many times how useful this would be to exhibitors, and although it may be a great deal of trouble on your part, we feel that it is a fine thing for your subscribers, and we know that it will be greatly appreciated and consistently used.—A. E. CHRISTIAN, Wayne Theatre, Monticello, Ky.

CLASSIFYING FILMS FOR FOUR YEARS

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:

I was quite interested to read the article on page 10 of the October 27 issue of the HERALD entitled, "Warner Theatres to Designate Films." I heartily agree with Mr. Warner in this matter and I think he will find that patrons of his theatres will welcome the system.

Naturally I feel quite elated to find a man so high in our industry about to introduce a system I have been using for the past four years.—MERRITT A. KYSER, The Aurora Theatre, East Aurora, N. Y.

COMMENDS EDITORIAL ON MEDDLING WITH FILMS

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:

I most heartily commend your editorial, "Meddling With Pictures For Profit." I have been an owner and operator of theatres for more than a quarter of a century—continuously; I know where they started from and I know where they are today.

I have before me a leaflet distributed to exhibitors by Literary Digest, the one, of course, you speak of in your editorial.

These guides, these criticisms, these Star ratings, are all farce, a fake medicine for the exhibitors and a jeopardy to good judgment on the parts of the patrons. They should be discouraged by the exhibitor in the form of strong advertising showing the difference in the real value of the pictures with the ratings by the guides, stars, etc.

Every theatre audience is a hint of individuality and no man save the manager of that theatre can know the temperament or like or dislike of its patrons; if he is a manager.

I would like also to say that all of these

Managers' "Round Table" tips on publicity of the pictures—and like howlings—are farces and come from these "Mail Order" managers, and are for mail order managers.

Do you ever see where "Roxy" smears these pages with tips on publicity or, to be exact, telling other managers how to run their theatres?

Theatre managers are born, not made in any school for managers; they are trained by actual training on the job. From usher he rises to the directorate capacity—under the guidance of experienced men. Do you ever find a big shot in the propaganda columns?

Like the other guides and star ratings, Round Tables and such rot are fake, which nauseate a well balanced stomach.—J. G. TORBETT, Abingdon Theatre, Abingdon, Va.

Kansas City Exhibitors Favor Boycott in Price-Cutting War

The great majority of independent exhibitors in Kansas City still are in favor of a boycott of distributors whose product is first run at theatres in the territory which have cut their admission prices to ruinously competitive levels, Jay Means, president of the Kansas City Independent Theatre Owners, said this week. Mr. Means also asserted that reports that he was responsible for starting the boycott movement are erroneous.

Mr. Means explained that the movement was the action of a number of exhibitors following price-cutting at both Loew's Midland and the RKO Mainstreet. Mr. Means' organization went on record as favoring a boycott and definite action was to have depended on support from Fox Midwest. Fox Midwest, however, is said to have rejected the move since participation would jeopardize its position with relation to contractual obligations with film companies.

United Artists Theatres Reduces Loss for Year

The United Artists Theatre Circuit, Inc., and subsidiaries, showed a net loss for the year ended August 31, 1934, of $126,703, after depreciation, amortization, readjustments, expenses and other charges. The figure compares with a net loss for the preceding year of $358,902.

Council Lifts Sunday Ban

The city council of Sharon, Pa., has approved on first reading an ordinance lifting the local ban on Sunday motion pictures. The council action was coincident with the arrest of three managers for Sunday exhibition.

Mary Bartol, formerly in charge of fan magazine contact at Columbia's Coast studio, has resigned to open an agent's office in Hollywood with her husband, X. Martin Smith, formerly a publicity representative.

TECHNOLOGICAL

The BLUEBOOK School

By F. H. RICHARDSON

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 253.—(A) What relation have the dimensions of a picture to distance from screen to front seats? Think this over carefully before attempting to answer. (B) What effect has picture brilliancy on viewing distance. This is indeed a big question, therefore I will ask no more this week.

Answer to Question No. 247

Bluebook School Question No. 247 was: (A) describe the bearings of horizontal type motor-generators. (B) Name the reasons why cleanliness around a motor and generator is essential. (C) What precautions are necessary with regard to electrical connections? (D) Give your idea as to the necessity for ammeters and voltmeters, and their location.

The following made creditable replies: G. E. Doe; S. Evans and C. Rau; T. Van Vaulkenburg; D. Danielson; R. J. Arntson; A. F. Sprafke; H. Edwards; D. Ferguson; C. Oldman; K. Arrington; F. H. and L. Klar; G. Thompson; D. L. Sinklow; R. and K. Wells; B. R. and M. Walker; T. T. Davidson and R. G. Crews; G. E. Doe; J. Wentworth; T. Turk; O. Thum and I. D. Ackerly; T. N. Onby; F. D. Garrison; F. D. Ormie, R. Davis, J. Frazier and G. B. Lantree; L. M. and C. B. Traxler; G. Wayne and D. Stellegos; J. Lansing and R. D. Oberleigh; L. M. Goss and T. Danielson; P. and L. Felt; L. Grant and R. Geddings; H. F. Hall and B. Mitchell; F. Ferguson and D. Lally; G. N. Guidotti and F. L. Saylor; E. Hodson and S. Johnson; G. Lathrop and N. L. Tomlinson; D. Thatcher; L. Hutch and D. Goldberg; N. L. Haynes and A. Richardson; G. A. Artley; P. N. Manners; W. R. Grier and L. Howell; R. Crawford, D. T. Bennett, G. E. Osborn and C. B. Murray; H. Haber and D. Breaston; F. H., S. and P. Dalbey; E. Mantol and H. Hughes; B. T. Caldwell; N. L. Simms; H. Pitchkey and C. Mellinger; C. Umphrey; M. F. Fallon; Bill Doe; F. L. Dodson and F. L. Benton; G. C. Mantoll; F. Harlow and G. Harrison; D. K. Lambert; P. L. McIntosh; B. H. Thaller and S. Spooner; L. I. Miner; C. L. Anderson.

We will read the answer of T. Turk to Section A. He says, "Horizontal type motor-generators, so far as I am aware, all have what is commonly referred to as the 'sleeve bearing, consisting of a journal, which is of course a part of the armature or rotor shaft. This journal may, I think, be considered as a part and parcel of the 'bearing.' It rests upon or is contained by a sleeve of friction metal, either babbitt metal (a composition of tin, copper and antimony, also known as 'white metal,' or bronze (an alloy of copper and tin, to which some manufacturers add a small percentage of zinc or lead). This sleeve is usually split in half and spirally grooved to insure proper oil distribution. It is held in place by means of proper arrangement of a cast-iron cap bolted to the frame of the machine properly recessed to receive the sleeve.

"Immediately under the bearing is a recess in the said frame, which forms a reservoir to hold a supply of oil with which to lubricate the bearing. In the upper half of the split sleeve one or more grooves are cut, in such manner that a metal ring of sufficient diameter to rest on the journal, with its lower diameter immersed in the oil contained in the oil reservoir (called an 'oil well' in common parlance) so that when the journal rotates it will, by friction, rotate the ring, thus carrying oil up to the journal, whence it will be distributed along the entire length of the bearing by the before mentioned spiral grooves cut into the inner or bearing surface of the sleeve.

"There are of course variations in methods of application, but broadly what I have said describes the general principles of a 'bearing' such as is commonly used in motor-generator sets, though in the smaller ones or some of them, I believe the bearing is not of the split type, but made whole and slipped on the end of the shaft."

Gentlemen, I feel I should compliment Brother Turk. His answer shows how complete an answer can be made, and what a considerable number of things can be included, and legitimately included, too, in an answer to what may seem at first glance a very simple question.

(B) Brother D. Danielson says, "Cleanliness around machinery of any sort will earn dividends in reduction of wear and therefore of upkeep; also, in many cases it will improve efficiency in the machine as a whole. This is true in M. G. sets, with their close-fitting bearings, [They are well protected and insofar as concerns them, it is largely a matter of proper lubrication rather than cleanliness.—F. H. R.], small air gaps between rotating and stationary parts, and the commutator parts with ever present carbon and other dust, combined with lubricant that commutators must have. Dirt can and often does cause more trouble than do many other apparently more serious things. The three main objections to dirt are its effect upon the life, efficiency and appearance of the machine."

Very good, brother, but you overlooked one big item. Here it is, and I'm sure you will agree it should have been included: A dirty, slovenly kept M. G. set advertises the fact that there is a lazy, careless, inefficient projectionist in charge. Right?

(C) Our old friends, S. Evans and C. Rau, answer, "All electrical connections should be inspected periodically, kept tight and in perfectly clean mechanical and therefore electrical contact. Failure to maintain such condition will cause heating of the connection, perhaps seriously if working near capacity, and in any event an added resistance that wastes power. Loose or dirty connections cause unnecessary trouble and waste in wattage."

G. N. Guidotti and F. L. Saylor say, "The necessary precautions are: First, that if they are splices, the surfaces must be cleaned thoroughly, joined together mechanically tight, soldered solidly, and wrapped with rubber tape, with friction tape covering it, the total being of depth equal to that of the original insulation. Second, if it be a joint in which two parts are pressed together with bolt and nut, or the equivalent, then the contact surfaces must be inspected at suitable intervals and kept perfectly clean, and solid compression between the parts must be maintained."

(D) D. Ferguson says, "The necessity for voltmeter and ammeter for electrical equipments is as urgent as a steam gauge on a boiler. They should be compulsory equipment in projection rooms. Lack of such meters promotes inefficiency in operation, compelling the substitution of guesswork for certainty. All such equipments should be installed within plain view of the projectionist when in working position beside the projector."

With which latter view I thoroughly agree.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Running times are those supplied by the companies. Asterisk indicates running time as made known by West Coast studio before announcement by home office in New York. Variations also may be due to local censorship deletions. Dates are 1934, unless otherwise specified. Letter in parentheses after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers.

KEEPING THE FAITH

If through all his days a man in business tells the truth as he sees it, keeps his word as he gives it, works for his industry for its own sake along with his, he gets what is known as a good reputation.

It is like that, too, with journals of business. Publications that matter have many of the attributes of personality.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD is happy in the consciousness of, and responsibility to, a good name.

QUARTER'S WORTH

THE observation that there is a class of patrons who can not afford more than 15 or 25 cents for motion picture entertainment, made between trains in Kansas City by Mr. Nicholas M. Schenck, the other day, is worth reiterative emphasis.

Mr. Schenck speaks with the authority of life long experience with the buying power of the amusement seeking masses, and he knows rather better than many of his contemporaries, that after all the selling persiflage is tossed on the breeze, the fact is that the amusement industry lives and prospers on what the public buys rather than what salesmanagers sell.

In its praiseworthy and valiant evolutionary struggles toward status and importance, the motion picture's leaders, trying to outgrow the nickelodeon, have all too often dallied with dream castles that resembled the glamoured, gilded social wax-work called the Metropolitan Opera, with its golden horseshoe. High price and exclusiveness are opera's selling points, and the selling points of many another amusement commodity. Low price and mass acceptance are the natural inherent attributes of the machine duplicated motion picture.

The makers and purveyors of motion pictures will prove themselves bad masters of their machinery indeed if they can not serve and continue to serve the amusement desires of the millions in the bottom brackets of buying power. The motion picture took its beginnings down there, and, no matter to what heights of class service it may rise, it must and will stay in the service, too, of those basic millions of low buying power.

The success of this industry is to be written in gross receipts, the dollars in the final total. It is probably twenty times as easy to get a dime as it is to get a dollar.

FIT TO BE A NEIGHBOR

WHEN today's affairs of the screen are adjusted by the perspective of history in some far day, it will be discovered that the decision of Justice Henry G. Wenzell in the Supreme Court of New York, permitting the opening of a motion picture theatre adjacent to Erasmus High School, in Brooklyn, against high-powered social and educational contentions, was a tide mark in motion picture recognition.

The school authorities raised vigorous opposition and caused the commissioner of licenses to revoke his original permit for the construction of a Trans-Lux theatre on the site. Neighboring property owners were brought into the fight to support the school's position. Long hearings were held. Experts on the nature and influence of the motion picture were heard. The art and industry of the motion picture were at bar charged with being a menace to youth and culture.

The plain fact was that the ancient curse of the lowly status of the show business, a heritage of the ages, old in the days of Queen Elizabeth, was still hanging over it in its newer instrument of expression, the motion picture. It is expressive of that same state of mind which has so often led taxing bodies and law makers to think of the screen theatre in the same category with the pool hall and the saloon.

It would be strange indeed if the great dominant amusement of the nation, the amusement which collects 78 cents of every amusement dollar, should be held to sully the very soil of a schoolhouse vicinity.

Let us hope that the Wenzell decision becomes weighty precedent.

HUDSON VOYAGE

ONE of the world's best buys in travel is a ferry ride most anywhere between New York and the American coast sometimes known as the west shore of the North river. There is scenery, the thrill of great vistas, sometimes folk music and always a motley of the folks—and sometimes minor adventure.

Our minor adventure the other day was a discarded worn copy of the Newark Ledger of October 3 containing a Hollywood dispatch quoting none other than the lyric Buddy DeSylva in the opinion that "the trouble with the theatre" is that the movies have made "audiences muscle bound." Mr. DeSylva, dominated by the metronome rhythms, thinks that the fluidity and constant flow of screen drama has so conditioned audiences to unbroken continuity that the entr'acte waits and curtains of the stage wreck the show for them.

And Mr. DeSylva is very near an important truth. The motion picture has indeed risen in dominance as the amusement medium by reason of being easy to take. There's implied a warning against cute and complex techniques.

CORRECTION!

MOTION PICTURE DAILY refers to pickled herring and pumpernickel, served on a Santa Fe diner by the hospitable enterprise of Mr. Jacob Wilk, as "the pungent delicacy." MOTION PICTURE HERALD hereby advises Mr. Red Kann, editor of The Daily, that herring-and-pumpernickel is a staple necessity, not any frivolous delicacy. If he thinks herring is a delicacy, what would his rhetoric do about liederkranz-and-onions?

THIS WEEK ---

CORPORATION REPORTS

Under new regulations requiring filing of corporation data with the Securities Exchange Commission, Washington, headed by Joseph P. Kennedy, salaries, bonuses and security holdings of higher salaried executives must be made available to the commission. All officers and directors receiving more than $20,000 during the last fiscal year are included. Profit sharing plans must be noted as well. . . .

DUTY REBATES

The Canadian Department of Customs at Toronto has ruled that the Canadian importer of British films which are not retained in the Dominion is entitled to a rebate on the duty paid. Heretofore the two largest British film importers, Regal and Empire, have had to bear the duty even on films which were rejected after having been shipped to Canada. . . .

POLICE USE FILMS

In an effort to locate the missing director of the Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston, Dr. George H. Bigelow, state police are utilizing the motion picture, showing several amateur films in which Dr. Bigelow appeared, in conjunction with a broadcast general description of the man. . . .

ATTENDANCE GAINS

Theatrical attendance is continuing well ahead of last year, it was indicated last week by the Internal Revenue Bureau at Washington in its monthly report. November collections on the admissions tax were $1,443,214, comparing with $1,230,691 for November, 1933. . . .

KIDNAPED

Clarence Farrell, pioneer exhibitor of Ellensburg, Wash., en route to his home by auto last week, was attacked by two ex-convicts, who wrecked his car and kidnaped him, fleeing into the Blue Mountains. Finally escaping, he made his way through deep snow to his home, exhausted but unharmed. . . .

UFA PROFIT

Ufa, major German company at Berlin, has reported a net profit of 1,200,000 marks for the past year, which compares with a net of 40,000 marks the previous year. . . .

WITH PATHE-NATAN

Robert Hurel of France Film, Montreal, has been named general manager of Pathe-Natan in the United States and Canada, with offices in Maison Francaise, in Rockefeller Center, New York. . . .

ST. LOUIS ACTION

Bondholders of the bankrupt Skouras Enterprises, St. Louis, may institute legal proceedings to establish an interest in the local first run rights to First National pictures, it was indicated at a hearing last week before Referee Hope. The rights are said to have been cancelled by the Super Skouras Theatre Company in 1932. . . .

BEANO A LOTTERY

A step forward in the fight of Michigan exhibitors to rid themselves of the competition provided by the so-called beano games was gained last week when the state supreme court declared the game a lottery. The ruling is expected to put an immediate end to such games in Grand Rapids, particularly, location of the suit. . . .

LANDMARK TO GO

An industry landmark is scheduled to be dismantled in Cincinnati when, shortly after January 1, the 300-seat Star theatre is to be remodeled for occupancy by a retail store. It was on that Fountain Square site that the late Marcus Loew started in the motion picture business many years ago, with a nickelodeon and museum. . . .

WINS FOX SUIT

David Stoneman, Boston realtor and Attorney, last week was awarded a verdict of $75,000 against Fox Film by a jury, in his $200,000 suit alleging false representation relative to an agreement he claimed he entered into with Fox to obtain leaseholds from corporations operating theatres in New England for Fox Film Playhouses, Inc., and Fox Northeastern Playhouses, Inc. He claimed he gave his services as agreed, then discovered the companies could not pay for the leaseholds and could not pay his fees. . . .

LOUISIANA LAWS

Three corporation bills which affect the film industry are being pushed through the Louisiana legislature in special session. One increases the corporation franchise tax, another requires foreign corporations to maintain stock transfer records in the state, and the third requires foreign companies to maintain a full set of books in their offices in the state. . . .

DISMISS FOX SUIT

Supreme Court Justice Samuel I. Rosenman in New York last week dismissed a suit brought by James N. Cleary and two other Fox Film stockholders to recover $4,000,000 in profits made four years ago by a syndicate from transaction in stock of the corporation. Nothing had been proved to be illegal or injurious to the corporation, the court said. . . .

MODERNIZATION

Shareholders of Marcus Loew's Theatre, Ltd., Canada, last week at the annual meeting in Toronto approved plans to modernize the Young Street theatre, downtown house, at a cost estimated by Jules Bernstein, resident managing director for Loew's in Toronto, at $150,000. Loew's executives from New York attended the meeting. . . .

COMPETITION

New competition has developed for Providence exhibitors, in a free radio amateur night sponsored each Saturday by Bamby bread at the Metropolitan theatre. Last week's show drew an audience of 2,000. Local showmen consider the shows a real menace, with small cash prizes offered for "entertainers." . . .

RADIO—NOT FILMS

Writing to Liberty Magazine, one Harry Bauer, of Riverside, N. J., calls attention to "a more serious menace to the morals of our children than the movies," the radio. Programs during the hours when children most frequently listen are devoted to yarns of mystery and murder, he points out. . . .

CODE PROTESTS TO RENEW FIGHT AT CAPITAL JAN. 9th

MPTOA Charges Instrument Has Failed to Control Double Featuring and That Clearance Provision Has Been Nullified

Loud demands coming daily from the field for revision of the motion picture code and the apparently universal opinion in the industry that the document needs reconstruction will send the code representatives of distribution and exhibition interests to Washington next month to face a repetition of the famous code-drafting battle of the summer of 1933. They will appear before the National Industrial Recovery Board at open hearings, starting on January 9, to submit evidence for the amendment, nullification or continuance of various code clauses.

The need for code changes was pointed out in MOTION PICTURE HERALD on December 15, when, in analyzing the net results of the code on its first anniversary, it was said 25 of the 41 code clauses intended to establish fair practices had proved ineffective, trivial or unnecessary, and that 13 clauses had given only varied relief.

Arrayed on one side at the Washington hearings next month will be the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, demanding 15 to 20 per cent unconditional cancellation privilege, "home rule" to eliminate double featuring, control or elimination of score charges, elimination of designated playdates, and many more changes in trade practices.

Allied Platform Awaited

There has been no official word either from Allied States association or from the large or small distributors as to the nature of their demands.

Allied condemns the code as a whole, but, so far as is known, there has been no platform established for specific presentation at Washington next month.

The distributors have not officially discussed the forthcoming hearings in their relation to possible changes in the trade practice clauses. While it is expected that they will fight many of the exhibitors' demands, in certain New York distribution quarters it is felt that it would be unwise to effect any general revision of the code until the future of the NRA act is established by Congress at the session starting in January. Revisions under the present act might be worthless if Congress changes the act itself, they hold.

Code Authority to Ask Changes

Recommendations for code revisions are expected to be made by the motion picture Code Authority, based on the Authority's experiences during the first year of the code and code hearings. The Code Authority already has presented to the NRA recommendations for eliminating the clause prohibiting interference with leases. This rec-

MPTOA's Demands For Code Changes

Following are the demands for code revision to be presented by MPTOA at the Washington hearings January 9th:

1. Greater cancellation privileges, of from 15 to 20 per cent, unconditionally "without any strings attached thereto," on each block of ten pictures. The present clause permits a 10 per cent cancellation only under certain conditions when all pictures offered have been purchased.

2. "Home rule" to outlaw double features on a majority vote in each individual territory.

3. Control or elimination of score charges by the insertion in the code of a clause providing that the rental price shall include such incidentals as score charges.

4. A "straightforward" nontheatrical clause based purely on the question of whether the nontheatrical showing is or is not unfair competition to an established theatre. The present clause is so inconsistent that it lacks the power of control over nontheatricals.

5. "Home rule" to outlaw premiums on a majority vote in each individual territory. The present clause provides for elimination of the practice only when 75 per cent of the affiliated and 75 per cent of the unaffiliated exhibitors so vote. It is almost impossible, the MPTOA holds, to get 75 per cent of each group to vote according to present requirements.

6. Outright elimination of designated playdates.

7. Compulsory arbitration, rather than voluntary arbitration, in order to keep contractual disputes between distributors and exhibitors out of the courts.

8. "A fair and equitable method of clearance and zoning . . . to bring some semblance of orderly procedure out of the present chaotic condition" which has resulted from the complete breakdown of the code's clearance and zoning machinery.

9. Retention, with an amendment giving more teeth, of the clause covering interference with leasing negotiations between an exhibitor and a landlord.

ommendation was protested by exhibitors at a hearing in Washington last Wednesday, and the matter rested with the NRA.

First subjects coming up before the board at the hearings will pertain to price fixing provisions. The motion picture code is not involved in this connection.

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Allied Exhibitors, Opposing Instrument As a Whole, and Code Authority Also Are Expected to Ask Changes

America on Wednesday submitted to the industry a brief in which the results of the first year of the code were weighed. That the code itself "was a worthy step in the right direction of self-regulation for a great and complex industry few will deny," it was said. The MPTOA further believes that "no intelligent and responsible exhibitor will quarrel with the main objectives NRA sought to accomplish."

MPTOA Cites Benefits

"We believe," said the brief, "that many abuses have been removed, that obscure and unimportant exhibitors have been given a place that was accessible and inexpensive where many of their grievances could be heard and remedied. Definite progress has certainly been made in curbing unfair overbuying, in reducing the number of unwanted shorts exhibitors are forced to take, in providing a very, very limited cancellation privilege, in mildly curbing unfair non-theatrical competition, in providing for some semblance of standardization in exhibition contracts, in curbing rebates, lotteries, and other cut-rate rackets, in restraining individual instances of unreasonable clearance, etc. That definite progress has been made on these matters demonstrates quite clearly what can be accomplished if a genuine effort is made."

However, the MPTOA added, "the code failed completely to restrain or control the spreading evil of cut-throat double feature competition, did nothing about the inexcusable score charge, and generally failed to provide an adequate cancellation privilege, a practical protection against unfair non-theatrical competition, against the premium racket, against forcing unwanted features, against forcing designated play dates on percentage pictures, to provide for a simplified and fully standardized exhibition contract with enforceable arbitration of disputes."

Declares Provision Nullified

"The Code did provide for standard, openly negotiated and published clearance and zoning schedules, to remove the abuses of under cover, private agreements on clearance, to provide definite uniform availability to all subsequent runs in like classifications and to effectively prevent unreasonable clearance." But, it was said, "this provision has been completely nullified."

The Code Authority was scheduled to meet in New York Thursday to decide whether clearance and zoning schedules should be discarded in favor of individual protests from exhibitors against any existing unfair clearance. Sol A. Rosenblatt, NRA compliance director, was presiding. Also being discussed were schedules for Kansas City, New Haven and Buffalo, with little indication any would be approved.

TELEPHOTO NEWSREELS WILL GO TO THEATRES TWO HOURS AFTER EVENT

Paramount, Conducting Secret Tests, Plans Establishing 24 Special Transmitting Stations, Besides Laboratories in Field

Regular telephotoing of newsreel pictures from the scene of the incident to the newsreel laboratory, enabling the producer to start the shipment of prints of outstanding news events to theatres two to four hours after occurring, may be next and one of the greatest scientific advancements in this news medium of the motion picture since sound was added, some seven years ago, a development which is expected to be accompanied by the sharpest of competition.

Paramount Newsreel for four weeks has been secretly conducting tests with a process of sending pictures by wire, with a view to adapting it to its ordinary machinery for effecting news coverage.

There will be no announcement, not even discussion of the project, from Paramount newsreel headquarters until the tests prove successful, but it has been learned that present telephoto cost scales, which make regular use of the process prohibitive to newsreels, in all probability can be shaved down to a practicable point.

Private engineers already have been commissioned to ascertain for Paramount (1) How practical is telephoto for a newsreel; (2) To what extent would the result justify any extra expense incurred by telephotoing.

Early and unofficial reports appear to indicate that some of the investigators and technicians are finding much in favor of the system as a newsreel adjunct. Some of the extra expense could be shared with newspapers using pictures taken by the newsreel and wired for use in theatres, they hold.

Competitive encounters in recent months have become so keen-edged that a "scoop" is obtained only by minutes. Now, too, any exclusive coverage by newsreels of big news headlines brings considerable free newspaper credit to "stills" made from the newsreel.

The Paramount newsreel-telephoto plan in its present form provides for establishment of 24 special Paramount Newsreel telephoto transmitting stations in the largest cities, all strategically located so that the whole country might be easily accessible. Too, there would be built several laboratories in the field to save much of the time which would be lost if all prints had to be shipped from headquarters in New York or California. Telephotoing would also be done directly to these field laboratories.

Not all the newsreels could afford the expense of the process. It is expected, however, that if Paramount does find it practicable and makes use of the system, some of the other reels might do the same and share the costs.

A secret test will be conducted by Paramount in a few days to send the newsreel coverage of some event from Los Angeles to New York.

Paramount's private estimate of the added

The reproduction above appeared in MOTION PICTURE HERALD of November 17 in connection with an account of the Gaumont wireless "scoop".

expense of telephoto is understood to be $10,000 additional negative cost a week. This compares with $30,264 paid by Gaumont British Newsreel in London to wireless eight feet of film showing the end of the England to Australia airplane race from Melbourne to London, last November. Gaumont thereby effected one of the costliest of newsreel "scoops," paying $189 a frame to wireless 160 frames from Australia to England—equivalent to $3,783 a negative foot of 20 frames. Weather conditions interfered and it took 68 hours to complete the transmission.

Virtually all important newspapers now use telephotoed pictures of headline events. The newsreels must depend on specially chartered airplanes first to fly the negatives from the scene of action to the laboratory and then to fly the prints to the larger key city accounts.

Report Ford Entering Air Conditioning Field

It was reported this week in New York that Henry Ford is planning to follow the move of Walter P. Chrysler in the air conditioning field, Chrysler having been expanding in this market recently through control of Airtemp Control Corporation.

It is pointed out that entrance of the Ford interests into the business would spur competition and result in a general lowering of equipment prices.

Richardson Quits Post in Paramount

Charles E. Richardson this week tendered his resignation as a trustee in bankruptcy of Paramount Publix Corporation, to take effect December 29, and there was every indication that he would be named a member of the company's directorate under reorganization. This marks the second resignation within a few months for Mr. Richardson, who formerly was vice-president and treasurer of Fox Film.

Last summer, just before Paramount's petition for bankruptcy relief under Section 77-B of the new bankruptcy law, Mr. Richardson requested that he be excluded from the trustee triumvirate when they were formally reappointed under the new law. But Mr. Richardson was persuaded to remain in the capacity he had occupied since Paramount went into voluntary bankruptcy in the winter of 1933. Together with his colleagues, Charles D. Hilles and Eugene W. Leake, he succeeded in bringing the company to the verge of reorganization.

Up to press time it was impossible to obtain verification from Mr. Richardson as to his directorship in the new company. Reports have been current for some weeks that he also might be named a vice-president of the company.

Trustees of Allied Owners Corp., one of Paramount's largest creditors, were directed on Monday by Special Master Oscar Lewis in Brooklyn to decide by Thursday whether or not the company would appear in opposition to the Paramount reorganization plan at the hearing before Federal Judge Alfred C. Cox on that day.

Allied filed a claim of $23,000,000 against Paramount in the reorganization proceedings for claims arising out of the construction of a number of theatres for the company. A settlement of the claim was reached with the Allied trustees and incorporated in the Paramount reorganization plan. This provides for issuance to Allied of new Paramount securities for a claim of $5,000,000; payment of $150,000 in cash; purchase of the Alabama at Birmingham, and the leasing of the Paramount theatres in Brooklyn, Fremont, Ohio, and Glens Falls, N. Y.

Opposition to the plan was urged Monday by Archibald Palmer, attorney for Allied bondholders, on the ground it is detrimental to Allied in three respects:

1. The general provisions for reorganization of Paramount Broadway, holding company for the New York Paramount Building and theatre.

2. Payment of $5,000,000 cash as part of the settlement of Paramount's bank debt.

3. The makeup of the new board of directors, which, Mr. Palmer says, is dominated by banking interests and lacks necessary representation of men familiar with industry problems.

Mayer Drops Criterion

Arthur Mayer, it was reported this week, has disposed of his 50 per cent interest in the Criterion theatre at Broadway and 44th street, New York, thereby vesting 100 per cent operating control in John Goring. Mr. Mayer operates the Rialto.

TWO UPHOLD HECHT & MAC ARTHUR IN CONTROVERSY WITH ROY ADAMS

Managers Sussman and Charninsky Exploit "Crime Without Passion" to Cheerful Results Attested by Box-Offices

When Mr. Ben Hecht and Mr. Charles MacArthur, author-producers, got into controversy with Mr. Roy W. Adams, exhibitor, of Mason in Michigan, over the merits of "Crime Without Passion" they started something. Each day's mail brings to the MOTION PICTURE HERALD heated and earnest exhibitor expressions, as our correspondence columns and "What the Picture Did for Me" department attest.

The evidence seems clear enough that the motion picture public has to be formally introduced to innovations and departures in story telling technique on the screen. As has so often been observed in the editorial columns of the HERALD, the manner of the telling of the story, in these years while the art is in swift processes of evolution, can all too easily get in the way of the story. Another interesting exemplification was afforded in the excellent and exciting experiment of Mr. Jesse Lasky and Mr. Preston Sturges in their treatment of "The Power and The Glory".

And, we scarcely need add, not only the telling but the selling, counts.

In evidence we submit, bearing on "Crime Without Passion", a capably presented discussion in the subjoined letter from Mr. Ludwig Sussman, manager of the Adelphi theatre in Chicago, and material from Mr. Louis Charninsky of the Capitol theatre, Dallas.

—TR.

Sussman's Letter

Mr. Sussman wrote the HERALD as follows:

"I have read with great interest your Adams vs. Hecht-Mac Arthur controversy on 'Crime without Passion'.

"Until now, I have never contributed to your 'What the Picture Did for Me' column . . . primarily for the reason that we run our pictures quite late and our comments would, of course, be of no benefit.

"However, if I were to state what 'Crime without Passion' did for me, I would write something like this:

CRIME WITHOUT PASSION: Claude Rains, Margo—A masterpiece. A work of art. A sophisticated picture with a strictly "class" appeal. Superb performances by Claude Rains and Margo. Perfect lines . . . elegant direction . . . unusual photography. A new way of telling a story. Not a box office sensation, but will be appreciated and enjoyed by a "class audience." (At that, I did better with it than with "Dames" or "Charlie Chan in London," which I ran the same week.) Should be sold to "intellectuals" only.

"For your information, we played this picture last Thursday and Friday and we are enclosing two clippings—the large one (reproduced on this page) from our advertisement in the community newspaper of our district, and the small one which ran in every metropolitan newspaper in Chicago. Friday, the second day of the picture, was better than Thursday, the first day. We had only one negative criticism

(and that from an elderly lady). The men especially liked the picture—and many of the comments were enthusiastic.

"Please note how we advertised the picture. Our purpose is three-fold.

"First—we give warning to those who do not care for a picture of this type.

"Second—we invite people of intelligent minds to come and see 'something different.'

"Third—we play safe . . . no one can come back and kick and claim we tried to 'put something over on them.'

"Perhaps Mr. Adams couldn't advertise along our lines because he has only a limited number of people in his audience who would appreciate a 'class picture.' Not knowing the facts, and merely guessing, it is my opinion that Mr. Adams advertised it in the regular way without any special appeal to the intellectual type—which accounts for the fact that he got them in the first night but not the second. In other words, he sold the picture to the wrong people.

"I remember, several years ago, when the picture 'Outward Bound' was current, many exhibitors here in Chicago passed it up. However, we used it—and broke all house records simply because we told the people in advance of the showing that the picture is unusual and the theme might not appeal to all. We have had similar successes with pictures like 'The Guardsman,' 'Disraeli,' 'Catherine the Great,' 'The World Moves On,' 'As the Earth Turns.'

"It is my opinion that Mr. Adams should never have played the picture in his house. He should have paid for it and forgotten about it. That probably would have done him and his house more good.

"Personally, I want to congratulate Messrs. Hecht and Mac Arthur for getting off the beaten path with this daring presentation. I look forward with great anticipation to their next production."

Charninsky Sees It Pay

Louis Charninsky, manager of the Capitol theatre in Dallas, submitted a copy of a letter from him to Mr. Hecht and Mr. MacArthur, as well as tear-sheets from Dallas newspapers. In the letter Mr. Charninsky, who also was enthusiastic over the picture's returns, had written as follows:

"I am sending you, inclosed, reviews and publicity on your picture 'Crime without Passion,' and also the article that the Herald-World (MOTION PICTURE HERALD—Ed.) printed. Note that you got top space on the reviews.

"After all the theatres turned this picture down, I asked for it to be booked into the Capitol and they did so, thinking that the week of Dec. 15th would naturally be a bad week in show business on account of the Christmas shoppers, etc., but for your information I want you to know the house is breaking all attendance records and we had people standing waiting for seats both Saturday and Sunday. We got behind this picture 100 per cent and sold it to all classes of people. We used 24-sheets—3-sheets—300 window cars—also heralds and had a big lobby ballyhoo with a man dressed as the Invisible Man with copy 'The Invisible Man Comes to Life,' etc., in a specially built shadow box. This ballyhoo stopped hundreds of people and sold many tickets for us. All of our patrons enjoyed this picture thoroughly and we had no complaints whatsoever registered at the box-office."

Controversy in Newspaper

To the HERALD copy Mr. Charninsky added this observation:

"P. S. If you ask me, I think it's a swell picture and doing plenty of business." In forwarding the tear-sheets, he repeated: "I still say it's a great picture and my clientele says the same." And again: "'Crime without Passion' is still bringing plenty of publicity, also piling up our grosses."

An interesting story of reception of the picture by the Dallas public, as well as successful approach from an exploitation standpoint, is reflected in the newspaper clippings.

John Rosenfeld, Jr., critic of the Dallas Morning News, wrote in the issue of December 16th:

"Elm Street has been in no hurry to play 'Crime Without Passion'. . . . The picture is highly esteemed in managerial circles. But, as a midnight show recently pointed out, half the audience will not know what it is about, missing the rubber-stamp ideology, the familiar lanes of approach to situations and the inevitably happy close-up. . . .

"'Crime without Passion' is an effective essay at new screen methods, but it won't go down too easily with a public trained for twenty-five years in old screen methods."

Letters Reprinted

The following day, however, in the News, under a caption "What Can't Take It," appeared an article starting this way: "The Motion Picture Herald, able trade publication of the movie industry, has an interesting record of documents on the subject of 'Crime without Passion.' . . . In the correspondence possibly may be found a clue to the Dallasite's own perplexities." There followed a complete reprinting of the Adams-Hecht and MacArthur passage at pens, as recorded in the HERALD. And on the 18th of December, the News carried, under the heading "Capitol Here Is 'Intelligent' and Unusual Picture Clicks," the following:

"Printing of correspondence concerning 'Crime without Passion' between producers of the film . . . and Roy W. Adams . . . drew fire from Elm street, as expected. The critic quoted James Owen Cherry, city manager of Interstate Theatres, Inc., to the effect that the picture 'is doing as well as most weekend attractions at the Capitol and a whole lot better than any of the midweek pictures, the figures being based on two-day figures.'"

The critic added this quotation from Mr. Cherry: "Inasmuch as the Dallas engagement . . . has been eminently satisfactory, the theatres are satisfied with the power of their newspaper advertising and also give thanks to the press in assisting, as it always does, when some unusual film must be presented to the public."

Other Critics Praise Film

In the Dallas Dispatch, a reviewer signing with the initials E. M. B. summed it up this way: "The picture, as a whole, due to Rains' acting, Margo's physical appearance, and an unusual story, is one of the most entertaining films to hit Elm Street in some time."

A similar reaction was noted in the Times Herald. The reviewer, signing himself as "J. L." (presumably Jimmy Lovell), said: "Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur have turned out a picture . . . which rightfully should be the sensation of an envious industry. It is a picture which justifies the use of descriptive superlatives and we start right in by employing 'masterful' for the direction, 'superb' for photography and 'omniscient' for the casting.

"It is the best we have seen this year."

"Art" and Understanding

Two days later Mr. Lovell wrote: "We presume that for ages certain portions of the public have been confusing 'art' with something which 'cannot be understood.' . . . For that reason we deplore the 'art' tag which has been attached blindly to 'Crime without Passion.' . . . There is nothing subtle about this picture. It is 'art,' all right, because it is an example of perfect craftsmanship." Mr. Lovell added that in a starting list for the naming of three actors and three actresses for "best performances" of the year he was including Claude Rains in "Crime without Passion."

One of the exploitation devices at the Capitol, another clipping shows, was the appearance of W. F. Monford, "Dallas' only professional ballyhoo artist," as the "invisible man" in the lobby of the Capitol.

The National Board of Review of Motion Pictures this week announced its selection of "ten best" pictures from American studios and five foreign. The Board listed ten pictures as having been chosen for mention because of artistic merit. Among these was "Crime without Passion."

The Screen Writers' Guild from Hollywood announced its selection of "six outstanding" productions of the year. "Crime without Passion" was given honorable mention in the votes of 619 members.

7,000 Theatres Double-Featuring, Declares Golden

At least 7,000 motion picture theatres of the 12,000 in the United States are showing double features, according to Edward A. Golden, general sales manager of Monogram.

In key centers such as New York, Los Angeles, St. Louis, New Haven, Detroit, Boston, Kansas City and Milwaukee, virtually all the houses are dual billing, the Monogram executive said.

From Milwaukee, however, came word this week that first-runs, for the first time in several months, had returned to a single feature policy, and whether the practice will be maintained will hinge, it was said, upon whether the outlying theatres continue playing double and triple features.

In Boston, on the other hand, several theatres are reported to be doing what is reported as tremendous business with a double feature policy augmented by seven acts of vaudeville.

In Seattle it was announced that after January 1 double billing would be a thing of the past. Several weeks ago the Liberty theatre abandoned duals; this week Hamrick's Music Box resumed single features and the end of this Christmas week will see termination of the duals policy at the Paramount, which initiated the policy only six weeks ago with vaudeville in addition.

Over the signature of Nat B. Browne, secretary, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of the District of Columbia this week issued a statement in which it reported that it viewed "with alarm the spread of the pernicious practice of double featuring motion pictures throughout the eastern United States."

"The practice of double featuring, especially in view of the shortage of good playable product, has proven economically unsound," the statement continued.

"Certain motion picture producing companies have refused to allow their product to be sold or exhibited to double featuring programs in this territory.

"The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of the District of Columbia hereby goes on record as commending the stand of these major producing companies in their efforts to discontinue double featuring programs and extends its thanks for this service to MGM, Warner Bros., First National, Paramount and United Artists."

WILL ROGERS TOP RADIO FAVORITE IN LISTENER POLL; CANTOR SECOND

Winner of Herald's Best Money Making Stars Survey Also Heads Returns of Ross Federal Service Checkup

A representative segment of the vast American radio audience at last has spoken its final word on the identities of its favorite network entertainers. Will Rogers, the homely philosopher of screen, stage and newspaper, stood first by an appreciable margin in the poll, conducted in ten representative key cities by Ross Federal Service. Will Rogers was adjudged the "Best Money Making Star" of the screen in 1933-34 in MOTION PICTURE HERALD's annual poll of the independent exhibitors.

Eddie Cantor Second

Second in the Ross Federal study—which was conducted in Atlanta, Baltimore, Boston, Charlotte, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Detroit, Memphis, New Orleans and Philadelphia—is Eddie Cantor, who ranked 15th in the HERALD canvass of 1933-34, sixth the year before. Third in the radio poll was Jack Benny, with Joe Penner fourth. Bing Crosby, fifth favorite of radio, was tenth in the HERALD's film player survey.

Despite the leads of Will Rogers and Eddie Cantor over some 40 other individual radio entertainers mentioned—having 12.96 and 9.67 votes—50.66 per cent of all radio listeners questioned expressed no preferences, and 3.34 per cent did not reply or refused to express their opinions.

Of the 40 individuals receiving votes, 17 have appeared from time to time in motion pictures, but only five could be classified as film stars in their own right in addition to their radio appearances. These are, in addition to Rogers and Cantor, Bing Crosby, Lawrence Tibbett and Mary Pickford. Of the remaining 12 who have appeared in films, Ed Wynn, Burns & Allen, Donald Novis, Jack Pearl, Lanny Ross, Rudy Vallee and Joe Penner are most familiar.

22 on Music Programs

Twenty-two of the performers mentioned are in musical radio programs exclusively.

In point of program preference, Good Gulf Gasoline, the Rogers Program, and the Chase & Sanborn coffee hour, with Eddie Cantor, are the winners, but the remaining program preferences from the ten cities do not coincide with the popularity of the individual performers voted upon. For example, where Cap'n Henry—Charles Winninger of the Maxwell House Showboat—is way down on the list of individuals, the Maxwell House program comes third on the list of program preferences. Lanny Ross, featured on the Maxwell House program, is eighth on the list of favorite performers. The Fleischman Yeast program is eighth on the program list, while Rudy Vallee, the program's director, is seventh on the list of individual favorites, which follows, with percentage total:

Clark Gable Heads Radio Commentator's Survey of Best Liked Players of Screen

A radio poll conducted by Sam Taylor, screen commentator of the American Broadcasting System, among 2,700 of his listeners to determine their favorite screen actors and actresses, gave the lead to Clark Gable, with 296 votes; Myrna Loy second, 228 votes, and Joan Crawford third with 22 votes.

The most popular male stars, with the total number of votes cast, were:

Clark Gable, 296; Dick Powell, 216; Bing Crosby, 136; Gene Raymond, 118; Fredric March, 74; William Powell, 73; Franchot Tone, 64; Warner Baxter, 56; Robert Montgomery, 55; Lew Ayres, 42; John Boles, 39; Gary Cooper, 34; Lanny Ross, 27; James Cagney, 22; James Dunn, 22; Cary Grant, 21; Ramon Novarro, 20; Leslie Howard, 17; Robert Young, 17; Richard Cromwell, 14; Joel McCrea, 14; Tom Brown, 13; Charles Farrell, 13; Ronald Colman, 12; David Manners, 11. (Clark Gable was second in the HERALD's Best Money Making Stars survey. The name of Will Rogers, first of the Money Makers, does not appear above in the Taylor radio canvass.)

Feminine stars' votes were:

Myrna Loy, 228; Joan Crawford, 222; Ginger Rogers, 149; Ruby Keeler, 135; Janet Gaynor, 80; Claudette Colbert, 79; Norma Shearer, 78; Jean Harlow, 76; Jean Parker, 50; Shirley Temple, 42; Loretta Young, 39; Greta Garbo, 32; Mae West, 31; Katharine Hepburn, 29; Carole Lombard, 28; Constance Bennett, 26; Kay Francis, 26; Joan Blondell, 23; Alice Faye, 16; Helen Hayes, 16; Irene Dunne, 15; Ann Sothorn, 14; Barbara Stanwyck, 13; Miriam Hopkins, 12; Madge Evans and Fay Wray, 11 each.

One hundred other stars were named, all receiving fewer than 10 votes.

With the exception of Greta Garbo, no foreign star received more than five votes. About 75 per cent of the votes were sent in by feminine listeners.

Levy Hits Money Sent From Mexico

Distributors and others who are obliged to send money out of Mexico for payment of anything other than merchandise are now saddled with another tax, the absentees' impost, a levy ranging from two to four per cent on all money sent abroad that is earned in Mexico.

The impost covers dividends, profits and any other earnings in Mexico sent beyond its borders, but does not affect funds importers send to foreign lands for the purchase of goods to be distributed in Mexico. In the case of distributors and others in the film industry sending funds abroad, the absentees' import is two per cent.

Exhibitor Urges Other Owners Try Government's Unaddressed Mail

The new plan of the United States Postal Department, whereby unaddressed programs and other forms of promotional literature are delivered for theatre owners and merchants at third class rates by letter carriers and are inserted in individual mailboxes on the regular routes, is worth ten times as much as independent hand distribution, in the opinion of Earl D. Smith, who is using the system for his Tower theatre, Salt Lake City. Mr. Smith wrote this week to urge other owners to try the plan in the interests of better box-office. The idea had been described in MOTION PICTURE HERALD of November 3, page 15.

TOWER 94 SOUTH 94 EAST THE HOUSE OF HITS! WHERE YOU SEE THE "PICK OF THE PICTURES" Telephone Hy8380 FOR ANY INFORMATION DESIRED	Sec. 562, P.L. and R. U.S. POSTAGE 1c Paid SALT LAKE CITY UTAH Permit No. 604 Patron— Letter Carrier Route Salt Lake City, Utah.

Mr. Smith distributed 9,500 cards (sample reproduced above), 3 inches deep and 7 inches wide, at a cost of $95 postage (rate for postcards not in envelopes). On the reverse side appeared the Tower's coming attractions for the week.

"My theatre is a suburban one," he pointed out, "seating about 450. From this you can see that such a postage bill is quite an expense for me, but, regardless, I have been very well satisfied with the results obtained, and I think every exhibitor would do well to at least give the mailing of cards or circulars under the new ruling a trial.

"A card such as the sample, going through the mail to prospective customers, is worth ten times as much as if the same card was peddled, house to house, many of which never really reach the inside of the homes.

"When I started on this campaign, I first secured a large map of Salt Lake City, on which I marked the territory I wished to cover. I then went to the superintendent of mails at the post office and he very ably assisted me in the plan by outlining each letter carrier route in the section of the city which I wished to cover, putting the number of each postman's route on the map, and also the exact number of stops on each individual route.

"After the above had been taken care of, all it was necessary for me to do was to count the proper number of mailable pieces for each individual route, tie them properly and mark the number of pieces on each package, and also give the number of the respective routes."

Smalley—Schine Case to Capital

The controversy between William C. Smalley of Hamilton, N. Y., and the Meyer Schine circuit over possession of the Hamilton theatre was laid before the National Compliance Council in Washington last week.

The case was taken to Washington after the Albany grievance board and Code Authority had been unable to come to a decision. Mr. Smalley had had possession of the Hamilton for a number of years and his lease expired in October. Prior to that time the owner had sold it to Glove City Amusement Company and Mr. Smalley had brought a claim of interference with pending negotiations, at the same applying to the courts for an injunction.

The Compliance Council did not come to a decision last week, but disposition of the case is awaited with considerable interest, in view of the fact that the Code Authority has recommended elimination of the clause.

Although not officially requested by the Administration to make such a report, George F. Thompson, impartial member of the New York grievance board, this week announced he is making a complete resume of the board's activities for submission to compliance director Sol A. Rosenblatt.

In Milwaukee this week, bank nights were ordered discontinued in eight theatres by the grievance board. The board also issued a cease and desist order against the Embassy in Neenah, charged with issuing perfect attendance cards to children providing for attendance at 15 episodes of a serial with a free show to those attending all 15.

Hiatt to Join First Division

Amos Hiatt immediately will terminate a six-year association with the RKO companies to join, as a vice-president, the new Ludington-Fiske-Curtis-Thomas interests at First Division.

He has been serving the Pathe News unit of RKO as assistant secretary and assistant treasurer, since 1931, and for two years previous to that was on the executive staff of RKO Radio Pictures.

Born in Iowa City, Iowa, on September 5, 1900, Mr. Hiatt, a graduate of Washington University, in 1923 managed the American Oriental Bank at Tientsin, China, and later directed its branch at Chungking. He returned to America and was an instructor at Harvard's School of Business, joining RKO in 1928.

AMPA Christmas Party Seen as Most Successful

The Associated Motion Picture Advertisers in New York last Thursday held its annual Christmas luncheon and entertainment, with an attendance of 1,500 which taxed the capacity of the Grand Ballroom of the Hotel Astor to the limit. The event was rated the most successful of all similar affairs, the attendance the largest in the organization's history.

The masters of ceremonies were William Ferguson, president of the AMPA, and John W. Alicoate, editor of Film Daily. Among those introduced at the affair were Colvin Brown, general manager of QUIGLEY PUBLICATIONS, Louis Nizer, Charles C. Pettijohn, Harry Hershfield, Jack Cohn, "Red" Kann, E. W. Hammons, Felix Feist, Sylvia Froos, Mae Murray, Major Edward Bowes, David Bernstein, Jack Pearl, Lily Pons, Ken Strong, Joseph Connolly, Kitty Carlisle, Al Lichtman, Clendennin Ryan, Henry R. Luce, Richard Bonelli, Karen Morley, Smith & Dale, Postmaster Albert Goldman, Shirley Ross, Grover Whalen and Walter Huston.

NEW ZEALAND STANDARD CONTRACT PROVIDES 25 PER CENT REJECTION

Amendment Act, Through First Reading, Would Empower Cabinet to Prevent Monopolies and Extend Censorship

By CLIFF HOLT
Sydney Correspondent

Long sought by exhibitors, a standard contract and a 25 per cent rejection clause are two of the chief provisions embodied in the New Zealand Cinematograph Films Amendment Act, which is already through its first reading in the House of Representatives. The bill also seeks to invest the Cabinet with the power to prevent the creation or existence of monopolies, with heavy fines for offenders, and considerably widens the powers of the censorship authorities.

The possibility of a standard contract is the most vital provision in the bill. While the Minister's approval of any standard contract will not be limited, he is empowered to include in such contract a clause to the effect that "The exhibitor shall not by the terms of any contract be required to charge for admission to any theatre a minimum fee exceeding sixpence for adults or threepence for children, or such higher minimum fee as the Minister may, either generally or in any particular circumstance, think proper."

No contract, however, can meet with official approval before submission to the advisory committee (appointed by the principal Act) for consideration and recommendations. The contract finally decided upon shall be effective for a period not exceeding two years; but a joint application of exhibitors and distributors at any time may bring about variations subject to ministerial approval.

Under the provision to prevent monopolies, distributors will be adjudged guilty should they refuse to deal with an exhibitor unable to obtain films "on usual trade terms." At the same time, exhibitors will be liable to a fine of $500 if at any time they hire films in excess of the number reasonably required for any theatre or theatres in respect of which they are licensed.

May Reject 25 Per Cent

Before entering into contracts for the exhibition of any film, distributors are required to give a statement setting out a description of the films intended for release during the contracted season. In order to provide "relief for exhibitors from block booking," 25 per cent of these may be rejected by the exhibitor, provided they have been contracted for after Jan. 1, 1935, when the new Act will be deemed to come into force.

Under the provisions of the amended bill, the censor's approval of any film may be absolute or qualified. In the latter case he may determine under what circumstances a film may be screened and to what specific type of audience. In that section of the original 1928 Act dealing with the right to appeal, the bill will be varied to give the Minister or his authorized representative the right to appeal against the approval of any film. On any such appeal, the approval of the censor may be withdrawn, with renter and exhibitor consequently relieved of any contractual liabilities such withdrawal may entail, apart from those concerning the prior exhibition of the film.

TAKE ENGINE TO FILM FIRE

When a small fire broke out in the projection room of the Paramount theatre in Casa Grande, Ariz., one night recently, two of the employees, Jack Woods and Al Aaronston, raced to the fire department headquarters, sounded an alarm, pushed the doors open, started the engine and waited for the firemen. Both were former volunteer firemen. When no one appeared, the two got aboard and drove to the fire. The department accused them of breaking and entering, and stealing a fire engine, but the charges were dropped after protests from the citizenry. The fire caused no damage.

Conviction for an offence under the Act, in addition to any other penalty, renders the defendant liable to loss of license for a period determined by the court but not exceeding twelve months.

Quota Bill Up Soon

There is a possibility that the events in New Zealand may prove a forerunner to similar legislation in New South Wales. When the New Zealand Film Bill was brought under his notice in the House, the deputy premier of N. S. W. (Colonel Bruxner) said that the Quota Bill would be placed before Parliament in the near future.

"A measure will be placed before the House very shortly dealing with the question of the Film Quota, and various other matters connected with the film industry," he said.

Three months ago the early passage of quota legislation seemed practically a certainty; but more recently the Victorian Government delayed the bill and the likelihood of a quota became more remote than ever. This was especially pleasing to British interests, which had been directly opposed to a quota law from the outset, although exhibitors, who would be most vitally affected by such legislation, appeared apathetic. Not so does this apply to a rejection right or standard contract, however, for which Australian independents have been unsuccessfully fighting for years. It is expected that Mr. Davies, the member who proposed in the N.S.W. Parliament the creation of a standard contract and rejection privileges for N.S.W., will have the support of N.S.W. independents for life.

With a capitalization of £50,000, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Theatres, Ltd., has been registered as a company in N.S.W. "to open and operate theatres in any part of the Commonwealth." It is reported that an extension to other states will follow later. That any plans MGM might have for expanding its activities in the theatre field are confined to cities alone is made clear by N. B. Freeman, local MGM chief.

New South Wales Quota Bill Up Soon; MGM Theatres Registered but Will Operate Only in the Cities

"Rumors linking my company with an alleged deal concerning the purchase of an important N.S.W. country circuit," he declared, "prompt me to make the definite statement that it is neither the intention nor the policy of MGM to enter into competition with either suburban or country exhibitors. That means both now and in the future. While our city houses serve the purpose of giving the product important key center release, we are well satisfied."

During the greater part of the year MGM has been operating the St. James in Sydney, the Metro in Melbourne and the Cremorne in Brisbane, each house meeting with alternating success.

Hoyts Profit Increases

Despite the exorbitant taxation burden to which the directors draw spirited attention in their report, the operators of Hoyts Theatres, Ltd., for the year ended June 30, 1934, show a profit of £52,802 ($264,010), an increase of £27,519 ($137,595) over the preceding twelve months.

In addition to the substantially increased earnings, the financial position of the company had been considerably strengthened.

The loan account of Fox Film Corporation (Australian) Ltd. has been reduced during the year by £86,321 ($431,605) and now stands at £100,000 ($500,000), and Fox has reduced the interest on this loan from 6 to 5 per cent. Although various other liabilities of the company have also been partially wiped off, the company's bank overdraft has not materially altered.

The directors are of the opinion that the trading results proved very satisfactory; but they describe as "an intolerable state of affairs" the system by which the company is assessed on the same income at the same time by the taxation authorities in two different states.

Northampton Council Objects to Principle of Judging Ap- plications by Existing Seats

By BRUCE ALLAN
London Correspondent

Northampton town council, granting permission for a new A. B. C. super-theatre, to seat 3,000, turned a deaf ear to "redundancy" pleas advanced on behalf of existing theatres in the town, although it was argued that these theatres, nine in number, offered 11,650 seats and three performances daily for a population of 100,000.

Aside from the merits of the individual case, the Council's decision is of interest as registering an objection in principle to the policy of judging license applications by existing entertainment facilities.

"The Council should not be swayed by a section of the community which asks for protection" was an opinion expressed, and the question was raised whether, if it were valid in the case of a cinema, the plea of "redundancy" could not be urged by any tradesman threatened with competition from a newcomer.

$230,000 Gross, $90,000 Tax

In announcing a profit of more than £46,000 ($230,000) gross for Madame Tussaud's, the cinema-cafe-waxwork enterprise in Baker Street, London, the chairman, John Maxwell, pointed out that during the year $90,000 had been paid to the Government in Entertainment Tax, which he attacked as the most serious burden on the trade and the principal remaining adverse trade factor with which it was faced.

According to Mr. Maxwell, the past year had seen a great improvement in regard to other unfavourable factors, including the reduced spending power of the public, "good" weather and the fall in the number of provincial visitors to London.

Film and Theatre Premieres

The year is closing with some notable theatre openings and film premieres. Paramount's new Glasgow house, the 2,000-seat Renfield will be dedicated on New Year Eve, by the Lord Provost.

Gaumont-British opened its 3,000-seat Palace at Chelsea, London, December 8 with the unusual policy of a daily program change for the first three days, with "The Camels are Coming," "Henry VIII," and "Forbidden Territory." The theatre front carries a bas relief of W. Friese-Greene, who is widely regarded in England as the real inventor of cinematography.

Notable film premieres included the London "Scarlet Pimpernel" December 21 at the Leicester Square theatre. Toeplitz's first "The Dictator," is not due until February, and probably will be first shown in Paris.

"Fighting Stock," a Tom Walls-Ralph Lynn comedy, is in production at the Gainsborough Islington studio.

London Films completed its 1934 schedule with last scenes for "Sanders of the River." London has added to its list for next year: "The Broken Road," from the A. E. W. Mason novel, "Young Mr. Disraeli," based on the successful play recently produced here; and announces that Charles Laughton probably will play Diaghliev, the ballet master, in a film based on the life of Nijinsky. Laughton already has been cast for the lead in René Clair's film, "Sir Tristram Goes West." Laurence Howard has been selected for the title role of "Lawrence of Arabia," which probably will be all-colour. "Whither Mankind," from the Wells "Shape of Things to Come," "Twenty Five Years of the Reign of King George V," written by Winston Churchill, and "Mary Read," from the play, have been announced by London.

Quota Revision Expected

It now appears certain that the British quota act will be revised to solve the "pound-a-foot quickies" problem with addition of a minimum cost clause or establishment of a quality standard.

G. R. Hall Caine, M. P. and chairman of the Board of Trade advisory committee, addressing the City Conservation Association, indicated early introduction of amendments in Commons to force Americans to make or buy British films of a standard consistent with the policy urged by the film group of the Federation of British Industries and the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association.

A decline in profits of Associated Provincial Picture Houses the past year was due to the competition of new theatres, Mark Ostrer declared, in presiding at the annual meeting. The Gaumont British subsidiary reported profits of £ 83,994 ($420,000), a 6 per cent dividend, against £ 113,963 ($570,000) the year before at a 10 per cent dividend.

Actor Federation Organizing Stage Shows for Tours

Motion picture exhibitors and itinerant vaudeville actors throughout the country this week were being contacted by the American Federation of Actors to support a nationwide plan of the AFA to stimulate stage shows in localities where no such entertainment is offered.

According to the plan, the AFA will send out touring companies of from 25 to 30 performers each, including a company manager and two advance men. The AFA announced this week that the sole objective of the venture is to revive public and theatre interest in variety entertainment, to provide work for as many as possible of the thousands of jobless vaudevillians in the country and to prove to motion picture theatre men that stage shows can still draw at the box office.

Each unit, under the plan, will carry its own scenery and will travel in chartered buses. The first company is expected to be organized by the first of next week and will probably open in the east early in 1934.

The Federation has men on the road at present who are making a thorough study of conditions and mapping tours for the first units. Their work includes an analysis of the number of units which should be organized, the number of weeks of playing time to be set for each and the general reaction of theatre men.

$5,000,000 Net of Paramount Seen

Estimated net earnings of Paramount Public Corporation for the year 1934 will approximate $5,000,000 available for interest, sinking fund and dividends on the new securities that will be issued in accordance with the proposed plan of reorganization now before the court, the Dow-Jones Wall Street Journal said this week.

In the reorganization plan it was stated that operating earnings in the first nine months of 1934 were $4,530,000, against $5,692,000 in the corresponding 1933 period. Of this amount in 1934, $4,048,000 came from earnings of the picture producing division and $482,000 from the corporation's theatres.

"Apparently," said the Wall Street Journal, "earnings from the producing group are running behind a year ago while theatre profits are gaining. In the third quarter of this year, for example, it is estimated that earnings from picture productions were $574,000, against $918,000 from this source during the 1933 third quarter. It is estimated that earnings from the picture division in the fourth quarter will also be less than in the 1933 period. These estimated figures are results from companies which will remain in operation on the present basis."

Cause of the decline in earnings from the producing division, the Journal said, is due in part to the higher negative cost under the NRA, to the keen competition for stars which makes salary expense unduly high, and to the difficulties of producing under receivership conditions.

ASIDES & INTERLUDES

By JAMES CUNNINGHAM

The while motion picture people are struggling, apparently unsuccessfully, to lubricate the NRA film code machinery for smoother running, the O'Donnell-Fleeson newspaper syndicate writers, who daily do a piece captioned Capital Stuff, are figuratively touring the world, by telegraph, to ascertain, the expressions used by the people of foreign countries in translating into their respective languages President Roosevelt's 100 per cent American idiom, "New Deal."

They found that in Herr Hitler's Germany, the New Deal is the Neu Krus (New Plan), or, Neu Teilen (New Cut of the Cards).

The Irish in Ireland call it Nuadh Cleas (New Round of Cards).

The Greeks have no word for it.

Austria calls it the Neu Orientlerung (New Orientation).

Soviet Russia has dubbed the idiom the Nvy Potchyn (New Start).

In Turkey, it is the Yeni Yol (New Way).

Panama uses El Nuevo Juego (New Game).

In Persia, it is Sale Eghtesadi Djadid (New Economic Year).

China and Siam have given up trying to translate.

Sweden did not surrender so easily. They write out Eteruppbygggnadsprogrammet (Recovery Program).

We can't print what Terry Ramsaye calls it.

George Edward Akerson, former newspaper reporter, who was persuaded to resign as President Hoover's secretary, in 1931, to take a $30,000 a year executive post at Paramount, with duties undefined, has been discovered in a job on the code authority for the paper industry. Mr. Akerson's exit from the motion picture business was not marked by any of the loud trumpeting and banqueting that signaled his entrance. He left quietly and unnoticed.

Presidential secretaries have figured numerous in Paramount affairs. Besides George Akerson, Paramount now has as trustee-in-bankruptcy, President Taft's secretary, Charles D. Hilles. One of President Roosevelt's secretaries, Stephen Early, was a Paramount news-reel representative at Washington until Franklin Delano moved into the White House. Score: Presidential secretaries to Paramount, 2; Paramounters to the President, 1.

Riding officeward to Columbus Circle on New York's subways the other morning, from home at very breezy Pelham Bay, we were distracted from a-reading reports of working exhibitors to our What the Picture Did For Me department by the awkward swaying of a passenger who stood directly in front of us in this crowded conveyance for the masses. True, much of our annoyers' discomfort was attributable to the too many stop-and-go jerks of the frisky motorman's control switch, but, we thought, without looking at our fellow passenger, his legs needed stabilizing. Ready for a "why-doncha-keep-still" look, we upped our head, and, lo and behold, the face we saw was the thick-lipped, wide-grin countenance of the travelin' and fightin' son of our 26th President, Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, Jr. Held in the right hand of young Roosevelt—he just turned 47—was a copy of the book, "The Art of Walking." Evidently he was practicing in the subway.

'Twas only a few days ago that Colonel Roosevelt was the guest or honor at our Associated Motion Picture Advertisers' weekly luncheon on Broadway, where he apologized from the dais to Miss Sally Rand, fan-and-bubble monopolist, who was also on hand, because he did not recognize her with her clothes on.

THE Christmas spirit of cheer and good will toward men brought out into the open public prints the bitter feud between those two tabloid newspaper columnists: Walter Winchell, New York Daily Mirror, and Ed Sullivan, New York Daily News, both known to motion picture people of Broadway and Hollywood Boulevard for their reportorial proclivities.

It seems that the husky Mr. Sullivan had published in his column, some three weeks ago, a suggestion that Princess Barbara Hutton Mdviani, pretty little heiress of the Woolworth 5-and-10 millions, furnish him with $5,000 with which to buy food to stuff full the little stomachs of hungry children, and their impoverished mothers and dads, on Christmas Day. The following morning Mr. Winchell rushed, columnwise, to the "defense" of the Princess, severely lambasting Sullivan for having printed the proposal. Among the words found in this tirade was "blackmail."

Winchell said that the Princess had "sobbed" after having been "humiliated" in such a public manner, especially in view of her many private philanthropies. He also observed that the Princess felt $5,000 was a cheap price to pay for relief from such participation in the public prints.

As a result, and, quite naturally, public sentiment turned against Mr. Sullivan for so embarrassing the millionairess—thanks to the Winchell blasts and to his subsequent columnistic attacks in this connection. However, the same adverse sentiment quickly changed.

Later, when Broadway read one of Mr. Winchell's final remarks about people being "sick in the stomach," or sumpin', over Mr. Sullivan's proposal, it chuckled loudly and long because it knew that, rather than acting adversely, the Princess readily and wholeheartedly accepted the charitable opportunity, and, more ironically, Broadway also had a strong hunch that Mr. Winchell really turned sour because Mr. Sullivan had beaten him to print with some such idea.

Anyway, the kids ate on Christmas.

Motion Picture Daily reported late last week that W. P. Garyn "has lost 35 pounds in the last few months."

Last week Mr. Garyn got a job with First Division.

Film magnates and west coast studio personalities are responsible for a good share of the stimulation being enjoyed these days by the yacht-building industry. The last 18 months have not been too good for general business as a whole, but in the same period yacht owning increased considerably. The greatest number of pleasure vessels in the history of American yachting is now registered with the Bureau of Navigation and Steamboat Inspection.

An exhaustive investigation—if anyone cares about making such an investigation—would show that several hundreds of the 3,776 pleasure vessels are registered to members of this motion picture business.

This being the case, it is somehow puzzling that the champion title-creating Governor Ruby Laffoon of Kentucky has not commissioned more admirals than kernels. Something should be done about it. We demand a Kentucky Admiral for every Kentucky Colonel, and hereby appoint Kentucky General Charles Clyde Pettijohn a committee of one to take up the matter with Ruby.

William S. Hart, fondly remembered by many a movie going youngster of a decade and two ago as "Two-Gun Bill," reached his 64th birthday last week, peacefully retired on his Horse-shoe Ranch at Newall, California, where his pen turns out a book now and then when the fancy strikes him.

Six-foot Bill Hart was the subject of our very first interview as a motion picture trade paper reporter, some 15 years ago this winter. We remember it well, a student of journalism, fresh from school, on the Wid's Daily (now Film Daily) staff of the late and well-liked Joseph Dannenberg. Mr. Hart had just arrived at the old Waldorf-Astoria from sunny California, and "Danny" sent us down to learn about conditions in studioland.

"Be back here in an hour," Danny warned us. We returned to the editorial rooms six hours later, long past the press deadline, and our trade paper career almost died aborning on the spot.

We never told Danny that our discussion had not even once touched upon the subject of Hollywood and motion pictures. Both Mr. Hart and the young reporter, himself still a cowboy-and-Indian film fan, had been concentrating on the more important business of Bill's longest and shiniest and surest six-shooters.

PANDRO BERMAN SEES LACK OF MALE TALENT

Producer Should Not Have Over 10 Films a Year, Says RKO Radio Studio Executive

Hollywood is experiencing a shortage of adequate leading men, in the opinion of Pandro S. Berman, RKO Radio executive producer. Feminine talent he declared abundant. The youthful producer—he's only 29—returned to Hollywood over the weekend after a few days in New York looking over plays and stories for 1935-36 production.

"The only way a producer can make pictures is to select a story he personally likes and hope the general public will share his sentiments"; the producer who thinks he knows all about what the public wants may be in for a day of reckoning at the box office, he said.

8 to 10 Films Per Producer

"Pan" Berman has served a term in virtually every branch of production, starting as assistant director to Tod Browning in the old FBO company. Among those with whom he was associated at that time were Ralph Ince, Al Santell and Mal St. Clair. From a film editor for FBO and later a title editor for Columbia, Mr. Berman went to the post of chief film editor for RKO productions and assistant to William Le Baron. His first big assignment was as assistant to David O. Selznick on "Symphony of Six Million." His most recent personal production was Sir James M. Barrie's "The Little Minister," with Katharine Hepburn.

No producer should carry a schedule calling for more than eight or ten pictures in one season, he said. However, for the current season Mr. Berman has a schedule which calls for 15 features, ten of which have been completed. Next season, he said, he will try to get his program down to eight or ten.

The Radio producer foresaw continuance of the current trend in musicals and is planning several for Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers.

Story Material Curtailed

Mr. Berman said the Legion of Decency campaign has seriously curtailed the story subjects open to any sort of film treatment.

"Things like the Legion always come to an end," he declared, "and it will be doubly so in the case of motion pictures when audiences are faced with a steady flow of saccharine material.

"Joe Breen is a grand person and absolutely the right man for the job he's doing (as Production Code Administrator). Everyone loves him. But there are many influences behind him, telling him what to do."

Few Current Plays of Appeal

Mr. Berman said that, during his brief stay in New York, he had seen but few plays which had definite picture appeal and most of those would have to be radically treated before they could pass Mr. Breen's board. He declared writers in Hollywood are doing little to correct the paucity of original story material, especially contract writers.

Mr. Berman has completed 10 of the fifteen pictures on his current schedule. The remaining five are "Break of Hearts," with Katharine Hepburn and Francis Lederer and directed by Phillip Moeller; Sir James M. Barrie's "Quality Street," another for Miss Hepburn; Ann Harding in an untitled vehicle; "Laddie," with John Deal, and "Top Hat," a musical starring Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers.

The RKO Radio studio executive is making plans for the debut of Lily Pons, Metropolitan Opera star, and indicated that the soprano probably would be starred in a modern vehicle, "with a bit of opera thrown in."

Returning to Hollywood with him were J. R. McDonough, president of Radio Pictures; Allan Scott and Jane Murfin, both writers.

Films First in Air Express Gain

Motion picture films, for the most part newsreels, led all other classes of merchandise in the tabulation that will show a gain of more than 100 per cent in air express shipments in the United States in 1934. Of the hundreds of classes of express, newsreels made up 20 per cent of the total.

One news event, the Morro Castle disaster, accounted for 343 shipments through the air division of the Railway Express Agency, affiliated with United Airlines, Pan-American, and sectional air transport companies throughout the country.

The 1934 poundage for United Air Lines alone will total 892,400 as against 404,673 pounds in 1933. In 1931 but 51,480 pounds of air express were carried on this line. Three cuts in shipping rates that make prices today just a third of what they were when the service was inaugurated, speeding up of plane schedules, and the co-ordination of plane-train transfers for distributors off the regular air routes combined in making possible the boom.

The newsreels have become such heavy users of this system that the agency now sends its representatives along with the cameramen on many major news stories to expedite shipments. Shipment of regular features films by air express, too, showed tremendous gains in the past year. The motion picture industry contributes to the bulk of air express in still another manner. Almost every plane arriving in Los Angeles from the east carries its packages of manuscripts and recently published books that are under consideration for picture rights.

Fox West Coast Sale to National Approved by Court

The sale of assets of Fox West Coast Theatres to National Theatres Corporation was approved in Los Angeles federal court this week by Judge George Cosgrove, who denied the protests of the Marshall Square Theatres Company of San Francisco and Harry L. Hartman of San Diego, both of whom have anti-trust suits pending against the circuit.

The protestants' attorneys announced they would file an appeal in the United States circuit court of appeals within 10 days. National Theatres has agreed to take over all Fox West Coast obligations, but the two protestants contend they are entitled to a bond guaranteeing payment in the event they win a verdict.

Stipulating an initial board of directors composed of five members, a new plan of reorganization for Fox Metropolitan Playhouses was completed last week by the bondholders' committee and was scheduled to be presented to federal court judge Julian W. Mack in New York some time before the first of January.

Named as members of this board in the plan are Sidney R. Kent, president of Fox Film Corporation; Frederick M. Peyser of Hallgarten & Co.; Harry O. King, managing director of the copper industry code authority; Richard C. Hunt, attorney, of Hunt, Jaekel & Brown, and Ivor B. Clark, head of the real estate firm of the same name, and a trustee of the Union Dime and Savings Bank. Provision is made in the proposed plan for the addition of other members in the future when deemed advisable.

In the plan the revised operating agreements for Skouras and Randforce provide for operation of 44 New York, Long Island and New Jersey houses by Skouras and 36 Brooklyn houses by Randforce. For its operations Skouras will receive $75,000 annually, and Samuel Rinzler and Louis Frisch a total of $44,200.

The plan provides that if a satisfactory offer for the circuit, approved by two-thirds of the bondholders, is received prior to May, 1936, and a sale consummated which vests operation of the circuit in new hands, then Skouras and Randforce are to receive 75 per cent of all net profits from November 1, 1934 to May 1, 1936; 50 per cent of all undistributed net profits up to November 1, 1934, and 25 percent of all undistributed net profits from that date to May 1, 1936.

If Fox Metropolitan is not sold by May 1, 1936, the plan provides that Skouras Brothers from that time on will receive salaries of $52,000 annually, and Frisch and Rinzler total salaries of $39,780 per year. The Fox Film franchise held by Skouras and Randforce is to be assigned by them to the new Fox Metropolitan company after May 1, 1936, if a sale has not taken place. Complete disavowal of any obligation to Fox Theatres Corporation is made in the plan.

BUTTERFIELD SOLVES CHILD PROBLEM; SCIENCE TESTS COMMUNITY PROGRAM

87 Theatres Present Cartoon and Novelty Programs Saturday Mornings at a Dime; Teachers Announce Films in School

By WILLIAM B. LANDIS

Detroit Correspondent

Through their Saturday morning "Okay Kiddie Shows" the W. S. Butterfield Theatres, Inc. and its subsidiary Butterfield Michigan Theatres Company, operating 87 theatres in 31 Michigan cities, are making staunch friends and regular patrons of the youngsters. Not only that, but by arousing a wholesome interest among the children in "clean movie" entertainment, the Butterfield theatres are creating no end of goodwill among parents and teachers and more important, a two months test has proven profitable at the box office.

The Okay Kiddie Shows are put on each Saturday morning at all 87 theatres. They are primarily for children, who pay a dime admission and constitute by far the majority of the audiences. Adults are admitted at the regular matinee adult prices.

Credit for originating these children's programs goes to J. O. Brooks of W. S. Butterfield Theatres, Inc., with headquarters in Detroit, and to Walter Norris of the Regent theatre in Grand Rapids. They worked out the details.

Followed Rigid Censorship

The programs were first put on early in the fall. The idea came to Mr. Brooks and Mr. Norris at a time when censorship was rampant and there was great hue and cry about many feature pictures being unsuitable for children. Parent-Teacher Associations, church committees and similar organizations were declaring in no uncertain terms that they considered the sophisticated side of life, as interpreted by the studios, quite unsuitable for the youthful mind.

Brooks and Norris were of the opinion that youngsters' interest lay in the antics of the cartoon characters. Furthermore, they found that when word got around that the feature was sophisticated, adult patrons took pains to leave the children home, and often remained there with them. So the theatremen reasoned: why not give the children a special program of their own composed entirely of cartoons and novelty short product?

Teachers Announce Programs

Soon the Okay Kiddie Shows were in full swing. But considerable preliminary groundwork was done. Trailers announcing the coming children's shows were thrown on the screen in all Butterfield theatres, and copy was added to the newspaper ads.

Personal contacts were made with teachers. Butterfield representatives in various centers called upon Parent-Teacher Associations and outlined their plan.

The aid of teachers and their association was readily enlisted. Many teachers even announced the shows in their classrooms. In some cases distribution of cards advertising the programs was permitted among the children as they left school.

With such a build-up, the first Okay Kiddie Shows naturally were attended; subsequent attendance would have to depend more upon the shows themselves. Interest has continued of the keenest sort and practically every performance in each of the 87 theatres has been to a capacity audience.

Special care is taken to choose reels not only suitable for children but also entertaining. Whenever possible, shorts previously shown at midweek performances are selected, keeping costs down and giving a highly delightful program which could not possibly be presented otherwise for ten cents admission.

The Okay Kiddie Shows average two hours in length. A random perusal of several of the programs brings out that generally they are composed of two Mickey Mouse (Disney) cartoons, two United Artists' Silly Symphonies, an Our Gang (MGM) comedy, a Popeye (Paramount) cartoon, a Paramount Spotlight, a Mickey McGuire (RKO) comedy and a current newsreel release. Betty Boop is frequently shown, and there is an occasional feature of educational value. Sport reels appropriate to the season also are selected.

SELECTED PICTURES

The National Board of Review has compiled the following list of pictures which it adjudges suitable for special performances for children. It was pointed out that in cases of old pictures no longer in circulation the Board upon request will obtain information as to where prints may be obtained. The pictures listed are all on standard 35 mm. width and are sound unless otherwise indicated. Information consists of title, star, number of reels, and company. The asterisk (*) denotes a film which the Board considers particularly interesting or well done.

Educator Tries Out Shows to Prove Social Groups Will Support Sponsored Films; Warners Aid Junior Matinees

Leaders of New York educational, religious, educational and social organizations with the cooperations of local exhibitors and distributors, met last week with Dr. Frederic M. Thrasher of New York University to perfect plans for a comprehensive and scientific experiment in controlled motion pictures for juvenile audiences.

The experiment was initiated Saturday at the Eighth Street Playhouse in Greenwich Village. Its primary purpose, according to Dr. Thrasher, was to demonstrate to the New York City Board of Education that such organizations and agencies may be relied upon to cooperate in practicable city wide programs of selected and supervised entertainment for children.

Not a Defense of Censorship

Speaking before representatives of 97 social organizations, Dr. Thrasher said it was not the intention to uphold censorship in any form.

"Rather," he said, "it is our plan to make the community-sponsored program so attractive to the child that he will prefer it to select his film fare on the basis of his own limited discrimination."

Michael Zala, operator of the Eighth Street Playhouse, said that civic organizations usually do not make a sufficiently thorough study of the exhibitor's problems in bookings, playing time and clearance.

Dr. Thrasher explained that "psychologically we know that parades, music, floats, costumes and banners all appeal strongly to the juvenile mind; we also know that children are extremely gregarious."

For this reason, the Lower West Side Motion Picture Council, of which Dr. Thrasher is the head, made use of all of these attention-arresting instruments. On Saturday morning, about 3,000 children met in Washington Square, helped dedicate the Community Christmas Tree, then marched behind bands to the Eighth Street Playhouse where they saw programs specially approved for their entertainment by the Council, the National Board of Review, and other community agencies.

While the Council was initiating its program, a "laboratory" for the testing of opinion and support of films for young audiences began operation when the Lenox Picture House in East 78th Street opened for special week end and holiday matinee programs for juniors in cooperation with Warner Brothers.

The reaction of children to different types of films will be carefully checked.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt is one of the sponsors of the Lenox Picture House, which is directed by Helen Wagner. Also on the board of sponsors are Harry M. Warner, Major Albert Warner, Jack L. Warner, and Stanleigh P. Friedman, associate counsel for Warner Bros.

Mrs. Roy Pier is chairman of the program committee, appointed by the Parents' League. The first attraction was Warner's "The Man from Monterey," with John Wayne, followed after three days by Paramount's "King of the Jungle," with Buster Crabbe.

Decency Council In First Meeting

The New York Council of the Legion of Decency met for the first time last Thursday and pledged full support to Cardinal Hayes in the drive against immoral motion pictures. Former Governor of New York Alfred E. Smith presided at the meeting, which followed a private luncheon for Council members.

"We agreed first to marshal public support for the motion picture industries carrying out the code for clean, wholesome, decent pictures," Mr. Smith told the meeting. "We stand solidly behind the Cardinal and his endeavor to show that only clean pictures are to be shown on the screen."

The complete personnel of the Council attended the meeting, as follows: Manhattan—James A. Farrell, George MacDonald, former Mayor John B. O'Brien; Martin Quigley, publisher of Motion Picture Herald and Motion Picture Daily; John J. Raskob, Alfred Talley, former judge of the Court of General Sessions; Bronx—James Donnelly; Richmond—William F. Fetherston; Westchester—Supreme Court Justice William E. Bleakly; Dutchess and Putnam—John B. Maack of Poughkeepsie; Orange and Rockland—Arthur O'Leary; Sullivan—George Cook; Ulster—James Dwyer.

In Hollywood this week replying to reports current that he would leave his position as head of the Production Code Administration to join Universal, Joseph I. Breen issued a formal statement denying that he contemplated any change and said he would remain at his present post until 1936.

J. J. McGuinness Theatre Head, Dies

James J. McGuinness, executive secretary of Allied Theatres of Massachusetts, the theatre chamber of commerce which in the New England territory represents Mullins & Pinanski, RKO, Loew's, Fox-Polk Shubert and Warner theatres, together with many independent theatre owners, died at his home, 111 Lindsay St., Dorchester, Mass., Saturday, after a heart attack.

Mr. McGuinness had been associated with the theatre business for 30 years. Born in Worcester, Mass., January 1, 1880, he would have been 55 years old at the start of the New Year. His career started as an usher and general odd-job boy. Later he became general manager of the N. H. Gordon circuit of Olympia Theatres in Boston and New England and when these houses were merged with the Paramount Public interests, he became executive secretary of Allied.

Mr. McGuinness is survived by his widow and one son, Edmund. The funeral was held from his residence Monday and high mass was celebrated at St. Peter's Church, Dorchester.

William Shelton Dies

William Lisle Shelton, 66, owner of the Ashland theatre in Kansas City, died last week.

MGM, LOEW'S RESTORE CUTS

MGM and Loew's last week restored to all employees in New York and on the Coast, all salary reductions made since 1932. The order will bring increases of from 10 to 30 per cent for those employees who received cuts during the past two years. Both companies also were understood to have distributed bonus checks to employees as Christmas gifts.

Ambrose Dowling Dead in England

Ambrose S. Dowling, former general manager of the RKO Export Corp., died in London last week of pneumonia and complications. After illness had forced his retirement in October, Mr. Dowling remained in England, and ten days ago, influenza and pneumonia set in.

The body will be shipped to the United States where Catholic funeral services are to be held.

Treasury Studies Overlapping Taxes

Double taxation on theatre admissions and other services and commodities will be studied during the course of an investigation of the whole subject of taxation just inaugurated by the treasury department at the direction of President Roosevelt.

Taking the first step toward carrying out his campaign promise to seek the elimination of overlapping taxes, the President has ordered the department to survey not only the federal tax situation but also the levies of the various states and municipalities with a view to determining how far the subordinate political units have gone in piling taxes upon items also taxed by the government.

Gasoline, of course, is the outstanding example of heaped up taxation, being forced to bear the burden not only of federal and state taxes but also in many localities, the levies of counties and municipalities. There has been an increasing tendency during the past few years to use the admission tax as a means of securing state and local revenue. Imposition of the tax by the federal government pointed the way to many states, and a number of bills have been prepared in state legislatures for similar imposts.

The treasury investigation may pave the way for a national conference next summer at which means of eliminating duplication and overlapping of taxation will be discussed.

Take Film for Canada

Excellent Exchange of Canada, through its New York agent, Guaranteed Pictures Company, has purchased "Young Eagles," produced by Romance Production, for Canada. Arthur Beck represented the producer.

Operators' Wage Scale Discussed

Representatives of New York exhibitors met Saturday in the headquarters of the motion picture Code Authority with officials of Local 306 and the Allied Motion Picture Operators' Union in an attempt to settle plans for reduced wage scales for operators. No decision was made public.

Local 306 ten days ago granted temporary relief to New York independents, the reduction to continue until a permanent agreement is reached.

Among those at the Saturday meeting were NRA compliance director Sol A. Rosenblatt, George Browne, president of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees; Harry and William Brandt, Charles L. O'Reilly, C. C. Moskowitz, Marvin Schenck, Lester B. Thompson, Tom Murray and Louis Krouse.

In Kansas City this week restoration of local autonomy to Local 170 of the IATSE left two other locals known to be on probation and under direct supervision of the international office. These two are the Pittsburgh local and Local 306 of New York.

The Cincinnati local, which has been on probation, has been reorganized and restored to self-government.

Philip Jones of Wilmington last week was elected president of Local 473 of the IATSE and Leon H. McCardus was named vice-president. Other officers elected were Albert B. Williams, secretary; Edward T. Veasey, financial secretary and treasurer; Walter F. Scott, Sr., business manager; Thomas Vane, sergeant-at-arms; and Albert Hughes and George A. Joseph, additional members of the executive board.

Frank Beal, Pioneer Director, Dies on Coast

Frank Beal, 70, pioneer director, and recently a character actor in Hollywood, died last week after an illness of several months. He is survived by Scott R. Beal, recently named a director at Universal, on a promotion from the position of assistant director, and two daughters.

James T. Hanlon Dies

James T. Hanlon, 42, for 14 years, branch manager for MGM, died last week in Atlanta of pneumonia. He was a member of the clearance and zoning board, and had been with MGM for 20 years.

Wixon, Comedian, Dies

Nehemiah Wixon, veteran comedian and singer, died in Providence last week. Stricken blind in 1923 he made his home with a sister in Providence.

Opens Portland Office

Jack Kloepper, representative of United Artists in the Oregon territory, has opened new offices on film row at 1923 N. W. Kearney Street, Portland.

Takes St. Louis Exchange

Dave Kohn has taken over the business of the St. Louis Majestic Pictures Corporation exchange. A. R. Dietz will continue as branch manager.

THE CAMERA REPORTS

A NEW YEAR. A happy reminder from some of the young women of the ensemble of Warner Brothers' "Gold Diggers of 1935."

STARTS SCRIPT FILE. Harry M. Lydenberg, director of the New York Public Library, accepting from Ned E. Depinet, president of the RKO Distributing Corporation, the shooting script of RKO Radio's "Little Women," for the newly established section devoted to actual working scripts of important pictures.

UNFORTUNATE CHILDREN ENTERTAINED. Sick and crippled youngsters confined to Bellevue Hospital, New York municipal institution, at a special screening of MGM's "Babes in Toyland" arranged for their benefit at the hospital. Equipment for the screening was contributed by Joe Hornstein, supply dealer.

BRING SERIAL TO SCREEN. Principals in the filming of Columbia's "Passport to Fame," adapted from the Collier's story, "The Jail Breaker," by W. W. Burnette. Seated: Jo Swerling and Robert Riskin, scenarists who made the adaptation. Standing: Edward G. Robinson, star; John Ford, director; and Burnette.

MAKE-BELIEVE FIGHT. They aren't mad at each other, Paul Muni and Barton McLane. The script for Warner Brothers' "Black Fury" said, "Fight." And Michael Curtiz (he's shown in foreground, directing) said, "Yeah, and please fight!" And they takes him serious! That's Muni on the bottom.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

By VICTOR M. SHAPIRO

Hollywood Correspondent

A NEW, lusty baby made a bow this week in Hollywood without the fanfare of lights, music or publicity bal-lyhoo, when First Division Productions took up headquarters at Mack Sennett's Studio.

Henry Hobart, well-known and favorably regarded in production circles, as production chief got under way immediately upon his return from New York, and announced the filming of four Hoot Gibsons, new types of westerns, to start after Hoot returns from his extensive barnstorming tour of 106 cities.

Writers are readying scripts, sets are going up, staff is being assembled, and shooting starts soon.

Curtis Confers with Hobart

John Curtis, vice-president and treasurer, spent some time with Hobart acting as sort of god-father of the infant company, added his blessings, then planed back to New York to confer with Nick Ludington, president, prior to Mr. Ludington's coming to Hollywood.

It was further revealed that four other feature productions made in Hollywood will also be launched for spring release.

To date, the output of the company consists of: "The March of Time," one a month; "Travelogues in Technicolor with Symphonic Music," one a month; features from Chesterfield and Invincible, distributed nationally, and some from Monogram for specific territorial sales.

First Division also will encourage independents with distinctive production ideas.

Other officers, besides Ludington, Curtis and Hobart, are William M. L. Fiske, III, vice-president, and Harry Thomas, president of First Division Exchanges and chairman of the board of First Division Productions, and Frank Look, secretary, First Division Productions.

Riesenfeld Reopens Filmarte

Hollywood's famous Filmarte Theatre, with unusual foreign productions and novelty films of the artistic type, was reopened Christmas Day by Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld, former Broadway theatre operator. Said Mr. Riesenfeld:

"Hollywood creative artists and technicians through the Filmarte will have an opportunity to see what foreign studios are producing and what new innovations are being introduced. I am sanguine about Hollywood's response to the new Filmarte policy."

The Holiday Spirit found Hollywood in the best of humor this year. The Boulevard buzzed with activity. . . . Shops remained open until 10:30 and 11 at night. . . . For the first time in many a week lines appeared at ticket windows of two small local theatres, one showing Anna Sten in "We Live Again," the other, "Manhattan Melodrama." . . . Universal's "Imitation of Life" went into its fourth week at the Hollywood Pantages Theatre. . . . Following two three-day holidays over Christmas and New Year the studios are announcing heavy production schedules for January and February. . . . MGM, via Irving Thalberg, will place eight important pictures in production the first twelve weeks of the New Year, including "China Seas," "Mutiny on the Bounty," "Good Earth" and "Cecil Rhodes." Among the most important pictures scheduled for January are "Oil for the Lamps of China" and "Midsummer Night's Dream" at Warner, "The Big Broadcast of 1935" and the "Crusades" at Paramount. . . . Fox begins the New Year with "Red Heads on Parade" and "Adios Argentina," Radio with "She" and "Star at Midnight" and Universal blossoms with "The Great Ziegfeld" and "Princess O'Hara."

Hollywood seems optimistic for 1935.

News Flashes

The Screen Writers' Guild at its first annual dinner dance at the Trocadero cafe last Thursday night announced its selection of the best written screen plays of the year.

Robert Riskin was voted first honors for his work on "It Happened One Night." Second choice went to Albert Hackett and Frances Goodrich for "The Thin Man." Third to Nunnally Johnson for "The House of Rothschild"; fourth to S. K. Lauren, James Gow and Edmund North for "One Night of Love"; fifth to George Marion, Jr., Dorothy Yost and Edward Kaufman for "The Gay Divorcee."

Voting was confined to the Guild membership, of which 619 out of 750 filed ballots.

Three Pictures Start

As was to be expected, activity sloughed off measurably during the pre-holiday season. But three new pictures were started. Four were finished. Two of the new pictures are Warner's. The other is a Monogram. Universal is credited with two of the four completed; Monogram and MGM check in with one each.

At Warner's "King of the Ritz" went before the cameras. In this will be seen Erik Rhodes, William Gargan, Ann Dvorak, Dorothy Tree, Berton Churchill, Gordon Westcott, Allan Jenkins and Robert Barrat. Its companion picture is "The Florentine Dagger," the cast for which includes Donald Woods, Margaret Lindsay, C. Aubrey Smith, Henry O'Neill, Charles Judels and Paul Porcasi.

Monogram's starting feature is "Mystery Man," with Robert Armstrong, Maxine Doyle, Henry Kolker and LeRoy Mason.

Both the completed Universal productions are in the generally termed big picture class. "The Good Fairy" features Margaret Sullavan, Herbert Marshall, Frank Morgan, Reginald Owen, Alan Hale, Beulah Bondi and Hugh O'Connell. In "The Mystery of Edwin Drood," Claude Rains, Douglass Montgomery, Heather Angel, David Manners, Valerie Hobson, Walter Kingsford, E. E. Clive, J. M. Kerrigan and Effie Ellsler will be seen.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer completed "Adam Started It," formerly titled "Copy Cat." Constance Bennett and Clark Gable are teamed in the leads. Support includes Henry Travers, Stuart Erwin, Frank Mayo, Harvey Stephens, Billie Burke, Henry Armetta and Katherine Alexander.

Last of the completed pictures, Monogram's "Great God Gold," presents Sidney Blackmer, Martha Sleeper, Regis Toomey, Gloria Shea, Edwin Maxwell, Ralf Harolde, Maria Alba and John T. Murray.

British Sign Players

E. O. Gurney of the Schulberg-Feldman-Gurney office in Hollywood arrived in New York last week from a European trip during which he closed deals with British companies for the services of Clive Brook, William Beaudine and Nils Asther. Brook will star in "The Dictator" and "The Marquis," for British and Continental. Beaudine will direct "Funny Face" for British International. Asther will play the lead in "Abdul Hamid," also for British International.

Safety Film in Massachusetts

The color cartoon, produced by Audio Productions for the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, "Once Upon a Time," to promote safety in motoring, is being shown in Massachusetts theatres with the cooperation of Lieutenant Colonel Paul G. Kirk, commissioner of the state department of public safety.

Acquires Eight Westerns

Guaranteed Pictures Company has acquired all foreign distribution rights to the group of eight Bob Steele westerns, now being produced by A. W. Hackel of Supreme Pictures. The first three releases now ready are "Demon for Trouble," "Brand of Hate" and "Tombstone Terror."

Barton to Direct First

Charles Barton, who started as a property boy, and was recently promoted from assistant director to director at Paramount, will direct as his first assignment "Car 99," a story by Karl Detzer.

Glenda Farrell Stars

Glenda Farrell has been assigned to her first starring role by Warner, in "Women Are Bum Newspaper Men." Robert Presnell will supervise the film, production starting next month.

Pauline Starke Signed

Pauline Starke has been signed by Ajax Pictures for a role in "$20 A Week," the first of a planned series of four pictures.

THE CODE QUESTION BOX

by JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

No. 97—EXHIBITOR HAS A RIGHT TO OPERATE HIS OWN PROJECTOR

QUESTION—I am operating a 350-seat theatre, charging 10-15-20 cents admission. For the first four weeks I hired an IATSE union man at $75 a week. Not being able to pay this salary I gave due notice to the union and started operating the machine myself. The union and the Central Labor Council have since declared the theatre "unfair."

I am NOT hiring a non-union man. What can be done? Does not the American Federation of Labor give a man the right to do his own work?

Can a union make a law overriding the American Federation, taking away a man's rights? Or has the International Union of operators got special permission from the AFL to declare an owner "unfair" for doing his own work?—MONTANA.

ANSWER—There is nothing in the motion picture code which seeks to prevent any motion picture theatre employer from discharging a union projectionist for economic reasons and operating the projector himself.

The code does say that no theatre employer shall interfere or prevent his employee from joining any union or labor organization chosen by the employee, or from interfering with union activities in which his employee participates. But, obviously, this latter situation is not involved in this matter, which is purely an out-and-out case of an employer discharging his union employee because he cannot afford to pay him the union scale. Further indication that the union does not have a case under the code may be seen in the fact that the union has not filed charges with any code or NRA labor boards, but has confined itself to a crusade against the theatre by calling it "unfair to organized labor." It's the old problem of a private picket fight between the exhibitor and the unions, and while the code cannot prevent unions from picketing, exhibitors in some cities have succeeded in getting relief from union interference with their business by applying to the courts.

No. 98—CONTRACT SQUABBLE BETWEEN DISTRIBUTOR AND EXHIBITOR

QUESTION—The following is a copy of some of the terms of my contract with Warner Brothers-First National:

"Exhibitor to play first run at..... theatre, Warner Brothers and First National features to be released for season 1934-35 . . . at following rental:

3 De Luxe at $25 each vs. 40 per cent gross receipts.

7 Specials at $16.50 vs. 30 per cent to $150, 50 per cent thereafter.

40 Regulars at $12.50 each.

"All percentage pictures to play three days, including Sunday.

"Distributors to have option of designating any two of the above as percentage pictures at 40 per cent of gross, in such event guarantee terms to be waived, and, instead of same, to be played as stated at 40 per cent three days, including Sunday. In addition to above, 25 of the 1933-34 group to be played or paid for. If No. 750 selected, same as above for De Luxe prices, and No. 452, No. 453, No. 454, No. 751, No. 752, No. 754, No. 762 same as above for specials. All others as above regulars.

"Exhibitor to have the right of selection of these 25. This to be all a part of contract covering the playing of 75 features between two groups: 1933-34 and 1934-35. Exhibitor has the privilege of substituting any pictures in excess of 25 for any 1934-35 of same classification."

It so happens that production No. 750 is "Wonder Bar," and I do not wish to play same at $25 as I cannot make any money on it at that price. The exchange insists that I must play same and that if I do not wish to play it at $25, I will have to designate some other picture in its place at $25 and then play "Wonder Bar" at the price originally designated for the other picture. As I understand the wording of the above agreement, I am not obligated to play "Wonder Bar" at all. However, the exchange refuses to serve me with the production No. 453, "Dames," until I play "Wonder Bar" and two other program pictures on which I am delinquent.—ILLINOIS.

ANSWER—This seems to be purely a contract dispute and not one in which the code would be involved. In order to determine a dispute of this nature, the entire contract would have to be examined and, quite possibly, a hearing held to determine the other facts in connection with the deal that was made between the exhibitor and the exchange.

The specific question which is asked is whether or not the exhibitor is required by his contract to play or pay for the picture "Wonder Bar," and this depends entirely on whether the exhibitor has a valid contract with the distributor for the exhibition of that picture.

If the contract contains a signed provision for the submission of such contractual disputes to arbitration, and unless the parties to the contract can reach such an agreement, such a dispute should be referred to arbitration—as provided in the code—for determination. It is, of course, not a matter to be determined by the code itself, but is strictly a private contract dispute. If there is no contract provision for arbitration, then it becomes purely a legal question on which a competent local counsel should be consulted.

It is suggested that the inquiring exhibitor delve into the situation carefully and impartially with the branch manager of the exchange. The exchange manager should be familiar with his own contract provisions on which he is relying in asserting that the exhibitor is obligated to play "Wonder Bar." These exhibition contracts are not as mysterious as their size and length might indicate and are susceptible of understanding by any person who will carefully read the particular provision in the contract which is involved.

Exhibitors should realize that inquiries of this nature do not come under the provisions of the motion picture code, and that in the "Code Question Box," discussions must be confined to code matters exclusively. Absolutely no attempt could be made to give an exhibitor legal advice in connection with his contract disputes with exchanges because there usually exist other and extenuating circumstances which undoubtedly would influence a final decision of a court or arbitration board determining the question.

No. 99—USING PASSES AS PRIZES IN BALLYHOO CONTESTS

QUESTION—Regarding the possible offering of theatre tickets as prizes in ballyhoo contests, would the offering of such theatre tickets as prizes to stimulate interest in different types of ballyhoo contests, without the intent of lowering admission prices, or giving free admissions with the intent of destroying the price scale, be considered a violation of the code?

ANSWER—The question to be determined in Immediate reply is being made direct to the many letters which Motion Picture Herald is receiving from exhibitors and distributors in the field, and from others, in which various questions are asked concerning certain doubtful phases of the Motion Picture Code. In addition, such code questions and the answers submitted are published as a regular service.

For obvious reasons, the letters will appear anonymously. However, the originals will remain on file.

Answers to questions about the Code are submitted only after consultation with authorities familiar with the technicalities of the document.

This service is available to everyone. Send questions to the Code Editor, Motion Picture Herald, 1790 Broadway, New York City.

the offering of theatre tickets as prizes to stimulate interest in the ballyhoo contests, as described in the foregoing, is purely one of fact as to whether the exhibitor is giving away such tickets in sufficient quantities as to constitute unfair competition to the competing theatre. If the tickets are not given away in such numbers as to constitute unfair competition, then the practice would be permissible. In any event, the Local Grievance Board in the exchange city serving the territory is the proper tribunal to rule on the unfairness of such procedure, if it is unfair, and then the Board would rule only after a competing exhibitor had filed a formal complaint and a hearing had been held on that complaint.

Electric Rate Reduced

The overhead of Akron, Ohio, theatres will be considerably reduced by reason of a large reduction in electric rates following a new franchise with the Ohio Edison Company which has just been approved by the city council.

Konigswald to Quality

Gus Konigswald, former exhibitor and theatre owner, has been appointed New York manager for Quality Premium Distributors. The company is headed by C. H. Goodwin and David Barrist, former publishers of regional trade papers.

New Bell & Howell Device

Bell & Howell, Chicago equipment manufacturer, has developed a new projector, the Filmo 1,000 Watt Model 130, claimed to permit a much larger and brighter picture in 16 mm. projection than was heretofore possible.

Opens Two More Branches

W. L. Parker of Amity Exchange at Charlotte has opened distribution offices in Atlanta and New Orleans, placing him in a position to negotiate with producers for rights in the entire South.

Salesmen's Party Set

The annual dinner dance and entertainment of the Motion Picture Salesmen, Inc., of New York, will be held New Year's Eve at the Hotel Astor.

Advance outlines of productions nearing completion as seen by Gus McCarthy of Motion Picture Herald's Hollywood Bureau

WHILE THE PATIENT SLEPT

Warner

In this production are Aline MacMahon and Guy Kibbee, who proved such a popular team in "Big Hearted Herbert" and "Babbitt." The type of yarn selected for their third appearance is radically different from the other two but is one which permits ample opportunity for their down-to-earth comedy. Motivated by a murder mystery premise, it has Miss MacMahon as a nurse and Kibbee a police sergeant. With a host of relatives and in-laws battling for a share in the patient's vast wealth, the situation is complicated by a murder which Kibbee eventually solves after much satirical kidding from his leading lady.

The story is based on a published novel by Mignon G. Eberhart, with the screen play by Robert N. Lee and Eugene Solow, who collaborated on "Fog Over Frisco," while Solow was associated on "Gentlemen Are Born." Direction is by Ray Enright, maker of "The Circus Clown" and "The St. Louis Kid."

The supporting cast is composed entirely of familiar Warner names. Prominent in the list are Lyle Talbot, Patricia Ellis, Allen Jenkins, Robert Barrat, Hobart Cavanaugh, Dorothy Tree, Henry O'Neill and Russell Hicks.

For small town purposes particularly, the growing popularity of the Kibbee-MacMahon team appears to be the most valuable showmanship asset. Yet the comedy premise of the story, plus the added value of melodramatic mystery, together with the drama accruing to the squabbling relatives while the wealthy old man hovers between life and death, should readily suggest unusually effective exploitation ideas.

RECKLESS

MGM

A topical dramatic romance, this story closely parallels in atmosphere an actual case that has been very prominent in recent public print. It's the yarn of a glamorous girl who, plucked from the obscurity of a small time traveling carnival, becomes the sensation of Broadway, the pet of society. Her husband takes his own life and the girl is left to fight for her name, a share in the family fortune for herself and her unborn baby, and to find eventual happiness with the man who always has loved her.

David O. Selznick is producing from an original by Oliver Jeffries, with the screen play by P. J. Wolfson. Victor Fleming, maker of "Blonde Bombshell" and "Treasure Island," is directing.

The role of the girl heroine is played by Jean Harlow, last seen in "Girl from Missouri." The man in whom she finds consolation and love is William Powell. Recent announcements relative to the forthcoming marriage of these two may and may not be showmanship assets. Principal supporting players include Franchot Tone, May Robson, Nat Pendleton and Ted Healy.

While carrying an easily associated topical significance, the character portrayed by Miss Harlow is in several instances peculiar to her own career. There being a natural inclination on the part of many to know the inside low-down, this story appears to be both frank and daring in the manner in which it places fact in juxtaposition with fictionalized glorification. This situation makes possible a dynamic type of showmanship, carefully and intelligently handled.

The presentations of this department are in no sense reviews of the pictures or evaluations of the productions. They are inventories of material.

The endeavor is to inform the exhibitor of the nature of the story and the personnel and to set forth the elements of appeal which the producer is seeking to put into the product.

"The Cutting Room" is published for the special service of exhibitors who require some detailed information concerning the character of the picture and its selling factors in advance of previews, reviews and press books.

This department's survey of pictures in no way anticipates or supplants the functions of the Showmen's Reviews which are prepared when the finished product is made available.

ONCE A GENTLEMAN

Columbia

This story is comedy romance, relating the experiences of a debonair man of the world whose philosophy is that nothing, particularly love, should be taken seriously. Complications set in, particularly when a girl refuses to think the same way he does, and love becomes a very serious matter.

Located in famous Nice and Monte Carlo, the production is being handsomely mounted, featuring a gay moonlight Mediterranean yachting party; a mardi gras carnival and the fascination of Monte Carlo's gambling salons.

The story is an original by Bradley King. The screen play is by Gene Markey, most recently credited with "Fashions of 1934," and direction is by Victor Schertzinger, maker of the current sensation "One Night of Love."

In the leading role is Tullio Carminati, currently appearing in "One Night of Love" and previously seen in "Gallant Lady." The girl who, refusing to take him seriously, falls in love is Lilian Harvey, featured in several Fox pictures. The supporting cast is headed by Hugh Williams, featured in MGM's forthcoming "David Copperfield" and currently in "Elinor Norton," and Tala Birell, long absent from the screen but who was seen in "Let's Fall in Love." Other players included are Luis Alberni, Ferdinand Gottschalk and Claudia Coleman.

Key to the production's potential exploitation is seen in the leading player's character. A cynical love-'em-and-leave-'em gentleman, ties up the unique with the sense automatically read into the title, with a number of tricky contrasts. The atmosphere promises a series of laugh-laden surprises and there are name values.

ROBERTA

Radio

From the stage play "Roberta," which enjoyed a lengthy run in New York, and originally adapted by Alice Duer Miller from the novel,

"Gowns by Roberta," the present screen play is by Samuel Mintz, recently credited with "Ann of Green Gables" and "Gallant Lady," and Jane Murfin, who adapted "The Fountain," "Virgie Winters" and "The Little Minister." Direction is by William A. Seiter, whose latest pictures are "Richest Girl in the World" and "We're Rich Again." Added dialogue is contributed by Glenn Tyron and Allan Scott. Music is by Jerome Kern with lyrics by Otto Harbach.

Because of recent pictures, more than usual potential showmanship significance is attached to the cast. Included are Irene Dunne, currently in "Sweet Adeline," Ginger Rogers and Fred Astaire of "Flying Down to Rio" and "Gay Divorcee." Teamed with them is Randolph Scott, hero of several Paramount westerns. Numbered among the supporting players are Helen Westley, Victor Varconi and Ferdinand Munier.

The theme is romantic, narrating two parallel love stories. One sets an ex-All America football star, Randolph Scott, down in Paris to become a fashion arbiter and fall in love with his star designer, Irene Dunne, who later is revealed as of the Russian nobility. The other brings together the singing dance band leader, Astaire, and the bogus countess, Ginger Rogers, gaudy night club dancer.

With elaborate mounting, the production features four spectacular sets, in one of which, a palace courtyard, is staged a fashion show extravaganza embellished by a score of glamorous mannikins.

Eight song numbers are featured, five of which are sung by Miss Dunne, including two of the stage show's hit numbers, "Touch of Your Hand" and "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes." Astaire and Ginger Rogers sing and dance to four separate numbers, as well as appearing with Miss Dunne in two.

A snappy, comedy-tinged musical romance, the production not only makes available uncommon cast strength, but on the idea of a football player stunning the connoisseurs with his fashion creations, makes possible the adaptation and exploitation of the style show climax. During the picture, Miss Dunne has about eighteen ultra modernistic costume changes and Ginger Rogers about fifteen.

At this writing, "Roberta" seems possessed of all the glamour and flair that marked "Flying Down to Rio" and "Gay Divorcee."

Cheating Cheaters

(Universal)

Comedy-Drama

An adaptation of the popular stage play of the same title, this picture has an enjoyable combination of comedy, romance and the unquestionably amusing situation of two rival gangs of smooth and clever big time crooks, who, by a case of mistaken identity on a large scale, attempt to victimize each other, not realizing their error until it is too late.

It is for the most part light and entertaining material, with the comedy rather predominating, the romance an important part of the plot development, and sufficient action, suspense and mystery to add additional spice to the story. A surprise twist, which falls virtually at the conclusion of the picture, makes for an added bit of enjoyment.

The names are not more than fair, with Fay Wray in the lead, and Minna Gombell and Henry Armetta as the best known names in the support. Opposite Miss Wray is Cesar Romero, a newcomer who is capable and may be worth the selling buildup for future appearance. This same lack of cast strength tends to indicate the exhibitor necessity of rather concentrating on the story itself, and indicates that something may well be made in the selling of the opportunities for attention attracting which lie in the intriguing title, which is fully borne out by the story.

On board ship returning to the United States are Miss Wray and Francis L. Sullivan, presumably as father and daughter. Miss Wray obviously is making a play for Romero, also on-board, who is an apparently easy victim for the girl. When Romero dives overboard to rescue a crook who has jumped, the crook mentions the name of a feared federal detective, Ferris, who is on board and after him.

Sullivan and Miss Wray take a country-house near the mansion of Romero, his wealthy father and mother, and then it is revealed that Miss Wray, Sullivan, Miss Gombell, Armetta and Hugh O'Connell make up a gang, headed by Miss Wray, who, international jewel thieves, plan to "lift" the jewels owned by Romero's mother. The plan is set, with Miss Wray invited to stay with the others while her "father and mother" go to Chicago—presumably. Armetta poses as her music teacher and the two plan to get the trinkets from the wall safe. O'Connell and Armetta supply much lively comedy.

Only then is it most unexpectedly discovered that Romero, his "mother and father" and their "butler," form another gang who are out after the jewels they suppose the other "family" owns. At the same time that Miss Wray lifts one set of baubles, Romero and his "father" raid the other house. They are all captured by police when they reveal their identities to one another and squabble over the spoils.

In the office of the famous Ferris, who they suppose had been trailing them, they are astounded when Miss Wray "squeals" on them, and "confesses" naming each of the gangs in turn. She has fallen in love with Romero, meanwhile, and then comes the most unexpected twist: Ferris is Miss Wray. She gets Romero off lightly and their romance is completed.

It is entertaining material, which should be open to lively selling.—AARONSON, New York.

The County Chairman

(Fox)

Comedy

When the title and credits of this picture flashed on the screen the preview audience broke into a storm of applause, and that enthusiastic appreciation carried all the way through the showing. The reason therefor is simple. "The County Chairman" is Will Rogers at his best, funnier, more human and delightful than ever before in his combination role of Cupid's assistant and an old time back-country politician.

On the basis of the record, Rogers is the most popular personality in the film business. His appeal and box office draw, in the big cities as well as outside, is universal. The general public, those who go to theatres week after week, apparently would prefer to miss any other attraction than a Rogers picture. Persons who attend but seldom always seem to find time for Will Rogers. He rates with both young and old.

All this leads up to one point. This picture has just as many values, if not more, than any other Rogers films, including "David Harum" and "Judge Priest," and calls for the kind of business-getting campaign that the importance of its star and its entertainment worth command.

In the picture, modernized but maintaining the human, homey, down-to-earth atmosphere of its early 1900 Wyoming small town locale, the full chord of entertainment is sounded. Everything happens naturally; there are no artificial build-ups. As it unrolls, Rogers doing plenty of topical political quipping, there is fine entertainment in its light drama, made laughably poignant by Rogers' hokum political chicanery. There is punch in the romantic love affair he fosters between his shy candidate, Kent Taylor, and Evelyn Venable, daughter of the blatherskite perpetual office-holding opponent, Berthon Churchill. Drama, tinged with understandable pathos in the sequences involving Louise Dresser, marks the conflict between Rogers and Churchill. Comedy predominating all, there is action enough for anyone in the convention scenes; the buggy-riding, neighbor-visiting campaign and home town rallies. Comedy colors the suspense on election night, when Rogers seems to have failed. But that suspense gives way to a surge of triumph in the chase finale, when in marrying Taylor to Evelyn Venable, Rogers scores his greatest coup.

With so much that is valuable in cast names, story and production worth, yet there is no reason for presuming that the show is already in the bag. Much can be said to remind patrons of all the enjoyment Rogers has provided for them and that now, in this picture, and at the apex of his popularity, he again delivers.—McCARTHY, Hollywood.

The Band Plays On

(MGM)

Comedy Drama

Although this is the story of a glorified four horsemen backfield, it is more than a football picture. Thus there should be no worries that because the gridiron sport season parade has passed by, interest, too, will be directed elsewhere. "The Band Plays On," not lacking in the elements that go to make up an exciting football picture and in many ways possessing more than most is really the story of what collegiate authorities always maintain football is—character building. Utilizing a novel premise and then going on to ring in plenty of color, excitement, drama, comedy, romance, the show affords much that is new to talk about.

Starting in the tenement district of a big city, four tough kids—Tony, Stuffy, Mike and Rosy—are paroled to playground instructor Howdy and introduced to football as a means of working off surplus energy. Clicking as kids, they blaze a glorious trail through high and prep school football and when Howdy becomes Pacific's coach they go there too.

Sensational, a la the original Notre Dame four horsemen in their sophomore year, the quartet run into trouble when Joe, agent for a pro football league, sows the seeds of discord. Tony is bounced off the team by Howdy, who has learned what he's up to. Stuffy is injured in an auto wreck, and the other two quit their coach. With romance revolving about Kitty and involving Tony and Mike, the boys learn from Mike, who never will play again, that Howdy, instead of thinking only of his own record, really has their welfare at heart.

Back for the final year, the four "Bombers," reduced to the status of scrubs, prove by the way they take it that they have learned their lesson. In the big game, although defeated, they cover themselves with glory, and when Mike steps out of the romantic picture in favor of Tony there is a heart-throb not usually found in such pictures.

Biography of a Bachelor Girl

(MGM)
Comedy

Sophistication and hokum are melded in this show, with the hokum quality predominating. Not a big picture or one that patrons are apt to be excited about in advance, it possesses in name values and novel story idea plenty of potential showmanship.

Adapted from a stage play, it is a bit "stagey" in atmosphere; nevertheless in approved motion picture fashion it deals with situations that are generally familiar. Continually holding to its comedy tone in action and dialogue, it decorates its light drama with lots of laughs and uses both those elements uniquely to develop its love interest.

The plot is simple. Editor Kurt, unaware that Marion has taken a sudden liking to him, prevails upon her to write her biography. Her romantic escapades, delectable Sunday supplement and tabloid reading, he believes would make a great feature for his magazine. Comes along an old youthful flame, Nolan, now Senatorial candidate, betrothed to Slade, daughter of a political tycoon, to view with alarm the effect upon his ambitions of any printed detailing of his days and nights with Marion.

One thing saves Mr. Nolan's scalp. The editor falls in love with his authoress. But before he realizes it plenty of entertainment that is box-office ammunition happens. Complicated situations, that are mildly exciting and usually interest holding, tumble over one another. Mr. Nolan's troubles, real and imagined, are good for one laugh after another. The love interest, growing naturally, is sensed by everyone but Kurt.

Name values being there for most purposes, the show also provides a couple of good exploitation angles, both of which can be given a local significance in their adaptation. First is the the price, $20,000, which Kurt offers for Marion's unexpurgated life story. Second is the terror of Nolan when he discovers that he is destined to be one of its featured goats. Both, twisted around so that they stimulate personal curiosity, without no way hinting the content of the picture, which, by the way, should encounter no exhibition difficulty, are more than likely to create a desire to see the picture which stereotyped methods might fail to engender.—McCARTHY, Hollywood.

I've Been Around

(Universal)

Melodramatic Romance

This is nothing to get excited about. Elementally it's a melodramatic romance of sophisticated society folk. Essentially it's a yarn of a pair of blue bloods whose marriage, rather than being a thing of joy and beauty forever, proved only the medium of shattering every illusion. To find surcease from his sorrow and disappointment, friend husband seeks relief from his headaches and heartaches by artificial bluff, gayety, and here and there a bit of philander and frivolity. To him "I've Been Around" means months of convivial round-the-world scampering. Meanwhile the amazed wife remains home. She does maange to have a little fun with the other man menace to domestic fidelity. On the whole, however, her days are pretty drab affairs.

Finally, under the magic of the Christmas-New Year spirit, the hero returns. When he discovers that, outwardly, his wife apparently hasn't missed him very much, the old primal instinct of no-one-can-take-away-what-belongs-to-me assert itself. The situation is dramatized by the wife's suicide attempt. But she recovers. The finale is what everybody knows and expects. The pair had just got off on the wrong feet.

The whole thing is vividly unreal, a condition aggravated by the complete absence of any punchy showmanship or exploitation media. Best potential patronage for the attraction seems to be the moderns, yet even for this class the story value is not strong. Thus selling the picture finally resolves itself down to using cast names with hints of the drama in which they became involved.—McCARTHY, Hollywood.

The Night is Young

(MGM)

Romantic Drama

Because there is so little that spontaneously arouses interest in this picture with which to work, it provides a showmanship task, probably, for the majority of situations. The plot is very familiar; little that is novel or catchy has been inserted to provide appeal. Tinged with music, the locale continental in atmosphere, it's a romantic drama, with the prince-dancing girl love formula and the usual sacrifice climax.

Attention is concentrated almost exclusively on the love affair which state policy and family pride decide should not be. Thus drama predominates. As a result the comedy, brilliant at times, seldom provides the expected contrasts. Likewise the music, both the accompaniment and that which is specialized, fails to ignite any emotion-tingling spark.

The selling problem necessarily requires more than usual study. Logically, local likes and dislikes should dictate the course that is to be pursued. For general purposes, it appears that the best leads are to be found in the cast names. Ramon Novarro has a certain following, and the picture does permit the talking about of a new personality in Evelyn Laye, while plenty of attention is merited for Charles Butterworth, Una Merkle and Edward Everett Horton, the trio mainly responsible for the comedy.—McCARTHY, Hollywood.

Beyond the Law

(Columbia)

Action Drama

An active and melodramatic film of the Tim McCoy type, with McCoy as a chief railroad investigator, this is the kind of straightforward material for the weekend, or action position on the weekly program. There is nothing out of the ordinary about the picture, but as run-of-the-mill screen fare it should serve its purpose.

Whatever weight McCoy carries as a selling factor in any community will be best known by the individual exhibitor himself, and the most made of it. In support of McCoy is Shirley Grey, to further the expected and not especially pertinent romantic aspect of the yarn, but beyond that there are no cast names which will be of selling value on the marquee.

McCoy pursues his investigation in an effort to find the real perpetrator of a railroad mail car holdup and murder, after he becomes convinced the man about to be executed is innocent. The impetus to that second investigation comes when the daughter of the convicted man appeals to him for help.

McCoy, as the film opens, describes in the courtroom (and the film shows via flashback) the perpetration of the holdup, robbery and murder. The accused man is convicted and sentenced to execution. Miss Grey comes to McCoy, points out her father could not have committed the crimes, which she indicates were the work of a left-handed man. McCoy, attracted to the girl and anxious not to see an innocent man suffer, goes to work on a resumption of the investigation, with the able assistance of the girl. With the aid of a nearby college professor who is a chemical analyst, knowledge of the appearance of the man who wore the overalls which had been used to convict Miss Grey's father is gained.

Miss Grey poses as a convivial girl in a cafe adjacent to the railroad yards, and learns that two former track walkers are spending considerable money. She and McCoy trap the two, but cannot learn who is directing their opera-

War Is a Racket

(Eureka Productions)
Propaganda

Meant as anti-war propaganda, designed to point out that wars are made by the munitions manufacturers who profit greatly by armed conflict the world over, this picture fails of its object chiefly by reason of inept production and a striking inconsistency.

Composed for the most part of old stock shots which have been repeated so many times that most audiences must be familiar with them by now, the production employs the idea of an inquiring newspaper reporter, who, at the behest of his editor, queries various persons on the question, "Is war a racket?" The answer is, of course, unanimously in the affirmative, while, in background of the comments of those queried, are pictured those sequences which purport to substantiate the main thesis of the producers.

The film starts with a reproduction of an English-made picture of an anti-war nature, which rambles rather incoherently, and makes its point in weak fashion. Then the film moves into the inquiring reporter thesis, expounded via names of companies and persons, chiefly concerned in the leadership of the international munitions industry. But the point is not clearly made.

The inconsistency lies in the sudden veering, later in the film, from an outright denunciation of munitions makers who are instigators of war, to a flag waving picturization of the manner in which the American troops turned the tide of battle, and the heroism of the other Allies, as well as the German troops, who are given credit "where credit is due."

There is only doubtful regular exhibition value in the picture for the country as a whole and, although the various women's groups and the like in the community might be drawn into support of the film, the exhibitor has very little to offer them.—AARONSON, New York.

Distributed by Eureka Productions. Produced and directed by Samuel Cummings. Narration by A. L. Alexander. Running time, 68 minutes. Release date, Dec. 8, 1934. Adult audience classification.

Million Dollar Baby

(Monogram)
Comedy

The idea of this show is unique. Essentially it's hokum comedy. The cue to its showmanship is found in the plot, which runs this way. Recognizing the boon that Shirley Temple has been to motion pictures, a big but financially embarrassed Hollywood studio embarks upon a search for another Shirley. A pair of sixth rate ham vaudevillians dress their 5-year-old prodigy son as a girl and win the contest.

To the tune of flamboyant hectic publicity a triumphal tour to Hollywood gets underway. Disgusted with posing as a girl, his antics provoking much laughter, the boy sneaks off the train. He is befriended by a tramp and the pair fall in with a bunch of gangsters, who, learning the kid's presumed identity, believe they can hold him for big ransom. The story of the boy-girl builds quick excitement as it rushes to its finale which is capped by a thrill chase. Presented with a reward for aiding in the crook's capture, the "girl" reveals she is a boy. National interest, however, has been so worked up by the disappearance episode that the youngster is assured of a great film future.

The show being made up entirely of elements that click with the ordinary rank and file, angles necessary to sell it are readily found in the production itself. Aiming at being nothing other than amusement and that of the simplest hokum variety, the show holds particular appeal to the younger patrons.

Where there is a desire to go in for a little extra and special exploitation, no one should be handicapped for lack of leads, starting with the significance that can be read into the title and using the same license with the name Shirley Temple that the producers do in the picture.—McCARTHY, Hollywood.

Produced and distributed by Monogram. Directed, original story and music and lyrics by Joseph Santley. Screen play by Joseph Santley and John W. Kraft. Recorded by John A. Stransky, Jr. Photographed by Harry Neumann. Edited by Carl Piereson. Running time, when seen in Hollywood, 65 minutes. Release date, Dec. 29, 1934. General audience classification.

Roadhouse

(Gaumont-British)
Drama and Music

This British production appeals mainly by reason of popular musical numbers against the background of the variety theatre as it existed in England before and until just after the war. The story structure is melodramatic but is less important than its accessories. Occupying the limelight are Violet Loraine, the British revue and variety star, and Gordon Harker, whose comedy is strongly marked by Cockney mannerisms and accent.

Though it only goes back to immediate pre-War days, the film has a strong period flavor and can be best sold by making an asset of the fact. There is real humor in the reproduction of an oldtime music hall on "amateur night," and a vivid picture of a variety performance carrying on to a bomb accompaniment from German airplanes over London. Miss Loraine's numbers are good and she puts them over well.

Belle Tout, barmaid at the Angel Inn, loves her employer, Archie Hamble. To help him pay gambling debts, she persuades Sam Pritchard, the potman, who is in love with her, to buy the inn. Because Archie does not want to marry her immediately, she leaves and becomes a music hall singer.

By the time war breaks out she is a star. During an air raid, she bravely keeps singing and prevents a panic. Archie, now an officer on leave from the Front, is in the audience; they are reconciled and married. At Armistice time, she loses her voice, and at the same time hears that Archie has died on his way back from Salonica. On doctor's orders she goes abroad in search of health, leaving her daughter with her husband's mother.

Sam is approached by Lady Chetwinde and her associates, D'Arcy and Chester, to transform the inn into a modern roadhouse. It quickly becomes a fashionable resort. Unknown to Sam, his partners are using it as a cover for theft.

Sam goes to Nice in search of Belle and finds that she has been compelled to take work as a maid in one of the big hotels. He persuades her to return to England, and to sing at the roadhouse, where she discovers that her daughter, Kitty, has fallen for D'Arcy. Without revealing herself, she tries to warn her, but D'Arcy "plants" some stolen jewels on

Kitty before he is shot in a quarrel with Chester. Kitty is suspected of the murder but Sam and a detective trap and shoot Chester. Humor, melody, and the quaintness of its reproduction of the immediate past are the selling angles.—ALLAN, London

Life in the Congo

(Kidnapping Gorillas)
(Kinematrade)
Pictorial Record

A pictorial record of an expedition into the depths of the gorilla country in Africa, this picturization adds little or nothing to numerous similar pictures of more or less similar expeditions into the dark continent. The film's secondary and interchangeable title is "Kidnapping Gorillas." Recorded is the expedition of Ben Burbridge, with a safari of 125 native men and women, through the heart of the African wilds bound for the large gorillas of the Kivu Mountain region.

En route are pictured native tribal dances and customs, perhaps the most interesting of that material being the picturization of the pigmy tribes, terrible marauders by virtue of their poisoned arrows. Here and there, too, are seen the age-old battles of animal against animal, working out the "survival of the fittest" thesis of wild life.

One unusual and gruesome sequence pictures a tribe of cannibals falling upon, tearing apart and devouring the raw and quivering flesh of a newly killed elephant. Then into the gorilla country, where the expedition captures several small gorillas bare-handed, and kills one enormous beast, which reposes today in the National Museum in Washington. This expedition, it is understood, brought to Mr. Burbridge the gold medal of the Royal Zoological Society of Antwerp.

It is, all in all, an interesting study of the life, human and otherwise, in the African Congo, the gorilla element being the only respect in which it differs from numerous previous pictures. The exhibitor's previous experience with this type of pictorial record will indicate what he may do and expect with this production. Technically the picture hardly offers the best results. The accompanying explanatory dialogue is reasonably clear and intelligent.—AARONSON, New York.

Distributed by Kinematrade. Producer and photographer, Ben Burbridge. Narrative written by James Shelley Hamilton and Alfred Hayes. Narrated by Richard E. Spaine. Running time, 60 minutes. Released Nov. 29, 1934. General audience classification.

Lady in Danger

(Gaumont-British)
Farce Comedy

There is clever work in this Ben Travers farce, in situation and even more notably in dialogue, and Tom Walls, both as director and leading player, is seen to advantage. Where "Aldwych" material finds acceptance, it is a very good example of the much brighter comedy British producers are achieving these days; even where it is an unknown quantity, there is for appreciation the skill with which double entendre is presented without offense. Yvonne Arnaud, speaking broken English, is responsible for many cracks for the sophisticated adult, and there's plenty of broad fun in incident.

Dexter, a British business man, takes an airplane flight in pursuit of a defaulting employee, and descends in the midst of a revolution in Ardenburg. The Red leader persuades him to smuggle the Queen out of the country; secretly a loyalist, the revolutionary intends to restore the monarchy when things have simmered down, but in the meantime wants the fugitive kept quiet in London.

Dexter tries to conceal the presence of a strange woman in his London flat, but his secret is discovered both by his fiancée and by his co-directors, so he removes her to his country cottage, where a virtuous housekeeper walks out, and where, eventually, he is discovered by the press and by the King, who comes on a spying mission from his usual haunts in Paris. The situation is cleared up by the arrival of the successful revolutionary, to take the King and Queen back in triumph.

The humor depends almost entirely on the relations between the Queen, at first inclined to stand on "our" dignity, and her gallant but satirical rescuer. The most is made of the Queen's innocent excursions into the risqué and of the fact that she is regarded as a woman of dubious reputation who has caused the innocent Britisher to lose his head. For those who like broader humor there is the kick administered to the King as he is peeping in the cottage window. The awkwardness of hiding a Queen in a flat suggests exploitation line.—ALLAN, London

The Man Who Knew Too Much

(Gaumont-British)
Thrill Drama

With a main appeal similar to that of the American gangster picture, this British production is exceptionally well characterized, and has much humor. One of its biggest episodes is put over in the authentic setting of the huge Albert Hall in London. In its underworld scene the climax is a battle between hundreds of police and a gang of crooks barricaded in a slum house. This scene closely duplicates the actual happenings of the "Sidney Street siege" of anarchists in pre-War London.

The cast includes Nova Pilbeam, known through "Little Friend," Peter Lorre, who made a name in Fritz Lang's "M," Edna Best and Leslie Banks. It is safe to promise good acting down to the most minor parts, due to the very fine direction of Alfred Hitchcock, one of the first men to make good pictures in England. As a problem point there is the angle that a father whose daughter has been kidnaped refuses to give away a murder plot to the police because by doing so the child's life will be in danger, although he risks the murder of a foreign statesman in attempting to beat the gang by lone-hand methods.

In a fast-moving story a feature almost as noteworthy as the big fight scenes is the introduction of humorous elements, proper to the plot. One of these shows the hero, in danger of forcible gassing in the chair of a crook barber, turning the tap on his enemy. Another is an excellent spoof scene showing a service in the chapel of a freak religious sect which is one of the covers of the gang; though the hero and his friend sing warnings to each other to the

"SCARLET PIMPERNEL" EMPHASIZES COMEDY

By BRUCE ALLEN
London Correspondent

"The Scarlet Pimpernel", latest from Alexander Korda and London Films, is an artistic production, notable for the fine acting of Leslie Howard. It is less melodramatic than the original version and this time emphasizes comedy values. The tempo is rather slow, the film lacks obvious punch and is for connoisseurs of action and production values rather than for the masses.

Merle Oberon is good, as is Nigel Bruce as the Prince of Wales.

hymn tunes, one is hypnotized by the lady preacher and the other held up by an innocent looking scrub woman.

Lawrence, an Englishman holiday-making in Switzerland, is present when a British secret service man is mysteriously shot, and is entrusted by the dying man with a sheet of paper carrying a London East End address, to convey to the police. Before he can act, his young daughter is kidnaped and he is warned that she will be killed if he betrays the secret.

In London, he learns that a visiting European statesman is in danger of assassination and he has the clue to the gang involved. Still refusing information to the police, he goes with a friend to the Wapping address. He is captured, but his friend escapes with the information that the shooting is to be done at a concert to be attended by the celebrity at the Albert Hall that evening. He succeeds in phoning the message to Lawrence's wife.

The signal for the shot is to be a certain chord of music, but at that moment a scream from the woman upsets the aim of the assassin and the celebrity is only slightly wounded. The gunman's car is followed to Wapping, and soon a regular siege of the premises is in progress, many policemen being killed before the gang is reduced to two.

There is real entertainment in "The Man Who Knew Too Much" and action plus, and there is plenty of material with which to sell it.—ALLAN, London.

Ticket to a Crime

(Syndicate-Beacon)
Mystery

This independently-produced mystery is rather routine material, with a lack of salable cast names, but a fairly well sustained mystery. Some comedy is introduced in the blundering activity of the police detective, and a romance, which concerns the private detective and his secretary-assistant.

Ralph Graves heads the cast, with Lola Lane and Lois Wilson in support, in addition to Charles Ray, who plays a minor role, which hardly permits of too great emphasis on his name in the selling. Concentration on the solution challenge idea, daring the audience to identify the culprit before the end of the film, may be effective.

Graves, former police detective, is in most difficult straits. His be-spectacled secretary, Miss Lane, has not been paid in weeks, and is about to quit when John Elliott brings him a case, and asks him to attend a formal party. For want of anyone else, he invites his secretary, and suddenly realizes how attractive the girl is. At the party Elliott is murdered. The suspects are an ex-convict, Hy Hoover; the ex-husband of Elliott's daughter, played by Charles Ray. Miss Wilson is the daughter. Another suspect is Miss Wilson's present husband, Edward Earle. James Burke is the police detective who, continuously outsmarted by Graves, has it in for him, and thus supplies the comedy through his blundering.

Eventually Graves, through the use of fingerprint detection technique and a carefully set trap, in the setting of which Miss Lane is of assistance, discovers that Earle, who also tampered with the books of the firm operated by Elliott, is the murderer, a solution for which Burke, of course, takes all the credit. Ray, it is learned, had been the victim of Earle's malpractice previously, leading to his divorce. Ray and Miss Wilson are reconciled, and Graves finds the company of his secretary-assistant more than pleasant.

It looks like midweek material.—AARONSON, New York.

Poisoned Ivory (RKO Radio) Fair

A comedy in the expected noisy Edgar Kennedy style, this has its moments, especially for those who like Kennedy, his chatter-box wife, backbiting mother-in-law and annoying brother-in-law. His wife accidentally gives Kennedy what she thinks is poison, and frantically seeks aid. But brother knows better, and arranges with the doctor, who had been insulted by Kennedy the previous evening, to make him believe his hours are numbered. The hoax is successful and provides amusing moments, the short ending in a burst of loud slapstick as Kennedy learns the truth.—Running time, 21 minutes.

Lazybones (Paramount) Entertaining

An entertaining number of the Screen Songs series, which features the title song, a popular hit of the day. The bouncing ball is featured and the subject combines cartoon and reality. The lazy horse who finally wins his race when a bed is the incentive opens the subject, the last part being devoted to the antics and excellent playing of Borrah Minnevitich and his Harmonica Rascals, in a rendition of the song. Entertaining.—Running time, 7 minutes.

Jungle Jitters (MGM) Amusing

A fairly amusing cartoon of the Willie Whopper series, this has our little hero shipwrecked and landing on a desert isle, where he meets an attractive little feminine native. Their happiness is disturbed by the arrival of cannibals, bent on a good meal of Willie, while the king is fascinated by the girl. Willie escapes, with the girl, and they manage to elude the pursuing band, with the aid of a friendly elephant.—Running time, 7 minutes.

CHICAGO

A new organization has come into being in Chicago that commands the general interest of all exhibitors as well as those in various allied amusement lines. It is known in this alphabetical day as CAPA and the letters represent the full name, which is Chicago Amusement Publicists' Association.

* * *

It is an association of men who by training and years of public contact represent virtually every branch of the amusement industry in Chicago. Sometimes they are called press agents, sometimes public relations counsellors, advertising managers, exploitation chiefs, editors, critics and what not.

* * *

As a whole they represent, through CAPA, a variety of callings that function in one general direction, public contact as it affects amusements.

* * *

As a group of expert publicists the organization has so far devoted so much time and thought to plans for the general welfare of the film industry, and amusements in other fields, that it has been its own worst publicity agent.

So, this column is dedicated to publicity for publicists.

First let's call some of the boys by name who feel that the Association can perform a service that will reflect to the general welfare and interest of the Chicago amusement industries. There are Herb Elisburg, Al Sobler, William Hollander, Cal Hermer, Ted Weber, Al Fuller, Oscar Schenk, Lou Abramson, Larry Stein, Duke Hickey, Al McKeown, Fred Bartow, Sam Clark, John Joseph, Dan Goldberg, Charles Koterba, Lou Cowan, Norman Alley, Harry Holquist and others.

Now the publicists' organization has a charter from the State of Illinois. Picking from its 10 points of purpose we quote two as rather generally covering its aims and purposes: "To establish a higher standard of conception and subsequent publication of publicity material." "To cooperate in every way to publicize the City of Chicago as the leading amusement center."

* * *

Of more direct interest to exhibitors large and small are the plans of CAPA for a development that will stimulate the box office of every theatre in the metropolitan area. It will be a thing on which every theatre can cash in at the box office and it will be CAPA's initial gesture to demonstrate the quality of its showmanship personnel. The plans, well advanced, involve nationwide contacts.

* * *

CAPA is a service organization in behalf of the local amusement industry. It has headquarters at the Congress hotel.

Beginning January 9 a series of luncheons will be inaugurated to which members will be permitted to bring guests. So, shine up to a Publicists' Association member for your lunch January 9.

HOLQUIST

Richberg Warns On Johnson Story

The long standing ill feeling between Donald R. Richberg, the Administration's recovery coordinator, and General Hugh S. Johnson, former NRA Administrator, broke out into the open again this week when Mr. Richberg wrote to George Horace Lorimer, editor of the Saturday Evening Post, warning him that the magazine would have to "accept full legal responsibility" for any derogatory statements in the series of articles on the recovery administration shortly to be published by the Post.

Mr. Richberg's letter, which was dated December 14, said he had been told "by several persons, seeming to have sources of accurate information, that a book from which the articles were to be taken includes certain definitely described attacks upon me which, if made, would be untrue, maliciously libelous and designed wholly for the purpose of doing me harm."

Mr. Lorimer declined to comment on Mr. Richberg's letter. Said Gen. Johnson, in Okmulgee, Okla., where he is vacationing with his mother:

"Donald's agitation is just a symptom of the ants of conscience in his pants. If he thinks there is libel in this narration why doesn't he stand on his legal rights in a suit for libel and not attempt to use his position to threaten the freedom of the press?"

Verne Porter Engages in Representation of Authors

Verne Porter, newspaper man, editor and writer this week set out to establish a literary agency to represent some of the better known authors in their relations with the field of publishing, the stage, radio and motion pictures. Mr. Porter's headquarters are in the Hotel Algonquin, New York.

Mr. Porter, a newspaper man for some 30 years, since he was 16, is well known in motion pictures, having acted as story editor for Triangle, Famous Players, Universal, Cosmopolitan and other companies. He has been an editor of the Duluth Star and St. Paul News, Washington Democrat, Portland Journal, Salt Lake Herald-Republican and Salt Lake Telegram, Red Book, Green Book and Cosmopolitan magazines, Tower Publications, Smart Set, trade publications. He was a co-author on "The Life Story of Maude Adams," "George M. Cohan's Own Story" and "The Perfect 36," all serials, besides contributing some 100 short stories to magazines.

Soviet Completes First Comedy Film

The first slapstick comedy picture to be produced in Soviet Russia was completed this week and soon will be shown in motion picture theatres throughout the U.S.S.R., according to a New York Times cable from Moscow Saturday.

The film is entitled "The Youth of Maxim" and tells how a "hometown boy makes good," according to the cable dispatch. A pig gets drunk on vodka and passes out on a platter so completely that a near-sighted guest salts and peppers the animal and starts to eat it, realizing his mistake only when the pig objects. This is said to be typical of the action of the film.

Trans-Lux Wins Reel House Permit

The Trans-Lux Brooklyn Theatre Corporation last week won its fight for a writ of mandamus requiring New York License Commissioner Paul Moss to reinstate a permit granted—and subsequently revoked by him after protest of private citizens and Erasmus Hall High School—for the corporation to construct a newsreel theatre on property leased at 929-931 Flatbush avenue, Brooklyn, adjacent to the school. Supreme Court Justice Henry G. Wenzel directed Commissioner Moss to reinstate the Trans-Lux permit.

The primary objection of parents and the school to construction of a theatre so close to the school was that it would lure pupils from their studies and give them too much provocation for playing truant. In his decision granting Trans-Lux the writ, Justice Wenzel stated he did not believe truants would attend a theatre so close to their school. He added that the company had leased the site for 10 years, had contracted to pay a rental of $12,000 annually and had posted a bond of $30,000 to guarantee performance of the contract.

Feinberg of Air Conditioning Firm Has Office in New York

Archie Feinberg, general sales manager of the United States Air-Conditioning Corporation, is now making his headquarters in New York. He indicated the company will offer exhibitors new developments in air conditioning after the first of the year. James O'Brien, New England representative for International Seat Corporation, has been appointed representative there for the Air Conditioning company as well. His headquarters will be in Boston.

J. C. JENKINS--His COLYUM

San Marcos, Texas

DEAR HERALD:

This town reminds us a whole lot of Lincoln, Nebraska, except that they don't have a fifteen million dollar capital building, all paid for, the Cornhusker football team, seventy thousand folks who yell themselves hoarse when the Huskers play, and Bob Livingston's theatre on O street. Outside of that, San Marcos resembles Lincoln very much, although Lincoln doesn't have a Baptist church, a Government Fish Hatchery and the Palace theatre operated by F. W. Zimmerman. We call him Zim for two reasons, one being that it is short and the other being that if we would call him Zimmerman some people might assume that he is a Swede, but don't tell him so, he might not like it.

Zim had us to his house for dinner last night. He had two reasons for this, one being to give us a regular feed, such as we seldom get, and the other reason being that he wanted us to see his two babies, one two years old and one two days old and both wearing blue ribbons and both being Texas prize Longhorns, although they are both shorthorns but dandy babies. They look just like Zim.

Zim has remodeled his theatre since we were here last, and you can take it from us, Phoebe, that the Palace is now some swell theatre and the pride of central Texas, and when anything is the pride of central Texas, or any part of it, you can rest assured that it is all right. When we were here before, Zim took us down to Blue Wing lake to show us how to catch bass. We got 82 bass, all told, and Zim caught three bullheads, but if you ask Zim about it he will tell you that that isn't true.

But before that we called on some more of the boys.

We wanted to call on C. W. Niece of the Crystal theatre at Hubbard but he was sick. Hope he soon recovers. Then we went and called on B. G. Stolp of the National and Palace theatres at Mexia and found him running at large with the knowledge and consent of the sheriff.

Not of the Smith Brothers

At Groesbeck we met S. F. Smith, who operates the Yale theatre. S. F. isn't one of the Smith Brothers who make caught drops but he resembles a Smith we used to know up in North Dakota, both of them pretty swell guys.

Earl D. Massey operates the Texas theatre at Killeen, which is a very good town for the size of it but it will never be listed on the map as the metropolis of the Southwest, but we wouldn't be surprised if Texas would some day run Earl for governor. We'd come down here and vote for him if they did and would allow Nebraska to vote.

The Palace theatre at Georgetown is located right on the national highway running from Winnipeg, Canada, to Mexico City and it is the longest highway in the world. We know, for we have traveled it from the Canadian line to San Antonio, but as we said, the Palace theatre is right on this highway, and if you ever go that way be sure to stop and meet Mr. and Mrs. Englebrecht, who preside over the place, and you will be glad to pay the regular admission price to see their show. Mrs. Englebrecht knew us as soon as we arrived at the box office, although she hadn't seen us for four years.

Copyrights and Admissions

Mr. Englebrecht had just gotten back from Dallas. He told us that while there he attended the hearing before the federal judge regarding the legal rights of a copyright owner to require a customer to charge a minimum of 25 cents for showing their films or he could refuse to serve the customer entirely if he so chose to do. Mr. Englebrecht said that the judge held a copyright owner of a film could do as he pleased with it, since it was his property.

We knew nothing personally about the decision, as we were 200 miles from Dallas when this decision was rendered, but if that is good law, and we are assuming that the judge was right, we can see no reason why the owner of a copyrighted film couldn't require an operator to charge 50 cents for the showing of his product, and when that time comes you independent operators want to remember that the fishing is always good in Wisconsin and Minnesota during the open season, and the producers should remember that old saying about the "goose that laid the golden egg" and not chop her head off or we won't have any "eggs for breakfast in the morning," and you know, we all want eggs for breakfast. You know also that Mike Maloney said that he believed in "The Survival of the Fittest" when he knocked his invalid wife down with a stove poker.

H. H. Hoke manages the Howard theatre at Taylor. We didn't get to see Mr. Hoke but we did see Harry L. Moller who assists him in the management. Mr. Moller also owns a house at Osage and one at Hemphill. This is correct unless we have gotten the boys mixed up. Sorry we didn't get to see Mr. Hoke.

When you get to Herne be sure to stop and see the Queen theatre and meet Mr. George Chapman, the manager, and then you will know that you have seen some of the prize products of Texas, and she's got a lot of 'em. Then drive over to Rockville and see the Dixie theatre and shake hands with C. W. Matson, the manager, and after that you won't care whether school keeps or not. But don't overlook Johnnie Miller of the Miller theatre at Navisota. Never mind the town, it is all right, but be sure to see the Miller theatre and see Johnnie, both are 100 per cent in the shade.

When it is noon in Texas the sun is directly over the Cliftex theatre, in Clifton, which indicates that it is not very far from the Equator. D. C. Caraway, the operator of the Cliftex, says he can't understand why the authorities allow us to travel the state without a guard. Doggone that Caraway anyhow; we'll betcha that he never saw a penitentiary in his life.

We used to know a guy by the name of Stroud up in Minnesota who was elected to Congress, but that wasn't the Harold H. Stroud who operates the Strand theatre at Hamilton. He wouldn't run for Congress on the Republican ticket if he was never elected, he'd sooner operate the Strand theatre, and we do don't blame him. He's another Texas guy who shows excellent judgment.

Did you ever meet Earl Allday of the Queen theatre at Calvert? Well, you hain't never met nobody yet. Calvert ought to be the capital of the state, but she isn't, and Carl ought to be the governor, but he isn't, although he may be some time. If our judgment means anything to Texas, which it don't, we would express the opinion that the state couldn't find better timber for governor than Carl, if he could be persuaded to run, which we doubt if he could as long as he has the Queen theatre. If we owned the Queen theatre in as good a town as Calvert they could have New Hampshire and we would throw in Reno.

Theatre and Hotel, Too

Arthur Van Minden operates the Cozy theatre at Lagrange. He also operates a hotel, and between the two of them he is kept pretty busy, but he found time to renew his subscription to the HERALD. It is funny, isn't it, how they trust us that way, but Art is a good judge of human nature.

J. T. Kauffman, who runs the Opera House in New Braunfels, got tangled up with another automobile recently, and when we called, J. T. was able to be up for a while at a time, but he says that the automobile is still in the repair shop.

Zim drove us over to Lockhart today to call on Colonel Baker who operates the Baker theatre. The Colonel wasn't feeling any too good but we had a delightful visit with him. The Colonel and the Baker theatre are pretty well known throughout Texas. Henry Stein of the Princess theatre at Luling came up to Lockhart to see us, which was mighty nice of Henry.

Yes, There's Some Oil

Luling has about 5,000 people, the most of whom are engaged in some way in the oil business, as they recently discovered oil quite close to town, and that accounts for why Luling is such a good town.

Jevver notice how big Texas is? The sun rises on the east line of the state before the roosters start crowing on the west line, and it sets on the west line after the boys are asleep on the east line, so you can figure it out for yourself.

But speaking of the weather. It may interest you boys up north to know that down here everything is green and today is about like a June day in Valley City, North Dakota, when John Piller is in Minneapolis trying to buy film. Well, anyhow, here it is Christmas week. Of course, Santa Claus didn't learn where we were in time to send us a necktie. Doggone it, he ought to know that we're around Alamo, Texas, and that's down in the Rio Grande valley, but we wish all you boys a Happy New Year so we are going to let it go at that.

THE NEW AND GREATER HEARST METROTONE NEWS

TECHNOLOGICAL

The BLUEBOOK School

By F. H. RICHARDSON

QUESTION NO. 254.—(A) Does a too-wide viewing angle caused by seats too close to the screen cause serious eye strain? (B) What are the various effects of a too-short viewing distance? (C) Give us your views of picture dimensions in general, as considered from front and rear seat viewing distance.

Answer to Question No. 248

Bluebook School Question No. 248 was: (A) Name some of the more important points in care of commutators. (B) Suppose you have a horizontal type motor-generator and one of its bearings became hot. What line of procedure would you adopt if you could switch to another M. G. set? If you had no other set and must use the one in service or shut down the show? (C) What constitutes undue heating in coils, etc., of a motor or generator? (D) By whom is the maximum permissible temperature fixed?

The following made good: C. Rau and S. Evans; D. Danielson; D. E. Doe; A. F. Sprafke; H. Edwards; J. Wentworth; T. Van Valkenburg; C. Oldham; R. J. Arntson; G. A. Artley; D. Ferguson; K. Arrington; T. F. Bochart; S. Johnson and E. Hodson; G. Wayne and D. Stellegos; F. H. and L. Klar; F. Ferguson and D. Lally; R. and K. Wells; T. Turk; H. Haber and D. Breaston; B. H. Thaller and S. Spooner; T. T. Davidson and R. G. Crews; N. L. Haynes and A. Richardson; T. N. Onby; P. and L. Felt; L. M. Goss and T. Danielson; W. R. Griever and L. Howell; C. E. Wainscott; C. Mellinger and H. Pitchkey; L. Hutch and D. Goldberg; T. L. Samuels; J. R. Sanborne, H. Munier and D. L. Hubbard; L. Grant and R. Geddings; D. L. Danielson and T. Morris; R. Crawford, D. T. Bennett, G. E. Osborn and C. B. Murray; E. Mantol and H. Hughes; R. Davis, J. Frazier, G. B. Lantree and F. D. Ormie; D. Johnson; C. Umphrey; L. M. and C. B. Traxler; D. L. Sinklow; G. N. Guidotti and F. L. Saylor; D. L. Crosby; F. H., S. and P. Dalbey; L. I. Miner; S. C. Hollenbeck; B. R. and M. Walker; J. Lansing and R. D. Oberleigh; G. Lathrop and N. L. Tomlinson; B. R. Danielson; M. F. Fallon; N. N. Boyd and L. Thomas; G. Harrison and F. Harlow; N. Goldberg; G. Thompson; B. I. and L. Henderson; B. N. Somers; N. L. Simms; P. H. Kay; T. Rosenblatt; T. L. Irwin and B. McCoy; M. and J. Devoy; L. N. Lloyd.

There are so many excellent answers to Section A that I am puzzled which to select. On the whole I think M. and J. DeVoy perhaps have a bit the best of it because of their manner of setting the various points forth. They say:

(1) Keep it clean. (2) Maintain correct

undercut. (3) Brush endwise with stiff bristle brush once each day to remove any possible deposits from undercut grooves. (4) Use only the brushes recommended by manufacturer of the set, as he may be presumed to know what is best. (5) See to it that brush contacts are clean and that they fit the commutator curve properly. (6) Have not only brushes that fit snugly in holders, but that move freely up and down therein when pulled with the fingers. (7) Have enough brush pressure to insure good contact, but not enough to cause too much wear of either brush or commutator. (8) Keep entire brush rigging free from all deposits of dust, dirt or oil. (9) Test the commutator for low or high bars monthly. (10) Apply lubrication to face of commutator by means of a pad. (11) Be certain a grease is used that contains no acid if the set be ball bearing, or that only oil recommended by the maker of the set be used if it be a sleeve bearing type. (12) Test the oil once a week in all-day theatre; once a month in two-a-day theatre, to make certain it is in good condition. (13) Examine the oil weekly to make certain it is at proper level. (14) Have ammeters tested by power company once each six months. (15) If it is a horizontal type set, be sure the armature has some 'float,' which is endwise movement, for unless it has, the brushes will probably wear grooves in the commutator. (16) If any sparking occurs ascertain the cause and remedy the trouble. (17) If the set is an old one, and the commutator has been turned down more than once, watch closely to see that the commutator bars do not heat. If they do it is probable they have become too thin. If so, new bars should be installed. (18) Be sure the solder-mechanical connection of armature wires and commutator lugs are in good condition. Trouble will be made evident by solder being thrown out, some heat generating thereafter."

I call that a surprisingly complete answer. Don't believe I would have thought of all those things off-hand myself. My compliments to these two Iowa men.

(B) L. M. Goss and T. Danielson answer, "The best action to take would depend to some extent upon what kind of bearing it might be. If it be a bronze bearing, I would put the other set, if any, into service, run the machine slowly without loads and flood the hot bearing thoroughly with oil, removing the oil well plug, until the bearing cooled down. A hot bronze bearing is a mean thing, since if the machine is stopped until the bearing cools naturally, it is more than likely not to move again until the bearing has been hammered and loosened, or perhaps turned off in a lathe.

"If it be a babbitt bearing, or a bearing of some metal similar to babbitt, I would proceed the same as for a bronze bearing if an idle set be available. If there be no other set, I would reduce the load just as much as possible, even to cutting down screen illumination to the limit (asking the manager to explain matters to the audience), remove the oil well plug and pour fresh oil through the bearing as fast as possible. I would not under any circumstances use water. If the oil treatment did not do the trick, then there would be nothing else except shut down the show."

(D) A great many misunderstood the meaning of this question. C. C. Oldham says, "Undue heating of coils is when they reach a temperature in excess of 84 degrees above that of the surrounding air." Rau and Evans answer thus:

"Undue heating of coils, etc., of a motor-generator set, would be evidenced by the fact that a thermometer properly embedded thereon would register 194 degrees Fahrenheit. Some authorities hold that the temperature should not exceed 80 degrees above that of the surrounding air. If the room temperature be 80 Fahrenheit it then would be that the set would not be overheating at 165 degrees Fahrenheit."

A. F. Sprafke and hundreds of others say, in somewhat different words, "The maximum actual temperature of 90 degrees Centigrade (194 degrees Fahrenheit) is specified as the maximum safe temperature for motor-generator equipment by the American Institute of Electrical Engineers."

It is well to understand, men, that in such matters there is but one authority to be considered, and that is the dictum set by the American Institute of Electrical Engineers.

To which I might add that to take the temperature of a machine part, it is best to embed the thermometer bulb in stiff putty, attach the putty to the part and let it stay there for at least ten minutes.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

CAPTAIN HATES THE SEA, THE: Fred Keating, Wynne Gibson, John Gilbert, Victor McLaglen—A very good picture that pleased most of the patrons. Good comedy, excellent acting but it was over the heads of some of the working class. Not enough plot to suit them. However, I believe that it's an excellent picture and should be stepped on. Fan magazines have all praised it. Business below average. Running time, 103 minutes. Played Dec. 9-10.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

CAPTAIN HATES THE SEA, THE: Fred Keating, Wynne Gibson—Well, this was a crazy picture. Looked to me as if the director went fishing. Lots of good talent, in fact, too many good actors and no story. I see some report it good. Maybe I'm wrong or possibly it was over our heads. It did not give satisfaction here, but we had a good picture with it and they let us live.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

FIGHTING CODE, THE: Buck Jones—A swell western that pleased the Saturday crowd 100 per cent. Business about average. Running time, 65 minutes. Played Dec. 1.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

GIRL IN DANGER: Ralph Bellamy, Shirley Grey—A crook story that went over well with our audience. Running time, 60 minutes. Played Dec. 7-8.—B. A. McConnell, Emerson Theatre, Hartford, Ark. Small mining town patronage.

ILL FIX IT: Jack Holt, Mona Barrie, Winnie Lightner—We would call it just fair. A few good comedy bits.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

LADY BY CHOICE: Carole Lombard, May Robson, Roger Pryor, Walter Connolly—Another swell picture from Columbia. My patrons certainly went for this one and they boosted it plenty. May Robson is certainly a great character. Played Dec. 13-14.—B. A. McConnell, Emerson Theatre, Hartford, Ark. Small mining town patronage.

LONE RIDER, THE: Buck Jones, Vera Reynolds—This is a good western picture full of action, thrills, fighting and a touch of romance. Buck Jones is at his best at first as an outlaw and then as an officer of the law. This offers good entertainment for all western fans and it pleased all of my patrons. Buck Jones always draws well here and we played it one day, Saturday, to good business. Running time, 58 minutes. Played Dec. 8.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

MOST PRECIOUS THING IN LIFE: Jean Arthur, Donald Cook—An average program picture that will get by. The acting of Jean Arthur is excellent, however, and helps the picture. Business average. Running time, 70 minutes. Played Nov. 20-21.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

NO GREATER GLORY: Frankie Darro, Lois Wilson—Put this one on 10c night. Have been putting off running it as long as possible. Columbia sure made a lemon when they produced this. It didn't please 10 per cent of those that saw it. Played Nov. 14-15.—Lawrence Cleary, Rex Theatre, Eldorado, Okla. Small town patronage.

First Division

ROAD TO RUIN: Helen Foster, Nell O'Day—Don't often book roadshows, but took a shot at this one at a raised admission price, and how they piled in. Folks that never had before been in my theatre came. To them, of course, this was a wonderful show, but to my regular patrons just another picture. Played Dec. 4.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

First National

BRITISH AGENT: Kay Francis, Leslie Howard—An excellently produced picture that did no business for us. Running time, 75 minutes. Played Dec. 3-4.—H. R. Cromwell, Bedford Theatre, Bedford, Pa. Small town patronage.

BRITISH AGENT: Leslie Howard, Kay Francis—Just a pain to my folks. The picture is lavish and well done, but who wants the Russian stuff?—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

DRAGON MURDER CASE, THE: Warren William—A good mystery picture that pleased. However, I don't think that Warren William is nearly so effective as Philo Vance as was William Powell. Coldest weather in 25 years kept business down. Running time, 67 minutes. Played Dec. 11-12.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD

1790 Broadway, New York

DRAGON MURDER CASE, THE: Warren William, Lyle Talbot, Margaret Lindsay—A good entertaining picture. Lots of good comedy. One mystery picture that was good entertainment and pleased them all.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

HAPPINESS AHEAD: Dick Powell, Josephine Hutchinson—One dandy little comedy offering that pleased but failed to do even an average business. Plenty of laughs and catchy music. It should have made a better showing at the box office but Powell is not a favorite with our patrons. Running time, 86 minutes. Played Dec. 2-3-4.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town patronage.

I SELL ANYTHING: Pat O'Brien, Ann Dvorak—This picture drew average in spite of stormy weather. A fast moving comedy that gave satisfaction. Pat O'Brien very well liked here, and Roscoe Karns has strengthened every picture he ever appeared in. Running time, 70 minutes. Played Nov. 21-22.—Harold Haubein, Cozy Theatre, Lockwood, Mo. Small town and rural patronage.

I SELL ANYTHING: Pat O'Brien, Ann Dvorak—Just a picture. Did O.K. on Friday and Saturday. It is different in plot and story than most pictures.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

MAN WITH TWO FACES, THE: Edward G. Robinson, Mary Astor, Ricardo Cortez—A fair picture, but did not draw film rental. Robinson is no good for my town.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

MAN WITH TWO FACES, THE: Edward G. Robinson, Mary Astor, Ricardo Cortez—This is an entertaining but unconvincing mystery film which was a disappointment to Robinson fans. It also has an abrupt ending that spoiled it for many patrons. One of Robinson's weaker efforts.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty Theatre, Ft. Worth, Texas. General patronage.

MAN WITH TWO FACES, THE: Edward G. Robinson—A good program picture but I don't call it Robinson's best by any means. Gave good satisfaction.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

SIDE STREETS: Aline MacMahon, Paul Kelly, Ann Dvorak—A better picture than I was looking for. Aline MacMahon and Ann Dvorak both good, but Paul Kelly don't look like a guy that so many women would fall for. Played Nov. 27-28.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

TWENTY MILLION SWEETHEARTS: Ginger Rogers, Dick Powell—This is our second time for this one and we did nice business. It's a fine musical picture with a good story. Running time, 90 minutes. Played Dec. 10-11.—H. J. Stallings, Moon Theatre, Henderson, N. C. Small town and rural patronage.

VERY HONORABLE GUY, A: Joe E. Brown—This is fairly entertaining but far below the Joe E. Brown standard of comedy. It is the sort of picture that you forget just as soon as you leave the theatre. A very weak effort.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty Theatre, Ft. Worth, Texas. General patronage.

WILD BOYS OF THE ROAD: Frankie Darro, Dorothy Coonan, Rochelle Hudson, Minna Gombel—An old film which should be shown to every boy and girl in America. It is thoroughly different from the average film, for it is not a comedy, musical, love story nor western. It is just plain, undiluted drama that makes you thankful that you have three square meals a day and a place to sleep. It tells of the boys and girls whom the depression forced upon the highways to beg, steal, and fight.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty Theatre, Ft. Worth, Texas. General patronage.

Fox

BACHELOR OF ARTS: Tom Brown, Anita Louise—Good, even better than I expected. A little football playing should have been included though the patrons expected and wanted it, although the school kids were well pleased. Played Nov. 25-26.—Lawrence Cleary, Rex Theatre, Eldorado, Okla. Small town patronage.

BOTTOMS UP: Spencer Tracy, John Boles, "Pat" Paterson, Thelma Todd—An old picture, but it seemed to be enjoyed by the few who came out to see it. Plenty of comedy, that caused many laughs. Played Nov. 24.—George Lodge, Green Lantern Theatre, Claymont, Del. Small town patronage.

CALL IT LUCK: "Pat" Paterson, Herbert Mundin—Not the special that it was sold for but the exciting finish will cause it to get by. Played Dec. 13-14.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

CARAVAN: Loretta Young, Charles Boyer—Something different but did not appeal to the majority. The music was very good. Story of the wine harvest in Hungary. Stories with a foreign locale do not appeal to my patrons. Running time, 101 minutes. Played Dec. 12-13.—H. R. Cromwell, Bedford Theatre, Bedford, Pa. Small town patronage.

CARAVAN: Loretta Young, Jean Parker, Phillips Holmes, Charles Boyer—In many ways a good picture. Somewhat hurt by the fact that it depicts a foreign country and a lot of stuffed shirt uniforms, but helped again by the fact that it has a good story, which is unusual in this type of picture. The music cannot be beaten, and if the patrons like music, it will please. Nevertheless, a picture more for the classes than the masses and hence will please in larger towns more than in small ones. Played Dec. 9.—B. J. Vanderby, Palace Theatre, Doland, S. D. Small town and rural patronage.

CAT'S PAW, THE: Harold Lloyd, Una Merkel—Good picture to very poor business.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

CAT'S PAW, THE: Harold Lloyd, Una Merkel—The first half of this picture was very entertaining, and was well received by our patrons. After the first half, it began to drag; it was too long. If it had ended when about two-thirds through it would have passed as a good entertaining production. Played Dec. 15.—George Lodge, Green Lantern Theatre, Claymont, Del. Small town patronage.

CAT'S PAW, THE: Harold Lloyd, Una Merkel—The best picture by Lloyd since silent days. Although it is rather long and could have been cut a little, it moves right along and pleased all who saw it. If he can put out a couple more like this, he will again be a box office bet. Played Dec. 2.—B. J. Vanderby, Palace Theatre, Doland, S. D. Small town and rural patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN IN LONDON: Warner Oland—Very good picture of the Chan kind. Failed to draw average business. Warner Oland has about run his course in our town. Played Nov. 16-17.—Lawrence Cleary, Rex Theatre, Eldorado, Okla. Small town patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN IN LONDON: Warner Oland—The character of Chan as played by Warner Oland is always welcome here. Surprising so many lady folks like him. Look out, Warner. The ladies will get you yet. Either the recording or the English was hard to understand. Like Charley Chan said in one part to an Englishman, "I don't understand English, me understand American." So with our patrons.—Jack Greene, Genesee Theatre, Geneseo, Ill. Small town patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN IN LONDON: Warner Oland—Even better than the others of this series and they have all been good entertainment. Pleased our patrons and pulled a little better than average business. Clever mystery plot that is cleverly worked out. Running time, 77 minutes. Played Nov. 30-Dec. 1.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN IN LONDON: Warner Oland—A very good detective story; just a little too draggy in spots. Played Dec. 1.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

DUDE RANGER, THE: George O'Brien—If your patrons like westerns, grab this one authored by Zane Grey. It's plenty good entertainment and though it is not a pretentious production, it has far more appeal than many so-called specials that do not draw small town trade in spite of the fact that they are hits in the big cities. Drew away above average and thoroughly pleased. Running time, 65 minutes. Played Dec. 7-8.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town patronage.

ELINOR NORTON: Claire Trevor, Norman Foster—Average picture with too much English accent. People hate that. I've often wondered why they give it to us. No one likes it. I don't see how they get such names as this for a picture. Played Nov. 21-22.—Lawrence Cleary, Rex Theatre, Eldorado, Okla. Small town patronage.

GAMBLING: George M. Cohan—This is only fair entertainment of the murder mystery type. George M. Cohan turns in a splendid performance, as do the rest of the supporting cast. This is 100 per cent all talking, but the action is lacking. If you do not play this one you will be wise. We played on a late Saturday night to below average business. Running time, 80 minutes. Played Dec. 8.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

HANDY ANDY: Will Rogers—So much has been said heretofore in regard to this picture, all I can do is to add my endorsement to unanimous reports already in. Played Nov. 29-30.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

HANDY ANDY: Will Rogers, Peggy Wood—I would place this as one of his very best. It steadily builds up, and towards the end, when Will Rogers dressed as Tarzan breaks in on the Mardi Gras Ball, this is as funny as anything shown in pictures. The popularity of Will Rogers has been well deserved. Everyone of his last six pictures or so have been real down to earth, good, wholesome entertainment to be enjoyed by the whole family. Keep up the good work and keep on making them as good as during the past year.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

JUDGE PRIEST: Will Rogers—Very good. Had usual Rogers turnout. Will Rogers gets people to the show that won't come any other time. Stepin Fetchit did a nice piece of work that got over swell with the kids. Play it. Played Nov. 23-24.—Lawrence Cleary, Rex Theatre, Eldorado, Okla. Small town patronage.

MARIE GALANTE: Spencer Tracy, Ketti Galian—Good dramatic offering with music above the program class. The interest is naturally centered on the new foreign star, and she's easy to look at. A story of international intrigue laid in the Panama Canal Zone which moves slowly but never lacks in interest. Pleased our patrons. Running time, 90 minutes. Played Dec. 5-6.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town patronage.

MARIE GALANTE: Ketti Galian, Spencer Tracy—Ten reels of trying to blow up the Panama Canal when seven would have done nicely. Only comedy furnished by Ned Sparks and Stepin Fetchit saved it from complete monotony. Just so-so and Galian not much. Spencer Tracy O.K. here. Comment: "It must be good if Spencer Tracy's in it." Patrons did not care for it, they said.—John A. Milligan, Broadway Theatre, Schuylerville, N. Y. Small town patronage.

MR. SKITCH: Will Rogers, Zasu Pitts, Rochelle Hudson—Played this very old, but it will still do the business. Not as good as the other pictures of his, but he can still draw them in on any kind of picture. Picture was hurt by casting Pitts with him. Although she is a fair draw in her place, it is not with Rogers. Played Nov. 29.—B. J. Vanderby, Palace Theatre, Doland, S. D. Small town and rural patronage.

PURSUED: Rosemary Ames, Victor Jory—An ordinary program picture that will do better on midweek or Saturday showing. Played Dec. 11-12.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

SERVANTS' ENTRANCE: Janet Gaynor, Lew Ayres—A very good picture. This kind pleases the whole family. Lew Ayres was exceptionally good. Let's see more of Ayres-Gaynor. They make a good team. Played Nov. 18-19.—Lawrence Cleary, Rex Theatre, Eldorado, Okla. Small town patronage.

SERVANTS' ENTRANCE: Janet Gaynor, Lew Ayres—This picture pleased all who came but did not do average business on account of the cold weather.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

SERVANTS' ENTRANCE: Janet Gaynor, Lew Ayres—This picture is one that will please the Gaynor fans, but to the others it's just another picture. Played Dec. 9-10.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

SHE LEARNED ABOUT SAILORS: Lew Ayres, Alice Faye—A cracker jack show that will please in any spot, and this girl Alice Faye shows that she can do something besides sing. She is extra good in this picture. Played Dec. 6-7.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

STAND UP AND CHEER: All Star Musical—Played it late and should have left it alone. A very fine variety of acts, which would have made a good show had it not been for the fact that they were tied together by a poor and utterly impossible story on the symbolic order. I guess that the producers will never learn that the public wants "down to earth" stories. It has been proved many times, yet they still spoil good actors with impossible stories and wonder what's wrong. Played Dec. 6.—B. J. Vanderby, Palace Theatre, Doland, S. D. Small town and rural patronage.

365 NIGHTS IN HOLLYWOOD: Alice Faye, James Dunn—Not as good as "She Learned About Sailors," but still it is quite satisfactory entertainment. Did not pull for us but pleased the majority of those who did turn out. Running time, 76 minutes. Played Dec. 9-10-11.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town patronage.

Freuler

WAR ON THE RANGE: Tom Tyler—A very nice little western with a sprinkle of comedy that will please the kids and other Saturday customers. Played Dec. 15.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Tex. Small town and rural patronage.

MGM

BABES IN TOYLAND: Laurel and Hardy, Charlotte Henry—Most adult patrons pleased. Beautifully done feature, well acted, and ideal for children and lovers of Victor Herbert's music. Laurel and Hardy in background furnish comedy. Familiar fairy tale characters come to life and results are quite pleasing, although some "rougher" patrons didn't care for "fairy" element. Only objectionable part for kids is where the "Bogey Men" come into the picture, and are they hideous!! I guess Hollywood can't get along without them, so we'll have to take it.—John A. Milligan, Broadway Theatre, Schuylerville, N. Y. Small town patronage.

BARRETT'S OF WIMPOLE STREET, THE: Norma Shearer, Fredric March, Charles Laughton—A grand picture that got us business. This picture, if sold right, will get the money. Don't go after the Saturday night crowd with this one. Get the people that don't go often and let them know about the picture and they will come to see it. Keep the uneducated away if possible as they will only go out and knock the picture. It's a great picture and properly sold will make money. Running time, 105 minutes. Played Dec. 2-3.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

BARRETT'S OF WIMPOLE STREET, THE: Norman Shearer, Fredric March, Charles Laughton—I call it a perfect picture. Great story and great acting. Pleased all we got to see it. The picture too good for small town. We cannot draw on this type of picture. It must be over their heads. Those we do get are well satisfied and all said the best they ever saw. The acting by the stars was perfect. Played Dec. 9-10.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

CHAINED: Joan Crawford, Clark Gable—This is a typical shopgirl's delight. Beautiful clothes, lavish production, and dumb love story. The audience response was excellent, but I think the story was poor.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty Theatre, Ft. Worth, Tex. General patronage.

DANCING LADY: Joan Crawford, Clark Gable—Ran this one old, but have learned one thing about running a show and that is a good film a year old will get more money than a sorry one one day old. "Dancing Lady" is plenty good. Played Nov. 18-19.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

EVELYN PRENTICE: William Powell, Myrna Loy—Good. Just another hit from MGM. Powell and Loy make a wonderful team. Let's see more of them in the future. I would like to have Powell defend my case if I should ever get in court. Play it on your best days. Played Dec. 9-10.—Lawrence Cleary, Rex Theatre, Eldorado, Okla. Small town patronage.

HAVE A HEART: Jean Parker, James Dunn—Good comedy drama. Entire cast do good work. Stuart Erwin and Una Merkel stole the show. Good for any day of the week. Played to regular business. Running time, eight reels. Played Dec. 1-3.—A. F. Affelt, Isosco Theatre, Oscoda, Mich. Small town patronage.

MANHATTAN MELODRAMA: Clarke Gable, William Powell, Myrna Loy—Although played late, this picture did a nice business. Played up the Dillinger angle and it brought in extra money. Business average. Running time, 95 minutes. Played Nov. 22-23.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

MERRY WIDOW, THE: Maurice Chevalier, Jeanette MacDonald—This is an excellent picture, lavishly produced, expertly directed and splendidly acted. It is a musical romance, with plenty of romance, music and comedy situations. The settings, costumes and photography are wonderful and the girl spectacle is beautiful. In spite of the above, we played two days to only fair business, but pleased all who saw it. Running time, 100 minutes. Played Dec. 6-7.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

OPERATOR 13: Marion Davies, Gary Cooper—A wonderful picture, and this Marion Davies is plenty good. In fact, I can't recall a single picture in which she has appeared that she didn't do more than justice to her part. Played Dec. 8.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

OUTCAST LADY: Constance Bennett, Herbert Marshall, Hugh Williams—Acting good, but the high-speed British enunciation was about as unintelligible to me as though the dialogue was rendered in an unfamiliar foreign language. Might go well in England—and I wish some English town had had our part of it. Running time, 80 minutes. Played Dec. 7-8.—G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Colo. Farming community patronage.

PARIS INTERLUDE: Otto Kruger, Robert Young, Madge Evans, Una Merkel—This is a good picture of the dramatic romance type. It is set against a newspaper character background and is well acted and directed. The locale is Paris, with most of the action taking place in a famous bar-room. The supporting cast perform wonderfully and add much to the entertainment. Played one day to very good business. Running time, 73 minutes. Played Dec. 5.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

STAMBOUL QUEST: Myrna Loy, George Brent—After the number of extra good films that Myrna Loy has appeared in, this is somewhat of a letdown for her. It manages to be fairly entertaining, but it is strictly just another picture. It has a beginning and ending that may be confusing to some patrons.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty Theatre, Ft. Worth, Texas. General patronage.

TREASURE ISLAND: Wallace Beery, Jackie Cooper—This picture went good with the kids and pleased most adults who saw it. Beery and Cooper's acting gets the picture over. Running time, 105 minutes. Played Nov. 11-12.—Lawrence Cleary, Rex Theatre, Eldorado, Okla. Small town patronage.

TREASURE ISLAND: Wallace Beery, Jackie Cooper, Lionel Barrymore—A picture that did the business and pleased. Had the complete cooperation of the schools and the children came and brought their parents. Business above average. Running time, 110 minutes. Played Nov. 25-26.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

THIN MAN, THE: William Powell, Myrna Loy, Maureen O'Sullivan—This is by far the most clever picture produced during the past year. It has a sophisticated story which will appeal to all classes of people. It is a mystery which differs so radically from the usual film of this type that you wonder why someone has not thought of such a story before. It is a wee bit naughty but always nice. By all means give your patrons a treat with this picture.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty Theatre, Ft. Worth, Texas. General patronage.

WHAT EVERY WOMAN KNOWS: Helen Hayes—A very good family picture. Well received by the regular fans. Played to average business for the three day run. Running time, nine reels. Played Nov. 28-30.—A. F. Affelt, Isosco Theatre, Oscoda, Mich. Small town patronage.

WICKED WOMAN: Mady Christians, Jean Parker, Charles Bickford—Favorable comment from patrons on this. Not exceptional, but splendid acting, fine sound and photography. Rather heavy drama lightened by comedy in some spots. Not for the weekend crowd, but still a very good picture.—John A. Milligan, Broadway Theatre, Schuylerville, N. Y. Small town patronage.

Monogram

GIRL OF THE LIMBERLOST, A: Marian Marsh, Ralph Morgan, Louise Dresser—This is the kind of show that makes friends for, and keeps the small town theatre open. Doesn't cost a fortune, and although we ran it two days in a downpour of rain each day, we made a little money. How many of the big so-called specials would have done this? We are certainly going to bring this back and if not so unfortunate as to hit another rain expect to do a wonderful business. Book it and boost it. Played Dec. 16-17.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

GIRL O' MY DREAMS: Mary Carlisle, Creighton Chaney—A mighty fine program picture. Pleased them all. Lots of comments on this one being so good.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

KING KELLY OF THE U. S. A.: Guy Robertson, Irene Ware—I reviewed this picture after screening it and said that it was a good picture. I still say so but the paying customers don't agree with me. They didn't like it and said so. Business below average. All of which proves that I'm wrong. Running time, 66 minutes. Played Dec. 4-5.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

LAWLESS FRONTIER: John Wayne—Not as good as some of Wayne's. Played Nov. 17.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

LOST IN THE STRATOSPHERE: June Collyer, William Cagney—This is a very good program picture. Played on double bill and gave good satisfaction.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

MONTE CARLO NIGHTS: Mary Brian, John Darrow—A nice little story, didn't get any comments but think it pleased all who saw it. Running time, 60 minutes. Played Nov. 26-27.—H. J. Stallings, Moon Theatre, Henderson, N. C. Small town and rural patronage.

MONEY MEANS NOTHING: Wallace Ford, Gloria Shea—A program picture worth running. A nice story, part love, part comedy and some thrills. Running time, 60 minutes. Played Dec. 5-6.—H. J. Stallings, Moon Theatre, Henderson, N. C. Small town and rural patronage.

SHOCK: Ralph Forbes—A fairly good war picture that pleased about 80 per cent of the Bargain Night crowd. Good program picture but some terrible movie boners in it. Business average. Running time, 66 minutes. Played Nov. 28-29.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

TRAIL BEYOND, THE: John Wayne—Just another western, action drama of the wild and woolly west. Good photography. Too much artificial action on the part of the cast to satisfy my regular patrons. Running time, six reels. Played Dec. 6-8.—A. F. Affelt, Iosco Theatre, Oscoda, Mich. Small town patronage.

Paramount

BELLE OF THE NINETIES: Mae West—Big disappointment. People tire of Mae in these roles. Wonder if she can make them like her in some other kind of story. Worth trying because, Mae, the folks were all het up over you, and to let them down now wouldn't be doing right by our Nell.—Jack Greene, Geneseo Theatre, Geneseo, Ill. Small town patronage.

CLEOPATRA: Claudette Colbert—The usual De Mille style. Somehow the old master has lost his appeal. His name does not mean much at the B. O. any more. Running time, 100 minutes. Played Dec. 10-11.—H. R. Cromwell, Bedford Theatre, Bedford, Pa. Small town patronage.

IT'S A GIFT: W. C. Fields—This would make a great two-reel comedy.—Perry L. Lessy, Diamond Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa. Neighborhood patronage.

LADIES SHOULD LISTEN: Cary Grant, Frances Drake—Above the average program picture and business satisfactory. Played Nov. 20-21.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

LEMON DROP KID: Lee Tracy, Helen Mack—Story is not so bad, but Lee Tracy better go back to newspapers. He'll be better off. Running time, 73 minutes.—Perry L. Lessy, Diamond Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa. Neighborhood patronage.

MENACE: Gertrude Michael, Paul Cavanagh—Just another picture that means nothing at the box-office. A mystery horror picture. Dragged out in spots and does not mean much at the end. Double-bill it or use five or six good single reels. Running time, six reels. Played Dec. 6-8.—A. F. Affelt, Iosco Theatre, Oscoda, Mich. Small town patronage.

MRS. WIGGS OF THE CABBAGE PATCH: Pauline Lord, W. C. Fields, Zasu Pitts, Evelyn Venable—As well liked as any picture we have played here in months. Drew very well and pleased all.—Jack Greene, Geneseo Theatre, Geneseo, Ill. Small town patronage.

NOW AND FOREVER: Shirley Temple, Carole Lombard, Gary Cooper—Not so hot. The kid has been in better comedies. How about some more "Little Miss Markers?" Page Damon Runyon. Running time, 82 minutes.—Perry L. Lessy, Diamond Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa. Neighborhood patronage.

NOW AND FOREVER: Gary Cooper, Carole Lombard, Shirley Temple—They came out to see little Shirley and were not disappointed, as the picture is very good and will please. Played Nov. 25-26.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

READY FOR LOVE: Ida Lupino, Richard Arlen—An excellent program picture. Used Thanksgiving Day and pleased the patrons. Nothing to shout about but it got them in and pleased them, and after all that is what counts. Business above average. Running time, 65 minutes. Played Nov. 29-30.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

TAKE A CHANCE: James Dunn, June Knight—Not so good. Not so bad. Will get by. Played Nov. 22-23.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

ROY W. ADAMS STARTED SOMETHING

It's only the beginning, folks, only the beginning. When Roy W. Adams, of the Mason Theatre at Mason, Mich., reported in these columns on the Ben Hecht-Charles MacArthur picture, "Crime Without Passion," the writers of the production took vigorous exception to his comment, all of which was duly recorded in the Motion Picture Herald of December 15th.

That was the starter. In the Herald this week, page 11, appear some observations by Ludwig Sussman of the Adelphi theatre in Chicago and Louis Charninsky of the Capitol at Dallas, both of whom applied the showmanship that their locales permitted, to cheerful results.

And the end of the controversy is not yet.

WAGON WHEELS: Randolph Scott, Gail Patrick—This one was enjoyed by everyone and was above average at B. O. The tieup with the song helped a lot. Running time, 57 minutes. Played Nov. 23-24.—H. R. Cromwell, Bedford Theatre, Bedford, Pa. Small town patronage.

WAGON WHEELS: Randolph Scott, Gail Patrick—One swell picture, with some nice singing. Any time we have a Zane Grey we have lots of customers. Business very good. Running time, 57 minutes. Played Dec. 7-8.—Harry Newman, Liberty Theatre, Lynden, Wash. Small town and rural patronage.

RKO

AGE OF INNOCENCE, THE: Irene Dunne, John Boles—A very good picture, well acted, but lacked something to give it a punch.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

BACHELOR BAIT: Stuart Erwin, Pert Kelton—Nice little picture and satisfied everybody. Business average. Running time, 74 minutes. Played Dec. 4-5.—Harry Newman, Liberty Theatre, Lynden, Wash. Small town and rural patronage.

BACHELOR BAIT: Stuart Erwin, Pert Kelton—Another good comedy picture from RKO. Gave good satisfaction.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

CRIME DOCTOR: Otto Kruger—A mighty fine program picture. Interesting story and well put over by a good cast.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

FINISHING SCHOOL: Ginger Rogers, Frances Dee, Bruce Cabot—Lots of compliments on this picture and that's what we like to hear. Played Dec. 5.—B. A. McConnell, Emerson Theatre, Hartford, Ark. Small mining town patronage.

GAY DIVORCEE, THE: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers, Alice Brady, Edward Everett Horton, Betty Grable—A good musical show with swell dancing and good comedy. Clean and good entertainment. Had cold weather so cannot tell how it would draw. Did not do so well for me.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

GAY DIVORCEE, THE: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers—This is 100 per cent entertainment. We have played none better. Both stars great. Good story with lots of good comedy. Great dancing and singing. Not a dull moment, and it's clean. I can't tell you how big it is but I have seen none bigger or better. Gave splendid satisfaction to all. We did not do the business the picture deserved to do, but we don't on any of them nowadays. Played Dec. 2-3-4.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

LIFE OF VERGIE WINTERS, THE: Ann Harding, John Boles—Another darn good show. Ann Harding is in a class all to herself in roles like this. Played Dec. 2-3.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

RICHEST GIRL IN THE WORLD, THE: Miriam Hopkins, Joel McCrea, Fay Wray, Reginald Denny—It is snappy and different. Will get by.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

STINGAREE: Irene Dunne, Richard Dix—I think without a doubt the swellest picture I have ever played. We didn't advertise it heavy as I was afraid of it; however, those who saw it the first night did what advertising can't do—talked it up to their friends and did they come out to hear Irene Dunne sing. Everybody is whistling "Tonight Is Mine," which she sang so beautifully. I'm anxious to see another picture from RKO with Irene Dunne doing the heavy solos. Running time, 76½ minutes. Played Dec. 14-15.—B. A. McConnell, Emerson Theatre, Hartford, Ark. Small mining town patronage.

TOPAZE: John Barrymore—This picture pleased everybody. It was very charming indeed and should do justice to any box office. One of the best recording prints which I have played for a long time and very clear print. Play this one and you will no doubt do good business. Barrymore is liked all over. Running time, 78 minutes. Played Dec. 14-15.—Albert Hefferan, The Owl Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. Special patronage.

WEDNESDAY'S CHILD: Karen Morley, Edward Arnold—A very well acted picture. The subject is not very popular, but it should be seen by everyone. The boy is a grand actor.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

WE'RE RICH AGAIN: Marian Nixon, Billie Burke—A very good and funny picture. Clean and entertaining. Gave good satisfaction.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

State Rights

BLAZING GUNS: Reb Russel—This feller is new and can't act, but his westerns always have plenty action and that's all my Saturday crowd wants, so it was O. K. here. Running time, 50 minutes. Played Dec. 7-8.—H. J. Stallings, Moon Theatre, Henderson, N. C. Small town and rural patronage.

FIGHTING HERO: (Reliable) Tom Tyler—Average western with plenty of action. Pleased. Business slightly below average on account of cold weather. Running time, 58 minutes. Played Dec. 8.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

FIGHTING HERO: (Reliable) Tom Tyler—A good western, better than usual for Tyler. Lots of action, fair business. Running time, 50 minutes.—H. J. Stallings, Moon Theatre, Henderson, N. C. Small town and rural patronage.

United Artists

AFFAIRS OF CELLINI, THE: Fredric March, Constance Bennett, Frank Morgan, Fay Wray—Not rated as a family picture and the rating is right. Good picture of its kind, but not for our little village. Played Dec. 8-9.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

LAST GENTLEMAN, THE: George Arliss—A splendid picture that's very entertaining. Arliss does not draw in this town as his pictures should but always gives great satisfaction to those we do get to see them. I call this one of his best. Played Nov. 25-26.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

Universal

BE MINE TONIGHT: Jan Kiepura, Magda Schneider—An old picture that came out about a year ago. However, it was an excellent musical and the entire film a very entertaining production. Played Dec. 15.—George Lodge, Green Lantern Theatre, Claymont, Del. Small town patronage.

GIFT OF GAB: Edmund Lowe—Good entertainment that might have been much better with all the stars in the cast. However, it pleased generally and did average business. The whole cast works hard and the results, in spots, are pleasing. Running time, 71 minute. Played Dec. 12-13.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town patronage.

HONOR OF THE RANGE: Ken Maynard—Leave it in the can and do your patrons and yourself a favor. The whole thing is as false as the villain's moustache and that's plenty false. Great fun for a midnight preview audience, who fortunately did not take it seriously. Played Dec. 1.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town patronage.

HUMAN SIDE, THE: Adolphe Menjou, Doris Kenyon—Not a big film, but pleasing. Played Dec. 5.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

ONE EXCITING ADVENTURE: Binnie Barnes, Neil Hamilton—Pleased our patrons to the extent that they stopped in to tell us just how good a show it was. You can't ask any more of any picture. Clever plot and well acted. It should click in almost any situation. Running time, 73 minutes. Played Dec. 8.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town patronage.

ROCKY RHODES: Buck Jones—Buck Jones is always a good drawing card for me on Saturdays and his pictures I find are dependable. Played Nov. 24.—

Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

WAKE UP AND DREAM: Russ Columbo, June Knight, Roger Pryor—A good program picture played on a double bill and it gave satisfaction.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

Warners

CASE OF THE HOWLING DOG: Warren William—A good murder trial picture. Everybody liked it. William excellent as a lawyer. Played Dec. 12-13.—H. J. Stallings, Moon Theatre, Henderson, N. C. Small town and rural patronage.

DAMES: Dick Powell, Ruby Keeler, Joan Blondell—In my opinion this is much below average established by Warner Bros. musicals. The story of this, not much can be said in praise of it. The belching sequence is kept up disgustingly long. Of course, there are some good numbers in it, also they can't all be "42d Streets." As a whole this will entertain where they are not too particular. Drawing power a little better than an average run of the mill program.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

DESIRABLE: Jean Muir, George Brent, Verree Teasdale, Charles Starrett—It is a very fine picture. Good acting by all the cast and extra good by Jean Muir. It did not draw but pleased.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

DESIRABLE: Jean Muir, George Brent—A really good picture. Splendid acting. Did a fairly nice business and everybody liked it. You can't go wrong with this one. Played Dec. 3-4.—H. J. Stallings, Moon Theatre, Henderson, N. C. Small town and rural patronage.

HERE COMES THE NAVY: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, Gloria Stuart—Did extra business and deserved it. It has action and comedy and is good entertainment.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

SMARTY: Warren William, Joan Blondell, Edward Everett Horton, Frank McHugh—This keeps moving fast with semi-farical situations. Joan Blondell as the Smarty is permitted to have her way too much, but I suppose it is all in fun. A little too risque for present day standards. Business a fair average.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

UPPER WORLD: Warren William, Ginger Rogers, Mary Astor, Andy Devine—Good, entertaining picture. Much better than title sounds. Business fair.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

PLUMBING FOR GOLD: Sidney and Murray—A real good slapstick comedy that everyone seemed to enjoy. Running time, two reels.—B. A. McConnell, Emerson Theatre, Hartford, Ark. Small mining town patronage.

PUNCH DRUNKS: Three Stooges—Need more be said. It's another comedy with the riot boys.—Perry L. Lessy, Diamond Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa. Neighborhood patronage.

PUNCH DRUNKS: 3 Stooges—The best two reeler we've run in moons. Running time, two reels.—B. A. McConnell, Emerson Theatre, Hartford, Ark. Small mining town patronage.

Educational

GIRL FROM PARADISE, THE: Musical Comedies—Night club entertainment in New York City. Chorus girls come out with almost nothing on, "disguised" as Indians. Steer clear of it for the kids and church benefits. It is poor comedy and has but one good solo dance number. Patrons didn't like it, and they aren't prudes, either. Running time, two reels.—John A. Milligan, Broadway Theatre, Schuylerville, N. Y. Small town patronage.

GIRL FROM PARADISE, THE: Sylvia Froos—This is a dandy two-reel comedy with music, singing and dancing. A dandy to use with a weak feature to bolster up program.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

GOOD LUCK-BEST WISHES: Pickens Sisters, Ferde Grofe and his Orchestra—Above the average two-reel comedy and patrons enjoyed it immensely. Running time, 21 minutes.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

HIS LUCKY DAY: Ernest Truex—This is a good two-reel comedy. It is the best comedy we have played from Educational this season. Truex at his best in a slapstick comedy with plenty of laughs. Let's have more good two-reelers like this one. Running time, 19 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

KING ZILCH: Terry-Toon—Here is a cartoon that is different from all of the rest. It has a story and a moral to it, and it is funny and by that I mean one really laughs. Play this one and you will please everybody. Running time, 6 minutes.—Albert Hefferan, The Owl Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. Special patronage.

SHE'S MY LILLY: Will Mahoney—Another well liked comedy. Mahoney will be welcome here any time with this brand of entertainment.—Jack Greene, Geneseo Theatre, Geneseo, Ill. Small town patronage.

TRIMMED IN FURS: Harry Langdon Comedy—Not so good, not so bad. Will do to consume 18 minutes of time when program is short and you need it. Running time, 20 minutes.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

Fox

COAST OF CATALONIA, THE: Magic Carpet Series—Beautiful photography is perhaps the outstanding feature of this series of travel films. The narrator confines himself to descriptive matter and does not wise-crack, which helps to make these better than the usual run of travelogues. Running time, 9 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town patronage.

MAN'S MANIA FOR SPEED: Adventures of the Newsreel Cameraman—Fast moving with action plus. Play it. Fans can't keep from enjoying it. It gives you newsreel shots that have pep. Running time, one reel.—Lawrence Cleary, Rex Theatre, Eldorado, Okla. Small town patronage.

MGM

GENTLEMEN OF POLISH: Musical Revues—Too silly to be funny. Running time, 20 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town patronage.

GOOFY MOVIES: This is only fair entertainment and did not please my patrons. When the title was flashed on the screen, many walked out and asked why we didn't show any comedy. This type of one-reeler may be great some place, but here it is just a flop. Running time, 9 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

I'LL BE SUING YOU: Todd-Kelly—This is a wow. Kelly is great. Got more laughs than any comedy for some time. Running time, two reels.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

OLD PIONEER, THE: Happy Harmonies—Another of the Happy Harmonies series and one of the best. The most beautiful coloring and good music, comedy and recording. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

OLD SHEP: Chic Sale—This is only fair entertainment, featuring Chic Sale. It is not a comedy, so be sure to book a comedy with this. A few of my patrons thought it good, but the majority did not like it. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. Country patronage.

OPENED BY MISTAKE: Todd-Kelly—Got more laughs than any Todd-Kelly comedy so far. Running time, 20 minutes.—Geo. F. Smith, Lyric Theatre, Lapeer, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

SPEAKING OF RELATIONS: Irvin S. Cobb—The first of this series I have run and it went over big. Got a lot of laughs and some stayed to see it twice. Running time, two reels.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

STRIKES AND SPARES: Oddities—One of the best single reelers on the market. Haven't had a miss yet. Running time, 8 minutes.—Perry L. Lessy, Diamond Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa. Neighborhood patronage.

TAKING CARE OF BABY: Oddities—Very good single reel. Pete Smith's narrations are the nuts!! Merry Xmas, Pete. Running time, 9 minutes.—Perry L. Lessy, Diamond Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa. Neighborhood patronage.

Paramount

COLOR CLASSICS: Very good color cartoons. Best in their field. Hope to have many more.—Perry L. Lessy, Diamond Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa. Neighborhood patronage.

HOLLYWOOD ON PARADE: Our patrons find these subjects interesting and they are good program builders.—A. E. Christian, Wayne Theatre, Monticello, Ky. Small town patronage.

HOLLYWOOD ON PARADE: No. 12.—This is a very good one-reeler presenting some of the scenes and features of the recent MPTOA convention in California. It shows a few of the movie stars putting on a little show for the members of the convention. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. Country patronage.

LITTLE BROADCAST: Headliners—A fine subject featuring Mills Brothers, Arthur Tracy, Donald Novis, Vincent Lopez and his Orchestra and Roy Atwell.—A. E. Christian, Wayne Theatre, Monticello, Ky. Small town patronage.

LITTLE JACK LITTLE REVUE: Headliners—One of the best one-reel subjects we have played. Full of entertainment and delighted our patrons. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. E. Christian, Wayne Theatre, Monticello, Ky. Small town patronage.

LOVE THY NEIGHBOR: Mary Small—A good short. This type of cartoon goes over for me. Mary Small plenty good for an 11-year-old girl, but is she only 11? Running time, 8 minutes.—Martin S. Lane, Logan Theatre, Noblesville, Ind. Small town patronage.

MAN ON THE FLYING TRAPEZE, THE: Popeye the Sailor—A thousand cheers for this and any Popeye cartoon. They are all topnotch. Will get plenty of acclaim from young and old alike. I give him plenty of space in the papers and profit by it. Running time, 7 minutes.—Martin S. Lane, Logan Theatre, Noblesville, Ind. Small town patronage.

MARINE MARVELS: Grantland Rice Sportlights Series—Not as good as some Sportlights, but acceptable. The Rice commenting and the photography makes these shorts good on any program. Running time, 8 minutes.—Martin S. Lane, Logan Theatre, Noblesville, Ind. Small town patronage.

POOR CINDERELLA: Betty Boop—Above the average, but recording of the music very poor. Running time, 7 minutes.—Geo. F. Smith, Lyric Theatre, Lapeer, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

POPEYE THE SAILOR: These are good cartoons and our patrons like them.—A. E. Christian, Wayne Theatre, Monticello, Ky. Small town patronage.

STRONG TO THE FINCH: Popeye the Sailor cartoon—Here is another good cartoon comedy featuring that famous cartoon character, Popeye. Great entertainment and pleased all of my patrons. This series is one of the best cartoons on the market and they always please. Running time, 7 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

WHERE'S THAT TIGER?: Borrah Minnevitich and His Harmonica Rascals—An excellent subject and our patrons like this sort of entertainment. Fine to build up Friday and Saturday program.—A. E. Christian, Wayne Theatre, Monticello, Ky. Small town patronage.

Picture Classics

PUSS-IN-BOOTS: Junior Addario—I don't know how the idea for this film originated, but I imagine the producers were encouraged by the exponents of educational films for children. Just how well this picture has sold, I can't say, but I imagine the producers have discovered that art and education and box office won't mix. Although I failed to see "Alice in Wonderland," I am told that the audience reaction toward that failure was the same as towards "Puss," for adults will not sit through it and only the smallest children will appreciate it. For the first 10 minutes "Puss" is entertaining, but after that it becomes tiresome. The producers made the mistake of having the children sing too operatic. One little ten-year-old sings an operatic aria in Spanish. There is much vocal ado about spinach and ice cream. There is an excellent orchestral accompaniment by Nat Shilkret and the settings are well done; in fact, the production looks rather costly. Junior Addario as "Puss" is an extremely clever little fellow, but the other children are rather amateurish. A good idea gone wrong. This is really a featurette as it runs 40 minutes.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty Theatre, Ft. Worth, Texas. General patronage.

RKO Radio

AUTOBUYOGRAPHY: Headliner Series—This comedy is the poorest we ever ran. I surely agree with the report in last week's Herald, but it's even worse than that exhibitor said.—J. O. Smith, Paramount and Dixie Theatres, Ashland and Lineville, Ala. Small town patronage.

SINISTER STUFF: Cubby the Bear Cartoons—This cartoon is terrible. Do your patrons a favor by sending it back unplayed.—J. O. Smith, Paramount and Dixie Theatres, Ashland and Lineville, Ala. Small town patronage.

Universal

FINANCIAL JITTERS: Eddie Nugent—Got quite a few laughs from our patrons. Running time, 20 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town patronage.

GOOFTONE NEWSREELS: These are terrible and folks have asked us what they are supposed to be. Just wasted film so far as our patrons are concerned.—A. E. Christian, Wayne Theatre, Monticello, Ky. Small town patronage.

JOLLY LITTLE ELVES: Cartune Classics—An excellent little cartoon in color that compares favorably with the Silly Symphonies. A fine addition to any program.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty Theatre, Ft. Worth, Texas. General patronage.

A NIGHT IN A NIGHT CLUB: Mentone No. 1-A—With Buck and Bubbles, Harry Rose, J. Harold Murray and many others. It just couldn't be bad.—Perry L. Lessy, Diamond Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa. Neighborhood patronage.

STRANGER THAN FICTION: An odd single. Most audiences will find them interesting.—Perry L. Lessy, Diamond Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa. Neighborhood patronage.

STRANGER THAN FICTION SERIES: These have been very good short subjects—presenting oddities of every kind from all over the world. Running time, 9 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town patronage.

WOLF, WOLF: Oswald Cartoon Series—O. K. cartoon.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

Vitaphone

BARBER SHOP BLUES: Melody Masters Series—A crackerjack one-reel filler, all-negro cast. Running time, 9 minutes.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

BOSTON TEA PARTY: See America First Series—First of this series I have run and it is excellent. I would be willing to pay for this one for my own benefit, as I have seen most of the places and they are natural. A very entertaining and instructive short. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

BUSINESS IS A PLEASURE: Broadway Brevities—This one is great. Beautiful color, comedy, snappy dance numbers, just about everything you can put into a two-reel short. Got as many favorable comments as a feature. Running time, two reels.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

CABINET MEETING, A: Pepper Pot—A dandy single reel from Vitaphone. Ran this one with "Business Is a Pleasure" and they went over big. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

FLAME SONG, THE: Bernice Claire, J. Harold Murray—One of the weakest Broadway Brevities that Warner has released. Nothing to it. Running time, 19 minutes.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

GEM OF THE OCEAN: Jeanne Aubert—This is very good entertainment in the musical comedy type with plenty of beautiful girls and good music. This is set aboard an ocean liner and offers some great singing and dancing numbers. Running time, 20 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

GIRL AT THE IRONING BOARD, THE: Merrie Melodies Series—This is a good cartoon comedy with music. The cartoon is excellent and is done in a way that makes it excellent entertainment for both young and old. Vitaphone continually produces good shorts that please the public. Running time, 7 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

GOOD MORNING EVE: Leon Errol—An entertaining musical comedy in color, but it borders on the offensive. It is suggestive in spots, and it has the "this picture approved," etc., attached. What's happening, code authority losing their will power? Running time, 20 minutes.—Harold Haubein, Cozy Theatre, Lockwood, Mo. Small town and rural patronage.

GOOD MORNING EVE: Leon Errol—A dandy musical comedy in color. Some very pretty shots. Running time, 19 minutes.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

HAIL COLUMBIA: See America First Series—Maybe it's a good short, I don't know. I didn't care for it. Customers didn't kick or rave. Running time, 10 minutes.—Harold Haubein, Cozy Theatre, Lockwood, Mo. Small town and rural patronage.

MIRRORS: Melody Masters—A good musical short featuring Freddy Rich and orchestra. Vera Van and the Eton Boys help. The mirrors add novelty. Running time, 10 minutes.—Harold Haubein, Cozy Theatre, Lockwood, Mo. Small town and rural patronage.

NO CONTEST: Broadway Brevities Series—This is a very good musical comedy starring Ruth Etting. Miss Etting sings several popular selections. This has plenty of beautiful girls, good music and everything you could expect of a musical comedy. Great entertainment. Running time, 19 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. Country patronage.

NO CONTEST: Ruth Etting—Very good. Ruth Etting can sing and does in this. Running time, two reels.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

PAREE, PAREE: Dorothy Stone, Bob Hope—This is excellent entertainment of the musical comedy type. There are plenty of beautiful girls, good music and some excellent singing and dancing. When you play Vitaphone shorts, advertise them and listen to the public comment on them. Running time, 20 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

PHIL SPITALNY AND HIS MUSICAL QUEENS: Melody Masters Series—This is a very good one-reeler with plenty of good music presented by Phil Spitalny and his Musical Queens. Excellent entertainment and pleased our entire audience. Other producers should pay Vitaphone to produce shorts for them. Running time, 9 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

PICTURE PALACE: Hal LeRoy, Dawn O'Day—This is a very good musical comedy with plenty of beautiful girls and good music. LeRoy features with his famous tap dancing and Dawn O'Day with her singing and dancing. Excellent entertainment and will please everyone. Running time, 20 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

SONG OF FAME, THE: Ruth Etting—If all short subjects were as well cast and produced as this two-reel film, exhibitors would not be forced to double-feature and distributors would not find it necessary to use compulsory measures to eliminate this practice. This musical subject is better than many feature pictures as it has talent, comedy, music and action. Several artists are presented who are genuinely entertaining: Ruth Etting, Moore and Revel (dance team) and a hill-billy trio. The latter are sensational in their bit and our patrons would have enjoyed more of their singing. And for once the chorus actually dances instead of doing a lot of repetitious kicking.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty Theatre, Ft. Worth, Texas. General patronage.

SO YOU WON'T T-T-T-TALK: Roscoe Ates—One of those real belly laugh comedies. And how the folks ate it up. Call it hohum or slapstick or whatever you want to, but this is the type of comedy that goes over here in a big way.—Jack Greene, Genesee Theatre, Genesee, Ill. Small town patronage.

SYNCOATED CITY: Hal LeRoy, Dorothy Dare—Vitaphone shorts are okay and my patrons like the Broadway Brevities and especially Hal LeRoy's dancing. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. E. Christian, Wayne Theatre, Monticello, Ky. Small town patronage.

THOSE BEAUTIFUL DAMES: Merrie Melodies—Let it lay, let it lay. Running time, 7 minutes.—Geo. F. Smith, Lyric Theatre, Lapeer, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

Newsreels

Metrotone

METROTONE NEWS: Personally I don't think Edwin C. Hill helped this newsreel. I liked it better as it was. Running time, one reel.—Lawrence Cleary, Rex Theatre, Eldorado, Okla. Small town patronage.

Paramount

PARAMOUNT SOUND NEWS: This issue was good, and it has no sensational tripe in it. Good for the family. Excellent print, and recording good.—Albert Hefferan, Owl Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. Children and college students.

STAGE IS INNOVATION NOW: GUY BATES POST

Legitimate Theatre "All Right If You Can Get People Used to It," Veteran Actor Is Told

By AL FINESTONE
Kansas City Correspondent

The transitional theatre is doomed to extinction, in the opinion of Guy Bates Post, for many years a leading figure of the legitimate stage.

"But," he added, "the theatre as we have it today is a going and powerful concern, more popular than ever, thanks to the talking motion picture."

Mr. Post delivered those observations to this reporter recently upon the termination of an unsuccessful attempt to produce dramatic repertoire at the Orpheum in Kansas City. He was the "guest star" in Ferenc Molnar's "The Play's the Thing," announced as the first of 10 productions, each lasting two weeks, to be staged by Arthur Casey, entrepreneur from Boston and protege of Louis B. Mayer, at the time the MGM production executive was gaining a reputation in New England theatredom.

There weren't enough customers during the 15-day run of the initial play to meet expenses, and the scheduled 20-week season died a-borning. Mr. Casey now agrees with Mr. Post that the legitimate stage is gasping its last.

"There are still a number of dramatic theatres in New York struggling for existence," said Mr. Post. "But their glory has departed; they are bedraggled and down at the heel. The cinema has replaced the older art, and the demise of the 'living drama' is in the lap of time."

With retrospection that comes from 40 years on the stage, as well as appearances in several silent films, Mr. Post saw the talking motion picture as an evolution of the older dramatic forms. Each generation, he said, has its favorite amusement, and today's theatregoers prefer "the movies."

"Frequently I am asked whether the theatre will ever come back," he continued. "It never departed. Only the form has changed. The movies have captured the mass imagination."

"When today we speak of the drama, we must necessarily speak of the motion picture drama. Other forms are almost non-existent. Today's theatre is a virile theatre, it is a vital, living force; it succeeds because it gives the public what it wants. It has succeeded in popularity, and financially beyond the fondest dreams of its originators."

Mr. Post resorted to a flash-back. When, 30 years ago, he played Kansas City while "on the road" in the popular dramas of the day, there were five theatres in Kansas City, each devoted to a different form of stage entertainment—opera, light opera, the classics, popular plays, musical shows. The total weekly attendance at those theatres never exceeded 30,000.

"Today," he continued, "the attendance at Kansas City theatres is about 300,000, and there isn't a legitimate theatre in the lot. The new generation, brought up on the motion picture, has become a generation of moviegoers."

"When the screen was silent, we of the legitimate stage firmly believed that in time the movies would lose their popular appeal, that surfeited theatregoers would return to the spoken drama. But the screen became articulate, and that was the death blow to the theatre as we of the old regime knew it."

"There are thousands who have never seen a real play. If they did, they probably wouldn't care for it, would regard it as a novelty. They would probably agree with the young man who, after seeing a stage production, commented, 'I guess a show like that would be all right if you could get people used to it.' To him the movies were the established form of the drama. The real play was an innovation."

"And what of the future of the drama, the screen drama?"

Based on Humanity

"The drama," Mr. Post replied, "is ageless. It has its source in the mainsprings of humanity. It will survive as long as humanity survives. It cannot die; it can only change its form."

"We are living today in an age that is growing more mechanized day by day. The theatre is based on humanity. Some day we may be all dumped into a sea of things material. Then it will be the theatre that will offer us a raft of humanity to cling to."

Mr. Post appeared several years ago in silent film versions of "The Masquerader" and "Omar the Tentmaker," two of his stage hits. He has had parts in other pictures, and more recently was with Ann Harding in "Prestige."

Upon his return to New York, Mr. Post was to begin rehearsals for the lead in "The Last Woman," by Walter Ferris, scheduled for Broadway production this winter.

Guy Bates Post, actor, was born in Seattle September 22, 1875, of English-French-Dutch parentage. A California State University graduate, his early business experience was gained at law, which he abandoned to do stage work, making his first appearance in "Charlotte Corday" with Mrs. James Brown-Potter and Kyrle Bellew, 41 years ago. He has appeared in Shakespearean repertoire and dramatic productions with William Owen, Otis Skinner, Marie Wainwright, Herbert Kelcey, Effie Shannon, Sadie Martinot, Gertrude Coghlan, Dustin Farnum, Mrs. Fiske, and others, in plays staged in England, Australia, Europe and the United States.

I read with interest the announcement in the current issue of TIME of the inaugural of the March of Time news series. Being a cover-to-cover reader of TIME and an eager listener of the radio March of Time, I do want to be "in on" the first joining of eye and ear appreciation of the efforts of TIME'S staff.

Acting on the suggestion made by your advertisement, I suggest that in Duluth, the March of Time movie series be presented at the Lyceum Theater for the following reasons:

First, it is the Lyceum Theater, showing always first class movies, and Second (more important) your advertisements in the local papers and features shown at the Lyceum include the name of the Lyceum and shorts that go with it.

Sirs:

Having had the pleasure of seeing one of your MARCH OF TIME reels in your Time and Fortune Building at the Fair late this summer, I am glad to hear that you are going to make them a permanent thing. I would suggest the Cinema Theatre at 151 East Chicago Avenue as a good spot to show them to a great number of TIME readers. Also the Dearborn Theatre at 40 West Division Street. These two movie houses are very popular with the class of persons who read Time and Fortune, and who certainly welcome the opportunity to see your newsreels so close to home. You the greatest of success in the future, I am,

I accept your invitation to in connection with your the showing of the TIME in theatres. It has six picture houses, Hamilton, Grand, Cap- tulton, Strand. The first and are Warner Brothers other three are independent and operated.

I would like to see the MARCH OF TIME exhibited in one of independent houses, preferably the I. This theatre is located on the corner of our city and it seems to be the most popular. My second choice would be the Fulton.

Here is hoping the MARCH OF TIME will be as great a success in theatres as it always was on the radio and that I may have a chance of seeing and hearing it in Lancaster shortly after the first of the year.

With best wishes, I am,

"The March of Time"

As one who has thoroughly enjoyed "The March of Time" on the air, I look forward to next month, when the same program is to be tried out on the screen in the local picture houses.

It is the hope of my wife and me that Poli's, Franklin Square, Worcester, will obtain this release.

We shall be glad indeed to do what we can to interest our friends in your new venture, which we wish the best of success.

Attention of the Manager

Gentlemen:

As fairly regular patrons of your theatre, my wife and I are hopeful that the news reel, THE MARCH OF TIME, which is to be released by TIME, Incorporated, for showing during January, can be obtained and shown at your house.

TIME'S radio program has appealed to us and to our friends as one of the best on the air, and it seems to us that they would turn out a very interesting picture.

We are going to see this new release wherever it is shown in this vicinity, and we sincerely hope it will be possible to view it at your theatre.

Sirs:
I would like to have the MARCH OF TIME shown at the Fox Theatre or the Opera House in Tucson, Arizona. I am looking forward to seeing your intelligent and interesting presentation.

"On Needles and Pins"

Sirs:
You suggest (TIME, December 3) that subscribers should write in and tell you what cities they would like to have THE MARCH OF TIME exhibited. I agree with this and suggest for my part this city, Pocatello, Idaho. If the particular theatre would be of any assistance to you, the name is "Orpheum Theatre" or one of the "Fox Theatres" located here.

Waiting "on needles and pins" to see what new thing TIME has to offer, I remain,

Dear Gum:

Last night in listening to MARCH OF TIME on radio, they announced that they would have for distribution in January, MARCH OF TIME pictures. As their magazine and radio broadcasts have been so interesting, I hope you will secure these pictures for Greensboro.

IT'S WHAT THE PUBLIC WANTS

THE public has definitely approved of Time's announcement of a new kind of a motion picture.

Read these letters from all over the country. All talking about THE MARCH OF TIME and its coming debut on the screen. Cash customers of thousands of theaters asking that this new series of pictures be shown in their favorite theater. It's never happened before in the history of the motion picture industry.

But it's no accident. The producers of the March of Time (twenty minutes long and released once a month) are not guessing at public appeal. Into the MARCH OF TIME on the screen goes the same ideas, resources and successful presentation that have made Time & Fortune Magazines and the March of Time on the radio, the greatest box office successes in their fields.

By the time this advertisement appears hundreds of exhibitors will have heard directly from patrons of their houses. Positive proof that the public wants the MARCH OF TIME on the screen. Bring this ready made audience to YOUR theater.

A JOHN M. STAHL PRODUCTION
PRESENTED BY CARL LAEMMLE

New York

Roxy (6,200; 25-35-55-65) — 'Imitation of Life' (U) (2d week) and stage show. A surprisingly good grosser, this one got a terrific $42,600 on its first seven days and currently, on holdover, looks to around $30,000. Remains a third week.

Los Angeles

Pantages hopped into the lime-light for the first time in a year with 'Imitation of Life'; which, for its initial week, is exceeding the record business done in the house by 'Only Yesterday,' which was also directed by John M. Stahl. Pic is slated for three weeks.

San Francisco

Orpheum (F&M) (2,440; 30-35-40)—'Imitation Life' (U) hitting the high spots at around eleven grand.

Baltimore

Keith's (Schanberger) (2,500; 15-25-30-40-50)—'Imitation Life' (U). Started at a brisk pace, and got added impetus from reviews. Word-of-mouth helping. Looks like a cinch for big $7,000 and will stick more than a week, couple of added days looking nicely.

Minneapolis

Estimates for This Week
Century (Publix) (1,600; 25-35-40)—'Imitation' (U). Well up among the leaders. Going along briskly and will build. Should cop fine $8,000.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Running times are those supplied by the companies. Asterisk indicates running time as made known by West Coast studio before announcement by home office in New York. Variations also may be due to local censorship deletions. Dates are 1934, unless otherwise specified. Letter in parentheses after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers.

Present Trans-Lux Officers Retained

The proxy contest for control of the Trans-Lux Daylight Picture Screen Corporation ended last week in New York in a victory for the present management, headed by Percy N. Furber, president. The management's slate of 15 directors was elected by a margin of 167,000 shares.

Mr. Furber said that of the 4,127 stockholders, 2,551, or 61 per cent, had voted, and that of these, 2,241 had voted for the management and 310 for the opposition slate proposed by the stockholders' committee. Of the total of 776,348 shares qualified to vote, 671,226 shares actually were voted. Mr. Furber received a vote of 399,471 in his candidacy for a place on the board of directors.

Five directors, including Stuart W. Webb, president of Pathe Exchange, Inc., were elected. The other four are Leslie E. Thompson, Robert Atkins, L. A. Hall, and Edwin G. Lauder.

It was reported that for the 10 months ended October 31, 1934, the company earned a net profit of $168,985, or sufficient to warrant an additional 10-cent dividend, bringing total payments for this year to 20 cents.

Columbia Broadcasting Declares Extra Dividend

The Columbia Broadcasting System, Inc., has declared a quarterly cash dividend of 50 cents per share, plus a special cash dividend of $1 per share on the Class A and Class B shares. The dividends do not apply to the 50 per cent stock dividend previously declared.

Columbus Exhibitors Get Current Reduction

Columbus, Ohio, exhibitors are jubilant over the fact that there has been a sizable reduction in electric current. It is retro-active to November 15, 1933.

Salesmen Meet on Time Newsreel

Branch managers and salesmen of First Division Exchanges met in New York last week for discussions on distribution of the forthcoming "March of Time" newsreel at a two-day session at the Park Central hotel.

Roy Larsen, vice-president of Time magazine, which will produce the reel, was the chief speaker. Other speakers were Fred McConnell, in charge of the reel's eastern sales; Pat Garyn, handling the western division, Harry Thomas, First Division president; John Curtis, vice-president; John Martin, Time managing editor.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

*An international association of showmen meeting weekly
in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress*

An Open Letter to Mr. Farnsworth

MR. WILLIAM P. FARNSWORTH,
Division Administrator in Charge of Amusement Code,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir:

Since the enactment of the motion picture code, this department endeavored repeatedly to bring to the attention of your predecessor, Mr. Sol A. Rosenblatt, the intolerable conditions under which so many motion picture theatre managers are forced to labor. Unfortunately, Mr. Rosenblatt would not or could not find time to do anything toward correcting the injustices suffered by this unprotected group.

The change in NRA administration that now brings you into the foreground is to be welcomed. Thousands of beaten, disillusioned theatremen are praying that will do some good.

No doubt, Mr. Farnsworth, you have studied James P. Cunningham's able dissection of the results of the motion picture code on the occasion of its first birthday, published in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, issue of December 15. May we refer you, then, to what Mr. Cunningham says under Heading No. 11:

"... unorganized and 'white collar' workers of the 'middle class' of wage earner—especially theatre managers—have received little or no protection. . . ."

And reading further in the analysis, you will find this significant and challenging statement:

"... Organized labor . . . is endowed with the right to bargain collectively—but those hundreds of non-union workers in the industry—principally engaged in exhibition—are not so certain of their rights. Their wage scales and working schedules may be specified in the code, but there are cases on record where these employees have been compelled to refrain from demanding their code rights for fear of dismissal. . . ."

A pretty picture, is it not, Mr. Farnsworth? Imagine a situation where the head of an organization, the man who supervises the activities of the very employees so thoroughly protected by your code, is forced to "refrain from demanding his code rights for fear of dismissal".

Some weeks ago, in Pittsburgh, we cornered Mr. Rosenblatt for a brief moment to query him on what he thought might be done to alleviate the situation. On being told that managers were toiling from 12 to 14 hours daily, seven days a week, the Administrator retorted, surprisingly, that in his files were letters from theatremen expressing themselves emphatically against the code's 40-hour week.

Patiently we explained that we knew of no manager campaigning for anything so fabulous as a 40-hour week; that we were also aware of numerous cases where theatremen had the good fortune of a "fair shake" from their employers. With these, thankfully, we had no reason to be concerned. But we stated that something had to be done for the immediate relief of those men, exploited, kicked about and hounded by selfish employers indifferent to any consideration of human welfare.

And we say to you, Mr. Farnsworth, that something must be done to free these men. Delay is dangerous to the very structure of the industry that depends so much upon the efforts of these workers.

That managers have the privilege of voicing their complaints before NRA labor boards is less than a solution. You know, and we know, there are few, if any, who can afford to speak up. And the voices of the few who are heard are, of necessity, muffled by the cloak of anonymity.

It is agreed that a proportionate part of a picture's success depends upon the ability of the manager. His imagination, ingenuity and quick thinking in so many instances provoke the vital urge that brings long lines to the box office. He should not be driven to exhaustion.

The new year is upon us. Never before has there been so crying a need for skilled showmanship in the theatre. The manager, as always, accepts the challenge. He will fight for his share of business until he drops.

The theatreman has no friend at court. His status has been ignored entirely by the Code Authority. Therefore this appeal.

80 to 90 hour weeks do not belong in the President's program for the emancipation of the worker—or do they, Mr. Farnsworth?

A. Mike Page

SHOWMEN'S LOBBY LAUGHS!

Gives Temple Photo For Christmas Toys

The creator of this cartoon is Ray Baker, Grand Theatre, Littleton, Colo.

Instead of the usual free show toy matinee, Manager Gus Lampe, Eckel, Syracuse, N. Y., tied in with local daily to give colored photo of Shirley Temple to everyone bringing new toy to theatre or fire stations. In return for gift, donor was made member of Temple Toy Club and received club card, which was to be presented at theatre for photo of star. Paper made quite a to-do about it, the stunt working excellently as a build up on "Bright Eyes," for which it was aimed. Gag ran for 15 days, and as a finale, all the contributed toys were taken to airport, where they were photographed with Santa Claus arriving in plane.

Resemblance contest with department store brought a lot of free display ads with photos of the star, and all stores selling the Temple dolls were tied in to give photos to each purchaser. Hookup with sponsors of child radio favorite on cigar hour allowed Lampe an opportunity to promote windows of smoke shops. Sponsor plugged date two weeks ahead and gave to first 2,000 children asking for same, Shirley Temple flip-books.

Gus further had baking company create Temple Cookie, distributed and advertised in 25-mile radius. Stuffers were placed in all bread packages and dealers carried tie-in windows.

Two other exploitations that also clicked were candy store hookin with "lollypop" number from picture, and special showing for orphans in which bus company furnished transportation. Special police escort was provided.

Cardiff Giant Bally Tours on "Barnum"

What United Artists reports to be the original Cardiff Giant, the prehistoric man world-famous hoax credited to P. T. Barnum, has been mounted on a huge ballyhoo truck (see photo) and is being toured throughout key cities for the openings of "The Mighty Barnum."

Premiere ceremony on the national build-up was a broadcast from the Barnum Museum, in Bridgeport, Conn., with Governor Cross, of Connecticut, Mayor McLevy, of Bridgeport, and Dexter Fellows as guest speakers. Manager Morris Rosenthal, of the Majestic, where the world premiere took place, handled the campaign.

Co-op Ads Help Sell Goth's Attractions

Not only varied but inspiring in size were the numerous co-op ads rounded up by Edgar Goth on "Belle of the Nineties," at the Paramount, Stapleton, Staten Island, these being spotted prominently on different pages of paper, such as sports, women's sections, etc. All ads carried generous theatre art.

In the theatre, for instance, Ed projected a silhouette of West to curtain from balcony by means of a telescopic effect. Under silhouette was caption, "Coming events cast their shadows before."

Catering to Staten Island's Italian population on "One Night of Love," Goth put out a lot of special Italian one-sheets to sell the operatic angle, and reports increased business from that source as a result. John Dwyer, Ed's assistant, is credited for his aid on these campaigns.

Interscholastic Bike Race Aids Harvey

Through the cooperation of school heads and the efforts of E. J. Harvey, Palace Theatre, Danbury, Conn., notices were posted on all school bulletin boards to the effect that an interscholastic championship bicycle race would be run in conjunction with the showing of "Six Day Bike Rider." Each school entered two boys, race being run on points and school getting greatest number received a silver cup donated by leading jeweler. Six additional prizes were promoted for the runner-ups and each cyclist carried card with theatre copy.

Lobby display consisted of oversized Brown cutout on stationary bike with motor to revolve wheels and in connection with this a contest was arranged in which patrons were invited to guess number of miles Brown would travel. To the back wheel was attached a sealed cyclometer.

Cities in Japan Feature "Little Women" Windows

When "Little Women" played the Shochiku-za Theatre in Kobi, Japan, Siegfried Lindstrom, RKO general manager there, effected a tieup with the Singer Sewing Machine people, whose machines were used in Hollywood to make the costumes worn in that picture. A life size wax figure of Katharine Hepburn and several hundred small Jo paper dolls were used for window displays (see photo) in leading department stores in Tokyo, Osaka and Kobi.

Special certificates of commendation issued by the Board of Education were reproduced and distributed. The fact that their Majesties, the Emperor and Empress, requested a private screening, helped considerably to heighten interest in the picture.

Opens Melody Shop To Plug "Millions"

Diverting, to say the least, was Manager Ed McBride's unique exploitation on "Kid Millions" at the State-Syracuse, N. Y., wherein store in a prominent spot was made over into what Ed dubbed an Eddie Cantor Melody Shop and fitted up accordingly.

As can be seen in the accompanying photo, the job of decoration was done with great thoroughness, furnishings including wall plaques, stills, standees, radios, pianos, flowers, and windows with musical instruments from stores taking co-op ads. Red neon signs were placed over door.

Piano players, singers and announcer plugged the hit tunes transmitted to street through p. a. system, and although nothing was sold at the shop, stores cooperating were well advertised. Stunt cost McBride little, as most everything was promoted in exchange for the unusual advertising. Plenty of talent was available, with local stations sending over well known names to participate. Gag broke all papers.

McBride went for lots of other clickers, among which was morning show for children from orphanages. Transportation, ice cream, cakes and cookies were all promoted, Mayor Marvin being guest of honor.

Popularity Contest Sends Girls to Coast

A popularity contest was the highlight of James Totman's "Flirtation Walk" campaign at the Warner Theatre in Erie, Penna., with sixty A. & P. stores and local newspaper tying in with the balloting.

Two girls were chosen and given a trip to Hollywood, visit to studio, luncheon with Keeler and Powell and a two-day stop at hotel in Hollywood. Girls left for California by plane with all the attendant fanfare and publicity.

1935 Awards

The Quigley Awards competitions will be continued in 1935.

Encouraged by the widespread endorsements from every quarter, it has been decided to inaugurate the second year of this important project, and January 1 will therefore mark the starting time for the first monthly Award of 1935.

At this writing over 35 judges have consented to serve in the coming year. These comprise many of 1934's Committee, and included are a number of out-of-town exhibitor-executives who will serve if and when they are in New York during the judging periods. First list of judges will appear in the next issue, in addition to comments from them and from the field on the various aspects of the Award project.

Deadline for December entries will be midnight of January 6, and all campaigns to receive consideration for the final Award of 1934 must be at Quigley Award Headquarters, 1790 Broadway, New York, by that time. December judges are as follows:

Leon Bamberger, RKO Radio Pictures, Inc.; Jack Cohn, Columbia Pictures Corp., and Oscar Doob, Loew's, Inc.

Their selections will be announced in the issue of January 12, and with the choosing of the last of 1934's winners plans are already in the making for the selection and presentation of the Grand Award. More on this later.—A-MIKE.

Fast Campaign for Temple Second-Run

For a second run of "Little Miss Marker" Fred Weimar did a highly commendable job for the date at the Orpheum, Sioux Falls, S. D., the campaign bringing him a First Mention in the November competition. Leading off, Fred secured splendid results, he reports, from a Temple impersonation contest.

Three weeks ahead, copies of the local co-operating paper were sent to the studios, where photos were made of Shirley Temple. Reading and clipping stories of the contest. Photos were then spotted in the local daily as a buildup on the contest.

Radio plugs started two weeks ahead, before children left for school and in the late afternoon. Tieup with department store handling Temple prints for dresses brought other ad mention plus further announcements on store's air program. Paper ran daily stories and art.

As a result of the advance barrage, Fred reports over 50 entries, who came from as far as 150 miles away, representing Minnesota and Iowa, as well as South Dakota. Judging was by applause for four prizes. Winners were also given framed photos of star and bouquets of roses, then escorted by motor to studio to have pictures taken. Business on the stunt was reported turnaway.

Effective also was Weimar's tieup with dairy for series of 24 boards (see photo). These prominently spotted will be continued on every Temple picture, at no cost whatsoever to theatre.

Krendel Ties In Radio With Birthday Club

A little different birthday club gag is used by Dan Krendel at the Tivoli, Toronto, Canada, through a tieup with the local broadcasting company whereby the station supplies Dan with a number of requests addressed to them daily and the theatre mails out a birthday greeting card with note that if card is presented at box office two guest tickets will be received. Dan says in addition to securing a lot of extra good-will, his birthday club gets a mention over the radio.

Imprinted paper napkins are distributed at leading restaurants, promoted chewing gum with theatre ad is given to girls in offices and two-color cards to be inserted in menus Dan finds bring good returns.

Circularizes Lawyers For "Evelyn Prentice"

M. Marcus, manager and Fred Bartow M-G-M exploiter at the Paramount, Ft. Wayne, Ind., sent out letters to lawyers in Ft. Wayne and surrounding towns recommending they see the dramatic characterization of a criminal lawyer by William Powell in "Evelyn Prentice."

Opening day paper ran strip of Little Miss Collins and tieup with editorial department in which funds were solicited for needy on Christmas Day. Blowups of Myrna Loy used in Western Union windows and messengers at no cost to theatre distributed cards to women on streets during lunch hours plugging picture. Special heralds were also handed out at Western Electric Company and local brewery.

Five and Ten tied in with special window of Christmas tree decorations and art display and gave away artificial gardenias with strip attached to stem advertising star and picture to first 200 women making purchase of over 25c.

It was a sweet break for Joe Feldman, managing director, and Arthur Cohn, publicist at the Earle Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa., that an actual six day bike race was going strong in their town when they played Joe Brown's "bike" picture, for they tied up with the arena for theatre plug and arranged for the personal appearance of well known rider.

Sweat shirts with picture copy were worn by ushers and candy vendors at the arena,

Paper Numbers Ad Section For "Treasure" Hunt Prizes

Although he put the stunt on naturally for "Treasure Island," Fred Naify, of the Senator-Chico, Cal, indicates his treasure hunt newspaper contest can be used on other pictures. A special four-page advertising section comprising ads from various merchants was put out by paper. At the masthead of each copy was a different number, and so indicated.

Readers were asked to clip the number and take it with them while shopping at the stores advertised, where were displayed the prizes with numbers attached. Those holding the duplicate numbers received the prizes.

Front page of the section was given over entirely to the rules and tie-up copy, inside pages carrying the ads. Fred says no intrudes were attached, as purchases did not have to be made to qualify getting prizes. Merchants were content with getting folks into their stores. Stunt ran one day and was advertised as above the day before.

Radio Star's Appearance Tied Into Shopping Tour

Numerous co-op ads obtained on a shopping tour tie in with radio star Johnny Marvin, appearing at Morris Rosenthal's Majestic, Bridgeport, were secured by this Round Tabler to publicize the date. The ads ran for two days. Other newspaper publicity highlights included features stories, interviews by radio editor, and photo on star's visit to boys' camp, sponsored by local Civitans.

Rosy had Marvin arrive by plane, meeting him at field with sound truck and line of bannered cars, and parading to town escorted by police. Imprinted market bags helped to spread the word, as did postcard size photos of the radioite distributed to children during shopping tour. Reception at hotel brought further publicity and daily radio announcements four days ahead.

Connor Offers Patrons Free Telephone Service

A rather novel display (see photo) is being used by Marlowe Connor, Orpheum Theatre, Chicago, Ill., in the form of a giant telephone, promoted from telephone company, and caricature enlarged cutout of man with copy reading "It's free, call the folks at home and tell them you are staying down to see," etc., etc. Phone calls are gratis between hours of four and six every afternoon. Marlowe says the psychological effect is perfect, patrons stop in amusement to look at display, and are influenced to see picture, even though they don't use the phone. Incidentally, the cutout figure was promoted from the Waterman Fountain Pen people.

For his "Belle of the Nineties" bally Connor built an oversized bell which the operator would swing back and forth, when sufficient crowds had gathered, bell was

Minday Gets Chamberlain To Award "Tailspin" Prizes

Mike Minday at the 68th Street Playhouse, New York City, contacted five public schools and succeeded in having the principals post placards on their bulletin boards announcing the opening episode of "Tailspin Tommy." Each book thirty inches high and the large open book in center is so arranged that the leaves are changed with each picture played.

Vogel has also tied up with the public libraries, circulating libraries and those in high schools and colleges stressing further the "literature comes to life" angle. On "Mrs. Wiggs," Gettier distributed six thousand bookmarks and book covers.

I Talked With HOMER McCALLON

*Selling Theatrical Attractions
No Different Than Other Forms Of Goods, Lionel H. Keene Is Told*

by HOMER McCALLON

Publicity Director, State, Houston, Texas

Publicity men are born, not made. In present day showmanship there are two varieties of the specie: the traveling exploiter and the more domesticated resident publicity man. I shall deal with the resident man whom I believe has done wonders in the modern scheme of showmanship.

Before the resident man can get going toward his goal in any sort of effective manner, he must meet a lot of people and establish friendly avenues to many doors of influence, bearing heavily upon a good start with his newspapers.

I get just as peeved as anyone when I am promised a break that never runs and I do not become exceedingly happy when my opposition happens to lead me in free space on any certain month, but I would go to war with any manager I might happen to have above me who insisted upon starting an argument.

The best means I have found to handle a thing of the sort is to make a note of it and use it to advantage on some future occasion. Almost invariably it works in our favor.

One certain way to get theatricals put on a routine basis is to crab about what the opposition received. I find it best to tell the critics or dramatic editor what a good story it was and that I have something I am certain will please her readers just as well. I then bend every finger I have over the typewriter in an attempt to make good.

Selling theatrical attractions to the public is no different fundamentally than disposing of other forms of merchandise. The salesman who selects the largest number of attractive angles of appeal and who conveys them to the largest number of prospective buyers in the most pleasing and convincing ways, is the lad who accomplishes most.

Stresses Angles in Vogue

I do mean that just because musicals might happen to be in public favor at the moment that a murder mystery should be so billed merely on the strength of a good theme song. That would be one sure means of tearing down public confidence in theatrical advertising; a thing which has already been overdone to the cost of much money at our box offices. But, I would most certainly lay heavily upon what angles were in vogue at the time and soft pedal the others which were not in favor provided the act did not consist of wholesale deception.

One big fault we have with us is the slowness of the studio officials to learn when a star turns "poison ivy" with the public. This is because the men on the firing line who are in a better position to know public reaction can be certain of getting a bawling out if they convey this information to their superiors. I know because I have been so bawled out. The result is, an expensive starring vehicle is produced, executives find out on trial runs about the slipping star and in the final analysis many things, including just plain lying and many other blunders occur in selling it.

I hold to very few formulae and believe most of such are creations of the imagination that accumulate in one's mind and form barriers to novelty of idea and effort. I try to visualize the reaction to whatever I begin, making as certain as possible that no ill will will result, and from there on I simply hope for the best.

Recommends Contests

Contests of various kinds are still good, particularly those designed to get women interested. Once you get a woman interested enough to try something there is no power on earth to keep her from talking. The more she talks, the more publicity accrues. Color contests and puzzles for juveniles are good if not used too frequently.

Stunts, of course, are the big items of exploitation on films such as "Treasure Island," "The Gold Diggers" and the like, but might prove damaging to the good taste of "The Barretts of Wimpole Street."

Nothing in my experiences satisfied me more fully than our results here on these three films, all handled in different ways. "The Barretts" especially rung true to planning. We chose the tastiest press campaign we could map out, took the critics to a distant city to view a world premiere showing a week in advance and worked accordingly from there on out.

This film contained explosive material that could be used for the rabble, but we let it leak out through the highbrows, who must have done some gossiping judging from our great balcony business. We could have put a lamp post on the sidewalk, dug up old costumes of that period, and have stunted it big from many angles, but we didn't. Even the lobby posters were done on black, grey and white with a little touch of red; the color scheme used on everything pertaining to this attraction. Class prevailed throughout and it worked. If anything works in show business, that settles it.

I never fear the opposition press man who spends the greater part of the day loafing around the newspaper offices and the night in entertaining them. He gives away his every weakness.

Newspaper folk have work to do themselves and soon learn to appreciate and admire the lad who never calls during the hour prior to press time unless asked to. It requires much discretion to use the same face in the same town year after year.

It only requires a few minutes to ask permission of the dramatic editor to see the managing editor and in turn to ask the managing editor's permission to see the editor on those occasions when something is desired which the junior can not grant. It is my golden rule of maintaining long friendship and respect from the ladies and gentlemen of the press.

Recent Reports from New Jersey Warnerites

Over the river in nearby New Jersey, the showmen of Don Jacock's Warner Theatre division keep themselves profitably occupied with various exploitations, reports of which come to us through ad head Jules Curley. Here are some of the recent highlights, and where:

Parrot Croaks "Pieces of Eight"

Mike Weshner, at the Hawthorne, Newark, dug up a parrot for his lobby on "Treasure Island," the bird croaking "pieces of eight" in the best approved pirate manner. Display on lobby floor consisted of mirror sea, sandy shore, miniature palm trees, coral island and boat.

Bakery Shows "Island" Window

Variation of the above display in window was used by Nat Mutnick at the Castle-Irvington as tieup with bakery, merchant distributing samples of "Treasure Island" cake at kid matinee, and supplying gratis heralds. Same window idea was planted in other prominent spots, Nat also promoting co-operation from school principals and teachers.

Store Gives Colbert Stills

Marty Bratter, Roosevelt-Newark, had nearby drugstore give free imprinted star photos of Colbert with every ice cream purchase on "Cleopatra," druggist standing all expense and planting window streamers on the gag. Marty made 30 other window tieups with beauty and dress shops. Guessing contest on "Island" for treasure chest prizes was built around number of pieces of candy in glass jar in lobby.

Italian One-Sheets on "Love"

Louis Stein, Stanley-Newark, working on the large Italian population in his neighborhood, put out a flock of one-sheets in that language on "One Night of Love." Co-operation of teachers in nearby high school was also secured on this date.

Tinsels "Cleopatra" Blowups

H. Meyerberg, Lincoln-Union City, centered his lobby flash for "Cleopatra" on two 40 by 60 blowups of Colbert, gowns on star being tinselled in different colors for extra flash, baby spot building up jewel effect. Meyerberg also stopped a lot of customers with a chariot street bally.

Lobby Flower Cutout Clicks

Rudy Kuehn, Fabian-Hoboken, got extra lobby attention on "She Loves Me Not" with a six-foot artificial cutout flower and stills on each petal, transparency of Crosby forming the center. Rear spot and marquee spots were used on this for further lighting.

Club Furnishes Airplane Models

George Baehr and James Fawns, Savoy-Newark, tied in with local department store on "Tailspin Tommy" for use of the store's airplane club models as lobby decorations including eight foot boat suspended from ceiling. Also promoted for display were autographed photos of Admiral Byrd, Clarence Chamberlin, oil painting of Col. Lindbergh and trophies won by club members. Officers of club were invited to opening who brought along pilot for a lecture from the stage on his air adventures.

McMANUS' "WRINKLES"

From time to time, this department has run a column under the title of "Wrinkles", the information contained having to do with various money-saving ideas on maintenance, etc., tried out by members and found acceptable. Johnny McManus, of the Midland, Kansas City, was asked to suggest a few, and he hands us a laugh with the following:

UTILITY CAP . . Plan for smaller theatres to adopt this variety cap, the cap having an annunciator roll inside that enables the (one man) staff to answer to any required officer or employee—i.e., patron calling for Manager, the man can at once go into a huddle and change the cap title facing the patron with a benign expression, and forcefully exhibiting the proper designated cap label.

UTILITY SUITS . . These suits are adaptable to almost every call placed upon theatre employees, even to the extent of having the new drop-seat trousers which can with slight inconvenience be used for porter equipment. Pockets labeled for the various pliers, etc., can be placed at even distances across the face, sides and back of the above outlined suits.

BLACK LAMPS . . The usage of black lamps will curtail the cost of electric energy, also allowing the projectionists to cut down on the amperage of the pull, as the screen having no interference will show up much more clearly. Large saving is also in the air here through the longevity of the bulbs.

CELLULOID TICKETS . . The using of paper admission tickets has become a thing of great expenditure, running the operating cost of theatres soaring skyward in many instances. This can be minimized through the installation of the washable celluloid ticket, which with care can be made to last for months without any replenishment.

Binstock Sponsors Essay Contest on "Treasure Island"

An essay contest was put on by Paul Binstock at the Republic Theatre, Brooklyn, N. Y., on "Treasure Island" in a tieup with local merchant who gave away ten Jackie Cooper sweaters which were displayed in lobby (see photo). Announcements were made in auditorium of public schools and the cooperation of principals was solicited.

Another merchant supplied two chests filled with candy coins that were displayed in window. Those coming nearest to guessing correct number of coins received passes. All Woolworth girls wore "Treasure" badges and window decorated with candy treasure chests awarded winners of guessing contest.

Radio broadcast by amateurs was staged and a "Can you act like Jackie Cooper" contest put over. Bookmarks distributed in children's department of library, librarians encouraging youngsters to enter essay contest. Ushers dressed as pirates worked streets on bally pirate ship.

Binstock's Sweater Giveaway

'SERVICE IDEALS BACK ROUND TABLE'

—FRED NICHOLSON

SAYS CAMPAIGNS ARE BETTER IDEA SOURCE

DEAR MIKE:

After having read, more or less, irregularly your "Round Table" department in the HERALD, a thought has occurred to me which might be of some interest.

My first impression, I must admit, was that the affair was just another way of patting managers on the back in an attempt to increase circulation; but after observing the constantly increasing momentum, and the widening interest which is becoming more and more obvious as time goes on, I am convinced that there really is something to it. In being convinced that there is something to it, my thought, and my only regret is that many more people who should be interested are not using the department for all it is worth, and getting the real advantage that it offers.

All of us who have ever punched out a story with one finger or employed stunts to get shekels running into the box office know that there are many places to find suggested ideas and stunts supposed to be effective in making our day lighter and our success greater.

Evaluates Press Book Exploitation

Any press book is crowded from cover to cover with just such stuff. This stuff, and "stuff" it is, for the most part comes from the desk of some one who, with all the good intentions in the world, wants to help, but unfortunately generally misses the mark due to the fact that his suggested campaigns for the Podunks are envisioned from a spot a thousand miles removed from the actual firing line. Some of the stuff thusly planned is okay—a lot of it is fair, and a lot more of it is impossible.

The point is that it is all thrown together about as tried and tested as next year's stock market. Were it not that there was a better source of material, we would be forced to admit that, under the circumstances, it afforded our best bet. But there is a better source, and that seems to be the work that is accomplished with success by men who are in the field. Every one of these men is constantly confronted with problems which they are constantly working out in ways that the other fellow would certainly like to hear about. This in my estimation goes for all, because, whether the situation be 6,000 seats or 600, a good bang-up job in either can be applied, at least in part, to the other. For getting together on a common ground and benefiting from the other fellow's experience the Round Table appears to me to be a good answer.

Favors Wider Participation

It is obvious that you have a great number of live-wire managers interested, and that a great deal of good work is being accomplished through the Round Table, but the ones who I am concerned with are those numerous theatremen who are not contributing. I am afraid that many of them, who should be interested parties, are holding out because, like myself, they might have the idea that the Round Table is just a lot of fanfare created without the sincere ideals of service, which I now realize it must have back of it.

To these, who like myself are slow in becoming convinced, it might be pointed out that the Table can be just as big, and just as successful as they themselves will make it. I also found in talking to some that they regard the carryings-on of the Table as something designed for small fry. They are men who either through spectacular work or long years of experience have merited a fairly outstanding position. I can readily understand their respect for themselves, they have earned the position they hold, and feel rightly about it. But I also readily question their wisdom in holding out on a venture like the Table. It seems that many of them could well afford to be interested, because, as I said before, the Table is just as big as they care to make it—and it is only through the mutual interest of every one that it can come up to the standards which it deserves, in an industry which can always use new ideas.

I have been interested in the idea behind the Table since its inception. At first I looked upon it with a doubtful and cynical stare, but having talked to exhibitors and given some thought to the idea, I thought you'd be interested in having my convictions regarding it.—FRED NICHOLSON, 117-14 UNION TURNPIKE, KEW GARDENS, N. Y.

Apropos of the contention that some of the press book tieups really do not tie up, the following is quoted from a recent outline of campaign received from the field on "Bike Rider":

"Took entire advantage of the Quaker Oats tieup. Placed about 15 major windows plus 1,000 window locations being planted on this. As most tieups of this kind, gloriously explained in advance press books, they don't work out. All Quaker Oats had to give us was the display material."

MANAGER DOES NOT USE PRESS BOOKS

As far as press books are concerned, in connection with your recent letter we don't use press books at all. Can't get anything out of them. The press stories are "scroungy" and the mats we couldn't be bothered with.

We have an outside mat service and then we use the mats as used by the San Francisco and Oakland theatres, simply mortise out what we have to and use them. We write our own stories with local interest when needed.

For example, see Paramount's press book on "Wagon Wheels"—they haven't changed their style in 15 years—no kiddin'. So naturally, not using press books, I can't answer your letter intelligently.—ANONYMOUS.

SUGGESTS SMALLER SIZE PRESS BOOKS

DEAR MIKE:

In yours of November 10 issue, Round Table Club, regarding the article entitled "Manager Attacks Press Books, Appeals for Improvement," the man who wrote that said a "Joe E. Brown" mouthful. He covers the issue quite thoroughly.

We often get mats made of cheap stock and the lineage so poor that it is hardly recognizable. You must admit the smaller towns are in the big majority where they do not have facilities for making layouts, and it is these exhibitors who are stuck for the lack of proper exploiting.

Criticizes Old Stunts

There is so much waste space in the press books, by repeating so many times on the same star, practically the same stories and stereotyped reading matter, and stunts so old, I really believe I originated some of them myself 30 years ago. And as far as stunts go, I believe there is only about one manager in a thousand that may think one will be good, and will try it, but the public never fall for it. In other words, these old stunts will not bring a dime in at the box office, and are a needless waste of money and energy.

Some of the press books are made up elaborately and are very attractive, but are a waste of money and time, because the exhibitor is going to show the production, no matter how elaborately or plainly the press matter is laid out. On the other hand, if this attractive press book could reach the public, who pay at the box office, they may be sold on it, and eventually would bring results.

Most managers when they take up a press book resent being told the editors of newspapers are sitting up nights just waiting for them to bring their copy in, then to read in every press book the badly murdered adjectives on every production. Regardless of how great the preceding productions have been, the later ones are always THE greatest.

Suggests Smaller Books

Food for thought: With all the glamour of Hollywood, stars, producers, best exploitation brains of the entire industry, fortunes invested, etc., they expect the little exhibitor to go out and tie tin cans to a dog's tail to make the production "click" at the box office.

I think if the producer would get out press books, size about 10 by 12, with an assortment of mats suitable for de luxe and smaller houses, a few sheets descriptive of the production, some honest to goodness new and up-to-date salesmanship talk, or any live matter pertaining to this production for publicity, the whole message could be clamped together in a very few pages, saving a lot of unnecessary expense and time wasted.—ANONYMOUS.*
